Written Ministerial Statements

DEFENCE

Kirkcudbright Training Area

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg): The Ministry of Defence regularly conducts environmental surveys at the Kirkcudbright Training Area in order to assess the impact of depleted uranium test firings on the terrestrial and marine environments and has been under remit to place copies of the annual survey reports in the Library of the House. Unfortunately, due to an administrative error this was not done. This error has now been rectified and the reports have been placed in the Library of the House.

Deterrent White Paper

The Secretary of State for Defence (Des Browne): I have reproduced below the text of my letter to the Chairman of the House of Commons Defence Select Committee. I have also placed a copy of the letter and annexe in the Library of the House and copies are also available in the Vote Office. The letter and annexe form the Government's initial response to the Committee report on the Deterrent White Paper.

"I was very grateful that your Committee was able to publish its report on the recent White Paper on the Future of the UK's Nuclear Deterrent in good time before the debate and vote on 14 March. This will be of great benefit to MPs as they consider the issues in the coming week. With your agreement, I am also making this letter public prior to the debate by means of a written ministerial statement. We will of course respond fully to the report in the usual way in due course but I aim to address here the majority of issues raised in the Committee's report and to clarify some minor points.

First, the table of future decision-making at paragraph 184 broadly accords with our assessment, although we would not be so definitive on the year in which the contract to build the first new SSBN would be placed. Also, and as set out in the exchange of letters between the US President and the Prime Minister, we would not at this stage wish to rule out that the Trident D5 missile might be further extended, beyond the early 2040s. Finally, Table 4 states that France maintains three deterrent systems, whereas in fact they only retain two—submarine launched ballistic missiles and air-launched cruise missiles.

I would also wish to register three detailed points:

i. It would be helpful to clarify Table 8 on costs and funding. The entries under "Decommissioning costs" are included elsewhere within the estimates: they are not in addition to the other figures.

ii. There is an inaccuracy in Table 1 which is repeated in the second bullet of paragraph 9. We have said that the one submarine normally on deterrent patrol carries up to 48 warheads. We have also said that the number of missiles on that submarine is up to 16. But the 1998 Strategic Defence Review did not limit the number of warheads to be carried per missile to three and neither is that constraint imposed now.

iii. Paragraphs 89 and 90 imply that NATO has a policy of first use of nuclear weapons. This is not true.

As for the UK, NATO's policy is to maintain ambiguity by not ruling in or ruling out the first use of nuclear weapons.

More detailed responses to your conclusions and recommendations are set out in the attached annexe."

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Treaties of Rome (50th Anniversary)

The Minister for Europe (Mr. Geoffrey Hoon): On 25 March, the European Union celebrates the 50th Anniversary of the signing of the Treaties of Rome. This is an important opportunity to mark the achievements of the EU. It is also is a key moment to look ahead to the new challenges and opportunities of the global age, and how the EU can deliver for its citizens in the next 50 years. On major cross-border challenges such as terrorism, climate change, energy security, economic competition, migration or organised crime, the EU plays a vital role. These are the issues that the Government put to the top of the EU's agenda during our presidency in 2005 and on which we are working successfully with partners to drive forward results. In this 50th Anniversary year, the Government will therefore continue to support a range of activities to raise awareness and engage the public in debate on key challenges and the EU's role in helping to address them.

As part of our celebrations to mark this significant anniversary, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), the Department for Education and Skills (DFES) and the British Council will launch later this month a major year-long initiative called "Learning Together" to promote partnerships between UK schools and schools in other EU countries. Information will be made available to all schools across the UK about the range of opportunities available for schools to develop learning partnerships with European counterparts, including through EU programmes such as Comenius and e-Twinning. The initiative will ensure that relevant information and materials are made easily available to teachers. It will assist teachers and heads already in school partnerships to share their experience with other schools. This will help schools that have not previously taken part in international activities to get involved.

International partnerships and exchanges offer young people exciting opportunities, and can introduce international elements into a wide range of relevant curriculum subjects. "Learning Together" will also contribute to the Government's goal, outlined in the 2004 DFES International Strategy "Putting the World into World-Class Education", of enabling every English school and college to establish a sustainable partnership with an international partner.

A wide range of other events will be taking place in the UK for the 50th Anniversary. For example, the Union of European Football Associations (UEFA), Manchester United and the European Commission have organised a charity friendly football match between Manchester United and a Europe XI team. The "50 years in Europe and 50 years of Europe" match on 13 March will celebrate both the 50th Anniversary of the EU and the 50th anniversary of Manchester United's participation as the first English team to play in UEFA's European club competition. The University Association for Contemporary European Studies will host a conference at the FCO, entitled "Reflections on European Integration - 50 Years of the Treaty of Rome" on 23-24 March. And the European Movement in association with the Federal Trust and Chatham House will host a conference "Europe, the next 50 years" on 22 March.

At EU level, Heads of State and Government will mark the Anniversary at an informal meeting in Berlin on 25 March, and there will be an accompanying political declaration. Other EU-level events over the Anniversary weekend include a programme of cultural festivities in Berlin being organised by the German presidency, cultural events and a symposium in Brussels, and a Youth Summit in Rome.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Independent Monitoring Commission

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Peter Hain): I have received the Fourteenth Report of the Independent Monitoring Commission (IMC). This report was made under Article 5(1) of the International Agreement which established the Commission, and is their third of four reports on the security normalisation programme. I have considered the content of the Report and am today bringing it before Parliament. I have placed copies in the Library of the House.

I am pleased to inform the House that the Commission assesses that the commitments made by the Government in the security normalisation programme have been met. Commitments made in the areas of military support to the police, the police estate, police patrolling, and the repeal of counter-terrorist legislation particular to Northern Ireland have all been met thus far. I am satisfied that the security normalisation programme remains appropriate and manageable.

I am also encouraged that the IMC remain of the view that PIRA is firmly committed to the political path and that the organisation does not pose a threat relevant to security normalisation. The IMC have concluded that the organisation is not engaged in terrorist activity and the leadership continues to encourage members to undertake political or community activity. There have been further positive changes in the security context in Northern Ireland resulting from the developments at the Sinn Fein Ard Fheis on 28 January 2007 which pledged support for policing and the rule of law. This is the eighth IMC report since the IRA announced its armed campaign had ended in July 2005, each one progressively confirming delivery of commitment promised then, including driving criminality out of the organisation.

Conversely, dissident republicans remain committed to terrorism and continue to engage in terrorist activity. The IMC have reported that although dissident republican organisations do not have the capacity to mount a serious and sustained campaign, they pose a continuing threat to both the security forces and the wider community.

In terms of loyalist paramilitaries, the IMC conclude that although they are actively engaged in violence and other forms of serious crime, they do not pose a problem for security normalisation. There is evidence of senior figures seeking to lead the organisation away from crime. This is to be welcomed, but there is more to be done.

I am grateful to the Commissioners for the detailed analysis contained in this report. I anticipate their final report on the programme in September which will review the implementation of the programme as a whole.

DEFENCE

AFPRB Re-Appointments

The Secretary of State for Defence (Des Browne): I am pleased to announce that I have re-appointed Mrs. Alison Gallico, Professor Derek Leslie and Air Vice-Marshal Ian Stewart as members of the Armed Forces Pay Review Body for a second three-year term, commencing March 2008. All three appointments have been conducted in accordance with the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments' guidance on appointments to public bodies.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Ministerial Meeting (Heidelberg)

The Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning (Bill Rammell): I attended the meeting which was chaired by the German Education and Research Minister, Dr Annette Schavan. The meeting focused on two areas for discussion: the contribution education policy can make to promote the acceptance and dissemination of shared European values; and a second discussion on the theme "Making Lifelong Learning a Reality for All" which focused on developing pre-primary education and adult learning.

Representatives of about 40 countries attended (the EU-27, EEA and the Western Balkans).

The overall discussion on European values was wide ranging, with a number of member states citing active citizenship, the importance of language learning, and mobility as contributions education can make to Europe, as well as the more general values of freedom, respect and tolerance. I used my intervention to warn against trying to define a set of common European values to be included in a curriculum, as everyone holds different views. I made it clear that Education and Curriculum are national not EU competencies. There was general consensus in the discussion on adult learning and early childhood education, with all speakers agreeing that these formed important parts of lifelong learning. I spoke strongly in favour of lifelong learning, referring to the Leitch Review of skills, which shows how adults need to be equipped to perform higher skilled jobs. Extra investment is needed not just from the state, but from the employer and the individual too, and in making the investment in skills, it is important to respond to the needs of business. The chair did not try and summarise the discussion, which had been very general. However, a final communiqué will be prepared by the Presidency and made available to participants.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Climate Change Bill

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (David Miliband): The Queen's Speech indicated the Government's intent to bring forward legislation on climate change. I am pleased to announce that today we are publishing a draft Climate Change Bill for pre-legislative scrutiny and public consultation. I am also publishing today a strategy document setting out the broader context for the draft Bill. Copies of both documents have been placed in the House Libraries and are available on my Department's website.

The debate on climate change has shifted from whether we need to act to how much we need to do by when, and the economic implications of doing so. The time is therefore right for the introduction of a strong legal framework in the UK for tackling climate change. The draft Climate Change Bill is the first of its kind in any country.

The Government have shown consistent leadership in the field of climate change by setting bold targets and pursuing ambitious policies. We are committed to securing a strong multilateral agreement beyond 2012 and, within the EU, move to a low-carbon economy over time. At home, we have already shown progress in reducing greenhouse gas emissions while maintaining economic growth, and are set to almost double our target under the Kyoto Protocol.

This Bill provides a legal framework to manage future emissions. It provides a clear, credible and long-term framework that will provide greater clarity and confidence for businesses and individuals to plan and invest in delivering the changes needed to move to a low carbon economy. It will demonstrate leadership through example—a vital factor in helping to secure future international agreements.

In summary the Bill:

makes challenging carbon dioxide reduction targets for 2020 and 2050 legally binding; introduces a system of 'carbon budgeting' capping emissions over five-year periods—with three budgets set ahead to help businesses plan and invest with increased confidence; creates a new independent body to advise on the setting of carbon budgets and to report to Parliament on progress; contains enabling powers to make future policies to control emissions quicker and easier to introduce; and introduces a new system of Government reporting to Parliament including on climate change adaptation policies.

Taken together these measures create a coherent framework that will ensure we achieve reductions in emissions through domestic and international action whilst maintaining a strong and growing economy and high levels of social welfare.

The Government look forward to receiving a wide range of views on its proposals. We aim to introduce the final Bill to Parliament in autumn this year.

The accompanying strategy document sets out how the draft Bill fits into the Government's broader strategy for tackling climate change. It highlights some key announcements coming up in the next few weeks and months which will be central to the Government's strategy —in particular the Energy White Paper, the Waste Strategy and the Planning White Paper. And it sets out the broader international context, where the UK will continue to press for action through the EU, the G8 and the UN— recognising that only collective action can ultimately solve this unique global challenge.

Local Authority Fees and Charges Scheme

The Minister for Local Environment, Marine and Animal Welfare (Mr. Ben Bradshaw): Charges to cover the costs of local enforcing authorities in regulating processes which are subject to Part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 (Local Air Pollution Control (LAPC)) were introduced in April 1991. Interim charges for installations which are subject to the Pollution Prevention and Control Act 1999 (Local Air Pollution Prevention and Control (LAPPC) and Local Authority - Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control (LA-IPPC)) were introduced in August 2000.

With the approval of the Treasury, and following consultation with local authority associations and industry, I have made revised schemes in respect of the Environmental Protection Act and in respect of the Pollution Prevention and Control Act. The schemes specify the scale of fees and charges to take effect from 1 April 2007.

For LAPC, LAPPC and LA-IPPC fees and charges for 2007-08 there will be an increase of between 2.37 per cent. and 2.86 per cent. for all subsistence fees and by 2.11 per cent. for all other charges. There is also an increase in the application charge for standard Part B and A(2) installations by £1,058 and for reduced fee installations by £63 in cases where existing operators, who have been operating without a permit, subsequently apply for a permit.

The basis of these increases and the risk-based scheme is set out in the regulatory impact assessment which is available on the DEFRA website at the following website address: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/ppc/localauth/fees-risk/fees.htm.

Some minor amendments to the schemes have also been made in the light of consultation with local authorities and industry.

Copies of the schemes have been placed in the House Libraries.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Corston's Review

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Gerry Sutcliffe): On 28 March 2006 my predecessor made a Statement to announce that my noble Friend Baroness Jean Corston had agreed to undertake a "Review of Women in the Criminal Justice System with Particular Vulnerabilities". I am delighted that Baroness Corston's report is being published today and wanted to make a statement to welcome her report and to give an undertaking that the Government will now give serious and detailed consideration of the issues it raises and the recommendations it makes for change.

The Government invited Baroness Corston to conduct this independent review following the tragic series of deaths of six women at Styal prison in 2002-03. The purpose was to look at the measures in place to ensure that we are doing everything possible for women who come into contact with the criminal justice system who have particular vulnerabilities, such as mental health problems, drug addiction, or histories of abuse. The scope of the Review was, therefore, very wide and considered the services and interventions available to such women on each occasion they come into contact with the criminal justice system, and also to those women at risk of offending.

I would like to thank Baroness Corston for producing such a comprehensive and thought-provoking report and I welcome the honesty and directness with which she addressed her remit and the recommendations she makes for more to be done. Her report tackles some of the most difficult, complex and entrenched issues and provides a valuable insight into the reality of the problems faced, and presented, by many women offenders.

I am particularly grateful for the support and assistance that Baroness Corston received from all those who contributed to the Review, especially the families sadly bereaved by the deaths at Styal and other prisons and women offenders themselves who have spoken so powerfully about their experiences. I would also like to thank the voluntary organisations who gave their valuable time and resources to support the review.

The 43 recommendations made are wide-ranging and propose action by a number of different Government Departments and other organisations to address together the complex and multiple needs of women both in the criminal justice system and at the risk of offending. These recommendations will be carefully explored with all the Departments and agencies concerned and the Government will develop a detailed response and set out an agreed way forward.

Baroness Corston also makes some overarching recommendations for how the management of women in the criminal justice system should be co-ordinated across Government. I agree that, in order to drive forward this important work, it is necessary to ensure that there is high level commitment and effective inter-departmental working. We will, therefore, look carefully at what mechanisms and governance arrangements would be possible to achieve this and I will discuss this with my ministerial colleagues.

Baroness Corston's report also highlights the work and initiatives that are already being taken forward to tackle issues for women offenders and ensure that their needs are met, in a system that has primarily been developed in response to the majority of male offenders. She refers in particular to the Women's Offending Reduction Programme and the Together Women Programme, which is using an injection of Government funding to test out how a more integrated community-based approach can effectively tackle the multiple needs of women and reduce the use of custody for those women who do not present a significant risk and do not need to be held in prison. She also highlights the importance of the Gender Duty, which comes into force in April 2007, in supporting this agenda.

In developing the detailed response, we will consider how the lessons learnt and recommendations in Baroness Corston's report can be used to build on the work already underway.

I commend this report to anyone with an interest in, or working with, women in the criminal justice system. I know that it will be an invaluable resource in taking forward our agenda to tackle the issues that can lead women into crime and avoid the damaging effects that this can have on women and their families.

HEALTH

Modernising Medical Careers

The Secretary of State for Health (Ms Patricia Hewitt): In my written ministerial statement of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 131-132ws, I set out the Department's plan for an immediate review of the first round of the new national recruitment and selection process for doctors in postgraduate training.

As part of the Modernising Medical Careers (MMC) reforms of postgraduate medical training, new specialty training programmes will be introduced in August 2007. To support this, a new national recruitment and selection process was introduced this year, facilitated by the on-line Medical Training Application Service (MTAS). This process sets out national recruitment and selection criteria, documentation and standards—replacing the countless local appointment processes that had previously been in place.

Our aim, of course, is to ensure that we recruit the right people for the right jobs for the benefit of the National Health Service, its patients and its staff. As a result, the new arrangements were developed with the help of the medical Royal Colleges, trainee doctors and others. We will continue to work with them to ensure that trainee doctors are properly supported and fairly treated, and that the NHS is able to train and recruit the best doctors for the future.

Doctors have been applying for their preferred specialty training programme since 22 January 2007 and interviews have already begun. A large number of posts will not be filled in the first round and we have stressed to those interviewing in round one that they should not consider appointing unless they are absolutely satisfied with the calibre of candidates.

While the Department believes this will deliver a fair and transparent appointments process, it is clear that there have been concerns about the selection process, and that the process as a whole has created a high degree of insecurity amongst applicants and, indeed, more widely in the profession. The review was therefore commissioned to analyse what had gone well and what needed to be improved with a view to establishing greater confidence in the process.

The review is independent, being led by Professor Neil Douglas, Vice-President of the Academy of Medical Royal Colleges and President of the Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh. Members of the review group include representatives of the Royal Colleges, the British Medical Association, the four United Kingdom health Departments and employers.

The review group met on 7 and 9 March to agree immediate action, and will continue its work throughout March.

The review group decided that round one should continue, but recommended immediate steps to strengthen the interview process, including allowing applicants to provide CVs and portfolios to support their applications. These steps have been communicated to the deans and we have written to every applicant. The information is also on the MMC and MTAS websites.

As a result, some junior doctors who have expressed fears that they have been overlooked in the first round, will be given the opportunity to have their application form reviewed by a trained medical adviser from a postgraduate deanery. Successful candidates will then be given an interview.

In addition, significant changes will be made to improve selection in the second round. This will include changes to the application form and the scoring system. The revised approach will now be tested with junior doctors, selectors, deanery recruitment teams and employers, and agreed with the medical Royal Colleges, postgraduate deans, trainee and consultant representatives and employers before it is introduced.

The review group has also recommended that further advice and information should be made available as quickly as possible for applicants. The Department has agreed that this will include:

information about competition ratios by specialty, entry level and geography;

the process and timetable for making applications in the second round plus generic guidance about what panels will be looking for;

generic feedback on how applicants can improve their applications for the second round; information about sources of support for applicants; and enhanced frequently asked questions on the MTAS website, building on feedback from the first round.

This will be done as soon as possible.

I am very grateful to Professor Douglas and his colleagues for their continuing work on the Review Group. We will publish the group's final report once it is completed.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Irish Language Legislation

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Maria Eagle): In the St. Andrews agreement, Government made a commitment to introduce an Irish Language Bill for Northern Ireland reflecting on the experience of Wales and Ireland and to work with the incoming Executive to enhance and protect the development of the Irish language. My Department issued a consultation paper on Irish language legislation on 13 December 2006 with a closing date of 2 March 2007. The consultation attracted a significant number of responses. Of the 668 substantive responses received, 625 supported the introduction of legislation. In addition 1376 postcards supporting legislation were received by my Department and an advertisement placed in the press by the Irish language group, POBAL, attracted 800 signatures. My Department also received a petition from POBAL with 2,500 signatures.

The consultation showed a pronounced divergence of views across the communities in Northern Ireland about the benefits of Irish language legislation. In addition, during the course of the consultation the suggestion was made that the process would be more meaningful if the consultation was based on draft legislation. My Ministerial colleagues and I see merit in this proposal and today we are publishing a further consultation on Irish language legislation with draft indicative clauses.

This further consultation will last for 12 weeks, closing on 5 June 2007.

TRANSPORT

Seafarers

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Dr. Stephen Ladyman): Currently, UK law permits employers or principals to remunerate seafarers differently on grounds of nationality, if they applied for their employment or were engaged for it outside Great Britain. The European Commission has asked the Government to investigate the legality of this practice under European Law.

A consultation on section 9 of the Race Relations Act 1976, has today been launched. Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Mesothelioma Claims

The Minister for Employment and Welfare Reform (Mr. Jim Murphy): On 20 July 2006, the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (John Hutton) announced interim measures to speed up current claims handling for mesothelioma sufferers. He also confirmed that we would put in place a long-term solution.

We committed to having a full dialogue and invited comments from all interested parties. Initial views were sought on ideas for improving support for those with mesothelioma, both by improving the systems for dealing with these claims, and the better focusing of Government support. This process has been very constructive, with many thoughtful responses and helpful ongoing dialogue.

A Summary of Responses to that consultation was published on 1 March and is available at http://www.dwp.gov.uk/publications/dwp/2007/iidb/mesothelioma-cases-consultation-report.pdf/

We know that nearly all mesotheliomas occur as a result of occupational or environmental exposure to asbestos—a legacy of our country's industrial past.

Today I announce that we are committing, subject to legislative approval, to ensure that everyone with mesothelioma—irrespective of their employment history—can claim a payment as those under the Pneumoconiosis etc (Workers' Compensation) Act 1979 ("the 1979 Act"). This will mean that once mesothelioma is diagnosed, every sufferer should have early access to a substantial payment, normally within six weeks of diagnosis, providing a claim is made immediately.

We intend to achieve this by:

Continuing payments from the 1979 Act to all those who currently receive payments; these will remain at existing levels.

Introducing a compensation recovery process so that payments under the 1979 Act are recovered if a civil compensation claim is subsequently successful, in order to prevent double provision and continue with the policy line that the "polluter pays".

Introducing compensation payments similar to those from the 1979 Act to those people who do not currently receive payments from the 1979 Act. These will initially be at a rate commensurate with what can be afforded out of projected compensation recovery amounts.

Increasing these latter amounts to match those paid to others under the 1979 Act as funds allow.

We are holding a Mesothelioma Summit today to begin to make these changes a reality.

We are also continuing the essential work that is ongoing to speed up the full compensation payments due to many sufferers and their families through the civil claims process, and I am confident that this, too, is already leading to improvements for sufferers. Furthermore, we will look at the state benefit scheme so that the claims process is streamlined to provide an improved service to our customers.

We will continue to work with our partners to ensure that these outcomes are delivered as soon as possible.

Maritime Labour Convention

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. James Plaskitt): The 94th (Maritime) Session of the International Labour Conference 2006 adopted a new Convention - Maritime Labour Convention.

I have today published and laid a White Paper entitled International Labour Conference, Proposed action on a Convention adopted at the 94th (Maritime) Session of the International Labour Conference 2006.

Copies of the White Paper will be available from the Vote Office and the Printed Paper Office.

DEFENCE

Far Eastern Prisoners of War and Civilian Internees

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg): On 19 July my predecessor, the hon. Member for West Bromwich, East (Mr. Watson), announced the publication of an independent report on the errors made in administering the Government's ex-gratia payment scheme for former far east prisoners of war and civilian internees. The report prepared by Mr. David Watkins was based on a detailed and thorough investigation of how inconsistent criteria came to be used in deciding payments to former civilian internees; this included consultation with the key affected parties. At the time of its publication, the Government welcomed the report and made clear that they would take time to consider further the detail of the recommendations.

In responding to the report, the Ministry of Defence has consulted with the other Departments responsible both for developing and implementing the scheme in 2000-01, and for now providing guidance on the development of new policy. We have also consulted with the representative organisation for civilian internees, ABCIFER, and with the parliamentary ombudsman. The report made some 13 recommendations. Steps had already been taken since 2000 that address many of the shortcomings. These occurred quite independently, as part of the Government's work on better regulation and better policy making. Nevertheless, the recent reshaping of the FEPOW scheme in particular was able to benefit from the emerging recommendations and we are doing work to take them into account in the wider context of a wider review of the Department's guidance on policy making.

I have today placed in the Library of the House our detailed response to David Watkins' recommendations.

I would like to thank Mr. Watkins for his thorough investigation and comprehensive report and to acknowledge the major role played by the parliamentary ombudsman and Public Administration Select Committee in scrutinising the administration of the scheme and helping us to identify and resolve the errors within it. Finally, I would like to give credit again to Ron Bridge, the chairman of ABCIFER, for the enormous amount of painstaking work he has put into the process.

RAF Headquarters

The Secretary of State for Defence (Des Browne): I am pleased to announce that, on 1 April, the RAF's Personnel and Training Command and Strike Command will merge to form a single Air Command, with its headquarters at RAF High Wycombe in Buckinghamshire. The creation of a single command, with a single fully integrated headquarters, will better equip the RAF to provide a coherent and co-ordinated single air focus to the other services, MOD Head Office, the Permanent Joint Headquarters and the rest of MOD.

Over the past five years the RAF has undertaken a significant amount of restructuring to improve delivery, reduce bureaucracy and eliminate waste. This has centred on force structure adjustments, estate rationalisation and logistics transformation. One element of this work focused on headquarters rationalisation and resulted in the collocation of Headquarters Personnel and Training Command and Headquarters Strike Command at RAF High Wycombe in October 2006.

The success of this work, which resulted in a reduction of some 1,000 posts across the two command headquarters and annual savings of some £23 million, has enabled these resources to be better directed towards the delivery of support to the front line. The next step in this work is the creation of a single Air Command which reflects the continued commitment of the Government to ensuring that resources are focused on the front line. The recent draw down of personnel for collocation means, however, that the creation of a single Air Command is unlikely to lead to any manpower reductions.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE)

The Minister for Policing, Security and Community Safety (Mr. Tony McNulty): Last July the Home Secretary announced his intention to review the criminal justice system to ensure that there was the correct balance in favour of the law-abiding majority and the victim, and to ensure that offenders are properly and effectively punished.

The police service is the point of entry to the criminal justice system and we must have proportionate and balanced powers to allow the investigation of crime and criminality and sufficient enforcement powers to deal with those who break the law.

The Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) 1984 was introduced to standardise and professionalise police work. It provides a core framework of police powers and safeguards around stop and search, arrest, detention, investigation, identification and interviewing suspects.

However, PACE has been subject to continued change since it was first introduced. There is now a need for rationalisation. We know from stakeholders and practitioners that PACE has become unduly complex and bureaucratic.

That is why the Government are announcing today the formal launch of the review of PACE. This is a major and significant programme of work examining one of the fundamental statutes of our criminal justice system. The review will look to examine how we can:

- Re-focus the investigation and evidence gathering process on serving the needs of the victim and the witness
- Reduce unnecessary bureaucracy
- Help tackle re-offending
- Raise police efficiency and effectiveness
- Increase the ability for police officers to be engaged in operational frontline activities

Rather than set out detailed ideas we may have, we are inviting stakeholders, practitioners and the public to let us know what they consider needs to be changed, amended or introduced.

Based on the results of that exercise we will discuss the findings from the public consultation through bilateral meetings, group meetings and forums with stakeholders and practitioners.

When that exercise is completed around the end of 2007, we will then put the final proposals back out on public consultation. That is expected around spring 2008.

I very much hope and welcome constructive proposals and suggestions on what we can do to help make sure that victims and witnesses are at the heart of the system and that their interests are paramount.

TRANSPORT

Highways Agency

The Secretary of State for Scotland (Mr. Douglas Alexander): I have received a report from Mike Nichols, Chairman and Chief Executive of the Nichols Group, on the Highways Agency major roads programme.

In July 2006 the Highways Agency advised me of increases in its cost estimates for schemes in the Targeted Programme of Improvements (TPI). I was concerned that these estimates could be unreliable, since in the majority of cases costs had not been finally agreed with contractors. I therefore commissioned Mike Nichols to undertake an immediate review, with the following terms of reference:

> "To review the Highways Agency's approach to cost estimating and project management, and to make recommendations, including on how the Agency should best assess, monitor and report on risks to its cost estimates."

Mike Nichols has now delivered his report to me. He has confirmed that estimates have increased above initial forecasts, largely on schemes which are not yet in construction. The biggest single factor is higher than expected inflation in construction prices. He notes that estimating is inherently difficult for schemes with expenditure spreading over 10 or more years ahead, and that the majority of the forward programme by value is at stages of development when estimates are inevitably uncertain. Importantly, he has made it clear that he is not saying that the Agency is paying more than it should do for its schemes; rather, the main concern is future delivery.

He has made a number of recommendations for improvements in the development and management of schemes, so that the large forward programme of investment can be successfully managed. He has suggested restructuring the roads programme into phases; improvements to the governance arrangements between the Department and the Agency; and improvements the Agency should make in estimating, risk management, procurement and delivery capability. I accept his recommendations and will ensure that priority is given to their implementation.

The Nichols report will make a valuable contribution to the successful development and delivery of the forward programme. I am placing copies of the report in the Libraries of both Houses.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pensions Regulator

The Minister of State for Work and Pensions (James Purnell): I am pleased to announce that there will be no increase in the General Levy rates for the Pensions Regulator for 2007-08. Rates will remain at the 2005-06 level as set out in the table below.

The General Levy meets the cost of the Pensions Regulator whose objective is to protect the benefits of members of occupational and private pension schemes; to reduce risks that lead to calls on the Pension Protection Fund and to promote and improve understanding of, the good administration of work based pension schemes. It also meets the cost of the Pensions Ombudsman and the Pensions Advisory Service which provide scheme members with help, advice and information.

General Levy rates for 2007-08

Number of Members	Occupational Pension Levy	Personal /Stakeholder Pension Levy
2-11	£24.00 per scheme	£10.40 per scheme
12-99	£2.50 per member	£1.00 per member

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Control of Advertisements

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Yvette Cooper): The Secretary of State has today laid Regulations to control outdoor advertisements in England. A circular is being published to accompany the Regulations and a Regulatory Impact Assessment has been prepared.

This coincides with the launch of a database on unlawful advertisements and fly-posting, which will help local planning authorities to take enforcement action against those who flout the law.

The new Regulations update and improve the current arrangements for controlling outdoor advertisements and make the legislation more responsive to rapidly changing forms of advertising. The circular explains the legislation and provides guidance for local planning authorities and businesses to help ensure that the system operates effectively.

Copies of the Regulations, the circular and the Regulatory Impact Assessment will be placed in the House Libraries or may be obtained via the Department for Communities and Local Government website at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/staging/index.asp?id=1506099 and the Office of Public Sector Information website at www.opsi.gov.uk

The unlawful advertisements and fly-posting database is launched today. The database will enable enforcement officers within local planning authorities to input and extract details of prosecutions and formal cautions against companies and individuals who have unlawfully displayed advertisements alongside motorways and trunk roads. The database will also include this information about those guilty of fly-posting.

This service will help local planning authorities to build a case for prosecution within their own administrative areas. It will also help authorities have an idea of a company's history and assist them in tracking down persistent offenders. It could assist the courts when awarding costs and ensuring that the fine imposed reflects the seriousness of the offence and takes into account whether the person found guilty is a first time or persistent offender. This in turn should help to reduce the number of unlawful advertisements displayed alongside motorways and trunk roads and reduce the incidence of fly-posting.

School Balances (1999-00 to 2005-06)

The Minister for Schools (Jim Knight): The Department for Education and Skills has today published information on the end of financial year revenue balances of all local authority maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools for the years for which information is available: 1999-00 to 2005-06.

The information is taken from local authorities' published section 52 outturn statements for the years in question but presents this in summary form. Copies of the information have been placed in the Libraries and will be available on the Department's website at:

www.dfes.gov.uk/localauthorities/section52/subPage.cfm?action=section52.default&ID=58.

The Department is publishing this information to inform debate on the effective management of school resources to ensure the best outcomes for the taxpayer's considerable investment in schools.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Marine Bill White Paper

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (David Miliband): I am pleased to announce that I am today laying before Parliament and publishing Government White Paper Command 7047, "A Sea Change", a Marine Bill White Paper.

In 2001, the Prime Minister committed the UK Government to new measures to improve marine conservation, including a series of Marine Stewardship Reports. The first of these reports, "Safeguarding Our Seas", jointly published a year later by the UK Government and devolved Administrations, set out the shared vision of clean, healthy, safe, productive and biologically diverse oceans and seas.

"Safeguarding our Seas" also described the Government's strategy for the conservation and sustainable development of the marine environment. Part of that strategy has been to examine how we can streamline regulation for those who make a living from the sea and how we can better protect the marine environment.

The arrangements in place for managing marine activities and protecting marine wildlife and the marine environment are complex and can be confusing and costly for all involved. New activities, changes in technology and a deepening understanding of the seas around us and the way we affect them have also exposed some gaps and limitations in this system. A number of published reports and reviews have shown that as the pressures on our seas increase and change we do not have all the tools we need to fully protect our marine environment or manage the full range of demands that we place on the marine area.

In 2005, we completed an integrated assessment of the "State of Our Seas - Charting Progress". The overall picture that emerged was that UK seas are productive and support a wide range of fish, mammals, seabirds and other marine life. The levels of monitored contaminants and pollution have decreased significantly. However, human activities have resulted in adverse changes to the marine ecosystem and continue to do so. These direct human activities, along with climate change, pose a real threat to the balance and integrity of the marine ecosystem.

This White Paper sets out our plans for legislation that will enable us to take a significant step forward in the way that we manage the activities that take place in the marine area. The changes we are proposing will mean we will be able to obtain best value from the many different uses of our valuable marine resources whilst maintaining and protecting the ecosystems upon which they depend. They will improve the delivery of policies relating to marine activities operating in coastal and offshore waters and to marine natural resource protection.

The principles of sustainable development, good regulation and modern government underpin these proposals. We will simplify existing legislation and streamline administration. We will establish modern and flexible new arrangements and structures that will stand the test of time.

We will introduce a new system of marine planning encompassing all marine activities and providing a strategic approach to the use of marine space and the interactions between its uses. It will clarify our marine objectives and priorities for the future, and direct decision-makers and users towards more efficient, sustainable use and protection of our marine resources.

We will establish a marine licensing system that is more efficient and transparent, simplifying marine licensing processes and providing for a rationalised and more integrated approach. This will deliver better, more consistent licensing decisions more quickly and at less cost to all, through a system that is proportionate and easier to understand and to use.

We will add to existing tools for the conservation of marine ecosystems and biodiversity with a new approach to protected areas for important species and habitats. This will enable us to tackle the deterioration in the state of the UK's marine biodiversity and promote recovery and ensure environmental considerations are at the heart of decision-making processes. They will allow the UK to fully deliver on its vital European and international conservation obligations.

We will modernise inshore fisheries management arrangements and enable a more active approach to managing recreational sea angling. We will also strengthen fisheries enforcement powers and provide for recovery of the costs of fishing vessel licence administration. This will strengthen fisheries and environmental management arrangements so that more effective action can be taken to conserve marine ecosystems and help achieve a sustainable and profitable fisheries sector. Our fisheries proposals will apply in England and in some cases Wales and Northern Ireland.

For the UK Government and Northern Ireland administration we will establish a new Marine Management Organisation to help effectively deliver many marine policies across UK waters. We will incorporate into this new organisation a number of existing Government agencies and functions. This will make a unique contribution to sustainable development by bringing together within a single independent body the delivery of strategic planning, streamlined marine licensing, fisheries management and enforcement, and nature conservation enforcement.

Overall, our proposals will mean less risk, delay and cost to business, increased capability to provide targeted protection to marine life where it is needed, and improved co-ordinated enforcement of the new regime. They will provide an integrated approach to sustainable management, enhancement and use of the marine natural environment for the benefit of current and future generations. They will facilitate economic growth in the marine area in a sustainable manner and protect the environment providing us with a marine and coastal environment that can be enjoyed by all.

Marine Fisheries Agency

The Minister for Local Environment, Marine and Animal Welfare (Mr. Ben Bradshaw): From 1 April, 2007 the Marine Fisheries Agency (MFA) will be taking on additional marine environmental responsibilities, including licensing and consents work from core-DEFRA and licensing of marine aggregate dredging from the Department for Communities and Local Government.

To better reflect the Agency's extended remit to protect and manage the marine environment, the MFA will change its name to the Marine and Fisheries Agency as of 1 April, 2007.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Justice and Home Affairs Council - 15 February 2007

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Joan Ryan): The Justice and Home Affairs Council was held on 15 February 2007 in Brussels. Baroness Scotland and I attended on behalf of the UK.

The German presidency opened the Council with adoption of the 'A' points list which was approved apart from point 9, a mandate to open negotiations on the exchange of passenger name records. The items adopted included a regulation establishing an EU agency for fundamental rights, and a report on the extent of trafficking of human beings during the 2006 world cup in Germany and the measures taken by Germany to deal with this.

The presidency hosted an informal dinner for Ministers the evening before the Council, at which Ministers discussed how best to prepare the post-2009 JHA programme. The discussion built on the ideas put forward by the German presidency at the informal JHA Council in Dresden; notably, the idea of setting up an informal group of the next six presidencies and the Commission to co-ordinate this work. Member states generally welcomed the idea of preliminary work by such a group to assist in the thorough preparation of any future work programme, while recognising that this would be without prejudice to any formal discussions and decisions in the Council at the appropriate time. The UK secured agreement that the group should include a common law expert, that it should adopt transparent working methods to allow contributions from those outside the group, and should report regularly.

One of the principal items considered by JHA Ministers last week was the exchange of policing information between member states in the context of incorporating the Prüm treaty into the EU legal order. This will facilitate the identification and subsequent exchange of information on fingerprints, vehicle registration and DNA. The Council mandated experts to prepare a Council decision for adoption in the coming months which will transfer the third pillar (police co-operation and data sharing) elements of that treaty into the EU, subject to deletion of a provision on measures in the event of immediate danger. I welcomed this approach and the importance of effective exchange of information more generally. I noted however that in taking forward this work further consideration needed to be given to the detail of the data protection regime and that sufficient time would be required for national Parliaments to scrutinise the proposal.

The Council also secured a general approach on a framework decision which will provide for the exchange of prisoners between member states so that custodial sentences can be served in the prisoner's home state, close to family and friends. Once finalised and implemented we believe that this will benefit both member states and our citizens in aiding the re-integration into societies of our prisoners. While participating in this general approach the UK maintained its parliamentary scrutiny reserve. Once adopted the Government expect this to reduce numbers of foreign prisoners in UK jails.

On migration there was discussion on a common approach to partnership agreements with countries of origin and transit. It was suggested that these agreements should include information on legal migration channels, national quotas, circular migration and capacity building, in exchange for readmission, safeguarding human rights and a commitment to manage migration. There was general agreement from member states on this approach although a majority were against the inclusion of quotas. The UK stressed the need for a flexible approach, highlighting a points-based system as an alternative to quotas. The Council noted that the first of the Commission's proposals on legal migration would be expected in May.

There was a lunchtime discussion on the framework decision on racism and xenophobia. It is clear that there is a commitment to reaching agreement on this measure and member states supported the text as a basis for further work. However, the UK, along with a number of other members states, could not accept article 8(2) on mutual legal assistance, which we argued had been superseded by the European evidence warrant. One member state argued for the retention of this article. The presidency indicated that it would seek agreement to the text at the April JHA Council.

In the Mixed Committee the Council took note that the SISOne4all project was running on time. The global rescheduling of the second generation Schengen Information System (SIS II) was also noted. The focus on SISOne4all has meant that there will be a six-month delay to the SIS II programme; the SIS II operational date for those member states already connected to the SIS 1+ will be mid-December 2008.

There was support for reaching an early agreement on the regulation establishing rapid border intervention teams, with the presidency hoping to agree it at the April JHA Council. Baroness Scotland stressed our support for Frontex, despite our exclusion from the regulation and offered to make available some equipment and expertise.

The increasing numbers of Moldovan applications for Romanian nationality was discussed under AOB, the Commission asking member states to participate in the common consular centre initiatives. This question will be discussed further at senior official level.

Finally, as another AOB item, the Commission presented their proposal for a directive setting criminal sanctions for environmental crimes. This would oblige member states to treat serious offences against the environment as criminal acts and set minimum sanctions for environmental crimes. Negotiations on this proposal will commence at a working group in March.

Lord Carlile's Report on the Definition of Terrorism

The Minister for Policing, Security and Community Safety (Mr. Tony McNulty): I am pleased to say that Lord Carlile of Berriew QC has completed his report on the "Definition of Terrorism" and this is being published today. Copies are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Prison Service Corporate and Business Plan 2006-07

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Gerry Sutcliffe): The Prison Service Corporate and Business Plan for 2006-07 (including the previously agreed Key Performance Indicator targets) has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Campsfield House Immigration Removal Centre

The Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality (Mr. Liam Byrne): The House will be aware that an incident occurred in the early hours of yesterday morning at Campsfield House Immigration Removal Centre in Oxfordshire.

I would like to first praise the outstanding response of the emergency services and staff from IND and the Prison Service who reacted with great speed and professionalism to quell this disturbance. As a result of their decisive, rapid action the centre is now fully under control and the majority of the centre is still fully operational.

An assessment of the impact of this incident is ongoing, but the Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate has reported the following events to me.

At 6.30am on Wednesday 14 March an attempted removal of an immigration detainee in Campsfield House was forcibly resisted. Several other detainees then sought to intervene and obstruct this removal and began to then threaten staff and start fires in the centre.

The emergency services were called and all staff and detainees were moved to the exterior grounds within the centre at around 7am. All of the fires were extinguished swiftly by the emergency services. Prison Service Tornado Units were then deployed to the centre to help restore full control.

There was no risk to public safety during the course of this incident. Throughout the day the perimeter fence remained secure. No detainee was able to abscond from the centre.

No serious injuries occurred to staff or detainees within the centre, but seven members of staff and two detainees were taken to hospital suffering from the effects of smoke inhalation. All were subsequently discharged.

Robert Whalley CB, a retired senior civil servant, will extend his investigation into the recent disturbance at Harmondsworth Removal Centre to cover this incident.

Campsfield House holds up to 200 detainees and was operating at near full capacity at the time of the disturbance.

Sixty of the detainees at Campsfield House have been transferred under escort to other parts of the IND detention estate but the other detainees have remained at the centre.

No detainee will be released from either this centre or any other part of the IND estate as a result of the incident.

We cannot and will not tolerate such attempts to deliberately prevent the removal of those who have no legal rights to be in this country.

The Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate has therefore been instructed to ensure that removal from the country will continue to be pursued actively in all cases.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Oral Statements

The Leader of the House of Commons (Mr. Jack Straw): Following agreement within Government, this is to inform Members of improvements to the process by which notice is given to the House when Ministers plan to make an oral statement.

Wherever notice has already been given to the House via a written ministerial statement, oral or written questions, or elsewhere on the Floor of the House (that is, in debate or at business questions) that an oral statement will be made on a certain date, then it would be helpful to the House for this to be recorded in the House's business papers. Accordingly, from today I have asked for a written notice in such cases to be printed in the "Future Business" section of the Order Paper; and again on the "Order of Business" on the day of the statement.

The Government would retain the current freedom to make statements without prior notice having been given in this way and, if necessary, not to proceed with a statement of which prior notice had been given.

I am grateful to Mr. Speaker, for agreeing to the Order Paper being changed in this way.

PRIME MINISTER

"Strengthening Democracy: Fair and Sustainable Funding of Political Parties"

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): I have today laid before both Houses the report by Sir Hayden Phillips entitled "Strengthening Democracy: Fair and Sustainable Funding of Political Parties". Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

I welcome Sir Hayden's report. He has negotiated his report with skill and dedication, and for this I am very grateful. I am sure that the other political parties share my gratitude.

The report shows very clearly that there is now the basis for a new agreement on the funding and expenditure of political parties. There are a number of detailed questions which need to be taken forward, through a process of further discussion between the political parties. I hope that following these negotiations, consensus can be reached. I have asked Sir Hayden to chair these further discussions. I believe that they should begin soon and conclude before the summer recess, in order to build a platform for legislation in the next parliamentary session.

The time has come for us to find a new settlement on party funding and expenditure. I have asked my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House of Commons to lead these negotiations for the Labour Party. I hope that the leaders of the other main parties will also nominate delegations to join the talks.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Review of the Serious Fraud Office

The Solicitor-General (Mr. Mike O'Brien): My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General has made the following written ministerial statement:

"When I announced the re-appointment of Robert Wardle as Director of the Serious Fraud Office in January I indicated that we had agreed we would take the opportunity jointly to commission a thorough external review of the SFO's approach to the investigation and prosecution of the cases with which it deals.

I am today announcing the terms of reference of that review which are:

'In the light of the Government's overall strategy for tackling fraud, and taking into account the relevant recommendations from the fraud review:

To consider the most effective methods for the SFO to use in investigating and prosecuting the serious and complex cases which fall within its remit, with particular reference to practice in overseas jurisdictions; and any related internal organisational or structural issues;

And to make recommendations'.

The review will be led by Jessica de Grazia, a former New York city prosecutor who now resides in the UK, and who has handled many complex cases, both as an investigator and trial advocate".

Fighting Fraud Together - The Government Response to the Fraud Review

The Solicitor-General (Mr. Mike O'Brien): My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General has made the following written ministerial statement:

"I have today published the Government's formal response to the consultation on the recommendations of the fraud review. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The Government's response to the fraud review is a key element of our overall strategy for handling fraud, which is estimated to cost the economy £14 billion per annum. Fraud presents a serious threat to the economy, and does real harm to victims and businesses.

The Government are committed to tackling fraud, and together with industry, the public sector and regulators will be taking forward a wide ranging programme to create the building blocks for a truly strategic response to this growing threat.

In doing so, the Government accept the thrust of most of the recommendations of the fraud review. A detailed programme of work is now being established to take this to the next stage.

A priority will be to establish a national fraud strategic authority, which will be the forum for public and private sectors to develop a national strategy for tackling fraud. This will include establishing a mechanism for accurate and regular measurement of the extent of fraud, which is crucial to establishing a long-term solution.

Detailed work will also be taken forward on how best to establish a national fraud reporting centre recommended by the review as a means of taking crime reports from victims and developing intelligence to tackle fraud and organised crime related to fraud. The commissioner of the City of London police will chair a working group to make detailed proposals on the establishment of a national lead force, which will aim to complement existing police force capacity and provide a centre of excellence for complex and serious cases.

The Government will also be taking forward a number of the recommendations made to improve the way the criminal justice system handles fraud-related cases. This will include a study to assess the costs of fraud to the courts and any benefits which can be derived from dealing with more aspects of complex frauds in one jurisdiction.

Finally, the Government will explore the review's recommendation of encouraging early guilty pleas through a safe legal framework which protects defendants' rights but also improves the experience of victims."

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Security and Nuclear Safeguards

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Mr. Alistair Darling): With effect from 1 April 2007, the security activities of the Office for Civil Nuclear Security (OCNS) will be performed by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) on behalf of the Health and Safety Commission. The operational nuclear safeguards work of the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) will also be carried out by the HSE with effect from the same date. The staff in both areas will transfer to the HSE with their work.

The aim of these arrangements is to consolidate the safety, security and safeguards activities of the Government in a single organisation, consistent with the thrust of the recommendations of the 2005 Hampton Report, so as to enable more effective and better co-ordinated regulation of the industry, and to enable the more effective deployment of resources. DTI will remain responsible for nuclear safety, security and safeguards policy. The HSE will operate under Memorandums of Understanding agreed with the DTI, one for safeguards and one for security.

TRANSPORT

London Underground and National Railways (Security)

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Douglas Alexander): Throughout 2006 the Department for Transport undertook a number of trials at stations on London's surface and underground rail networks to study the effectiveness of both existing and new security-related technologies.

These trials were part of a broad package of work being carried out by both the Department and other stakeholders to improve our understanding of operational environments and identify potential practical and pragmatic solutions for improving the protection of the public at our rail stations.

The first trial of passenger screening technology took place at Paddington station in January 2006 and was followed by further trials at Canary Wharf and Greenford London Underground stations. Trials also took place in August to test the practicalities of deploying portable vehicle access control barriers at major entry points at Waterloo and Victoria stations. All the data and feedback gathered during these trials are now being analysed to inform future judgments.

The next element of work is to conduct a short study of airflow patterns and an assessment of the performance of air monitoring machines within the London Underground environment. This is to increase our knowledge of how potentially toxic substances could be dispersed in such an environment.

The purpose of the study is to gather data within a genuine rail environment. It is not a reaction to any threat increase or a measure to enhance security at this or any other station. All the data and feedback gained will merely help to inform future decisions.

Following consultation with London Underground, St. John's Wood station has been chosen as an appropriate location for the research, with studies commencing in March. Two dates, Sunday March 25 and Sunday April 1, have been identified for the airflow studies. The station will remain open as normal and train services at the station will not be affected. Passengers will not be required to take part and there are no associated health and safety risks.

As is routine in airflow studies, small amounts of sulphur hexafluoride will be used to help monitor the movement of air within the station during operational hours. Sulphur hexafluoride is a non-toxic, odourless gas typically used in tennis balls and for monitoring ventilation systems in buildings.

The UK's surface railway system is a network made up of 2,500 stations and 11,000 miles of track that carries 1 billion passengers a year. London Underground itself has 255 stations, 253 miles of track and carries 976 million passengers every year. The British public understand that providing a 'closed' security system on the rail network is unworkable and that no single security measure is either foolproof or capable of mitigating every threat.

However it is important that we continue to study the operational environment of our networks and both existing and emerging technologies to see whether procedures can be improved. In doing so, we aim to cut down the risks as much as possible whilst still allowing people to go about their day-to-day business.

European Transport Council

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Douglas Alexander): I will attend the first Transport Council of the German presidency which takes place in Brussels on 22 March.

The Commission will report on the current difficulties on the PPP concession contract negotiations for the Galileo satellite navigation programme and their impact on the overall development of the programme. There has been no recent progress on the negotiations because of internal problems amongst the partners in the consortium. Ministers will discuss the issue and aim to form an opinion on how preparations should proceed for a decision to be taken at the June Council. We remain concerned about the lack of clear and transparent governance in the management of the development programme and will continue to examine the emerging deal very carefully for its justification in terms of value for money, affordability, and risk to the public sector.

The Council will be asked to adopt a mandate authorising the Commission to open negotiations with non-EU countries on their participation in the Galileo Supervisory Authority as Associated Members. The UK is content for the Council to do so.

The Presidency will report on the contribution of the transport sector to the Lisbon Strategy for economic development, with particular emphasis on the interplay of policy on economic growth and climate protection. An exchange of views is envisaged on the Council Conclusions of 19 February on this topic. Ministers will be asked to indicate how the energy efficiency of transport may be improved and what measures might be taken to deal with emissions in rail and maritime transport. This will enable me to reaffirm to the Council the Government's commitment to environmental aims in transport policy.

Linked to this debate on the Lisbon Strategy will be a discussion during lunch of the inclusion of aviation in the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. We welcome and support the Commission's legislative proposal and will respond in broad terms to two questions posed by the presidency which cover the application of the emissions cap to aviation and how to deal with third-country airlines.

The Commission will present to the Council the outcome of the latest rounds of negotiations on a proposed EU-US aviation agreement. The Council will be asked to agree on whether the Community should sign the draft agreement.

Following negotiations with Russia on an agreement to end charges for Siberian overflights for EU airlines, the Council will be asked to adopt a Decision on the signature and provisional application of the agreement. The UK strongly welcomes this agreement and will support the draft Decision.

AOB items include Commission presentations on extension of the major trans-European transport axes to neighbouring countries and on the implementation of the SESAR programme for the modernisation of the European air traffic management system.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Independent Living Funds Review

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mrs. Anne McGuire): On 3 May 2006 in a written ministerial statement, I announced details of a strategic review of the independent living funds which concluded in January 2007.

I welcome the thorough review of the independent living funds that has been conducted by Melanie Henwood and Bob Hudson. Their report comes at an important point in the evolution of social care and it is critical that the funds' customers do not lose the valuable support that the funds currently provide.

I recognise the ground-breaking role which the ILFs have played in developing a model of cash for care over the past 19 years and how important their services are to the disabled people who use the funds to enable them to live independently.

The reviewers have recommended that through to 2009-10 the funds should remain in their present form while making considerable improvements. In the longer term however, they recommend that there should be a smooth transition towards full integration within a system of personalised budgets because it is anomalous to retain a separate public body operating in parallel to the mainstream of independent living.

The Government will consider these recommendations and their implications for severely disabled people and for the social care system across the UK, and we aim to publish our initial response to the report before the summer recess.

A copy of the report has been placed in the Library.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces Compensation Scheme

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg): The Armed Forces Compensation Scheme has been in force now for just over a year and a half. As is sensible with any new scheme, we have conducted an evaluation of its operation in the first year to identify any emerging issues. The evaluation is now complete and copies of the report are available in the Library of the House as well as on the MOD and Veterans Agency websites. The findings show some positive outcomes from the first year such as simpler, speedier arrangements for claimants and internal dispute procedures that result in fewer cases settled by appeal to the Pensions Appeal Tribunals. The issues identified, such as continuing to raise awareness of the scheme, will be taken forward by officials. The report recommends a fuller assessment of the Armed Forces Compensation Scheme after five years of operation.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture and Fisheries Council - 19 and 20 March

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (David Miliband): I will be representing the United Kingdom at this month's Agriculture and Fisheries Council in Brussels. The Welsh Environment, Planning and Countryside Minister, Carwyn Jones, will also attend.

The Council is expected to adopt conclusions on the Commission communication on "Employment in rural areas".

The Council will hold a policy debate on a linked pair of proposals on the common organisation of the market in cereals aimed principally at dealing with the large increase in intervention purchasing of maize: one proposal will deliver extra short-term cash to compensate for high interest charges; the other will seek to overcome the problem by allowing the market to operate freely and abolish the intervention for maize.

The presidency will seek political agreement on the Commission's proposal laying down rules for voluntary modulation in light of the December 2005 European Council future financing agreement for 2007-13. The proposal sets out the terms by which member states can voluntarily modulate from pillar 1 of the Common Agricultural Policy (direct payments) to pillar 2 (rural development). It is hoped that agreement will be reached on voluntary modulation.

There will be a policy debate on the Commission proposal on the common organisation of agricultural markets and agricultural products, based on a presidency questionnaire. The proposal aims to consolidate the existing 21 sector-specific Common Market Organisations into a single regulation, in an effort to streamline and simplify the legal framework.

A number of issues, as follows, will be raised under 'any other business':

The Environment Commissioner will give an update on, the impact the proposed strategy on soil protection would have on agriculture and the need to grant member states further subsidiarity discussed at the January Council.

There will then be written updates from the health and consumer protection Commissioner on avian influenza and the EC-Russian Federation veterinary agreement negotiations.

The presidency will update the Council on the outcomes of two recent conferences: "Fuelling the Future—Renewable Resources" and "Prevention for Health—Nutrition and Physical Activity—A Key to Healthy Living".

The Agriculture Commissioner will then give an update on the WTO agricultural negotiations.

Over lunch, Ministers and the Commission will share experiences gained from the implementation of controls in food chains and discuss ways to further improve these control measures.

Light Dues 2007-08

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Dr. Stephen Ladyman): Under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, the costs of the three General Lighthouse Authorities in the British Isles are met by light dues levied on ships using ports in British Isles.

I am pleased to announce that light dues rates and the tonnage threshold will remain the same for 2007-08. It is a tribute to the continuing efficiency gains of the GLA that rates have not increased in 14 years.

Last year light dues were cut by 4p per ton, representing a 10 per cent. reduction. I welcomed the industry's assurance at that time that they accepted rates could rise in the future should the general lighthouse fund not be able to meet the cost of essential major capital projects.

It is a significant achievement that two major projects are well under-way—the redevelopment of the Commissioners of Irish Lights depot at Dun Laoghaire and the brand new GLA ships that will come into service later this year. These ongoing improvements will continue to ensure that the GLA provide the best possible service to merchant ships in UK and Irish coastal waters.

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Gillian Merron): The Greater London Authority (GLA) transport grant for 2007-08 has today been determined by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport at £2,520.5 million, following consultation with the Mayor of London. This is a block resource grant provided by the Government to Transport for London (TfL) to support and improve transport services in London, including London Underground.

This grant determination is based on the Government's five-year settlement for TfL of £2,544 million which was announced in July 2004, and includes a further £10.5 million for road safety partnership funding in London. Some £34 million of capital funding, which was included in the five-year settlement, will now be paid to TfL through a separate grant.

The GLA transport grant for 2006-07 has also been re-determined by my right hon. Friend at £2,390.305 million. This re-determination increases the Government's grant this year to TfL by £1.305 million, reflecting additional funding for scoping work to make TfL's Oyster estate interoperable with ITSO Smartcards of Oyster on National Rail and TfL's urban bus challenge projects in 2006-07.

TREASURY

Unclaimed Assets Scheme

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Ed Balls): As announced in the 2005 pre-Budget report, the Government have been working with the banking and building society sector to design an unclaimed assets scheme which both preserves the rights of the individual consumer and at the same time allows these assets to be reinvested in the community. The Government welcomed the commitment from the industry and since then we have been working together to design a scheme.

The Government are today publishing a consultation document outlining a proposed scheme, including details of the banks' and building societies' proposed changes to the banking code and proposals for legislation.

The proposal is made with the support of the British Bankers Association and the Building Societies Association and these organisations have signalled in the foreword to the consultation document their commitment to making the scheme work successfully.

A further consultation document will be released later in the spring to consider the most effective means of distributing the available assets, taking as its basis the statement in the 2005 pre-Budget report that the funds should be reinvested in the community, with a focus on youth services that are responsive to the needs of young people, and also on financial inclusion and capability.

The 2005 pre-Budget report also announced that there will be an option for small locally based financial institutions to focus on these needs in their local communities. These will typically be building societies, often playing an important role in these communities. It is proposed that small locally based financial institutions will be defined by reference to a threshold level of total assets as in practice this indicates both relatively small and local institutions.

In line with previous announcements, it is proposed that banks and building societies will participate in the scheme on a voluntary basis, but the scheme will be backed by legislation to resolve issues concerning financial liability for the participating financial institutions and their customers.

It is proposed that the unclaimed assets scheme will apply to bank and building society accounts where there has been no customer-initiated activity for at least 15 years. On this basis, the banks and building societies estimate that a stock of several hundred million pounds may currently lie unclaimed. They also estimate that a further flow of perhaps tens of millions of pounds may become available each year. These estimates are before the impact of a comprehensive reuniting exercise that banks and building societies will launch in advance of the scheme, building on their existing arrangements to help customers track down their accounts.

It is proposed that unclaimed assets falling within the definition will be transferred to a central reclaim fund. However, for customers the process for reclaiming the money will not change—they need simply to visit their bank or building society, which will repay them as now. The reclaim fund will bear the financial risk for repaying customers who want to reclaim their assets after the introduction of the scheme. Centralising the risk in a single reclaim fund will allow it to be pooled and managed as efficiently as possible. The reclaim fund will need to be managed prudently so that money is available to fund applications for reclaim. Banks and building societies will be responsible for calculating the amounts to be transferred and for handling the interaction with those customers, so customers will not need to have a direct relationship with the reclaim fund. It is proposed that the reclaim fund will be a freestanding body, independent of Government, the banking industry and the distribution mechanism. It could either be an existing body or a new body. The banking industry's representative bodies will take the lead in selecting or setting up the body, which will then be wholly independent.

The reclaim fund will hand over for reinvestment in the community those assets not needed to cover anticipated reclaim requests. The need to manage assets for potential reclaim at a later date in order to protect customers' interests will, of course, mean that the reclaim fund will need to hold back a proportion of the assets it receives from the banks and building societies. As well as effective and prudential management of the fund, it is also proposed that customers' interests will be further safeguarded by access to the Financial Ombudsman Service for any disputes between themselves, the fund, and their bank or building society on these issues, and changes to the banking code will clarify how the banks and building societies will themselves interact with the scheme.

Copies of the consultation document will be available in the Libraries of both Houses.

DEFENCE

Army Regional Command Structure

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): My written ministerial statement of 29 November 2006, Official Report, column 108WS contained an error. The first tiret of the second paragraph should have read:

(1) From April 2007 garrisons should be commanded by the local deployable brigade commander.

Cluster Munitions

The Secretary of State for Defence (Des Browne): On 4 December 2006, Official Report, column 1WS the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office my hon. Friend the Member for Pontypridd, (Dr. Howells), set out in a written ministerial statement the UK position on cluster munitions. We confirmed that we were committed to withdrawing dumb cluster munitions by the middle of the next decade. On 15 December 2006 the Government explained in the other place, Official Report, column 1727-70 that we were examining the possibility of withdrawing dumb cluster munitions from service at an earlier date. This assessment is now complete and I am pleased to announce that we are withdrawing dumb cluster munitions from service with immediate effect.

We have considered carefully both military and humanitarian factors, reflecting our duty both to ensure that the armed forces have the capabilities they need to undertake the missions we ask of them, and to strive to reduce civilian casualties to the minimum.

Cluster munitions are legal weapons which have a valid role in modern warfare, particularly against an array of military targets in a defined area. However, they have also given rise to humanitarian concerns because they disperse sub-munitions over an area and those sub-munitions can have a high failure rate. Some cluster munitions address these concerns including through inbuilt self-destructing or self-deactivating mechanisms, reducing the risk of harm to civilians. Dumb cluster munitions do not.

At the moment, our inventory includes two dumb cluster munitions: the RBL 755 aerial delivered cluster munition, and the multiple launch rocket system M26 munition. Both will be withdrawn from service immediately and disposed of. Although withdrawing them represents a theoretical risk to our operational effectiveness, until their direct replacement is in service, there is no current plan to deploy them on operations. I have decided that this is an acceptable risk.

The types of cluster munitions we intend to retain are legitimate weapons with significant military value which, as a result of mitigating features, is not outweighed by humanitarian factors. As with all weapons, our forces' use of them will remain regulated by rules of engagement and internal scrutiny procedures designed to adhere to international law and reflect humanitarian values.

As well as living up to their responsibilities under international law, this decision is part of our wider efforts to reduce civilian casualties and to press other militaries to do the same. We continue to press for wider agreement to ban dumb cluster munitions through the convention on certain conventional weapons (CCW) and complementary initiatives like the Oslo conference on 23 February, where we, alongside other nations, agreed to work towards an international ban in 2008.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Rural Development Programmes

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (David Miliband): I am pleased to announce that on Monday 19 March the European Agriculture Council voted unanimously in favour of a voluntary modulation regulation tabled by the German presidency. The presidency confirmed that the European Parliament has agreed, on the basis of this text and associated declarations, to lift its 20 per cent. reserve on EU rural development budgets for 2007. This means that the way will be clear for all member states to finalise their new rural development programmes.

We were successful in securing our two key objectives for the UK in this negotiation: first, the flexibility to continue to apply voluntary modulation rates on a regional basis; and, secondly, the ability to operate voluntary modulation without a franchise. Obtaining regionalisation was crucial and will mean that, in accordance with our devolved Administration arrangements, voluntary modulation rates can be set at the level required in each of the four regions of the UK. Discretion over the franchise—a mechanism that exempts the first €5,000 of a direct payment from modulation—will enable us to keep the rate of voluntary modulation down.

I am not yet in a position to announce the precise rates of voluntary modulation and domestic co-financing that will apply in England during 2007-13. Following yesterday's important agreement, it will take a little time to finalise these arrangements. However, in the Agriculture Council I was able to confirm that the United Kingdom will table a written declaration at the time the regulation is adopted formally which will say that:

> All four parts of the United Kingdom will be using voluntary modulation;
> The rate of voluntary modulation to be applied will be less than 20 per cent;
> In England, 80 per cent. of voluntary modulation funds raised will be spent on environmental protection and enhancement measures under axis 2 of the rural development regulation, and will be co-financed at a significant level;

The Commission and Council have indicated their intention to table a joint declaration that indicates that the future funding for pillar 2 will be looked at as part of the forthcoming CAP Healthcheck. The UK supports this intention.

Any future increase in either compulsory modulation or EU rural development funding would allow the United Kingdom to review the rate of voluntary modulation we apply.

This has been a difficult and lengthy negotiation and I am very pleased that we have secured agreement to a text that meets the UK's requirements. I now look forward to being able to announce further details about the funding for and content of our new rural development programme in England shortly. I will keep the House informed of any further developments.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

International Corruption (Bribery)

The Minister for Trade (Mr. Ian McCartney): I am pleased to publish today the Government's report to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) on the UK's progress with implementation of the OECD bribery convention. This complements the report my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development published on 12 March: "Combating International Corruption: UK Action Plan 2006-07: Interim Progress Report", which summarised a wide range of activities we have undertaken to tackle international corruption. The report published today, which was a subject for discussion at last week's OECD working group on bribery in Paris, accounts for the work we have done in response to the OECD's "phase 2 review" of the UK, published in March 2005. It outlines the achievements we have made in implementing the OECD bribery convention, as well as addressing some of the challenges we have come across in this work. Some additional developments post-date the Government's submission of the report to the OECD.

First, the changes we have made to UK co-ordination in this area are significant, allowing us to be more effective in our efforts across the board. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development's appointment as the ministerial lead on fighting corruption was important. But this is by no means the only development. On the law enforcement side, there has been major progress. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has made it clear to all law enforcement agencies in the UK what practical support it can offer to transnational investigations. On specifics, the Government have confirmed the Serious Fraud Office (SFO)'s lead role in handling foreign bribery allegations and the SFO has created a special unit to vet such allegations. Since March 2005, the SFO has received 53 allegations, launched six new investigations and made four arrests. My noble and learned Friend the Attorney-General has stated that he will seek additional resources for the SFO's work in this area, should that be necessary.

With funding from the Department for International Development (DFID), the City of London police created a new dedicated 10-person unit to increase law enforcement capacity to investigate foreign bribery allegations. Set up in November 2006, the unit has already taken on four investigations and made its first arrests in January. In parallel, DFID has funded extra staff for the Metropolitan police service's proceeds of corruption unit to increase the UK's capacity to counter the laundering of corrupt assets in the UK's financial system. The Metropolitan police has £34.6 million worth of allegedly corrupt assets under restraint. The Met has responded to requests from the Nigerian Government relating to two former Nigerian state governors. In one case, £1 million has been returned. In the other, property bought in London—which was frozen by swift police action under the 2002 Proceeds of Crime Act—will now be sold so that the funds can be returned to the people of Nigeria from whom they were stolen. We have worked hard on proposals for an International Corruption Investigation Support Centre, a facility which poor countries can use to obtain legal advice on asset recovery and mutual legal assistance. There have been discussions with other interested donors and key service providers. An international expert meeting will take place on 21 March to agree proposals. Furthermore, changes in the UK's mutual legal assistance mechanisms will result in faster execution of requests from other countries.

In addition, the FCO has assumed a greater co-ordinating role in awareness-raising activities. This has allowed us to make best use of our guidance materials—a revised leaflet explaining UK anti-corruption law and a DVD, launched by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development and myself last November. There is more systematic training for officials working overseas and law enforcement personnel, the latter drawing particularly on the experience of the Ministry of Defence police fraud squad. And the fight against corruption has featured in the FCO's regular dialogue with the trade union movement, to complement the rolling programme of sessions we hold for the UK business community, both in the UK and overseas. So, all in all, including inside the Palace of Westminster, there is much greater awareness in the UK of international corruption than there was a few years ago.

I should comment on legislative developments since March 2005, beginning with the question of comprehensive corruption legislation, which has been taken forward since we submitted this written report to the OECD last month. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department published the Government's response to the Home Office's 2005-06 consultation on 5 March, Official Report, column 115WS and his statement dealt with it in detail. Times have changed since the Law Commission first reported on this area of the law in 1998. Not only has the OECD published three reports on the UK's implementation of this convention and the UN convention come into force, but our law enforcement agencies now have several years' practical experience of applying the UK's current legal framework. All of these have helped to inform the Government's thinking. We continue to believe that our law meets the requirements of the OECD convention; the objective of this exercise is to clarify and modernise our legislation. As the my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department made clear last week, the consultation confirmed that there is broad support for reform of the prevention of corruption Acts and the Government remain committed to a fundamental reform. We shall bring forward legislative proposals as soon as we are in a position to do so. Ministers have asked the Law Commission to review the law of bribery and, in the light of their findings, to prepare a draft Bill, complete with extra resources to expedite the process. The Law Commission will have a broad mandate to consider the full range of structural options for a new modern and consolidated bribery law.

We have also been active in a number of other international forums. For example, the UK was a key participant at the first conference of states parties to the UN convention against corruption in December 2006, ensuring that we can take forward implementation on the crucial issues of asset recovery, technical assistance and review mechanisms. We also funded the participation at that conference of civil society representatives from more than a dozen developing countries to ensure that their voice was heard. We continue to help to deliver on G8 anti-corruption commitments, for example, on asset recovery.

The report also outlines a good degree of progress in the Crown dependencies and overseas territories. Guernsey and Jersey have both made progress towards implementing international anti-corruption treaties, as have several overseas territories. We have already extended the UN convention against corruption to the British Virgin Islands and hope to be in a position to extend this and the OECD convention to the Cayman Islands when it enacts new legislation later this year. We shall continue to raise the subject with the dependencies and territories at relevant opportunities, including at the highest level.

Following on from this week's discussions in Paris, the Government will continue to inform the OECD of further progress in this vital area. This co-operation will include our usual constructive approach to the preparation for and conduct of a future on site visit to the UK by experts from two other OECD countries in the coming year and contributions to a further written report on the UK. The visit and report will focus on the operation of our legal framework and law enforcement capacity and systems. We fully anticipate further recognition of the high level of transparency that characterises the UK's activities in this field. And we welcome the opportunity to demonstrate the degree of our commitment to all aspects of the fight against international corruption. As well as work under the OECD bribery convention, we shall continue to pursue our wider efforts in this regard, including by pushing for effective implementation of the UN convention against corruption, through G8 initiatives, the provision of technical assistance by DFID, the FCO and law enforcement experts and continued close engagement with the business community in key sectors.

HEALTH

NHS Trusts (Originating Capital)

The Secretary of State for Health (Ms Patricia Hewitt): Pursuant to the dissolution of 41 national health service trusts on 1 April 2006, 1 July 2006 and 1 October 2006 and their reconfiguration through the establishment of 16 new NHS trusts, I propose to create originating capital for the new NHS trusts equal to the net assets transferred to them and therefore to remit the outstanding debt of the dissolved trusts.

These operations involved no overall loss to the Exchequer. A minute giving particulars and circumstances of the proposed remission, which has been approved in principle by Her Majesty's Treasury, has today been laid before Parliament.

The minute has been placed in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Identity and Passport Service

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Joan Ryan): The Identity and Passport Service is today publishing its business plan for the year commencing April 2007. Copies of the document will be placed in the Library of the House.

Passport Fraud

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Joan Ryan): Further to the statement of 2 May 2006 by my hon. Friend the Member for Leigh (Andy Burnham), the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Office, announcing the proposed introduction of interviews for adult first-time passport customers, the House will wish to know that I am announcing today the opening of the first passport interview offices commencing in May with further offices to be added progressively throughout 2007.

Passport interviews are part of the continuing fight against attempted passport fraud and forgery and are being introduced alongside other counter fraud initiatives. These changes are critical because of increasing levels of attempted passport and identity fraud. It is widely recognised that the very nature of identity fraud makes it difficult to be precise when estimating the scale of the problem in terms of the number of fraudulent passport applications. The Identity and Passport Service has sought to address this issue through special exercises that scrutinise a representative sample of passport applications.

During the period 31 October 2005 to 30 September 2006, a sample of several thousand applications were scrutinised by specialist Identity and Passport Service teams with support from fraud investigators. This found that 0.25 per cent. of applications (equivalent to 16,506 fraudulent passport applications a year) were believed to be from people attempting to obtain a passport fraudulently. Almost half of these applications were stopped by existing Identity and Passport Service processes. The remainder had gone undetected. Our current estimate is therefore that the level of undetected fraud is about 0.15 per cent. (equivalent to 10,000 applications against the planned 6.6 million passports issued per year).

Although precise figures are difficult to obtain, it appears that the level of attempted fraud is increasing and getting more sophisticated. Analysis of the frauds shows that the main fraud threat is from first time adult applications followed by first time child applications.

The Identity and Passport Service has developed a comprehensive counter fraud strategy that will help to mitigate these patterns of fraud including:

Checking biographical information to ensure that the identity claimed on the application form is real, living, and can be linked to the customer through cross checks against a range of public and private sector databases;

the development of facial recognition systems to check applicant images against a database of images of suspected fraudsters; checking applicants against increasingly sophisticated internal watch files including the database of passports reported lost or stolen; strengthening its business processes for identity authentication, and training and support for passport examiners and specialist fraud units; interviews for all first-time adult customers.

The requirement to attend an interview will be introduced gradually, starting with modest volumes of interviews in a limited number of interview offices from May 2007, with the Identity and Passport Service progressively adding further offices through to the end of 2007. This progressive introduction will enable the Identity and Passport Service to enhance the interview process for customers using feedback from the early interviews.

These measures are essential to protect our citizens from identity theft and to ensure that the British passport remains one of the most secure and respected in the world.

I have placed an "Introduction of Passport Application Interviews" document in the Libraries of both Houses setting out the updated plans.

PRIME MINISTER

Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): The hon. Member for Rochdale (Paul Rowen) has been appointed as a full member of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe in place of the right hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Sir Menzies Campbell). The hon. Member for Cheadle (Mark Hunter) has been appointed as a substitute Member in place of the hon. Member for Rochdale.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Clergy Working Group

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Jim Fitzpatrick): The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) set up the Clergy Working Group in 2004 to look at clergy working conditions as part of its review of employment status issues. The working group included representatives from trade unions and many faith groups and was chaired by the DTI.

Discussions within the Clergy Working Group have resulted in the development of a statement of good practice. The statement represents minimum standards that faith groups should aim to achieve, on a voluntary basis, in a variety of areas—terms and conditions of work; resolving disputes; development and personnel support; and information and consultation.

As a first step the DTI is asking faith groups to assess the current position in relation to the standards in the statement and in two years time will ask faith groups what progress has been made. Individuals will have an opportunity to contribute to this process at both stages. Based on the information and evidence provided, DTI will consider if any further action is appropriate, including legislative action. The DTI will encourage other faith groups, which did not participate in the working group, to consider joining this process.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Fraud Inspectorate

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. James Plaskitt): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI inspection reports were published today on Glasgow city council, and London borough of Hounslow. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The BFI reports detail a range of strengths and weaknesses in the housing benefit services provided by councils and make recommendations to improve the security and efficiency of benefit delivery.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is considering the reports and may ask the councils for proposals in response to BFI's findings.

TREASURY

Debt and Reserves Management

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Ed Balls): The "Debt and Reserves Management Report 2007-08" is being published today. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Invest to Save Budget

The Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Stephen Timms): I am pleased to announce that a total of 24 bids from organisations spanning the public and third sectors have been awarded funding for projects following the ninth bidding round of the Invest to Save Budget. A total of £9 million has been allocated over the three years to 2009-10 for England. The allocated sum rises to £11 million to include consequential funding for the devolved Administrations. Details of the winning projects have been placed in the Library of the House.

The Invest to Save Budget (ISB), set up following the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review, provides initial funding support for projects that increase the extent of joint working between different parts of the public sector; identify innovative ways of delivering public services; and reduce the cost of delivering the services and/or improve the quality and effectiveness of services delivered to the public.

This ninth bidding round was focused on supporting innovative approaches to the delivery of local services by third sector organisations. The intention was to encourage local authorities to work in partnership with local third sector organisations to deliver services in line with local needs and priorities.

Applicants were asked to address the priority areas of:

The Third Sector's role in delivering public services and building fairer Communities—projects that deliver cash releasing efficiencies; and projects that address the priorities set out in their Local Area Agreement and support their Community Strategy—projects that are additional to those already funded by statutory bodies and which address recognised gaps in local service provision.

Successful projects are required to agree a detailed implementation plan, setting out how the project will be delivered. Each project must also provide six-monthly progress reports to sponsor departments and the Treasury and carry out an evaluation of the project's success once it has been completed. Wider dissemination of the good practice from completed projects is then fed back into the whole spectrum of public service providers.

This ninth ISB bidding round allocates the remainder of the £90 million awarded to the ISB in SR2004.

More information can be found on the ISB website at www.isb.gov.uk

The Paymaster General (Dawn Primarolo): It is expected that the Finance Bill will be published on Thursday 29 March. Explanatory notes on the Bill's clauses will be available in the Vote Office and the Printed Paper Office and in the Libraries of both Houses on that day. CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Family Courts

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor has made the following written ministerial statement:

"I am pleased to inform the House that I have today laid before Parliament and placed in the Libraries of both Houses the responses to the Government's "Confidence and Confidentiality: Improving Transparency and Privacy in Family Courts" consultation paper which was published on 11 July 2006. The document is available on the Department's website at: http://www.dca.gov.uk/consult/confr.htm. We will also be publishing a young people's guide.

There were 245 formal responses to the consultation, and additional contributions through stakeholder events and discussion forums. The Government were pleased to receive responses from all sides of the debate and were grateful for the respondents' comments and suggestions. I am particularly grateful for the important contribution that children and young people have made to this consultation.

We have considered what people have said very carefully and will reflect on the responses received before bringing forward our proposals".

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Bicentenary of the Abolition of the Slave Trade

The Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. John Prescott): This year is the bicentenary of a remarkable piece of legislation—the 1807 Abolition of the Slave Trade Act. This Act outlawed slave carrying by British ships in the former British Empire.

Although slavery itself was not abolished until 1833, with the Emancipation Act, 1807 marked the beginning of the end for the transatlantic slave trade which had seen more than 12 million men, women and children bought and sold into slavery and over 2 million die.

The anniversary of this Act is a chance to look into the past, to remember a period of dreadful inhumanity and pay tribute to the campaigners who fought this injustice and of those who enforced the new law, including the Royal Navy. But it is also an opportunity to look forward, and to recognise the tremendous contribution of Black African and Caribbean communities not only to the success of this country, but also the vibrancy of our culture and heritage.

It is also an important opportunity to recognise the fact that slavery did not die out with the end of the transatlantic trade. There are an estimated 12.3 million enslaved people in the world today. In the 21st century, slavery persists in the form of human trafficking, bonded labour and the forced recruitment of child soldiers.

The Government want to ensure we gain the best possible legacy from the bicentenary. So as part of our work to commemorate this anniversary and to focus attention on tackling contemporary or legacy issues that arise out of the slave trade I am pleased to announce that the Government are today publishing a commemorative magazine to mark the bicentenary.

This magazine aims to inform members of the public about the slave trade, those who fought for its abolition, the subsequent emancipation process as well as work taking place to tackle discrimination in Britain and forms of slavery still present in the world today. Copies will be distributed to museums, libraries and local community organisations across the country over the next few days. Copies will also be sent to all MPs and Peers.

In the meantime further information about the bicentenary including details of events taking place all around the country to mark the anniversary can be found at www.direct.gov.uk/slavery.

Copies of the magazine will also be placed in the Library for the reference of Members and will be available in the Vote Office.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

"Raising Expectations: Staying in Education and Training Post-16"

The Secretary of State for Education and Skills (Alan Johnson): I have today laid before the House a Green Paper, "Raising Expectations: Staying in Education and Training Post-16" which sets out the Government's proposals that young people should continue to participate in some form of education or training until the age of 18.

The Green Paper sets out proposals to raise the aspirations of young people and to galvanise the entire education system to offer them more, so that they are able to stay on and achieve success. The benefits to young people, the economy, and society will be significant.

For young people, participating in education and training for longer and achieving more leads to better outcomes—improved job prospects, higher earnings, and better health. Employers know that as the skills of employees improve their workforce becomes more productive.

These proposals have a long history. Both the 1918 and 1944 Education Acts sought to keep young people learning up to 18—though these provisions were never successfully implemented. It has now been 35 years since the last change in the leaving age, 35 years in which the UK has been transformed technologically, economically, and socially. There are many fewer unskilled jobs—a 16-year-old leaving school with no qualifications today is not prepared for the economy and society they are entering. As the Leitch review of skills highlights, the challenges of globalisation mean that British businesses will need ever more skilled employees to remain competitive.

We already recognise this need for improved levels of skills. We are already committed to making sure that 90 per cent. of 17-year-olds participate in education or training by 2015. This is a challenging target that we are confident we will meet, and it will represent a real improvement on the current participation rate in England of 76 per cent. Yet, it will still not be enough to pull us into the top tier internationally. The current UK participation rate places us 20th out of 30 OECD countries. Even an improvement to 90 per cent. would only place us around 10th, and that assuming other countries make no progress. So, we need to move beyond 90 per cent. participation to compete globally, but also for reasons of social justice. If 10 per cent. of young people do not participate then there is a risk that it is those young people with lower aspirations, who perhaps come from families and communities that have themselves had a poor experience of schooling, who miss out as participation increases. Within this group are often the young people who would have most to gain from longer participation and higher attainment. We cannot allow the most disadvantaged to miss out.

To ensure that all young people benefit, "Raising Expectations" sets out a central proposal that we will consult on:

That from 2015, young people should remain in education or training at least until their 18th birthday.

That this education or training could be in a school, college, with a work-based learning provider, or as part of a job.

That it should be full time, or part time if a young person is in full time employment.

To fully realise the benefits, participation must lead to attainment. And to ensure this happens we will need:

Engaging routes for everyone.

The right support to enable every young person to participate, whatever their circumstances.

Engagement from employers to offer high quality work-based training opportunities.

The means of making sure everyone benefits.

The central proposal recognises that different routes will work better for different young people. That is why "Raising Expectations" does not simply propose to raise the school leaving age. Rather, it proposes that young people should be able to choose the route that best suits them: this could be in school, college, or at work, working towards general qualifications, one of the new diplomas, or an apprenticeship. This range of provision and flexibility of approach will be critical to ensure that there is a suitable and attractive route for every young person. It will also mean that young people can choose to work alongside learning if they want to. We are already committed, as part of the programme of reforms detailed in the 2005 "14-19 Education and Skills" White Paper, to expand the curriculum options available to young people, and do not seek to raise the participation age until this is done. This means waiting until 2013, when the national entitlement to diplomas will see all 14 diploma lines available across England, and when the apprenticeship entitlement will be in place, so that every young person who is ready to and who wants to take an apprenticeship will be able to do so. The Green Paper proposes to raise the participation age to 17 from September 2013, and to 18 from September 2015.

"Raising Expectations" sets out the Government's commitment to ensure that every young person is given the appropriate information, advice, and guidance, and the right financial and other support to ensure that they are able to access the right programme of study to suit their needs and aspirations. It also sets out a number of ways in which the Government will continue to encourage employers to provide valuable training opportunities for young people who want to work as they learn. These include increasing the number of apprenticeships available, utilising Train to Gain brokers to help employers find a training opportunity that meets a business need, and improving the accreditation system so that all employer training that is substantial and good quality is recognised.

"Raising Expectations" is predicated on a solid foundation of good economic sense and strong social justice. It recognises the challenges of implementation, and sets out how we propose to meet these challenges. In doing so, it sets out a clear vision of how all young people can benefit from longer participation and higher attainment, and how society and the economy will benefit in turn.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Sewer Overflows (River Thames)

The Minister for Climate Change and the Environment (Ian Pearson): Since 2000 this Department has been involved in the development of options to improve the water quality of the tidal Thames by addressing the environmental impact of large volumes of sewage overflow discharges. The overflows, which are made up of sewage and run-off rainwater, are an integral part of the sewer network, originally designed by the Victorian engineer Sir Joseph Bazalgette, to convey sewage to east London, where it now receives treatment at Beckton and Crossness.

It is estimated that annual overflow discharges from the sewers and the sewage treatment works to the tidal Thames and River Lee amount to around 52 million cubic metres. This would be enough to fill the Albert Hall 525 times. Of this 32 million cubic metres is discharged from the sewer network overflows, and 20 million cubic metres from the sewage treatment works (Crossness and Mogden).

These overflows are having an adverse effect on the environmental quality of the Thames. It has been found that the frequent overflows (on average once a week), and the large quantities of untreated discharges are causing:

adverse environmental impacts on fish species;

unacceptable aesthetic issues; and elevated health risks for recreational users of the Thames.

The Department has already been involved in decisions to significantly increase the secondary treatment capacity at Beckton, Crossness and Mogden sewage treatment works. The expenditure is planned through Thames Water's existing (2005-10) and assumed (2010-15) investment programme, and the schemes are expected to be completed by March 2012 (Beckton and Mogden), and by March 2014 (Crossness). But this does not address the fundamental problem of discharge overflows into the River Thames and River Lee.

On 27 July 2006 I wrote to Thames Water, the sewerage service provider for London, requesting a detailed assessment of two short-listed options to tackle sewer overflows to the tidal Thames and River Lee.

The two options assessed were: 1) a single tunnel, over 30 km long, to intercept discharges from unsatisfactory overflows along the length of the tidal Thames and to the River Lee; 2) two separate shorter tunnels in West and East London to intercept overflow discharges along those stretches of the river. Both options were to convey the collected sewage for treatment in East London.

I have carefully considered the reports Thames Water submitted to me at the end of 2006, and met with stakeholders, who were involved in this work, to hear their views. A Regulatory Impact Assessment has been completed and is available on the DEFRA website.

Today I am announcing the Government decision for an option 1 type solution. As part of the overall scheme I am asking Thames Water to limit overflow discharges from Abbey Mills Pumping Station in East London first, as it is responsible for around 50 per cent. of the total volume of overflow discharges.

This approach is needed to provide a River Thames fit for London in the 21st century and to meet the statutory requirements of the Urban Waste Water Treatment (England and Wales) Regulations 1994. Construction of such a major infrastructure scheme may well cost at least £2 billion, which will be funded through the bills of Thames Water customers and take until 2019-20 to deliver. Depending on how the planning and funding applications progress, indications are that customers bills for this project will start to increase from 2010. It is estimated by the Water Services Regulation Authority that the peak impact on average customer bills could be £37 in 2017.

Thames Water, the Environment Agency, the Water Services Regulation Authority and others will be taking this forward for planning and funding applications. Government will be closely following this detailed work as it develops.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Control Orders

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (John Reid): Section 14(1) of the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005 (the 2005 Act) requires me to report to Parliament as soon as reasonably practicable after the end of every relevant three-month period on the exercise of the control order powers during that period.

The level of information provided will always be subject to slight variations based on operational advice and legal requirements.

Control orders continue to be an essential tool to protect the public from terrorism, particularly where it is not possible to prosecute individuals for terrorist-related activity and, in the case of foreign nationals, where they cannot be removed from the UK.

During the period 11 December 2006 to 10 March 2007, four new control orders were made. Three were made with the permission of the court under section 3(1)(a) of the 2005 Act; two were served on British citizens—one on 28 December 2006 and one on 3 January 2007—and one was served on a foreign national on 9 March 2007. A control order was already in force at the beginning of this reporting period in relation to the foreign national; it was revoked and the new order made and served in its place.

The fourth control order was made using the urgency procedures under section 3(1)(b) of the 2005 Act, and was served on 16 February 2007. This replaced a control order on the same individual that was already in force at the beginning of this reporting period. The previous control order was revoked at the same time the new control order was served. The court confirmed the new control order on 21 February 2007. The revocation of the old order and service of the new control order was as a result of the High Court judgment of 16 February in the case of Secretary of State for the Horns Department v E [2007] EWHC 233 (Admin). This was the third control order review hearing under section 3(10) of the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005 but the first hearing with full evidence about the factual issues of a particular case. The court accepted that the Secretary of State had reasonable grounds for suspecting that E was involved in terrorism-related activity. However, the court found that the control order obligations cumulatively amounted to a deprivation of E's liberty under Article 5(1) ECHR and that the Secretary of State's decision to maintain E's control order was flawed because he failed to review the prospects of prosecuting E in the light of certain Belgian judgments after they were received and translated. The control order was quashed on that basis. The full judgment is available via http://www.judiciary.gov.uk/.

The Secretary of State is appealing this judgment. Before making the new order against E, the Crown Prosecution Service reviewed the Belgian judgments referred to above as well as other recent material. The position remains that there is currently insufficient admissible evidence available to the police that could realistically be used for the purpose of prosecuting him for an offence relating to terrorism. However, the position will be kept under review.

Two other control order review hearings have taken place pursuant to section 3(10) of the 2005 Act. We await the outcome of both.

Two control orders on British citizens were renewed in accordance with Section 2(4)(b) of the 2005 Act, and served on 22 February 2007.

No control orders have expired since the last report.

In total, therefore, there are 18 control orders currently in force, nine of which are in respect of British citizens. Eight of the individuals live in the Metropolitan police area; the rest fall within other police force areas.

During the period, one modification of control order obligations was made, three modification requests remain outstanding, and 10 requests to modify a control order obligation were refused. A right of appeal exists in section 10(3) of the 2005 Act against a decision by the Secretary of State not to modify an obligation contained in a control order. This has not yet been exercised in respect of these refusals. An appeal has been made in respect of a modification made during the previous quarter. In addition, an appeal has been considered as part of one of the control order review hearings; in the other control order review hearing that took place during the period, there was no formal appeal against modifications refused, but the issues raised by the refusals were considered by the court.

Control order obligations are tailored to the individual concerned, and are based on the risk that individual poses. Each control order is kept under review to ensure their continuance and obligations remain necessary and proportionate. Specifically, as Lord Carlile recommended in his February 2006 report on the operation of the control order system, the Home Office has established a review group, with representation from law enforcement and intelligence agencies, to keep the obligations in every control order under regular (quarterly), formal and audited review.

Breaches of control orders could arise from any obligation, and could include arriving home after commencement of a curfew period or breaking geographical boundary restrictions on movement. As reported in the additional statement of 16 January 2007, an individual charged with breach of control order obligations during the period covered by the 11 December 2006 quarterly report was convicted in January of failure to comply with daily reporting requirements and failure to notify the Home Office of a change of residence. He was sentenced to five months' imprisonment. This is the first conviction for an offence under the 2005 Act. Also as reported on 16 January, another individual has been charged with failure to comply with control order obligations and is currently on remand in prison. The charges relate to failure to comply with curfew requirements and failure to comply with restrictions on communications. The individual mentioned in the 11 December report as having been charged with failure to comply with a daily reporting requirement but not failure to notify the Home Office of a change of residence has, since 16 January, been charged with additional offences of failure to comply with a daily reporting requirement, and with failure to notify the Home Office of a change of residence.

As Parliament will be aware, two of the 18 individuals currently subject to a control order absconded while subject to a control order (one in September 2006 and one in January 2007). Details in relation to the January abscond were given in the statement of 16 January. Another individual absconded in August 2006, after a control order was made (i.e. signed) against that individual, but before the order had been served. This order is therefore not in operation. I have been informed that the individual who absconded in August 2006 is currently believed to be abroad; the High Court has been notified of this. The individual in question has been excluded from the UK.

On 29 January, the Appeal Committee of the House of Lords confirmed that the House of Lords will hear two appeals against judgments handed down by the Court of Appeal on 1 August 2006 in respect of control orders. The Court of Appeal ruled in favour of the Secretary of State in one case (Secretary of State for the Home Department v MB [2006] EWCA Civ 1140, an appeal in relation to Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights—right to a fair trial) and against the Secretary of State in the other case (Secretary of State for the Home Department v JL, KK, GG, HH, NN and LL [2006] EWCA Civ 1141, an appeal in relation to Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights—right to liberty).

Sections 1 to 9 of the 2005 Act are subject to annual renewal by Parliament. The draft renewal Order for those sections of the Act was debated and approved by the House of Commons on 22 February and the House of Lords on 5 March. The Secretary of State subsequently signed the renewal Order, so sections 1 to 9 of the Act now continue in force until the end of 10 March 2008.

TRANSPORT

Crossrail

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Douglas Alexander): The House will recall the extensive discussion in the Crossrail Instruction debate on 31 October about a station at Woolwich, adding £186 million to the cost of the scheme. This could simply not be afforded given the scale of the overall funding challenge. I said then, however, that I was willing to give Cross London Rail Links Ltd—the Crossrail Company—the time needed to explore with others, including the London Borough of Greenwich, whether there was a way of significantly reducing that cost.

I am pleased today to inform the House of important developments that point a way forward.

The key to this has been Greenwich Council's recent proposal for a major revision to its spatial plan, to allow a significantly higher density of development at Woolwich. This, in turn, has prompted Berkeley Homes to offer a means of enabling a station to be built at Woolwich but, crucially, without adding to the current cost of Crossrail.

In light of this, agreement has been reached in principle with Berkeley Homes under which they will build the basic box structure of a station at Woolwich and then construct their own development overhead. This will all be done at their own risk, using their own money, to the specification laid down by CLRL, with a payment back to Berkeley Homes of the saving CLRL will make through avoiding other works at Woolwich, when it constructs the line there.

In due course, Berkeley Homes would then arrange for the completion of the station box to full operational status. Both they and Greenwich Council recognise that the completion of the station would be conditional on receiving sufficient funding contributions from those developers and businesses that stand to benefit from a Crossrail station at Woolwich. The contributions would be in addition to any London-wide Crossrail funding arrangements that may be agreed and no additional public sector debt capacity would be made available. Fit-out of the station could take place only once sufficient private sector contributions had been received.

More work needs to be done to flesh out this deal but the House can now have sufficient confidence that Berkeley and Greenwich Council have the commitment and the right incentives to do that. This is a very significant change from the position last October as there is now a clear way forward that can deliver a station at Woolwich without adding to the costs of Crossrail already identified.

On this basis I am now able to bring forward an amendment to the Bill to provide powers for the station. In due course, the House will be invited to agree a further instruction to the Committee in respect of Woolwich.

WALES

National Assembly for Wales (Standing Orders)

The Secretary of State for Wales (Mr. Peter Hain): I am delighted to inform the House that I have today in my capacity as Secretary of State for Wales undertaken my formal responsibility under the Government of Wales Act 2006 to make the new Standing Orders of the National Assembly for Wales. This gives full effect to the proposals unanimously agreed by the Assembly on 7 February.

The Government of Wales Act 2006 are the most important step forward for devolution since the establishment of the National Assembly for Wales in 1999. The Act puts Wales on a new constitutional footing and represents a landmark step in the growing strength, stature and self-confidence of the Assembly.

By granting enhanced legislative powers for Wales, it will enable the Assembly to deliver tailor-made policies for the people of Wales. And by putting the possibility of primary powers on the statute book for the first time ever, subject to the approval of the people of Wales in a referendum, it will settle the constitutional status of the Assembly for a generation.

Since 17 May 2006 the Standing Orders Committee of the Assembly has been working to put in place a set of procedures that will enable the Assembly to take full advantage of the tremendous opportunities that the new powers in the Government of Wales Act provide. Unlike the Assembly's Standing Orders under the 1998 Act, these new procedures were developed in Wales, for Wales, by the elected representatives of the people of Wales.

I congratulate the work done by all sides of the Assembly to establish the new procedures under which the Assembly will operate from May. It will be for the members of the new National Assembly to make these Standing Orders work and to deliver a brighter future for the people of Wales.

Copies of the Standing Orders have been placed in the Library and the Vote Office. They are also available on the Wales Office website at: www.walesoffice.gov.uk.

TREASURY

ECOFIN

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Gordon Brown): The Economic and Financial Affairs Council was held on 27 February in Brussels. The UK was represented by the Economic Secretary to the Treasury. The items on the agenda were as follows:

Implementation of the Stability and Growth Pact

Stability and Convergence Programmes

ECOFIN adopted Council Opinions on the Stability Programmes of Slovenia, Portugal, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Italy, Ireland, France and Germany, and on the Convergence Programmes of Cyprus, the United Kingdom, Slovakia, Sweden, Poland, Malta, Lithuania, Hungary, Greece, Finland, Estonia and Denmark.

Ministers held an exchange of views on the issues raised by the assessments. The president of the Council concluded that member states should continue to implement reforms to reduce structural deficits, avoid pro-cyclical expenditure, and ensure the sustainability of public finances and the quality of expenditure.

Excessive Deficit Procedure

Ministers adopted a Council Recommendation with a view to bringing to an end the excessive deficit in Poland. It recommended that the Polish authorities put an end to the present excessive deficit situation by 2007, reducing the general government deficit in a credible and sustainable manner.

The UK supports a prudent interpretation of the Stability and Growth Pact (SGP) which takes into account the level of debt, the influence of the cycle and the level of public investment, and ensures that any recommendations reflect each member state's economic position.

Preparation of the European Council (8-9 March 2007)

ECOFIN discussed three issues in preparation for the Spring European Council. These were:

Key Issues Paper

This discussion followed the orientation debate on the Key Issues Paper at the last ECOFIN meeting. The Key Issues Paper informs the Spring European Council of ECOFIN Ministers' priorities. The UK stressed the need for an Energy Policy for Europe based on careful assessment of the impact on cost-effectiveness, security and diversification of supply and subsidiarity, creating a positive framework for investment in the energy sector; the need to complete the single market and to further integrate European financial markets to enhance their efficiency and global competitiveness; the importance of long-term fiscal sustainability; and supported ongoing work to combat fiscal fraud and harmful tax practices.

Updating the Broad Economic Policy Guidelines 2005-2008

Ministers agreed the Broad Economic Policy Guidelines for the Spring Council.

Reducing administrative burdens

ECOFIN agreed Council Conclusions on reducing administrative burdens. The UK supports the Conclusions, which include a 25% target for the reduction of administrative burdens arising from EU legislation. The UK already has a domestic target to reduce admin burdens by the same amount, and will continue to press for a risk-based approach to European regulation.

General budget of the European Union

Discharge procedure in respect of the implementation of the budget for 2005

Council adopted Conclusions recommending that the European Parliament grant discharge to the Commission on the EC's 2005 budget. The UK stressed the need to address the persistent inability of the Court of Auditors to give a positive statement of assurance on the budget, and said that the Commission, member states and the Court itself all have a role to play in this respect. The UK urged other member states to look at ways—compatible with their own institutional arrangements—to improve their management of EC funds at a national level, along the lines of the UK's initiative announced in November 2006.

Financial Services

Clearing and Settlement

Ministers agreed Conclusions on Target 2 Securities, which establish issues of principle relevant to future decisions on Target 2 Securities, and received an update from the Commission on the implementation of the Code of Conduct. The UK stressed the importance of an open, transparent and market-led approach to clearing and settlement initiatives.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Human Trafficking

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Vernon Coaker): Following the public consultation process that took place in 2006, I have pleasure in laying before Parliament a copy of the United Kingdom's Action Plan on Tackling Human Trafficking which will be published today. Copies will be placed in the House Library.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

EU Development Ministers' Informal Meeting (Bonn)

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): I represented the UK at the EU Development Ministers' Informal Meeting in Bonn on 12-13 March 2007.

The main discussion was on Economic Partnership Agreements (EPAs) among key stakeholders, involving EU Development Ministers and 30 Ministerial representatives from African, Caribbean and the Pacific (ACP) states. Trade Commissioner Peter Mandelson and Development Commissioner Louis Michel represented the European Commission and explained where the negotiations had got to and what the Commission could offer, while emphasising the developmental importance of EPAs and the need for faster progress to meet the end-2007 deadline for agreement.

Each ACP regional grouping reported on the state of play of the negotiations. Supported by many others, the UK pressed for duty-free, quota-free market access for ACP products, more liberal Rules of Origin, and lengthy transition periods for ACP partners. The ACP side expressed their strong commitment to the EPA negotiations and to the deadline, but highlighted a number of issues that needed to be resolved, including more aid for trade.

EU Development Ministers also discussed two issues being taken forward under the German EU Presidency: energy and development, and division of labour. Ministers expressed broad support for a proposed EU-Africa Partnership on Energy, stressing the vital role of energy for Africa's economic and social development. The UK noted the challenge that access, energy security and climate change represent to the developing world and the importance of Europe taking a global leadership in addressing this. The May Development Council will agree steps to improve the effectiveness of aid by promoting a more sensible division of labour between donors.

In the margins of the Informal Meeting, World Bank President Paul Wolfowitz and Dr. Michael Otto spoke on "Investing in Africa". Discussion revolved around the need to enable Africa to show itself in a positive light and for donors, the private sector and the poor themselves to be further involved in stimulating the Continent's growth.

Oliver Kamitatu, Minister of Planning from the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and Roeland van der Geer, the EU Special Representative for the Great Lakes, spoke on the political, economic and social challenges presented by reconstruction in that region. UN Deputy Secretary General Asha-Rose Migiro also spoke on the need for UN reform.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Food Safety Promotion Board

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Paul Goggins): Copies of the Food Safety Promotion Board Annual Report 2005, incorporating Financial Statements for 2005 have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

This document provides details of the Food Safety Promotion Board's activities, its performance and expenditure to the end of 2005.

TREASURY

Issuer Liability: Davies Review

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Ed Balls): My written statement of 26 January 2007 announced the terms of reference for the independent review of issuer liability that I invited Professor Paul Davies QC, Cassel Professor of Commercial Law at the London School of Economics to carry out.

His discussion paper "Liability for Misstatements to the Market" is being published today. This sets out his analysis of the problem and invites comments on the issues arising. Copies of the paper are available in the House Library and can be downloaded from the HM Treasury website at www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/davies.

ECOFIN

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Gordon Brown): The Economic and Financial Affairs Council will be held on 27 March in Brussels. The items on the agenda are as follows:

Implementation of the Stability and Growth Pact

Stability and Convergence Programmes

Ministers will be invited to adopt Council Opinions on the Stability Programmes of Belgium and Spain, and on the Convergence Programmes of Latvia, Bulgaria and Romania. The UK supports a prudent interpretation of the SGP that takes account of country-specific factors including debt sustainability, the economic cycle and public investment.

Council Priorities for the 2008 Budget

Ministers will be invited to adopt Conclusions agreeing the Council's Budget Guidelines for the 2008 EC Budget. These guidelines are a set of broad principles that are designed to inform the subsequent and more detailed discussions on the level of appropriations required for the different areas of the Budget. These guidelines reflect the UK's desire to see a greater emphasis on the principles of budgetary discipline and sound financial management in the establishment of the 2008 EC Budget. Through these principles, the Council has underlined the importance it attaches to compliance with the financial framework and the strict respect of the annual limits therein.

Progress Report on the Commission Action Plan towards an Integrated Internal Control Framework

Ministers will hear a presentation from Commissioner Almunia updating them on the European Commission's progress in implementing its Action Plan towards an Integrated Internal Control Framework. The UK Government support the Commission's efforts to improve financial management of the EU Budget and announced to Parliament on 20 November 2006 that the UK would take a lead in showing how member states could improve their own management of EU funds.

Financial Services

Directive on Prudential Assessment of Acquisitions in the Financial Sector

Ministers will be asked to approve text amending the supervisory review process for cross-border mergers and acquisitions in the financial services sector, as adopted by the European Parliament on 13 March, and thus to confirm political agreement on the directive. The UK welcomes moves to bring greater transparency to the supervisory approvals process.

Directive on Payment Services in the Internal Market

Ministers will be asked to discuss the Presidency's proposal for harmonising the legal and technical provision of payment services across the EU, ahead of a vote in the European Parliament in April. The UK Government support a Directive that encourages competition and innovation in a single market for payment services.

Valuation Office Agency

The Paymaster General (Dawn Primarolo): I have today set the following key performance indicators for the Valuation Office Agency for 2007-08:

Customer satisfaction

To achieve overall customer satisfaction of 88 per cent.

Operations

Contain reductions in the 2005 rating lists to a maximum of 4.2 per cent. of the total compiled list rateable value, over the entire life of the lists

To improve Value for Money on Inheritance Tax work by 5 per cent.

[1] Work undertaken in Local Taxation network and excludes rating appeal and other associated work

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management

The Minister for Climate Change and the Environment (Ian Pearson): I am pleased to announce that the review by Government (the UK Government and the devolved administrations) of the long term management of the UK's solid low level radioactive waste (LLW), started on 18 March 2005, has been completed and that the revised policy statement is being published today. Copies of the policy statement have been placed in the Library of the House.

The LLW policy review process complements the ongoing work Government are carrying out on the policy for the management of higher activity radioactive wastes under our Managing Radioactive Waste Safely programme, following recommendations made by the Committee on Radioactive Waste Management (CoRWM) in July 2006.

The public consultation on the review of solid LLW management policy was held between 28 February 2006 and 31 May 2006. Some 150 responses were received and a summary of the Government's response to them is also being placed in the Library of the House. As made clear when the consultation was announced, unlike the higher activity wastes, paths for the long term management and disposal of LLW already exist but the review was needed for the following principal reasons:

With the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA's) decommissioning and clean-up programme underway, there will be greatly increased arisings of LLW over the coming decades, and this is already starting to happen;

there will be insufficient long term capacity at the national LLW disposal facility near Drigg in Cumbria to deal with this waste, and the future capacity of this facility is currently under review;

while other disposal routes for certain types of LLW have been used (eg by disposal on or near the site of arising, by controlled and uncontrolled burial to landfill and by incineration), the availability of these other routes has diminished in recent years; finding small scale treatment and disposal routes for the least radioactive LLW, which are very important for the non-nuclear sectors (hospitals, research and education establishments, and the oil and gas industry) is proving increasingly difficult.

The revised policy puts providing public safety at the forefront of dealing with LLW, and recognises that much LLW has very low levels of radioactivity and can be disposed of in a variety of ways while posing a negligible risk to human health or the environment. The revised policy will:

require very high levels of safety to be maintained through the use of a risk assessed approach, and the preparation of plans and safety cases that are acceptable to the regulatory bodies (including the Environment Agencies and the Health and Safety Executive);

allow greater flexibility in the management of the wide range of LLW that already exists, and will arise in future from the NDA's activities and other nuclear and non-nuclear industry arisings; seek to minimise the amount of LLW for disposal by application of the waste hierarchy applied in other areas of waste management - avoidance of generation, minimisation, reuse and recycling - prior to disposal; emphasise the need for effective consultation and public involvement in the development and delivery of LLW waste management plans make the NDA responsible for development of a UK-wide strategy for the management of nuclear industry LLW, including the identification of the need for additional LLW disposal capacity and facilities; initiate the first steps towards development of a UK-wide strategy for the management of non-nuclear LLW. The first step in this will be for Government, in conjunction with the NDA, to undertake a study which will give a clear picture of arisings across the UK.

Further information, including the full policy statement, is available at www.defra.gov.uk/environment/radio activitv/waste/index.htm.

PRIME MINISTER

European Summit (24-25 March)

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): EU Heads of State and Government met in Berlin over the weekend 24-25 March to mark the 50th anniversary of the Treaties of Rome. The Berlin Declaration recalls the historic achievements of the last 50 years, and looks ahead to the challenges that we the countries of the European Union need to face together. Copies of the Declaration have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Royal Mail

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Mr. Alistair Darling): Further to the statement that I made to the House on the financing framework for Royal Mail letters business on 8 February this year I am pleased to confirm that this has now been completed and put in place. The legal documentation was finalised last Friday, 23 March, in line with the timetable I set out.

Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Regulations

The Minister for Science and Innovation (Malcolm Wicks): Producer responsibility under the UK WEEE Regulations will begin from1 July 2007. Non-statutory Guidance to assist business affected by the regulations to understand their obligations and identify the most appropriate method to discharge them was published in February 2007. This document will be reviewed and amended on a regular basis to ensure clarity in light of experience.

In the early part of 2007 the DTI held a series of road-shows for producers and distributors across the UK. In addition the environment authorities arranged seminars for prospective Producer Compliance Schemes and the Distributor Take-back Scheme (DTS) operator held workshops to raise awareness of the opportunities the regulations offer Local Authorities. This awareness raising activity was supplemented by a number of placed articles and features in the trade press.

It is encouraging to see the active engagement of all affected parties involved. For example:

The environment authorities in England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland have approved 37 Producer Compliance Schemes to help producers of Electrical and Electronic Equipment (EEE) discharge their obligations under the Regulations,

There is evidence of increased investment by the waste management and treatment sector to increase the existing capacity to deal with WEEE as it arises; and Distributors and local authorities are working with the DTS operator to develop a network of designated collection facilities using the existing local authority waste collection infrastructure.

A public awareness campaign will begin in the coming months to inform consumers of the regulations and the positive role they can play in ensuring WEEE is separately collected, treated and reprocessed to the standards required by the regulations to secure the environmental benefits the WEEE system will offer.

At the time of laying the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Regulations (WEEE) 2006 (SI 3289), the Government indicated that they were considering introducing partial producer responsibility from 1 April 2007. However, following extensive discussions with industry, the Government have decided not to take this forward.

Officials within my Department will continue direct dialogue with trade associations and other representative bodies to ensure a practical, effective and workable WEEE system is established within the UK.

TRANSPORT

School Initiatives Grant

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Douglas Alexander):

I would like to update the House about the grants to increase walking to school that I announced on 22 November 2006. I have today placed in the House

Libraries the grant determination under Section 31 of the Local Government Act 2003 in respect of this grant.

This statement and the grant determination set out how the Department for Transport (DFT) intends to allocate the money for the first year (2007-8).

Funds will go to a total of 3,231 schools. The grant is targeted mainly at primary schools, and more than one in six primary schools across the country will receive this funding. 1,903 schools will receive grants to start, or significantly expand walking buses, and another 1,328 will receive grants to set up other walking initiatives. This new investment is expected to see the number of walking buses across England triple.

Funding in years two and three will be dependent on individual schools demonstrating they have saved the required number of extra car trips and expect to continue doing so.

These payments are being made as part of the Government's Travelling to School project to reduce car use for journeys to school. DFT is providing the money and is working closely with the Department for Education and Skills (DFES) and the Department of Health to integrate walking buses and other walking initiatives into the Healthy Schools initiative and promote healthier lifestyles.

The grants will be paid through DFES to Local Authorities (LAs) for onward transmission to the successful school through the DFES Standards Fund. This has been identified as the grant mechanism that is simplest to administer.

The grant determination sets out the amount each LA will receive. The amount distributed to each LA is based on the number of schools in their area that have made the required commitment and demonstrated a reasonable expectation of saving five return trips per school day for a walking bus, which will receive £1,000 a year. Other walking initiatives must save 2.5 return trips on average and will receive £500 a year.

The required number of car trips to be saved is based on an assessment of the number needed to ensure that the scheme represents high value for money, taking account of the environmental, health and other benefits from the walking buses and other walking initiatives.

I am also placing in the Libraries of the House an Explanatory Note, setting out the list of schools that will receive the grants.

DEFENCE

Depleted Uranium Oversight Board

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg): The Depleted Uranium Oversight Board (DUOB) was established in 2001 to oversee a screening programme for veterans of the 1991 Gulf conflict and subsequent Balkans operations concerned about possible exposure to depleted uranium. Testing based on the analysis of urine samples for trace quantities of uranium isotopes was offered between 2004 and 2006. A total of 496 applicants completed the test.

The final report of the DUOB is now available and can be accessed from the website www.duob.org.uk

The board was unable to achieve complete consensus on the interpretation and significance of the test results. However, no evidence of the excretion of depleted uranium was found in the urine of any of the test participants. According to mainstream scientific and medical opinion, this means that none had suffered an exposure to DU of sufficient magnitude likely to cause a risk to their health.

I welcome these findings and believe they will have provided valuable reassurance and peace of mind to the veterans concerned.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Local Government

The Minister for Local Government (Mr. Phil Woolas): On 30 January I announced that in response to our Invitation to Councils we had received 26 proposals from local authorities for the creation of unitary local government in their areas.

We have now completed our assessment of these proposals against the five criteria set out in the Invitation. These criteria are that change to future unitary structures must be affordable, and be supported by a broad cross section of partners and stakeholders; and the future structures must provide strong, effective and accountable strategic leadership, deliver genuine opportunities for neighbourhood flexibility and empowerment, and deliver value for money and equity on public services.

On the basis of this assessment my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has decided that the following unitary proposals will proceed to stakeholder consultation.

Councils Submitting Proposals	Proposed unitary structure
Bedford Borough Council	A unitary authority for Bedford
Bedfordshire County Council	A unitary authority for Bedfordshire
Cheshire County Council	A unitary authority for Cheshire
Chester City Council	Two unitary authorities for Cheshire
Cornwall County Council	A unitary authority for Cornwall
Cumbria County Council	A unitary authority for Cumbria
Durham County Council	A unitary authority for Durham
Exeter City Council	A unitary authority for Exeter
Ipswich Borough Council	A unitary authority for Ipswich
Northumberland County Council	A unitary authority for Northumberland
The Northumberland District Councils	Two unitary authorities for Northumberland
Norwich City Council	A unitary authority for Norwich on existing boundaries
North Yorkshire County Council	A unitary authority for North Yorkshire
Shropshire County Council	A unitary authority for Shropshire
Somerset County Council	A unitary authority for Somerset
Wiltshire County Council	A unitary authority for Wiltshire

In reaching her decision, my right hon. Friend has had regard to the submitted proposals, any supplementary material submitted by the proposers themselves, and other available relevant information. Her judgment is that there is at least a reasonable likelihood that these proposals, if implemented, would achieve the outcomes specified by the five criteria.

We are launching this consultation today, seeking the views of partners and stakeholders in the areas affected by the proposals. As the Invitation explains, partners and stakeholders include all local authorities, the wider public sector, the business community, and the voluntary and community sector. It is, however, open to anyone to respond to the consultation document that we are issuing today, copies of which are placed in the Library of the House.

We are in particular seeking views on the extent to which consultees believe the proposals would deliver the outcomes specified by the criteria, and in the case of the alternative proposals for Bedfordshire, Cheshire and Northumberland, which of the alternatives in each case would better deliver those outcomes.

The consultation will run until 22 June 2007.

After the stakeholder consultation, we will consider very carefully all the representations that we have received. Proposals will proceed to implementation if, and only if, when we take our final decisions, we remain satisfied that they meet the criteria, and that the overall use of reserves remains affordable, having regard to the prevailing fiscal position and the risks around the estimated costs of implementation.

As explained in our original Invitation, implementation of any proposals involving transitional costs financed by the use of reserves impacts on planned public expenditure totals. Any use of reserves must therefore in aggregate be within the limited envelope available.

It was because of this limited envelope that the Invitation stated that the Government think it unlikely that it would be able to implement more than eight proposals, but that this maximum number would not preclude the Government from deciding to implement more if they offered good value for money and were affordable.

If when we take our final decisions there are more proposals that meet the criteria than we can afford to implement, we will prioritise in order to decide which ones to implement. We will consult during our main stakeholder consultation on the proposed means of prioritising restructuring proposals in such circumstances.

If implemented, the proposals could, on the basis of current estimates, save up to around £200 million annually.

In those cases where there are alternative proposals, any decision on implementation will necessarily involve a decision as to which option should proceed. If we were to decide that Bedford Borough's proposal should proceed to implementation we may need to consider the future local government structures in the remaining county area, which might no longer be a viable two-tier area.

The legislative provision necessary to implement unitary proposals is contained in the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill which is currently before the House.

Finally, in respect of the following proposals, my right hon. Friend has decided that, having regard to the available relevant information, there is not a reasonable likelihood that, if implemented, they would achieve all the outcomes specified in the five criteria, and that accordingly they should not proceed to stakeholder consultation.

Councils submitting Proposals	Proposed unitary structure
Mid and South Bedfordshire District Councils	A unitary authority covering mid and south Bedfordshire
The Cornwall District Councils	A unitary authority for Cornwall
The Durham District Councils	A unitary authority for Durham
Ellesmere Port and Neston Borough Council	Three unitary authorities for Cheshire
East Riding of Yorkshire District Council	A unitary authority covering East Rising and Selby
Lancaster City Council	A unitary authority for Lancaster
Oxford City Council	Three unitary authorities for Oxfordshire
Burnley Borough Council	A unitary authority for Burnley
Preston City Council	A unitary authority for Preston
South Somerset District Council	Two unitary authorities for Somerset

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Compensation Act

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Bridget Prentice): The Compensation Act 2006 received Royal Assent on 25 July 2006. Part 2 of the Act provides the statutory framework for the regulation of claims management services.

In line with the Government's commitment to bring the Act into force as soon as possible a third commencement order has been made. This brings into force the prohibition and offences sections.

From 23 April 2007 providing a regulated claims management service without authorisation, an exemption, being subject to a waiver or an individual acting otherwise than in the course of business will be prohibited. Those providing claims management services will be required to give consumers clear advice about the validity of their claim, options for funding the costs and provide a complaints mechanism if things go wrong. The claims regulation website at www.claimsregulation.gov.uk provides a register of all authorised persons.

This order follows the Compensation Act 2006 (Commencement No.1) (SI 2006/3005 (C. 107)) that came into force on 1 December 2006 allowing regulation to commence. The Compensation Act 2006 (Commencement No. 2) (SI 2007/94 (C.5)) came into force on 23 January 2007 formally establishing the Claims Management Services Tribunal.

DEFENCE

Chemical Protection Programme

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): The UK's chemical protection programme is designed to protect against the use of chemical weapons. Such a programme is permitted by the Chemical Weapons Convention, with which the United Kingdom is fully compliant. Under the terms of the Convention, we are required to provide information annually to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons. In accordance with the Government's commitment to openness, I am placing in the Library of the House a copy of the summary that has been provided to the Organisation outlining the UK's chemical protection programme in 2006.

Defence Medical Services

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg): Over the past 12 months the Ministry of Defence has undertaken a thorough review of the Defence Medical Services (DMS) manpower requirement. The aim of this review was to determine the number of uniformed, regular DMS personnel required to support operations consistent with overall Defence Planning Assumptions, provide full healthcare and allow for continued training and the provision of headquarters staff during deployment. The review has now been completed and I am now in a position to inform the House of the new DMS manpower requirement. I am convinced it provides a credible baseline on which the DMS can base its planning and ensure that the excellent level of healthcare which it provides both on operations and, in collaboration with the NHS, in the UK, is sustained into the future.

The last full review of the DMS uniformed regular manpower requirement took place at the time of the Strategic Defence Review (SDR) over eight years ago, and produced a requirement for a grand total of 8,970 posts (the 'SDR total'). This however exceeded the available medical manpower, and subsequent experience in support of deployed operations showed that a different balance of medical specialisms was more appropriate. Hence a lower overall figure was adopted as a pragmatic interim basis for funding a different mix of established posts (the 'established liability'). To ensure that the requirement was valid not just in the light of emerging practice on operations since SDR, but also to be consistent with current defence-wide planning assumptions, a formal review was undertaken, starting in January 2006. The review was carried out by the multi-disciplinary Medical Operational Capability (Med Op Cap) project team, drawing on previous studies, lessons learned work, high-level operational analysis and incorporating military judgment.

The overall result of this work is that the DMS baseline uniformed regular manning requirement (the 'Med Op Cap requirement') has now been set at 7,573 posts plus an additional manning and training margin of 678, making a grand total of 8,251 posts.

This compares to the previous established liability of 7,741 posts plus a manning and training margin of 543, making a grand total of 8,284 posts.

The SDR grand total of 8,970 posts did not separately specify within it a manning and training margin.

As at 1 January 2007, the uniformed regular manning was 6,497 (namely, the number of people we actually have, rather than the number of posts required).

There are also some significant changes within individual medical cadres between the SDR and the Med Op Cap requirement, with some cadres increasing and some decreasing. Some additional potential for civilianisation of up to 320 posts in the Med Op Cap total requirement was identified by the review, which will be investigated further.

I shall place full details of the new requirements against individual cadres in the Library of the House. It is a necessarily complex package, but one which provides an essential building-block for the DMS to focus its efforts on addressing the most critical shortfalls.

The impact of the new requirement on the individual career paths for personnel in the Royal Navy, Army and RAF Medical Services will be small. The review has validated the existing policy of maximising capability from staffing our Field Hospitals on a collaborative tri-Service basis.

The Government are committed to ensuring that the DMS continues to be sufficiently flexible to respond to future operational challenges. The recent review of the DMS uniformed regular manpower requirement is a necessary and positive step to achieving this.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture and Fisheries Council

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (David Miliband): I represented the United Kingdom at this month's Agriculture and Fisheries Council in Brussels.

The Council adopted conclusions on the Commission communication on employment in rural areas, stressing the development of job creation in rural areas.

The Council reached a unanimous political agreement on a Presidency compromise proposal, laying down rules for voluntary modulation (VM) in light of the December 2005 European Council future financing agreement for 2007-2013. I voted in favour of the compromise text, as it delivered the flexibility we had argued for with regards to applying voluntary modulation on a regional basis without a franchise applying. I also indicated that the UK will make a formal declaration at the time the regulation is adopted which states that: all four regions of the UK would use VM; the rate would be below 20 per cent.; and that in England we would spend 80 per cent. of VM receipts on environmental measures and would co-finance these at a significant level. A joint declaration was also made by the Council and Commission emphasising that VM and all pillar two funding arrangements should be reviewed in the context of the CAP Healthcheck.

The Presidency and Commission summed up the informal lunchtime discussion on implementation of controls in the food chain. The Health and Consumer Protection Commissioner urged all Member States to implement EU food law fully and effectively. The Presidency too called on all Member States to maintain Community standards, whilst acknowledging that EU food safety legislation needed to be kept under review with particular emphasis on reducing unnecessary administrative burdens.

There was a policy debate on the Commission's simplification proposal on the common organisation of agricultural markets, based on three Presidency questions: timing of inclusion of the fruit and vegetable and wine sectors; transfer of competence from Council to Commission; abolition of Pigmeat intervention. The proposal aims to consolidate the existing 21 sector-specific Common Market Organisations into a single Regulation, in an effort to streamline and simplify the legal framework. Along with other Member States, I broadly supported the Commission's proposal as an important step in the CAP simplification action plan and agreed that a case-by-case approach should be taken to the transfer of competence for implementing powers from the Council to the Commission. Some Member States did not agree to the inclusion of the fruit and vegetables and wine sectors in the Single Common Market Organisation in advance of the reform of those sectors, and opposed the abolition of pigmeat intervention.

A number of issues were raised under any other business, none of which required any intervention on behalf of the United Kingdom. These were as follows:

The Environment Commissioner presented the Commission's Soil Thematic Strategy, for information only, as it falls within Environment Council competence. A number of Member States expressed concern at the administrative burdens the proposed strategy would have on agriculture and argued for the implementation of the principle of subsidiarity as previously discussed at January Council.

The Health and Consumer Protection Commissioner gave a written update on Avian Influenza and reported on the recent EC-Russian Federation veterinary agreement negotiations.

The Presidency updated the Council on the outcomes of two recent conferences: "Fuelling the Future—Renewable Resources" and "Prevention for Health—Nutrition and Physical Activity—A Key to Healthy Living."

The Agriculture Commissioner updated Council on the state of play of the WTO Agriculture negotiations following her bilateral contacts with some WTO partners (United States, India, Brazil and Japan). She said that despite fruitful technical discussions there had been no breakthrough in negotiations. In reply to some Member States, the Commissioner confirmed that the EU's position in the negotiations is still its offer from October 2005.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Correction to Oral Answer

The Minister for the Middle East (Dr. Kim Howells): My noble Friend Lord Triesman of Tottenham has made the following written ministerial statement.

On 22 February, Official Report, column 1241 during the Lords debate on Iraq, in response to a question by my noble Friend Baroness Gould of Potternewton, I said that 'the review of the constitution is due to end on 15 May 2007, and I assure my noble Friend that the removal of article 41 indeed remains one of our objectives'.

I should have said that the Constitutional Review Committee, which was formed on 15 November 2006, is due to present its proposed amendments for the Council of Representative's consideration by mid-May 2007, and that while there is no stipulated time frame for the whole review process, Iraq's political party leaders have committed to completing the constitutional review process, including the required referendum, within a year of the review committee forming. We are making clear to the Government of Iraq that article 41 must be implemented in a way that does not contravene the various human rights provisions in the Iraqi constitution. I apologise to my noble Friend and to the House for this inadvertent error.

We are also supporting Iraqi women's groups with concerns about the impact of the constitution—helping them make their voices heard. We will continue to press the Government of Iraq about the important role of women in society and to develop policies and laws in line with the constitution which states that all people should be treated equally irrespective of gender, race or ethnicity.

HEALTH

Modernising Medical Careers

The Secretary of State for Health (Ms Patricia Hewitt): In my statement to the House on 19 March 2007, Official Report, col 557-8, I set out the background to the review of the new national recruitment and selection process for doctors in postgraduate training. I outlined the decisions that had been made by the review group up to that date. As the review group continued to meet last week, the purpose of this statement is to provide a further update on progress.

The review group issued a further statement on 22 March. This said:

"Building on last week's announcement, at a minimum, every long-listable applicant who applied through Medical Training Application Service (MTAS) and meets the eligibility criteria for their relevant specialty will be invited for an interview. Under this guaranteed interview scheme, candidates will be able to choose which of their preferences to be interviewed for in light of geographic specialty-specific and specialty training level-specific competition ratios which will be available on the MTAS website. We are in discussion about the implications of this for the timetable.

The recruitment system has worked satisfactorily for general practice and this will continue. In other specialities, there is evidence that the short-listing process was weak and we will therefore eliminate this part of the process immediately. In contrast, the interview process has been working and therefore the revised approach will ensure that all long-listable candidates will be interviewed. The review group believes that this new approach is the most equitable and practical solution available. The group also recognises the enormous effort by the consultants, service and deans that has already taken place to ensure that the interview process has worked. The time and effort required for further interviews is recognised by the service and the time required will be made available. Therefore first choice interviews that have already taken place should not need to be repeated.

In accordance with the advice already issued, we reiterate that all interviews will be informed by the use of CVs and portfolios and probing questions.

In broad terms, this means that all eligible applicants at every stage of their training, whether or not they have already had interviews or interview offers, will be able to review their stated first choice preference and have the opportunity to select the one for which they want to be interviewed. We will be discussing operational details over the next week and these may differ between specialties and between different parts of the UK dependent on local circumstances. We will also consult widely. Exact details for how applicants will be able to do this will be available week commencing 2 April on the MMC website at www.mmc.nhs.uk. In the meantime, interviews will continue and applicants should attend unless they are confident that this will not be their preferred choice.

No job offers will be made until all these interviews have taken place. Discussions are taking place on the implications of this for the filling of General Practice training places. We expect that the majority of training places will be filled through these interviews. Unfilled vacancies will be filled through further interviews.

The review group has recommended the development of a programme of career support for applicants at all stages of the process. Further details to support applicants, deans and selectors through this process will be available next week on the MMC website. Future work will explore what the possibilities might be for doctors to change specialties."

This represents a reasonable way forward to meet both the aspirations of junior doctors and the timetable for making appointments for August. I therefore regret the fact that the British Medical Association representatives have withdrawn from the group. Despite this, the important work of the review group will continue and I would encourage the British Medical Association representatives to come back to the table to ensure that all stakeholders can work together to take forward a workable solution to these issues.

I am glad to note that the Academy of Medical Royal Colleges supports this revised approach. They believe that with the work of the review group it offers the most equitable and practical solution available.

The timetable for the group's work is very tight and the next two weeks will see important progress. Applicants, consultants, employers and all those with a stake in the process will be anxious to be kept informed of progress. I trust that the House will understand if we continue to issue updates on important developments during the recess.

As ever, I am very grateful to Professor Douglas and his colleagues for their continuing work on the review group. We will publish the group's final report once it is completed.

Indicator	07-08 Target
Deliver the PSA target to make journeys more reliable on the strategic road network by 2007-08.	Make journeys more reliable on the strategic road network by ensuring that the average vehicle delay on the 10% slowest journeys is less in 2007-08 than the baseline period.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Poverty

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. John Hutton): Today I am publishing "Working for Children" (Cm:7067) which includes our response to recommendations made in the report "Delivering on Child Poverty: what would it take?" by Lisa Harker in November 2006. It is only one element of a cross-governmental child poverty strategy and sets out the additional measures DWP will take to maximise its contribution to the ambitious targets of halving child poverty by 2010 and eradicating it by 2020.

Building on the announcements made in the Budget to take a further 200,000 children out of poverty by increasing tax credits and widen support for parents, "Working for Children" refocuses £150 million of resources within the Department for Work and Pensions towards greater support for families.

Measures include:

Piloting a New Deal for Families approach so more families get access to support that is often only available for lone parents. To do this we will extend support available in the New Deal for Lone Parents Plus pilot areas to all families with children in those areas.

Extending the New Deal for Lone Parents Plus scheme to help more lone parents benefit from this service and signalling initial support ahead of a period of consultation for recommendations from David Freud to increase obligations on lone parents with older children to look for work.

Providing more support to families, particularly in London where employment rates lag, including widening and improving the in-work credit scheme which provides additional financial support for lone parents as they make the transition to work.

Changing Jobcentre Plus systems so parents are properly identified in the benefit system for the first time and record the childcare needs and preferences of all parents - not just lone parents as at present.

Providing advice and support for the partners of parents claiming Jobseekers Allowance, with the introduction of mandatory six-monthly work-focused interviews for this group.

We have made significant progress by lifting 600,000 children out of relative poverty since the Prime Minister set the historic target in 1998 to eradicate child poverty by 2020.

Our success in helping people into work has been key to reducing child poverty. We have seen 2.5 million more people in work than in 1997 and there are now over 1 million lone parents in employment. We need to continue to build on this success but recognise there is more to do if we are to reach our goal.

Copies of the report are available from the Vote Office and the Printed Paper Office.

Households Below Average Income

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. John Hutton): I am publishing today Households Below Average Income 1994-95 – 2005-06.

This is the 18th edition of the Households Below Average Income (HBAI) series. This report presents information on potential living standards in the United Kingdom as determined by disposable income in 2005-06, and changes in income patterns over time.

Housing Benefit (Antisocial Behaviour Sanctions)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. James Plaskitt): I am pleased to announce the local authorities that have been chosen to pilot a sanction of Housing Benefit linked to anti-social behaviour. The sanction, contained in the Welfare Reform Bill (Clause 31), is part of the Respect programme and would apply where a household has been evicted for anti-social behaviour and subsequently refuses to engage with rehabilitation services offered. It will give local authorities an additional tool for tackling anti-social behaviour in order to achieve a culture of self-respect, respect for others and respect for community.

The intention is to pilot the scheme for a period of two years (subject to the Bill receiving Royal Assent) in the following local authorities:

Blackburn with Darwen Borough Council
Blackpool Borough Council
Dover District Council
Manchester City Council
New Forest District Council
Newham London Borough Council
South Gloucestershire Council
Wirral Metropolitan Borough Council

TREASURY

Financial Inclusion

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Ed Balls): The Government are today publishing a document, "Financial inclusion: the way forward", setting out general principles for its ongoing financial inclusion strategy.

The Government have three goals for financial inclusion:

that everyone should be able to manage their money effectively and securely, through having access to a bank account, and the confidence and capability to get the most from it;

that everyone should be able to plan for the future with a reasonable degree of security. Therefore, affordable credit, simple insurance products should be available to all who need them; and that everyone should have the information, support and confidence they need to prevent avoidable financial difficulty, and to know where to turn if they do find themselves in financial distress.

"Financial inclusion: the way forward" affirms the Government's commitment to promoting financial inclusion in the next spending period. From 2008 to 2011, financial inclusion policy will be supported through a new Financial Inclusion Fund. While the amount of the fund will be determined after the Comprehensive Spending Review, the current level of intensity of action to promote financial inclusion will be maintained.

A detailed action plan will be developed by a cross-Departmental ministerial working group, which will report after the Comprehensive Spending Review. The Financial Inclusion Taskforce, which monitors progress and advises the Government on financial inclusion policy, will be extended until March 2011.

The document also announces further spending on financial inclusion in 2007-08; £6 million will be made available to the Department for Work and Pensions, to support credit unions and Community Development Finance Institutions in making affordable credit and banking services available to financially excluded consumers.

The document details progress made to date with financial inclusion objectives. The Government agreed a goal, shared with the banks, to halve the number of people living without access to a bank account. The number of adults living in households without access to a bank account fell from 2.8 million in 2002-03, to 2 million in 2005-06. The number of unbanked households also fell, from 1.9 million to 1.3 million, during the same period. Steady progress is being made with Government's shared goal.

The document announces the Government's continued commitment to working with banks and other financial services providers to reduce the number of unbanked people further, and to promote wider financial inclusion. The Government have asked senior representatives from the banking sector to work with the Financial Inclusion Taskforce to consider how to achieve a nationwide increase in the coverage and capacity of third sector lenders such as credit unions.

As announced in the 2006 pre-Budget Report, the Government asked Brian Pomeroy, Chair of the Financial Inclusion Taskforce, to conduct a review of Christmas savings clubs and hamper schemes. Following the collapse of Farepak in November 2006, the purpose of this review was to increase understanding of who uses these schemes and why, and also to consider how the saving needs of this group of consumers might be better met by mainstream financial products. The review is published today by the Treasury.

The Government have responded to the recommendations made in the review in today's financial inclusion document. Its response includes an announcement that the Department of Trade and Industry has secured agreement from the hamper industry to establish an industry-led scheme to ensure that consumers' interests are fully protected. The scheme will establish secure, ring-fenced accounts, and will be implemented as soon as possible.

The Government also announce that £1 million will be made available to the Office of Fair Trading to run a consumer awareness campaign. This campaign will inform consumers of the options available to them, including mainstream accounts, for saving towards Christmas.

Other responses to the Pomeroy review from the Government were as follows:

the OFT has agreed to investigate the findings of the Pomeroy review in full, and whether a further inquiry into competition in the market for Christmas saving schemes is needed;

following encouragement and support from the Government, credit unions are now offering Christmas saving accounts with a lock-in. The Post Office also has plans to launch a Christmas saving account. The Government have asked the Financial Inclusion Taskforce to monitor developments, and consider what further detailed actions are needed to expand community-based provision of saving; the Thoresen review of a national approach to generic financial advice will consider how to provide better generic advice on informal saving;

the Government's financial inclusion campaign, "now let's talk money", is working with local charities and community organisations to promote credit unions as an alternative to hamper schemes;

the FSA will enhance the saving information on its MoneyMadeClear website by including information about Christmas hamper schemes; and the new Wealth and Assets Survey will collect information on informal saving. The Government will use the first results of the survey, due by the end of the year, to inform any further data gathering.

The Treasury Committee conducted an inquiry into financial inclusion in the spring of 2006, and published three reports detailing its findings, in November and December 2006. The Government have sent their response to the inquiry to the Treasury Committee today.

Copies of both "Financial inclusion: the way forward" and the Pomeroy review of Christmas savings are available in the Vote Office and in the Library of the House.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Leasing Business Premises (Code of Practice)

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Yvette Cooper): I wish to make a statement about Government policy on commercial leases and the launch of a new property industry Code of Practice for Leasing Business Premises.

The starting point is the need for a modern, efficient, competitive industry. The UK commercial property industry is acknowledged as one of the foremost and sophisticated in the world, exporting its expertise globally.

However, the Government challenge to the industry is to provide a flexible framework, creating a new partnership between owner and occupier. Our policy is based on careful and thorough research of the property market.

We have had a positive and collaborative response from all sides of the industry—owners, occupiers, small business organisations and the professional bodies. The industry has developed new ways of working, setting up the Owner and Occupiers' Forum and the Property Industry Alliance. Alongside this, Government have been working with business to bring about change.

The outcome has been agreement on a new Code, which I am launching today. This comprises three documents: a Landlord's Code of Practice, an Occupier Guide and Model Heads of Terms. The Landlord's Code is significantly stronger in tone and content than the previous Code, while the occupier guide and model heads of terms are designed to improve business understanding of lease terms, helping them to get more suitable lease terms.

It is essential the industry follows this through, and I welcome plans for wide dissemination of the Code. My challenge to the industry is to ensure that the Code is used in all lease negotiations.

The British Property Federation are introducing an accreditation scheme identifying landlords who are committed to the new Code. This will include an independent complaints procedure. I hope the professional bodies will introduce similar arrangements for their members.

I recognise the considerable changes in commercial leasing practices over recent years, especially the trends towards shorter leases. But I am concerned about continuing elements of inflexibility, particularly the predominant use of upward only provisions in rent review clauses and inflexible provisions for tenants exiting property they no longer need.

We will want to keep a close eye on market practice in these areas. If the market does not deliver, we have identified legislative options. Communities and Local Government will shortly be consulting the bodies that drew up the Code about suitable monitoring arrangements.

Copies of the Code for Leasing Business Premises will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

DEFENCE

Agency Changes

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): With effect from 1 April 2007, the Defence Procurement Agency (DPA), the British Forces Post Office (BFPO), the Defence Communication Services Agency (DCSA), the Disposal Services Agency (DSA), Defence Estates (DE), the Defence Bills Agency (DBA) and the Duke of York's Royal Military School (DYRMS) will cease to hold agency status. It has also been decided that the Defence Diversification Agency (DDA) should be closed later this year.

Given that many of the reasons for making these organisations agencies are now embedded in the wider department, particularly for those that are also Top Level Budgets, agency status now adds little value.

In recognition of this, the "Enabling Acquisition Change" (EAC) Report of June 2006 recommended that, in creating a new integrated procurement and support organisation, neither the new organisation (Defence Equipment and Support) nor any of its sub-divisions should retain agency status. Agency status is accordingly being removed not only from the DPA, which is currently a Top Level Budget, but also from the BFPO, DCSA and DSA. Only the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency will retain its agency status in the new Defence Equipment and Support organisation.

Agency status will also be removed from DE, which will remain a Top Level Budget. Oversight of DE by the Defence Estates Committee will also continue.

Removal of agency status from the DBA has been precipitated by the advent of MOD's new financial management Shared Service Centre, which has responsibility for end-to-end accounting processes.

Removal of agency status from the DYRMS will bring it into line with other state maintained boarding schools.

In addition, although the Defence Diversification Agency (DDA) does not have the same formal agency status as the organisations mentioned above, the Department also wishes to announce the conclusions of the consultation process into its future, which began last September.

The DDA was formed in 1999 to encourage the civil exploitation of defence technology; help inform industry about MOD's future equipment needs; and facilitate the spin-in of civil technology to defence. However, since it was formed, the environment in which it operates has fundamentally changed.

Regarding the civil exploitation of defence technology, the creation of QinetiQ in July 2001 transferred three-quarters of the MOD's Science and Technology base directly into a company with strong commercial incentives to exploit defence technologies in civil markets. In 2005, the MOD's Defence Science and Technology Laboratory established Ploughshare Innovation Ltd as a direct route for diversification and commercial exploitation of its intellectual property. Ploughshare has demonstrated growing success in this role: developing new licensing agreements; managing a technology innovation fund, and creating three new spin-out companies

In terms of spinning-in new technology, the MOD's research programme has been progressively opened to competition, encouraging a broader range of suppliers to become directly involved in the supply of defence technology. Recent initiatives, such as the formation of Defence Technology Centres and the "Competition of Ideas", have also provided new ways to encourage innovation. On the equipment side, the recent review of acquisition policy supports the conclusion that, the route to market for Small Medium Enterprises in defence should be via prime contractors rather than directly to the Department.

When it comes to informing industry about the Department's requirements, there have also been significant changes since the formation of the DDA. The Defence Industrial Strategy in 2005 set out publicly the technologies and capabilities required to support future defence requirements. In 2006, the Defence Technology Strategy identified our priorities for Research and Development. It identifies the actions the defence sector must take to maintain an appropriate level of R and D investment in those areas key to defence capability and national competitiveness. Taken together, these strategies, and the work in hand across MOD to implement them, generate a more direct engagement with industry than was possible through the DDA.

Consultation on the future of the DDA has included discussions with industry, Defence Trade Associations, and Trade Unions. Our conclusion is that, given the changes over the last eight years which have embedded diversification into the Department's wider activities, there is no longer a requirement for a separate organisation to facilitate the diversification role. Consequently, the Department has decided to proceed with the closure of the DDA.

The DDA has been a good champion for diversification, and we would like to thank the Director and staff for their significant contribution. Attempts will now start to find alternative employment for the 35 staff, most of whom are on secondment from other organisations. We will engage with stakeholders to ensure that remaining issues are resolved effectively, and that the value of information generated within the DDA is not lost. In parallel with this announcement, the Department will be writing in more detail to the DDA's stakeholders.

This decision does not lessen the Government's commitment to diversification and technology transfer. As highlighted in the Defence Industrial Strategy this remains an important objective and one which we are fully committed to meeting through the mechanisms which I have described above. These initiatives are all evidence of the continuing importance we place on maintaining momentum in this key area.

Deepcut Review

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): One year on from the publication of the Deepcut Review I am reporting on the progress that has been made in the provision of care for our young recruits and trainees.

We remain indebted to the work undertaken by Nicholas Blake QC for his independent, objective and comprehensive analysis of all relevant matters bearing on the four deaths at Deepcut. This added impetus to the extensive programme of work that was already under way to deliver improvements in the provision of care of our young recruits and trainees. Many of the actions arising from the Review are either complete or near completion and we have made significant progress. In their "Better Training" report, published on 6 March and which I welcomed in my written statement on 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 123-124WS, the Adult Learning Inspectorate (ALI) comments on the changes we have made to improve the training environment and our progress in detail.

The Deepcut Review made specific recommendations with regards to our care of recruits and trainees under 18 years of age and the environment in which they are trained. We have implemented the Supervisory Care Directive across the training organisations to reduce the risks to trainees. Our policy regarding the management, care and welfare of Service personnel under the age of 18 has been revised and reissued. Arrangements are in place to ensure that our under-18s are properly identified, monitored and supported throughout their training, and when necessary during their free time too. We have also improved our procedures to prevent under-18s from inadvertently deploying to hostile theatres of operations.

The Deepcut Review required us to look at ways to reduce the numbers of soldiers joining their units while under the age of 18. From September 2008, all the Army's Junior Entry Phase 1 training will be conducted at either the Army Foundation College Harrogate over 42 weeks, or over a period of 20 weeks at the Army Training Regiment Winchester, from where trainees go on to complete longer Phase 2 training courses.

We continue to look at ways of ensuring the physical and mental suitability of recruits to the Armed Forces and all three Services now have pre-joining fitness tests that must be passed before entry. The Army obtains medical information from GPs to corroborate a candidate's response in the British Army Health Questionnaire and to answer further questions, thus reducing reliance on self-declaration. A copy of the trainee's NHS records is also obtained at the start of Phase 1 training to improve primary health care, and, if necessary, to substantiate the previous information on physical or psychological vulnerabilities. This practice is to be evaluated later in the year with a view to application across the three Services.

The Deepcut Review recommended that the Army should encourage maximum involvement in the selection process by the parent, or other responsible adult, of the applicant under 18. We have made great efforts to keep families and partners informed as recruits pass through training. We engage with families if a young recruit has a problem but in general our contact with families goes far beyond keeping them informed of problems, as they receive letters and phone calls about progress and information about forthcoming events. The ALI has acknowledged that our approach to recruits' families has improved significantly (Better Training Report, page 17).

The Deepcut Review recommended that recruits who joined the Army as minors and who have reached a settled decision that they are unhappy with pursuing a military career before they reach the end of their Phase 2 training, but after their 18th birthday, should be able to discharge as of right. We have no plans to change our policy that allows all new recruits who have completed 28 days service, regardless of their age, to Discharge as of Right (DAOR) within the first six months of service. However, those under the age of 18 years three months who have passed their statutory period for DAOR and who are clearly unhappy in their service may be considered for discharge from the Armed Forces providing their unhappiness has been registered with their Commanding Officer before reaching the age of 18.

To address recommendations made on the training and selection of instructors, we have introduced the Defence Train the Trainer course, which was mandated for all new instructors from April 2006. On 2 April 2007 a purpose built Army Recruiting and Training Division Staff Leadership School will open at Pirbright. The Armed Forces have tightened up their procedures for checking the personal records of Service personnel before employing them as instructors, to ensure that only suitable personnel of the right quality are posted to training establishments. While current legislation does not allow for Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) checks to be carried out on personnel working with recruits and trainees under the age of 18 because they are in full time employment, we are working as a matter of urgency with the DfES and Home Office on changes to legislation that will allow greater flexibility in carrying out CRB checks on employees in the future. These changes are likely to come into effect this summer.

We have introduced a new policy on Remedial Training to address the recommendations in the Deepcut Review on the use of informal punishments. The new policy defines what is legitimate in order to assist trainees to achieve required standards and to ensure that both instructors and trainees distinguish this from bullying or harassment, which is always unacceptable. It also reinforces the difference between training and punishment. Punishment may only be awarded as a result of a formal disciplinary process. Unofficial punishments are always unacceptable. The Defence Instructor Handbook includes the behavioural standard expected of an instructor and it makes it clear that any unacceptable behaviour will not be tolerated. Any allegations of wrong-doing are thoroughly investigated and where proven, appropriate action is taken against the perpetrators that may, ultimately, result in dismissal from the Service.

We have made real progress in managing the risk of self-harm and suicide. Training is being implemented, at all levels, on the identification and management of both operational and workplace stress. The Supervisory Care Directive issued in March 2006 sets out the responsibilities of Commanding Officers in respect of managing risks to recruits, including the maintenance of an at risk register. The term at risk is interpreted widely and intelligently to include any recruits experiencing problems that affect their performance during training and which may put them at risk of failing their course. This approach has transformed the way in which support is targeted and the ALI cited this as our single most important development (Better Training Report, page 17).

We said in our response to the Deepcut Review that we intended to extend and deepen inspection arrangements across the military justice system using the opportunity afforded by the creation of a combined inspectorate for the criminal justice system. Although a combined inspectorate will now not be created under the Police and Justice Act, we intend to continue to progress our plans with the five separate justice inspectorates, and are working closely with other Government Departments to achieve this.

As a result of the Deepcut Review we have produced a simple leaflet on what to do on encountering any form of bullying, who to turn to for help, sources of advice, definitions of the terms bullying and harassment and an overview of how complaints are made, responded to, investigated and dealt with. The Army has completed their trial of a system called Bullytext where trainees who may not wish to report incidents to the chain of command can text messages to an Authorised Officer. The trial was undertaken in three large training establishments but received limited use by trainees so it was not possible to undertake a detailed assessment of its merit. However, feedback from trainees has indicated that the existence of such a scheme acts as a reassurance mechanism that is considered beneficial to them. Other more localised schemes using a text messaging service are therefore now being explored to complement the well-used Confidential Support Line.

We have revised and reissued our procedures for making and dealing with complaints of bullying and harassment. The revised procedures apply to both Service and civilian personnel and set out how to make a complaint, how to respond if the subject of a complaint, and how complaints are investigated and decided upon. We have provided clearer guidance on how the complaints procedures work, with more information on how to get help and advice, and on how complaints are logged and recorded. Further improvements will be made to the complaints process under the Armed Forces Act 2006, including the introduction of Service Complaint Panels, which include an external, independent member for the consideration of complaints which make allegations of harassment and bullying. We will appoint a Service Complaints Commissioner who will be able to receive complaints directly from Service personnel, or from a third party, and refer them to the chain of command for action. Whilst many complaints can be resolved satisfactorily by the chain of command at the lowest possible level, the Service Complaints Commissioner will offer Service personnel and others an alternative means of raising a grievance if they do not feel comfortable, for whatever reason, in reporting it to the relevant commanding officer. These changes are planned to come into effect in 2008, ahead of full implementation of Armed Forces Act 2006. The recruitment process for the position of Service Complaints Commissioner will begin shortly.

The Deepcut Review made recommendations about armed guarding and unsupervised access to weapons. The policy for routine armed guarding at training establishments has been updated and we are well into a programme of transferring routine armed guarding at all Phase 2 establishments to the Military Provost Guard Service rather than trainees. Phase 2 trainees may be tasked to carry out armed guarding but only under strict guidelines which ensure that they are appropriately qualified, supervised and receive proper rest periods following their armed guarding duties. No trainee awaiting discharge from the Services is used and no Phase 1 trainees carry out armed guarding duties in any establishment.

There are tighter and better enforced controls over access to firearms, and the risks associated with the use of firearms in our training establishments are managed more carefully. While Phase 1 trainees are no longer required to carry out armed guarding duties, we continue to prepare them adequately for the duties that will be expected of them once they join their units.

The Deepcut Review made recommendations regarding our support to bereaved families. We recognise the families' needs and we offer them considerable support. But each family's needs are different and we acknowledge that we do not always meet their expectations. We go to great lengths to pass all relevant information to the families; this includes redacted copies of the Board of Inquiry. Families are routinely offered briefings on the Board of Inquiry to help them understand its content and conclusions. Equally our support through the services of a Visiting Officer remains available for as long as the family needs it. We continue working with the Department for Constitutional Affairs to improve support to families based on their experience of the inquest system. Arrangements are in place to ensure that inquests are held as quickly as possible; and bodies which are repatriated to the UK may now be transferred to the Coroner's district of the final resting place to alleviate family members from having to travel long distances to the inquest.

The Government Response to the Deepcut Review accepted that there may be circumstances in which family attendance at a particular Board of Inquiry would be acceptable where it would not impede the proceedings of the Board. We are developing a more open and inclusive approach to the family in relation to the conduct of the Inquiry and there is now discretion for Presidents to allow family attendance at Boards of Inquiry.

Achieving real and lasting change in the Armed Forces will require sustained effort. We have introduced a successful programme of internal review and evaluation that is conducted by the Directorate of Individual Training Capability, whose role is to evaluate the implementation of policies relating to the Individual Training environment, enabling the identification of issues and for the sharing of good practice. In addition, our training organisations will remain open to external scrutiny through the Office for Standards in Education, Children's Services and Skill organisation in April 2007. I would like to pay tribute to all those who have worked so hard across the Services to bring about the necessary changes to improve the way in which we look after and train our young men and women.

We will not forget the four young soldiers—Sean Benton, Cheryl James, Geoff Gray and James Collinson—who died at Deepcut but we are confident that we have done and continue to do all that we can to prevent such tragedies from happening again.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

14-19 Education and Skills (Diploma Gateway Process)

The Minister for Schools (Jim Knight): I have today announced the outcome of the diploma gateway process to approve consortia to offer the first new diplomas to young people in selected areas of the country in September 2008. A list of the consortiums and their approval status has been placed in the Library.

The diplomas will broaden the options available to young people, encouraging more to continue learning for longer and gain the qualifications they need to progress into further and higher education, and employment. They are fundamental to our proposals on raising the participation age, as set out in last week's Green Paper "Raising Expectations: Staying in Education and Training Post 16".

The availability of the first 5 diploma lines from 2008 shows that we are on track with our priorities set out in our "14-19 Education and Skills Implementation Plan" (2005).

HEALTH

NHS Resource Accounting and Budgeting Regime

The Secretary of State for Health (Ms Patricia Hewitt): I am pleased to announce changes to the resource accounting and budgeting (RAB) regime for National Health Service trusts and the impact this will have on the financial position of affected NHS trusts in 2006-07. I am also announcing the allocation of the £450 million reserve to the NHS.

The NHS financial position has shown a massive improvement since last year. A deficit of £547 million has been transformed into a small surplus as reported on 20 February 2007 by the Department in the report "NHS Financial Performance Quarter Three 2006-07", which is available in the Library.

This improved performance of the NHS overall means that we are now confident that we can move NHS trusts out of the RAB regime. This means that NHS trusts will no longer have their income reduced for overspends in the previous year.

This does not mean we are writing off the deficits of overspending NHS trusts, which will still need to generate surpluses to meet their statutory duty. What has been eliminated is the double effect of having both an income reduction and then having to generate a surplus.

This is in line with recommendations set out by the Audit Commission in their "Review of the NHS Financial Management and Accounting Regime" published in July 2006.

In line with these changes we are reversing income deductions imposed on NHS trusts in 2006-07 under the old RAB regime as a consequence of overspends in 2005-06. This totals £178 million and benefits 28 NHS trusts, as set out in table 1 below.

In support of this change, I am also pleased to announce that we can now allocate the £450 million contingency to the NHS. This is being allocated to strategic health authorities (SHAs) on a fair shares basis meaning that the most needy areas of the country will receive a larger share of the funding in line with our needs based resource allocation formula. Details of the allocation by SHA and the effect this has on the financial position of each SHA economy, as reported at quarter 3, is given in table 2 below.

The first call on this funding is to reverse the £178 million RAB deductions made to NHS trusts in 2006-07. The balance is available to begin to reverse the funding top sliced from primary care trusts PCT allocations to create SHA level reserves.

As a result of these and earlier reforms, the NHS now has a financial system that ensures fairness, transparency and responsibility. Organisations can now understand clearly their financial performance and the consequences and benefits of the management decisions they make. This gives us the firm basis to go forward and continue transforming the services we provide for patients by implementing policies such as 18 weeks.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Securing the UK Border

The Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality (Mr. Liam Byrne): I am today publishing a new strategy entitled "Securing the UK Border", the terms of reference for the new Migration Advisory Committee (MAC), a summary of the responses received to our recent consultation on establishing a Migration Advisory Committee, and terms of reference for a new Migration Impacts Forum. Copies of all documents have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Effective immigration systems require effective controls. The "Securing the UK Border" strategy is the third in the series of papers setting out how we will henceforth create a new offshore border control system, and strengthen UK border security here at home. It sets out how we intend to strengthen our borders against those who seek to abuse our laws and present a threat to our security while at the same time making the system simpler and faster for legitimate, low risk travellers. The main proposals include:

Visa Waiver Test: we will henceforth assume that all non-EEA countries will face a visa regime unless they meet a sufficient benchmark against a basket of immigration, crime, security and economic criteria. A test will be conducted over 2007 with regimes maintained, lifted or imposed during 2008-09. In tandem we will be reviewing the transit without visa concession and the direct airside transit visa regime.

Biometric capture: underpinning our proposals is the need to establish the identity of those seeking to travel to the UK. We will therefore capture the biometrics of all non-EEA passengers before travel to the UK or on arrival.

Visitors: we want to make the rights and obligations of those visiting the UK clearer and more transparent. During 2007 we will consult on the creation of distinct and separate routes for those coming for six months or less as tourists, business visitors and sponsored family visitors.

Forced Marriage: we will also consult on the introduction of measures to address the problem of forced marriage, including raising the minimum age for spouse and sponsor and examining the case for introducing some form of English language test prior to entry for those spouses intending to settle.

We are committed to attracting people with the skills Britain needs from around the world. With our policy set, a points based system will, starting from next year, ensure that we only admit to work and study those migrants with a contribution to make to Britain.

We believe that the UK would benefit greatly from advice from a new Committee of independent experts about where migration is of benefit to Britain and where it is not. There has been a full consultation on our proposals and the response I am publishing today shows strong support from the public.

The Migration Advisory Committee will be a non-statutory advisory non-departmental public body established from April 2007. It will provide independent and evidence-based advice to Government on specific sectors and occupations in the labour market where shortages exist which can sensibly be filled by migration. In addition the Government may, from time to time, ask the MAC to advise on other matters relating to migration.

Alongside the MAC we are also establishing a new Migration Impacts Forum (MIF) which will provide us with information and input from interested parties on the wider impacts of migration. I will co-chair this body with my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and will invite membership from among those with a direct interest in issues associated with the wider impacts of migration from across the UK.

I am also announcing today a number of changes to the immigration rules relating to ministers of religion and international students, including an extension of the science and engineering graduates scheme and the fresh talent: working in Scotland scheme.

NORTHERN IRELAND

St. Andrews Summit

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Peter Hain): The British and Irish Governments held multi-party talks, with the Northern Ireland political parties, at St. Andrews on 10-13 October 2006. The aim of the St. Andrews summit was to focus discussion on achieving the restoration of the political institutions in Northern Ireland.

The outcome of the summit culminated in the St. Andrews agreement between the British and Irish Governments. The progress made at St. Andrews was significant and has subsequently brought us, with this week's historic statement by the leaders of the DUP and Sinn Fein, to the brink of a stable future for the government of Northern Ireland. The Government will continue to do everything it can to support the political parties in Northern Ireland in taking the final step towards restoration.

A total breakdown of the costs for the talks held at the St. Andrews summit, which were shared by the British and Irish Governments, has been published on the Northern Ireland Office website today. I have attached a copy of the costs to this statement and a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office (Statutory Charging)

The Solicitor-General (Mr. Mike O'Brien): My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General has made the following written ministerial statement:

"I am today announcing that with effect from 3 April the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office (RCPO) will make charging decisions in all indictable only, either way or summary offences investigated by HM Revenue and Customs.

The Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office was established in April 2005. Under section 37(A)(1)(a) of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, as inserted by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 and as amended by the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 the Director of Revenue and Customs Office is empowered to issue guidance on charging. A copy of the guidance has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

I welcome this development which recognises the enormous progress made since the independent Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office was established. This move has also been welcomed by HM Revenue and Customs investigators, who have worked closely with RCPO in identifying issues to be covered in the guidance."

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Christmas Hamper Savings Schemes

The Minister for Trade (Mr. Ian McCartney): I promised to keep this House informed of the Government's progress to put in place measures to avoid a repetition of the devastating impact on Farepak customers caused by the demise of the company last autumn.

Upon the collapse of Farepak, the Government acted quickly to set up the Farepak Response Fund, which secured £8 million. Thereafter, the Government have sought to work with the industry in order to provide enhanced protection for consumers. While the urgency of the situation which existed ahead of Christmas may have passed, I have remained as committed to this issue as I was when it first arose. Today, I am pleased to announce that discussions with the industry have led to an agreement between industry and Government which I am confident will lead to far greater consumer protection in the future.

Since the collapse of Farepak, the remaining hamper companies have been taking payments towards Christmas 2007. My immediate priority therefore has been to concentrate on securing early action to ensure that these payments are protected as far as possible to avoid a repetition of the situation where some of the poorest families in Britain, who had budgeted for Christmas, paid the price for the collapse of Farepak.

Since last autumn, the Government have been in discussions with the existing companies in this sector to develop an industry-led scheme to provide better safeguards for pre-payments through independently controlled, ring-fenced accounts, similar to the scheme that protects National Lottery prize money in the event of Camelot becoming insolvent. The purpose of these ring-fencing arrangements is to ensure customers' money could only be credited to the customers and agents should the company go bust, thereby avoiding another situation like Farepak. The key points of the proposal are:

The customers' money would be placed in a separate account and held on behalf of the customers.

Control of this account would rest with independent trustees and not with the company.

The money would be released to the company by the trustees only to satisfy the customers' orders, and not for other business activities or expenses of the business.

The arrangements would be formally defined as a trust deed and would be subject to trust law.

I am pleased to report that the industry have agreed to safeguard pre-payments through trust arrangements on these lines, thereby protecting the interests of consumers within the Hamper industry. The companies are now working to introduce these accounts over the coming weeks. We think that effective safeguards of this type will provide the reassurance consumers are looking for in this industry. We therefore strongly welcome this move.

To increase consumer confidence further, we are also working with the industry to ensure these arrangements are monitored by a new, strengthened trade association. We will be looking for the trade association to put in place effective procedures through a reinforced code of practice to monitor the companies and ensure these accounts are established and operated correctly.

The trade association will have a strong independent element—independent directors will have responsibility for ensuring compliance with the code of practice. In particular, the code will be monitored by an independent Director of Compliance, free from association with any hamper company. Consumer concerns and consumer rights will be monitored by an independent Director of Consumer Affairs. We expect the companies to make the appointments in the next few weeks.

We will continue to work with the industry to ensure these measures are put in place as quickly as possible.

I believe this move is an important step and welcome the commitment of the industry to seek to protect their customers.

In the longer term, the advice received from the Office of Fair Trading and the Financial Services Authority on a range of options to protect consumer interests in this industry will be considered alongside the findings of the two investigations into Farepak by the Administrators and DTI's Companies Investigation Branch. I hope to come back to the House once we have had a chance to consider all these issues.

With respect to the ongoing investigation into the administration of Farepak, the Administrators have a statutory requirement to report to the Secretary of State within six months of their appointment. Their report is expected no later than 13 April 2007. The Insolvency Service will then consider the Administrators' report and consider whether there are grounds for requiring further investigation - for example, with a view to bringing proceedings to disqualify the directors of Farepak Foods & Gifts Ltd. from acting as directors to any other company.

DTI's Companies Investigation Branch is continuing its wider confidential investigation into the circumstances surrounding the failure of Farepak. I do, of course, recognise the understandable desire for a speedy enquiry, but the investigation needs to be both thorough and fair, and it would not be appropriate to give an estimate for its conclusion. The victims of the collapse of Farepak have the right to expect that a comprehensive investigation has taken place.

I will provide further details to hon. Members in due course.

TRANSPORT

European Transport Council

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Douglas Alexander): I attended the transport session of the Transport, Telecommunications and Energy Council, held in Brussels on 22 March. The German Minister for Transport, Building and Urban Affairs, Mr Wolfgang Tiefensee, was in the chair.

Two aspects of the Galileo satellite navigation programme were on the agenda.

The Presidency and Commission reported to the Council on the current difficulties with the concession contract negotiations for the PPP and the impact on the overall development of the project. There has not been any recent progress on the negotiations because of internal problems amongst the partners in the consortium bidding to run the Galileo PPP. In light of the delays, the Presidency recently convened a meeting with the consortium but no satisfactory solution had been found to the current deadlock. At Council it was therefore necessary to consider what action could be taken to get the process back on track. The bidding consortium has now been given a deadline of 10 May 2007 to take the necessary measures to allow negotiations to move forwards effectively. If the deadline is not met then, the Commission will begin to develop alternative options for taking forward the Galileo project. A more detailed discussion on these issues would then follow at the June Transport Council. Council Conclusions, acceptable to the UK, were agreed to this end.

The Council adopted a Decision setting out the framework for third country participation, as Associated Members, in the Galileo Supervisory Authority. The Decision, with which the UK is content, authorises the Commission to open negotiations with non-EU countries that apply, with final approval resting with the Council.

There was unanimous support for an EU-US Air Services Agreement. The Presidency reported that, following the most recent negotiations with the US, the proposed text for a first stage agreement had been considerably improved and was a good starting point for reaching a full Open Aviation Area. However, negotiations should resume quickly making further progress on a second stage. A number of Ministers spoke to welcome the Agreement. I pointed out that the UK accounts for a 40 per cent. share of the EU-US market. The deal on the table did not go the full way to achieving a fully liberalised Open Aviation Area, so it was essential to have a clear timetable for delivering stage 2 agreements and have real leverage if the negotiations did not proceed as we wished. I proposed a mechanism be established for the automatic withdrawal of rights by the EU if an agreement had not been reached within the timetable set down in the draft agreement. Each Member State would decide which rights it would wish to withdraw. This suspension would apply unless the Council agreed unanimously otherwise. In addition, it was proposed that the start of the agreement be delayed until 30 March 2008 to give airports and airlines more time to prepare. These points were agreed and are reflected in the Council Conclusions, which were adopted unanimously.

The Council adopted a Decision on the signature and provisional application of the agreement reached with Russia on Siberian overflights, including the establishment of a cost equalisation mechanism during the transitional period. We strongly welcome this agreement and support the Decision.

There was a debate on the contribution of the transport sector to the Lisbon strategy. The Presidency put questions to Member States for this debate, focusing on how to stimulate consumer demand for cleaner vehicles and how to ensure that rail, shipping and inland waterways play their part. Most Member States focused on the proven or potential benefits of: taxation measures for vehicles or fuels; alternative fuels (particularly biofuels); eco-driving; eco-labelling; information campaigns to buyers and drivers; and new technologies. The UK was among those which expressed support for the Commission's proposal for mandatory CO_2 limits for cars and light vans, while pointing to the need to work towards even lower limits by 2020. The Commission summarised its plans for sustainable transport, including car CO_2 reduction; an action plan for logistics and a green paper on urban transport; and binding biofuels targets.

Under AOB, the Commission presented two recent Communications: one on extension of trans-European transport axes to neighbouring countries, including those in Asia and Africa; and the other on the implementation of the SESAR programme for the modernisation of the European air traffic management system. The Presidency is aiming for a decision at the Transport Council in June on the establishment of the SESAR joint undertaking.

Among items adopted without debate was an amending Regulation on the accelerated phasing-in of double-hull or equivalent design oil tankers.

Highway Code

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Dr. Stephen Ladyman): I have today laid before both Houses of Parliament a draft revised edition of the highway code containing alterations proposed to be made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State pursuant to section 38.of the Road Traffic Act 1988. In accordance with section 38 of the 1988 Act the proposed revision will not be made until after the end of a period of 40 days beginning with the day on which the alterations were laid.

The draft revised edition of the highway code takes account of responses to the public consultation held between February and May 2006.

I have also today published the response to consultation reporting on the results of the consultation on the proposed revision of the highway code.

The most significant issues raised during consultation were:

a variety of cycling-related issues

road users' attitudes and greater consideration for vulnerable road users.

Copies of the response to consultation have been placed in the Library of each House of Parliament.

The response to consultation is also available from the DSA website at: www.dsa.gov.uk: or by telephone on: 01234 744054.

The revised highway code is planned for publication in summer 2007.

Highways Agency - Parliamentary Questions (Corrections)

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Dr. Stephen Ladyman):): My answer to parliamentary questions UIN 126098, 9 March 2007, Official Report, cols 2262-2264W, regarding traffic volumes for each concrete section of the national trunk road network and UIN 126096, 12 March 2007, Official Report, Col 20-22W, regarding the proportion of the concreted trunk road network which has had quieter surfacing installed since July 2005, contained several inaccuracies.

Copies of the amended tables have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Social Fund Allocations

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. James Plaskitt): I am pleased to announce that the gross discretionary Social Fund budget for 2007-08 will be £752 million.

Occupational Pensions

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. John Hutton): The Chancellor in his Budget statement on 21 March announced our decision to significantly extend the help provided by the Financial Assistance Scheme (FAS).

This announcement was the result of my reflection on the implications of the High Court ruling in the judicial review of the Government's decision to reject the Parliamentary Ombudsman's findings of maladministration by the DWP

My reflections have also been informed by the judgment of the ECJ in the Robins case. In that judgment, given on 25 January, the European Court indicated that the level of protection provided to some members of the ASW pension scheme fell short of the level required by article 8 of the Insolvency Directive. But the ECJ also said the directive did not require a guarantee of pension rights in full, and it gave a strong steer that damages would not be payable for breach of the directive earlier than the judgment date. Having carefully considered the terms of the ECJ ruling, the Government believe that the enhanced FAS package announced last week offers a level of protection that is compliant with that judgment.

In its judgment in the judicial review relating to the ombudsman's report, the High Court directed me to reconsider my response to the ombudsman's first recommendation on the basis that maladministration had occurred. I have undertaken my reconsideration on that basis. As a result of that reconsideration we have made this extended FAS package available for all those who suffered losses as a result of their employer's insolvency, and have considered it appropriate to set the assistance at the same level as the protection offered in compliance with the ECJ judgment.

This announcement is not affected by our appeal against one of the High Court's decisions in the ombudsman case. That appeal has been mounted because the judgment raises important legal and constitutional issues, in particular on the relationship between the ombudsman and the Government, and those issues need to be resolved. This extension to FAS will stand, regardless of the result of our appeal against the finding of maladministration.

The extended scheme will now provide assistance to ensure that the pensions of all members of affected pension schemes are topped up to 80 per cent. of the core pension rights accrued in their scheme.

We will more than double the cap on assistance payments to £26,000, and in recognition of the significant difference that £10 a week can make to some pensioners, we will end the de minimis rule that excludes those whose FAS payment would be £10 or less a week. Although FAS payments commence at age 65, they will remain 'inflation proof' up to age 65.

In total an estimated 100,000 will benefit from this extension. 85,000 scheme members will be eligible for assistance for the first time. Around 15,000 people who stood to benefit from FAS under the current scheme will receive more assistance due to the extension.

As a result we expect that all the estimated 125,000 people with losses will be helped. This increases the taxpayer's commitment from £2.3 billion in cumulative cash terms, to £8 billion. This equates to more than doubling the scheme in present value terms, from £830 million to £1.9 billion.

Having now settled the public expenditure support for these schemes, I have today set up a review to:

examine how we make best use of the assets in pension schemes that are winding up under funded with an insolvent employer; determine if these sources of funding could be used to increase assistance for affected scheme members; consider any suggestions from interested and concerned parties.

The review will be conducted by the Department for Work and Pensions and advised by a panel of technical experts. Due to the complexity of the issues involved the review will be informed by advice from the Government Actuary Department. This will commence immediately and the review will report by the end of the year.

Let me be clear that the 80 per cent. level of support we have committed is from the taxpayer, and it is not contingent on the release of any other funding source.

Regardless of the review, it continues to be important to the interests of all members of affected pension scheme that schemes are wound up as quickly as possible. Should the review identify an alternative way of using scheme assets we will ensure that no scheme members lose out because their pension scheme has completed the wind up process.

It is also important that trustees continue to apply on behalf of members to the Financial Assistance Scheme for payments and provide member data. Failure to do so will mean that people who could be receiving payments will lose out on the substantial help that is now available.

TREASURY

United Kingdom Coins 2008

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Gordon Brown): Her Majesty The Queen has been graciously pleased to approve my recommendation that the following coins should be issued in 2008:

a crown piece to celebrate the 60th birthday of the Prince of Wales;

CABINET OFFICE

Compact on Relations between Government and the Voluntary and Community Sector

The Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office (Edward Miliband): I am today placing in the Library of the Houses of Parliament copies of the report of the annual meeting to review the Compact held on 22 November 2006.

The coming years present the opportunity to make significant steps forward in the implementation of the Compact, building on what has been achieved. This year has seen a record 28 Compact Annual Meeting commendations for excellence, showing that the Compact is increasingly being used as a tool to improve partnership working and increase sector involvement. The publication of the Partnership in Public Services Action Plan, the Local Government White Paper and the review of the future role of the third sector in social and economic regeneration, as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review, will all contribute to the creation of an environment in which Compact principles can flourish.

We will continue to work to ensure that Compact principles become fully embedded in the culture of central and local government bodies and voluntary and community organisations. The appointment of the Commissioner for the Compact, John Stoker, will help us with this process, overseeing partnership working and the operation of the Compact. He will report to future annual reviews on the state of the relationship. The next annual review will look at progress against the Compact Action Plan.

Together we need to achieve consistent good practice, building on the Compact and improving public services, and supporting the sector's role in advocating for and empowering people and communities.

Civil Service Fast Stream Recruitment 2006

The Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office (Mr. Pat McFadden): The 2006 Fast Stream Recruitment Report was published on-line at http://www.cabinetof.gov.uk today. It summarises the results of the Civil Service Fast Stream recruitment competitions completed in the year ending November 2006.

Key facts and figures from the Report are as follows.

All vacancies in the Graduate Fast Stream scheme, and 93 per cent. of Fast Stream vacancies overall, were filled.

The proportion of successful female candidates rose to 50.4 per cent.

from 43.7 per cent. in 2005.

The proportion of successful candidates from ethnic minority backgrounds rose to 11.1 per cent., from 7.1 per cent. in 2005.

The proportion of successful candidates with a declared disability rose to 7.4 per cent, from 6.7 per cent in 2005.

The Fast Stream selection process itself is subject to continuous review, and the results are monitored in detail to ensure no adverse impact on any particular groups of applicants. We shall continue to work to improve Fast Stream recruitment from the point of view of both applicants and employing Departments.

The Fast Stream Development Programme remains a popular career choice, and has featured continuously in The Times Top 10 Graduate Employers since the survey's inception. Over the last five years it has attracted an average of 14,000 applications a year.

Copies of the Report have been placed in the Library for the reference of Members.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Permitted Development Rights for Householder Microgeneration

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Yvette Cooper): The Government will shortly be issuing a consultation paper on this subject. Copies of this paper will be made available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Council Tax

The Minister for Local Government (Mr. Phil Woolas): Figures published by my Department on 27 March show that the average council tax increase in England in 2007-08 is 4.2 per cent.

We had made it clear to authorities that we expected to see an average council tax increase of less than 5 per cent. and I am pleased that overall local government has responded in a positive manner in keeping down the average council tax increase.

We have therefore decided not to exercise our reserve capping powers in 2007-08.

However, keeping council tax under control remains a priority for the Government. We will have no hesitation in using our capping powers in future, if the circumstances require it.

Building Control System

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (Angela E. Smith): I am today publishing a short report by my Department on options for the future development of the building control system. This report follows in-depth discussion with a wide range of stakeholders over the last year which has raised a number of areas of concern and highlighted the need for reform to the system to ensure that it is fit for purpose now and in the future. This report is not a statement of intended Government policy. It is an indication of those ideas which we believe have the greatest potential for reforming the building control system effectively and which we intend to develop further before issuing a full consultation document later in the year.

The package outlined in the report includes possible reforms in six broad areas:

The Future of Building Control - Establishing the Vision and Strategy for Future

Delivery

Modernising the System - Effective Risk Based Inspection and Enforcement

New Routes to Compliance - Minimising the Burden

Customer-Centric Approach - Improving Guidance and Other Tools to Aid

Individual Compliance

Improving our Approach to Regulation - Stability and Forward Planning

Performance Management and Future Capacity

The report can be accessed via the Communities and Local Government website at: www.communities.gov.uk/buildingregs and is also available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Government Response to the All-Party Inquiry into Anti-Semitism

The Minister for Local Government (Mr. Phil Woolas): I am pleased to announce that I am today laying before Parliament a Command Paper setting out Government's response to the all-party inquiry into Anti-Semitism.

The Government welcome the all-party Parliamentary inquiry's constructive and comprehensive report into anti-Semitism and is grateful to the Committee for the detailed work it has undertaken in this area.

The Government share the Committee's commitment to the eradication of racism and intolerance wherever they exist. We acknowledge that there is no room for complacency, and recognise and commit ourselves to the practical nature of many of the Committee's recommendations.

The Government strongly condemn anti-Semitic incidents and understand the fears and concerns of the Jewish community. Anti-Semitism is not just a problem or concern for the Jewish community but impacts on society as a whole. The Government have a shared responsibility to tackle anti-Semitism and all other forms of racism and prejudice—not only with those communities directly affected, but with all members of society.

We believe the best way to do this is through effective implementation of strong legislation against racial and religious discrimination and racially and religiously motivated crime, underpinned by policies and strategies to increase racial equality and build community cohesion particularly through education.

The document I am publishing today sets out in full the Government's response to each of the Committee's recommendations.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Major Works' Costs (Leaseholders)

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Yvette Cooper): This statement reports progress on the Government's review of the complex issues raised by the high major works bills now faced by some owners of ex-council flats ('leaseholders'). It sets out progress and further steps that the Government will take to address these issues, while looking for other sustainable solutions in the longer term.

Background

Tenants who buy flats from local authorities, and people who buy flats formerly owned by local authorities, are responsible for contributing towards the cost of repairing, maintaining and improving the properties in which those flats are situated.

Some current works of repair, maintenance and improvement to local authority properties are generating high major works bills, particularly in London. We have commissioned research into the impact on leaseholders, and have published the results on our website, at: http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id:=1504262.

The Government's Review

We recognise that substantial major works bills may cause difficulties for some leaseholders and have consulted widely on the implications with all the stakeholders.

Our review has mainly focused on the range of ways in which local authorities can help leaseholders to pay their bills. It has also considered how landlords currently communicate with leaseholders on scheduled major works and their costs.

Capping of Service Charges

Leaseholders do not always have to pay the full amount that their lease requires. Major works charges are capped to no more than £10,000 in any five-year period when the works are funded by specified Government grants.

Ways of Helping Leaseholders Pay Their Bills

Local authorities can already help leaseholders to pay their bills in a number of ways.

They may reduce bills to no more than £10,000 in any five-year period if the leaseholder would not benefit from the works financially or would face exceptional hardship in paying it.

They must offer loans to leaseholders who have bought their flats under the right-to-buy scheme, if they apply within a specified time, and they may give loans to leaseholders under other circumstances.

They may allow leaseholders to pay their bills by monthly instalments and over an extended period, or defer payment until the property is sold.

They can buy back properties from owners who are in financial difficulties. When doing so, they receive financial assistance from the Government.

Some local authorities offer leaseholders the HouseProud equity release scheme managed by the Home Improvement Trust. A number of lenders also offer other equity release products that can be tailored to people's needs.

Taken together, these offer leaseholders a wide range of options. But we have found that these are not all available in all areas.

What the Government Will Do

We think more can be done in the short term to help leaseholders to deal with high major works bills by means of these existing options, with enhancements and additions in the longer term.

But the alternative of simply extending the existing scheme for capping bills would bring severe problems. Capping all major works bills to £10,000 while taking no account of ability to pay would be very expensive—in London, this could, on current figures, cost more than £40 million.

But we recognise that there may be people whose financial resources are so squeezed that more targeted action may be needed. So we will do the following:

We will make it clear to local authorities that they should:

i. inform and advise all leaseholders who face particularly high major works bills about the available payment options;

ii. offer the full range of available payment options to help leaseholders pay their bills, and share best practice to ensure that this happens everywhere;

iii. use existing resources, such as for private sector renewal which they are already expected to target towards those in need and on low incomes, to assist leaseholders in hardship;

we have in addition increased funding for LEASE so that social sector leaseholders can obtain authoritative advice and help at an early stage and LEASE can expand its alternative dispute resolution and mediation role in respect of social sector service charge disputes that arise;

we will work urgently with lenders and independent financial advisers, landlords and leaseholder representatives to develop the use of existing equity release/equity loan schemes (including 'HouseProud'); in the longer term, we intend to legislate to enable local authorities to offer equity loans to leaseholders, and to buy back shares in properties so that leaseholders in difficulties do not have to revert to being tenants.

We are continuing to look further at ways to address this complex and sensitive issue. These actions represent work in progress. We will also actively monitor developments, to ensure that all concerned focus on the best ways of tackling these issues both now and in the future.

Local Area Agreements

The Minister for Local Government (Mr. Phil Woolas): The Government announced the successful roll out of Local Area Agreements (LAAs) across England today.

In October 2004, 21 pilot LAAs were announced for implementation from April 2005. There were a further 66 LAAs signed in March 2006 and a further 62 were signed this month. This achieves the Government's target of having LAAs in every area in England (apart from the Isles of Scilly) from April 2007.

A Local Area Agreement (LAA) is a three-year agreement that sets out the priorities for a local area as agreed between central Government and the local authority and local strategic partnership (LSP).

The primary objective of an LAA is to deliver genuinely sustainable communities through better outcomes for local people. As set out in the Local Government White Paper, "Strong and Prosperous Communities", the Government are strengthening the role of LAAs and placing them at the heart of the new performance framework for local authorities. LAAs will now apply to all outcomes delivered by local government working alone or in partnership with other organisations. The White Paper puts in place a new framework for strategic leadership in local areas, bringing together partners to focus on the needs of citizens and communities. It offers a deal where the local authority and local partners co-operate with each other on agreeing and delivering the improvement priorities for places.

In 2008 all areas will have moved to a new LAA enabling them to work with even greater flexibility over resources to respond to local priorities. The new LAAs are all about practical solutions for issues which really matter for local people. We are working across Government, with the LGA and with authorities to implement the new arrangements over the course of the next year.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Her Majesty's Courts Service Key Performance Indicators 2007-08*

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor has made the following written ministerial statement:

"The following list of Key Performance Indicators have been set for Her Majesty's Courts Service for 2007-08.

1. Improve the percentage of defendants' cases that commence within a specific time in the Crown Court, so that:

a) 78 per cent. committed for trial commence within 16 weeks of committal

b) 78 per cent. sent for trial commence within 26 weeks of sending

2. Simplify and speed up criminal cases in the magistrates' courts so by the end of 2008: most guilty plea cases are dealt with at the first hearing; most contested cases have no more

3. To ensure that 95 per cent. of court registers in the magistrates' court are produced and despatched within three days and all cases cleared within six days.

* More information on these and other key supporting targets are published in the Strategic and Business Plans, which includes how HMCS helps deliver PSA1 and 2 (joint Criminal Justice System targets).

Oxfordshire Inquests

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence and I wish to make the following statement to the House about the inquests of servicemen and women who have died overseas which fall within the jurisdiction of the Oxfordshire coroner, Nicholas Gardiner.

All casualties suffered by the UK armed forces are a source of profound regret. UK service personnel have put their lives on the line to help build strong, stable and democratic nations and protect the interests of the United Kingdom and we cannot pay high enough tribute to the job they are doing, or the sacrifice some of them have made. We are committed to assisting the families of UK Service personnel who have died on operations overseas when their loved ones are returned to the UK.

We made statements to the House on 5 June, 12 October and 18 December with information about the conduct of inquests by the Oxfordshire coroner and today we are announcing progress which has been made since the written ministerial statement in December.

Background

Coroners are independent judicial officers appointed and paid for by the relevant local authority. Their officers and staff are employed by the local authority and/or the police.

Each death of a serviceman or woman killed in an operation overseas whose body is repatriated to England and Wales is subject to an inquest. The inquest – both the investigation into the death and the holding of the public hearing into the death – is conducted by the coroner with jurisdiction which derives from where the body lies. In the case of deaths of servicemen and women whose bodies are flown into Brize Norton military airbase, the Oxfordshire coroner has jurisdiction.

In the 12 months preceding the June written ministerial statement, in addition to the non-armed forces inquests which the coroner has in his jurisdiction, Mr Gardiner and his deputy coroners had conducted 31 inquests into the deaths of servicemen who died in Iraq. One inquest was dealt with by the Powys coroner and one by the Wiltshire and Swindon coroner.

At the time of the 5 June written ministerial statement, there remained 59 inquests to be concluded into the deaths of service personnel killed in Iraq and 11 inquests of civilians whose bodies were flown into Brize Norton.

At the time of the 12 October written ministerial statement, a further nine inquests had been held into the deaths of servicemen who have died in Iraq.

When I made the written ministerial statement in June, we had only asked the coroner to provide details of inquests into those deaths in his jurisdiction relating to Iraq. By the time of the October statement the coroner had provided us with details of outstanding inquests into six deaths from previous conflicts or other military exercises abroad and three further civilian casualties, the earliest of which occurred in 1998. The position in relation to the inquests in these additional deaths was reported to the House in the 12 October statement. Including these deaths, there remained 59 inquests to be concluded into the deaths of service personnel and 11 inquests into the deaths of civilians at the time of the October statement.

By the time of the December written ministerial statement, the coroner had provided us with details of outstanding inquests into six deaths from a military exercise in the Czech Republic in 2004. Including these deaths, there remained 48 inquests to be concluded into the deaths of service personnel and nine inquests into the deaths of civilians who lost their lives in Iraq and whose bodies were repatriated to RAF Brize Norton.

As of today, there remain 25 inquests to be concluded into the deaths of service personnel in military conflicts and exercises overseas whose bodies were repatriated to RAF Brize Norton and 4 inquests into the deaths of civilians who lost their lives in Iraq and whose bodies were repatriated to RAF Brize Norton.

Further support for the coroner to conduct inquests on deceased armed forces personnel

As we reported to the House in the earlier statements, the Oxfordshire coroner appointed the following as additional assistant deputy coroners to assist with conducting the inquests detailed above:

Sir Richard Curtis—who served as a High Court Judge between 1992 and 2005, was appointed on 8 August.

Ms. Selena Lynch—barrister at law, former full-time Coroner for Inner South London and currently deputy coroner for South London was appointed on 5 June.

Mr. Andrew Walker—barrister at law, Deputy Coroner for both North London and East London and Assistant Deputy Coroner for both Inner London North and Inner London South was appointed on 5 June.

To provide support for the coroner and his assistant deputy coroners, the following resources have been made available:

Three additional coroner's officers. Mr. Geoff Webb, Mr. George Gatt and Mr. Derrick Bines have been appointed by Thames Valley Police to support the existing complement of five officers and one officer's team leader in the Oxfordshire coroner's office. They are supporting the coroners in various ways, including by contacting witnesses, listing inquests and providing support at inquests.

An additional administrative assistant, Ms. Stella Hartley-Morris has been appointed to the existing administrative assistant in the Oxfordshire coroner's office who provide administrative support for the investigations and inquests.

Recording equipment—to enable two courts to operate simultaneously.

Progress with the remaining inquests

At the time of the December written ministerial statement, all inquests of deaths had been allocated to the assistant deputy coroners. 19 inquests had been held (the WMS mistakenly stated 18 inquests) the inquest into the death of Sergeant Roberts was currently being held and a further 50 inquests had been listed for hearing (the WMS mistakenly reported 51 inquests).

The position now is that 56 inquests have been held, 46 into the deaths of servicemen and 10 into the deaths of civilians. All of the remaining 25 inquests into servicemen's deaths have been listed for hearing and pre-inquest hearings have been set in the remaining four civilian inquests. We hope that all the inquests will have been heard by the end of June. We are very grateful for the efforts of all those involved.

We shall continue to keep the House informed on a quarterly basis about progress through the remaining inquests. Below is a table, which outlines the status of all cases and the date of death of each case.

We have not included in this statement inquests into a further 66 service personnel deaths in Iraq and Afghanistan which occurred after 15 May 2006 and which were repatriated into Brize Norton, as the additional support for the coroner outlined above only intended to clear the backlog of cases he had in June. 16 of these cases have been dispersed to other coroners but there remain 50 inquests where the Oxfordshire coroner has retained jurisdiction which have been opened and adjourned.

Resources have now been made available to the Oxfordshire Coroner to enable Andrew Walker to remain as assistant deputy coroner with Geoff Webb as coroner's officer to complete those inquests where the Oxfordshire coroner assumed responsibility.

Liaison with the next of kin

It is of the greatest importance that the next of kin have full information about the progress on the inquest of their deceased next of kin.

In order to further improve the service to families I invited to meet me on 4 December 2006 the families of service personnel who died in Iraq whose inquests had been held. We are grateful to the 17 relatives of the 12 deceased servicemen and women who gave us the benefit of their views and experiences so as to improve the inquest system for the benefit of future families of members of the armed service who die abroad.

Following that meeting we are working on providing families with better information about the inquest system, how we can help families to have access to all material relevant to the inquest; and holding inquests closer to where the relatives live.

Freedom of Information Act/Data Protection Regulations

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Vera Baird): The Parliamentary Under-Secretary, my right hon. Friend Baroness Ashton of Upholland, has made the following written ministerial statement:

The Government are today publishing a supplementary paper to the consultation paper on the draft Freedom of Information and Data Protection (Appropriate Limit and Fees) Regulations 2007, which would give effect to the changes the Government announced it was minded to make on 16 October 2006.

Following the recent consultation of 14 December 2006 the Government are issuing this supplementary paper to consult on the principle of amending the 2004 regulations, specifically whether the 2004 regulations should be amended to deal with the identified problem of requests which are disproportionately burdensome on public authority resources. Further comments on the draft regulations contained in the consultation paper of 14 December 2006 are also welcome.

The draft regulations would extend the existing provisions by allowing public authorities to:

include reading time, consideration time and consultation time in the calculation of the appropriate limit above which requests could be refused on cost grounds; and aggregate all requests made by a person (or persons apparently acting in concert or pursuance of a campaign) to each public authority within a period of 60 working days for the purposes of calculating the appropriate limit.

An independent economic review of the operation of the Freedom of Information Act commissioned by my Department and published on 16 October 2006 found that a small percentage of requests and requestors were placing disproportionately large burdens on public authorities in terms of the costs of officials' time.

While the Government believe it is entirely right that a reasonable amount of resource is spent dealing with requests for information, it is also necessary to consider, in light of experience, whether the existing provisions need to be amended in order to provide the right balance between access to information for all and the delivery of other public services.

The supplementary paper is published today, with responses being invited by 21 June 2007. The paper will be sent to key stakeholders and all responders to the consultation published on 14 December 2006. Both papers are available on my Department's website at: www.dca.gov.uk and will be available in the Libraries of both Houses.

DEFENCE

Framework Document for the Service Personnel and Veterans Agency 2007

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg): The Service Personnel and Veterans Agency (SPVA) has been formed from a merger between the former Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency (AFPAA) and the Veterans Agency (VA). The formal launch of the SPVA on 1 April 2007 is marked by the placing in Parliament of the Framework Document 2007.

The Framework Document sets out the roles, responsibilities and required outputs for the agency. Its primary objectives will provide customers with an assurance that SPVA will focus on providing essential services such as pay and pensions to the Armed Forces and Veterans communities, and that SPVA will be committed to provide excellent customer service and increased efficiency.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Voluntary Modulation and the New Rural Development Programme for England

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (David Miliband): In my written parliamentary statement of 20 March, Official Report, Col. 38W, I announced that political agreement had been reached at the European level on a new regulation on voluntary modulation which would open the way to the implementation of the new rural development programmes in the UK for the period 2007-2013. The regulation was adopted formally by the Council on Tuesday 27 March.

Now that this regulation is finalised, I am able to announce that the overall budget for the next Rural Development Programme for England (RDPE) 2007-2013 will be £3.9 billion. As was the case during 2000-2006, funding an ambitious programme of this size is only made possible through continued use of voluntary modulation. Shifting funding from farm subsidies to payments for environmental services—green farming—is consistent with the Government's long term vision for the reform of the Common Agricultural Policy.

Details of the voluntary modulation and co-financing rates that will apply are as follows.

Rates of voluntary modulation

The rate of voluntary modulation to apply in England for Single Payment Scheme (SS) 2006 payments was already established under the old voluntary modulation regulation at 6 per cent.

For the SPS scheme years 2007-2012, I intend to apply the following rates of voluntary modulation, all significantly below the ceiling of 20 per cent. established in the new regulation:

2007-12 per cent.

2009-14 per cent.

2010-14 per cent.

2012-14 per cent.

Money generated from modulating SPS in any given year is made available for spend in the subsequent year (i.e. modulation of SPS 2007 is available for use in 2008).

Co-financing

In England, voluntary modulation is essential to enable us to deliver on the commitments we have made to implement effective agri-environment schemes under Axis 2 of the Rural Development Regulation. I attach very high priority to the environmental outcomes we wish to achieve through the Environmental Stewardship Scheme. I am therefore prepared to add a significant amount of national co-financing to voluntary modulation under Axis 2 in order to deliver on these objectives. I shall therefore provide national co-financing for Axis 2—which will account for 80 per cent. of the voluntary modulation funding—at a rate of 40 per cent. In other words, for every £60 taken from pillar 1 direct payments and transferred to Axis 2, I shall add a further £40 from national funding. I do not intend to provide national co-financing for the 20 per cent. of voluntary modulation receipts which will apply to Axes 1 and 3.

Programme budgets

The total programme budget of nearly £4 billion is more than double the amount of money made available under the old England Rural Development Programme 2000-2006.

The budget for the next Rural Development Programme in England is constructed from an EU European Agricultural Fund for Rural Development (EAFRD) allocation of around £750 million, plus co-financing from the Government (including some state aided expenditure) of around £850 million. As set out above, this will be supplemented with approximately £1.5 billion generated through voluntary modulation (under the new and old voluntary modulation mechanisms), which will be co-financed with approximately £800 million of national funds.

Of this nearly £3.3 billion will be used to achieve environmental outcomes under Axis 2. A further £277 million will be applied to axis 1, which will be used to help make agriculture and forestry more competitive and sustainable, and £277 million will be applied to Axis 3, which will be used to enhance opportunity in rural areas.

Some of the additional VM receipts for Axis 1 will be used to fund a specific package of measures designed to assist the livestock industry in tackling some of the particular environmental challenges it faces. I shall make a further announcement as soon as we have worked out the details.

Next Steps

As we have agreement on the overall financing for the new programme for England we can now make quick progress towards finalising all the relevant programme documentation for submission to the Commission for approval. We expect to be able to submit the completed programme by late in the Spring, in preparation for which we shall shortly be consulting further with stakeholders on our plans. Our aim is that this should clear the way for speedy approval of the programme which will enable us to begin the new programme formally in the autumn. Until then, we shall continue to keep the Environmental Stewardship scheme open to new applicants with agreements entered into on a provisional basis.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Return of Bisher Al-Rawi

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Margaret Beckett): The House will be aware that in March 2006 my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary agreed to make representations to seek the return from Guantanamo Bay of an Iraqi national formerly resident in the UK, Mr. Bisher Al-Rawi, based on the particular circumstances in his case. Detailed discussions between the UK and US Governments have been continuing since then.

I would like to inform the House that we have now agreed with the US authorities that Mr. Al-Rawi will be returned to the UK shortly, as soon as the practical arrangements have been made. His family and legal representatives have been informed of the decision, as has his family's constituency MP.

This decision follows extensive discussions to address the security implications of Mr. Al Rawi's return. The UK will continue to take the necessary measures to maintain national and international security.

PRIME MINISTER

Re-Appointment of the Information Commissioner

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): I am pleased to announce that The Queen has approved the re-appointment of Mr Richard Thomas as the Information Commissioner, from 29 November this year until his 60th birthday on 18 June 2009.

Machinery of Government Change

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): I am today announcing Machinery of Government changes to the Home Office and the Department for Constitutional Affairs. These changes build on the 'Security Crime and Justice' strand of the Government's policy review, which sets the broad direction for the Government's policy response to security, public protection and the criminal justice system issues over the next decade.

The Home Secretary will be developing our capabilities to tackle the threat posed by terrorism. The security and counter-terrorism changes will have immediate effect. Alongside this, a new Ministry of Justice will be established, with the National Offender Management Service and lead responsibility for criminal law and sentencing policy being transferred from the Home Office to the Department for Constitutional Affairs, to create the new Ministry of Justice. This change will take effect from 9 May.

I have today placed in the Libraries of both Houses a paper by the Cabinet Office, which sets out these changes in further detail.

Security and Counter-Terrorism

All those working in the field of counter-terrorism, particularly the police, security and intelligence agencies, have worked unstintingly to protect the country from the threat that we face. Our counter-terrorism capabilities are among the best in the world. However, the continuing and growing threat from terrorism means that the Government must develop and improve its counter-terrorism and security capabilities, and its governance.

I am therefore strengthening the role of the Home Secretary and the capabilities of his Department in facing the terrorist threat. While critical areas of the counter-terrorism strategy are overseen by other Secretaries of State, notably the Foreign Secretary and the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, the Home Secretary has the lead responsibility for the strategy in relation to security threats in the UK, including their overseas dimension.

A new Ministerial Committee on Security and Terrorism will be established, subsuming the current Defence and Overseas Policy (International Terrorism) Committee and the counter-radicalisation aspects of the Domestic Affairs Committee's work. The Prime Minister will chair the Committee, with the Home Secretary normally acting as deputy chair, although other Ministers such as the Foreign Secretary, and the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, will deputise as appropriate. It will be supported by a sub-committee focusing on counter-radicalisation, which will be chaired by the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government. The Committee will meet regularly, and will be supported by a more frequent meeting focusing on the threat to the UK, which will be chaired by the Home Secretary.

In order to support the Home Secretary in his new role, an Office for Security and Counter-Terrorism will be established in the Home Office. This will report to the Home Secretary. The Office for Security and Counter-Terrorism will take on overall responsibility for the CONTEST strategy, reporting through the new Ministerial Committee. The Government will also establish a research, information and communications unit in support of the struggle for ideas and values. This will be based in the Home Office, reporting to the Home Secretary, Foreign Secretary and Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government.

The changes set out here are aimed at producing a step change in our approach to managing the terrorist threat to the UK and winning the battle for hearts and minds. These changes do not alter the responsibilities of the Foreign or Defence Secretaries, the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, or other ministers, or the strategic and operational reporting lines of any of our security and intelligence agencies. The Cabinet Office will retain its role supporting the Prime Minister on national security and counter-terrorism.

Criminal Justice System

A new Ministry of Justice will be established. The National Offender Management Service, including the Prison and Probation Services, will move from the Home Office to the Department for Constitutional Affairs on 9 May, to form the new Ministry. The Home Office will retain its other existing responsibilities, including for policing, antisocial behaviour, drugs, overall crime reduction, immigration, asylum and identity, in addition to its responsibilities for security and counter-terrorism.

The Ministry of Justice will be responsible for policy on the overall criminal, civil, family and administrative justice system, including sentencing policy, as well as the courts, tribunals, legal aid and constitutional reform. It will help to bring together management of the criminal justice system, meaning that once a suspect has been charged their journey through the courts, and if necessary prison and probation, can be managed seamlessly.

The Ministry of Justice will take the leading role in delivering a fairer, more effective, speedy and efficient justice system, and also in reducing re-offending. In doing so it will, with the Home Office and the Attorney-General's Office, respect the vital roles and independence of the judiciary and the prosecuting authorities.

Public protection and crime reduction will continue to be the core focus of Government policy. The Government have made clear that prison will continue to be necessary to protect the public from the most serious offenders, although some non-dangerous offenders do not need to be in custody because their offending can better be addressed through non-custodial means. The Government have announced plans to build a further 8,000 prison places by 2012, having already increased capacity by 19,700 since 1997.

Criminal law and sentencing policy will move to the new Ministry of Justice. In order to maintain the Government's clear focus on public protection, the Home Secretary will continue to have a core role in decision making in this area, reflecting his responsibilities for crime reduction. The Secretary of State for Justice will work with the Home Secretary, the Attorney-General and other ministers to ensure flexible and effective responses to different types of crime, from anti-social behaviour to serious and organised criminality, including through the expansion of summary powers. Government policy in this area will, in future, be decided by a new Cabinet Committee on Crime and the Criminal Justice System, chaired by the Prime Minister.

Responsibility for the Crown Prosecution Service and the other prosecuting authorities will remain with the Attorney-General, who has a statutory duty to superintend them. The prosecuting authorities are an integral part of the criminal justice system and the Ministry of Justice will continue to work with the Attorney General's Office to deliver a world-class criminal justice system.

The existing trilateral arrangements have been a success in delivering improvements to the criminal justice system, and will continue under the new structure. To facilitate this, there will continue to be a shared National Criminal Justice Board and an Office for Criminal Justice Reform, based in the Ministry of Justice, which will work trilaterally between the Home Office, the Ministry of Justice and the Attorney General's Office.

The relationship between the Home Office and the Ministry of Justice remains vital, and strong working level agreements will be put in place, for example between the National Offender Management Service, the Police, and the Immigration and Nationality Department.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Public Attitudes to Alternatives to Prosecution

The Solicitor-General (Mr. Mike O'Brien): My right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General has made the following written ministerial statement:

"I am today arranging for the publication of research commissioned by the Office of Criminal Justice Reform from IPSOS MORI on public attitudes to alternatives to prosecution.

The research, conducted during March 2006, involved interviews with 1,027 people aged 15 and over in England and Wales and four focus groups. There were also six focus groups with victims and witnesses to test their views of out of court penalties for adults and youths. The research was commissioned as part of a review of out of court penalties which I have been leading.

Whilst the research has been available to criminal justice practitioners since last June, we are now putting it into the public domain because of the general interest in its existence. The findings show that:

Nine out of 10 participants think that first time minor criminal offences need not necessarily be dealt with by the courts;

Half of those participants think a caution or reprimand would be the most appropriate disposal;

Six out of 10 participants think that second minor offences (that this is after a FPN or warning has been given) could be dealt with out of the courts;

A quarter of participants think the best way to deal with second minor offences is by a caution with conditions attached, such as compensation or making amends;

A 44 per cent. majority of participants felt the most appropriate way to deal with offenders who own up to minor offences was for them to make amends to the victim, for example by compensation or an apology.

I am placing copies of the material in the Libraries of both Houses."

Financial Reporting Council - Changes to Governance Arrangements

The Minister for Trade (Mr. Ian McCartney): Sir Christopher Hogg, the Chairman of the Financial Reporting Council (FRC), is today publishing proposals for consultation on measures to improve the FRC's internal governance. The Government welcomes this consultation

The FRC is the independent UK regulator and standard setter for accounting, auditing and the actuarial profession. The FRC's remit was significantly expanded in 2004 as a result of the Government's review of audit and accounting regulation, following the corporate scandals in the United States and elsewhere earlier in the decade. Its responsibilities were further expanded in 2006 to include actuarial standards and regulation, as recommended by the Morris Review.

Since his appointment as Chair in January 2006 Sir Christopher has been reviewing the FRC's internal governance arrangements. While these arrangements have operated well, Sir Christopher has concluded there is now a strong case for changes to enhance the FRC's transparency, efficiency and independence. The Government agree with Sir Christopher's view and welcomes the consultation document he is publishing.

The changes Sir Christopher is proposing include merging the FRC Council, which at around 30 members is a large group, and its management board, to form a single governing body of directors. The new governing body would be larger than the existing six-strong board, to enhance its balance, composition and effectiveness. The majority of the governing body will be non-executive directors, including the Chair and Deputy Chair. In addition, the chairs of the FRC's operating bodies would become directors for the first time.

Sir Christopher is also recommending changes to the process for appointing directors to support the new arrangements and ensure the new governing body reflects the range of skills and experience required. At present, the Secretary of State inakes all appointments to the Board of Directors, with the exception of the Chief Executive who is appointed by the FRC. Under the new arrangements, the Secretary of State would appoint only the Chair and Deputy Chair of the FRC. The other directors would be appointed by a Nominations Committee chaired by the FRC Chair, through an open and transparent process, following the same principles as set out for public appointments by the Office of the Commissioner for public appointments. The committee, guided by a template of the range of skills and experience the board should include, will establish clear, objective criteria for individual appointments.

The Government believe the FRC has adapted well to its new responsibilities, and that it continues to receive strong support from companies, investors, the accountancy profession and other stakeholders. The Government are therefore confident the FRC under the new governance arrangements will continue to make an essential contribution to ensuring open, efficient and competitive markets and a strong enterprising corporate sector. Corporate reporting and governance in the UK are widely recognised domestically and internationally as being of a very high standard generally. The FRC's integrated and market-led approach to regulation effectively underpins these standards.

Insolvency Service Performance Targets 2007-08

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Jim Fitzpatrick): I have today agreed to the publishing of the Insolvency Service's Corporate Plan for the period 2007-10.

The Insolvency Service plans to deal with some 77,000 new insolvencies in the year to 31 March 2008, principally as a result of a further increase in personal bankruptcies.

Its planning assumption for the level of redundancy payments and other insolvency-related claims is 90,000 in the year.

Action will continue to be taken against bankrupts and company directors in respect of financial misconduct or dishonesty and I have asked the service to increase its enforcement output by 7 per cent. over that achieved in 2006-07. Companies Investigation Branch will continue to investigate the affairs of companies in the public interest and I have set targets in relation to the timeliness of dealing with complaints made and the handling of investigations that follow from those complaints.

The service's "Enabling the Future" strategy, a major programme of IT led investment, will deliver savings over the period of the forthcoming Comprehensive Spending Review and I have therefore set the service a target to have reduced its case administration fees by 15 per cent. by 31 March 2011.

The Corporate Plan is available at: www.insolvency.gov.uk

I have also set the Insolvency Service the following targets for the year 2007-08:

WORK AND PENSIONS

United Nations Convention on Disability Rights

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mrs. Anne McGuire): The United Kingdom played an active role in negotiating a new convention on disability rights, which was adopted by the United Nations on 13 December 2006. On the 14 December, the Prime Minister said that he hoped the UK would be among the first states to sign the convention, Official Report, written answers, column 1288W.

The convention opens for signature on 30 March and our signature tomorrow and that of other states will mark a significant step forward to ensuring that around 650 million disabled people worldwide will enjoy their human rights on an equal basis with every one else. It is the culmination of negotiations lasting more than four years in which disabled people have played a central role in the content of the convention.

Work is underway to check the UK's legislation, policies and practices against the convention's obligations. Before ratification, the convention will be laid as a command paper before both Houses of Parliament, together with an explanatory memorandum. It will also be sent to the Joint Committee on Human Rights for them to consider. Either, or both Houses, might decide to hold a debate.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

European Development Fund

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funds were committed by his Department to (a) European Development Fund (EDF) 7, (b) 8, (c) 9, and (d) 10; and what commitment has been made to the general European Commission budget for development assistance. [126837]

Mr. Thomas: The following table sets out the commitment levels for each of the European Development Funds (EDFs) 7, 8, 9, and 10; the UK percentage share of each EDF; and the corresponding commitment made by the Department for International Development (DFID).

EDF	Total commitment € billion	UK share (percentage)	DFID commitment € billion
7	10.940	16.37	1.791
8	12.840	12.69	1.629
9	13.800	12.69	1.751
10	22.682	14.82	3.361

Under the current financial perspective, covering years 2007 to 2013, the European Commission has committed €57 billion to overseas assistance from its general budget. Of this, the average UK share over the period is likely to be 17.40 per cent., amounting to a total of €9.9 billion.

Namibia: Overseas Aid

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps have been taken by his Department to twin individual Namibian schools with schools in the United Kingdom. [125292]

Hilary Benn: DFID supports partnerships between schools in the UK and Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean through a programme called DFID Global School Partnerships (DGSP). The programme is managed by the British Council, under contract to DFID. It provides advice and guidance, professional development opportunities and grants to schools that are using partnerships as a means to develop and embed a global dimension within their curriculum.

There are currently four UK-Namibian partnerships through DGSP:

Hey with Zion VC Primary School in Oldham works with John Shekudja Combined School;

Warlingham School in Surrey works with Udjombala Junior Secondary School;

Alsager School in Stoke on Trent works with Oshilemba Combined School; and St. Michael's CE Primary School in Herefordshire is partnered with Emma Hoogen Hout School.

In addition, the British Council operates a programme, not funded by DFID, called 'Connecting Classrooms'. This links schools in the UK with schools in Africa—including Namibia.

Under this programme 'partnerships' between schools are supported. Each partnership consists of three UK schools, plus three schools from one African country and three schools from another African country. Each partnership is entitled to £15,000 per year, for up to three years, to take part in study visits, to purchase materials, and meet certain other associated costs.

In 2006-07, two sets of twinning partnerships under 'Connecting Classrooms' involved Namibia: the first was a group of three schools in Namibia, twinned with three schools in Leeds and three schools in Zimbabwe. The second was a group of three schools in Namibia, twinned with three schools in Devon and three schools in Nigeria.

Overseas Aid: Education

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his Department's spending on educational programmes was in each year since 2000, broken down by country. [123253]

Mr. Thomas: DFID bilateral expenditure on education in each of the last five years is shown in table 1.

Table 1: DFID bilateral expenditure on education

	Expenditure (£000)
2000-01	165,612
2001-02	134,179
2002-03	165,133
2003-04	221,887
2004-05	269,761
2005-06	249,799

DFID also contributes to the funding of a range of multilateral organisations, a proportion of which will go towards education. The total amount of funding through multilateral agencies is published in Statistics on International Development, a copy of which is available in the Library. Summary information for major agencies relevant to education is provided in table 2. This information cannot be broken down by country.

Direct DFID bilateral expenditure on education for the past six years broken down by country is shown in table 3. These figures include general and sector budget support where it has been scored against education. In the case of Afghanistan, DFID provided £35 million to the Reconstruction Trust Fund in 2005-06 and a proportion of this will have been spent on education but not included in the figures. These figures exclude DFID spending through multilateral agencies and civil society organisations.

Sudan: Returns

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contribution the UK will be making to the UN high commissioner for refugees appeal to help southern Sudanese refugees and internally displaced persons to return home. [126685]

Hilary Benn: The return of people to their homes in Sudan is a major priority for the international community in 2007, particularly in the first half of the year, before the rains make movement difficult. DFID has channelled all its funding for the returns process through the UN-administered common humanitarian fund (CHF). The multi-donor CHF is an ideal way of supporting returns as it provides fast and predictable funding. Of the $133 million allocated so far by the CHF (of which the DFID contribution makes up 60 per cent.), $12.4 million was given to support the returns process.

A considerable amount of the CHF funding for other sectors (e.g. water and sanitation, health and nutrition) in the south ($50 million) and the three areas ($17.8 million) is also targeted at areas of return for refugees and the internally displaced.

Of the $63 million that the United Nations high commissioner for refugees (UNHCR) received last year for similar operations, the CHF provided $14 million.

Sudan: International Assistance

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to assist the Government of Southern Sudan to develop the civil service there. [126280]

Hilary Benn: The UK is playing a lead role in support of civil service development for both the Government of the Southern Sudan (GOSS) and the 10 state governments in the South. We have allocated £2 million of bilateral support to a capacity building programme for GOSS. Its achievements to date include service training for newly recruited officials at different levels in central and state level Government and technical assistance for government accountants. We are also supporting civil service reform through the Multi Donor Trust Fund's Capacity Building, Institutional and Human Resource Development in Southern Sudan Project, UNDP and the African Development Bank.

Sumatra: Earthquakes

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid he is making available to the survivors of the earthquake in Sumatra. [126706]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has been monitoring the situation in Sumatra since the earthquake struck at 3.49 GMT (10.49 local time) on Tuesday 6 March.

The Indonesian authorities and the United Nations report that 71 people have died, 192 people have been injured and several hundred homes have been destroyed.

The Government of Indonesia has sent medical teams to the area and is coordinating delivery of relief items including tents and water. The Indonesian military is providing relief kitchens and clinics.

The Government of Indonesia has not requested international assistance. We remain ready to respond to requests that the Government may make and will continue to monitor the situation closely.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Bats: Conservation

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the average cost per application of obtaining the expert advice required to support an application for a bat licence under the Conservation (Natural Habitats &c) Regulations 1994. [125803]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 8 March 2007]: Obtaining expert advice in relation to supporting applications for bat licences is a private and commercial matter for the applicant. Consequently, DEFRA does not hold this information.

Birds of Prey

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the evidential basis is for the contention in the review of bird registration that whilst there is evidence that the peregrine is persecuted, it is not for the reasons outlined in the criteria for including the species on Schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; [125179]

(2) what his policy is on the Joint Nature Conservation Committee's recommendation to retain the peregrine falcon on Schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. [125180]

Barry Gardiner There is no reference in the review to the contention to which the hon. Member refers. Peregrine falcons are, of course, already listed on schedule 4 of the 1981 Act. In the Consultation on the Review of Registration under section 7 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in England, Scotland and Wales, the Joint Nature Conservation Committee's (JNCC) recommendation is for the peregrine falcon to be retained on schedule 4.

My officials will shortly put the results of the recent consultation exercise to me. Therefore, it is too early for me to take a view on the JNCC's recommendation.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the saker falcon will be subject to a fresh review by the Joint Nature Conservation Committee as a candidate for listing in Schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in view of its endangered status. [125231]

Barry Gardiner: We are currently in the midst of a review of schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in which we are reviewing the status of all endangered birdspecies, including the saker falcon.

Birds: Conservation

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the costs of operating the Bird Registration Scheme under section 7 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 were in the most recent period for which figures are available; and what proportion of these costs are paid by bird keepers. [124672]

Barry Gardiner: The cost of running the Bird Registration Scheme for 2005-06 was £304,828. 23.7 per cent. (£72,208) of this was recovered in fees from keepers.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what conclusions were drawn from (a) the Review of Bird Registration and CITES licensing fees in 1999 and (b) the review of charges for CITES licences and permits in 2004; and whether any changes were made to the fees charged following each review. [124673]

Barry Gardiner: In 1999, there was a review of CITES fees which officials subsequently withdrew as being unworkable. The 2004 review resulted in proposals for an increase of CITES fees but, subsequently, this was withdrawn following detailed consultations with HM Treasury.

No changes were made to fees as a result of these consultation exercises. Both exercises were solely concerned with CITES fees and charges and were not concerned with bird registration fees.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimates have been made of the cost implications for enforcement and conservation agencies of the proposals contained within his Department's Review of Bird Registration. [124674]

Barry Gardiner: My officials are currently assessing the implications of the consultation exercise. As part of that exercise, I will require them to produce, and publish, a full regulatory impact assessment which will quantify the cost implications of any proposed changes. At the moment, it is too early in the process for me to make any comment on the cost implications.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether there is a minimum infrastructure cost associated with running the Bird Registration scheme; and whether reducing the number of birds on Schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 would reduce income from bird keepers. [124675]

Barry Gardiner: There are fixed costs such as running costs for the IT system. However, these are extremely small (less than 5 per cent. of the total).

Currently, keepers pay per registration, that is, per bird. Therefore, reducing the number of species listed on schedule 4 would reduce the number of fees (income) paid by keepers.

Bovine Tuberculosis: Disease Control

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps have been taken (a) to improve the training of veterinary surgeons undertaking TB testing and (b) to improve the management of State Veterinary Service staff undertaking TB testing since the DNV Consulting report on Veterinary Surgeons within the Meat Hygiene Service. [125777]

Mr. Bradshaw: The DNV Consulting Report, 'Review of TB Testing' looked at the way instructions, procedures and interpretive material for TB testing were promulgated, reviewed and complied with by local veterinary inspectors (LVIs) in England and Wales. It considered testing by LVIs and staff within the State Veterinary Service (SVS), not the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS). The MHS does not carry out TB testing on live cattle.

A CD-Rom training package is being prepared for use by all veterinary surgeons undertaking TB testing which will be rolled out in the near future. The instructions for carrying out the test have been revised. At the same time we are developing plans for refresher training for SVS staff and more formal monitoring procedures.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) beef cows and (b) dairy cows were compulsorily slaughtered because of bovine tuberculosis in (i) Great Britain, (ii) England, (iii) Wales and (iv) each county in each year since 1997; and how many have been slaughtered in 2007. [126160]

Mr. Bradshaw: The number of cattle, broken down by beef and dairy cows, slaughtered under bovine TB measures in each county of Great Britain, over the time period requested, is not routinely available and can be provided only at disproportionate cost. I have arranged for details of the total number of cattle slaughtered under bovine TB measures in each county, from 1997 to 2006, along with provisional data for January 2007, to be placed in the Library of the House.

1998 to 2005 data is also available on the DEFRA website at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/stats/county.htm

Common Agricultural Policy: Reform

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with his European counterparts on Common Agricultural Policy subsidies and reform in favour of aiding the use of excess crop production for the domestic production of bio-fuels. [125562]

Ian Pearson: The Government have regular discussions with other member states and the European Commission on the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP). These discussions are likely to become more frequent as we move towards the proposed 'healthcheck' in 2008.

Our objectives for the CAP include completing the process of decoupling direct aid and the removal of compulsory set-aside land so that farmers across the EU are free to produce crops in response to market demand. We also aim to end the intervention system which leads to surplus production.

We will consider the existing CAP measures that support the production of biofuels in the context of these objectives, and Government initiatives to promote the use of bio-energy in road transport fuels.

Departments: Discrimination

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress his Department has made in achieving gender equality in public appointments to bodies which fall within his Department's responsibility since 1997. [125211]

Barry Gardiner: The Government remain committed to improving diversity on the boards of public bodies and the principle of equal representation of women and men in public appointments. The annual Cabinet Office publication, "Public Bodies", contains details of the number of women appointed to public bodies each year by Department. For 2001-06 copies of these documents are available in the Library for the reference of Members.

Departments: Orders and Regulations

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2007, Official Report, column 1180W, on departments: orders and regulations, how many general and local statutory instruments were made by his Department in each year since 2001. [125688]

Barry Gardiner: The numbers of local and general statutory instruments made by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs between 2001 and 2006 are as follows:

	General	Local
2001	143	373
2002	124	2
2003	109	2
2004	131	5
2005	130	15
2006	145	9

Departments: Video Conferencing

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many video conferences have been held by his Department in each year since 2001. [126018]

Barry Gardiner: [holding answer 8 March 2007]: Statistical information on videoconferencing usage is not held centrally. Defra and its associated agencies have 76 videoconferencing units. Fifteen of these units have been managed by IBM since mid-2005 and the following statistics relate to bookings made for those units only. The other units are mainly on Defra agency sites and are managed locally. To collate the requested usage information from these sites would incur a disproportionate cost to the Department.

	Number
2005[1]	304
2006	935

[1] October to December.

Dolphins: Imports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many dolphins were imported into the United Kingdom from Japan in each of the last 10 years. [125630]

Mr. Bradshaw: No dead or live dolphins have been imported into the United Kingdom from Japan during the last 10 years.

Environmental Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding he has made available to Natural England for the creation of (a) entry level and (b) higher level environmental stewardship schemes during the contingency period before the new rural development programme for England is approved by the European Commission. [125035]

Barry Gardiner: As the Secretary of State made clear in his announcement on 12 December 2006, Official Report, column 77WS, we have kept the Environmental Stewardship Scheme open to new applications in advance of formal approval of the Rural Development Programme for England.

Agreements entered into since 1 January are provisional and are being funded from existing indicative budgets agreed when the scheme was launched. No specific, separate budget has been made available for the period prior to programme approval.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many agreements on the creation of (a) entry level and (b) higher level environmental stewardship schemes he expects Natural England to offer before the new England rural development programme commences; and what he expects the financial value of these agreements to be. [125036]

Barry Gardiner: The final, total number of new agreements entered into on a contingency basis since 1 January will depend on the date the new Rural Development Programme for England is approved. During this period, Natural England is continuing to work towards existing targets. That is, by the end of 2007, some 60 per cent. of the agricultural area in England will be managed under an Entry Level Scheme agreement. We are also working towards a target of having some 525,000 hectares of land under a combination of either Higher Level Stewardship or the previously operated Countryside Stewardship Scheme.

Fisheries: EC Law

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of EU Council regulation 41/2006, on thornback ray, on the fishing industry in Kent and Essex. [126916]

Mr. Bradshaw: I am aware of the concerns among this sector of the industry about the effects of this piece of EC legislation on their viability. We are urgently exploring with them options to adapt and respond to the new obligations.

Food: Procurement

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has held with other Ministers on the sourcing of publicly procured food; and what proportion of such food was of British origin in 2006. [123634]

Barry Gardiner: My right hon. friend the Secretary of State, together with ministerial colleagues at DfES and DOH spoke at the conference—Food and Farming: Reconnecting a New Generation, on 29 November. The conference promoted sustainable sourcing of food throughout the public sector under the Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative; promoted opportunities for farmers and producers to supply public sector contracts; and launched the Year of Food and Farming—an industry-wide initiative supported by DEFRA, DfES and DOH. Other Government agencies are contributing to the initiative which also involves subject associations, teacher associations, key food, farming and countryside sector bodies, together with businesses working in the food, farming and countryside sectors.

The Department does not hold information on the proportion of publicly procured food of British origin in 2006. The Department is commissioning a MORI survey of local education authorities in England and is also working with its statisticians, key public sector procurers, the NFU, other trade bodies and the major food service companies to produce this information which it will place in the Library of the House when it is available.

Forestry: Subsidies

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will advance the payment of support to those landowners who use their land for forestry for the purposes of developing carbon sinks. [124466]

Barry Gardiner: Climate change mitigation is just one of the many benefits of tree planting. The principal objectives of the woodland creation, supported by the Forestry Commission's English Woodland Grant Scheme, are environmental and social.

The Forestry Commission has already contractually committed most of its woodland creation grants budget for payment in the 2007-08 financial year. There are no plans to offer any new contracts for woodland creation grants until the Rural Development Programme for England 2007-13 has been approved by the EU Commission.

Greyhounds: Waste Disposal

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions has he had with (a) the Environment Agency and (b) other authorities on the exhumation of the bodies of greyhounds killed at Seaham, County Durham. [126464]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 9 March 2007]: DEFRA Ministers have not held discussions with the Environment Agency or other authorities specifically on this matter. However, my officials have monitored progress and briefed Ministers accordingly.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what compensation or redress is available to those who have received unsatisfactory service under the Warm Front scheme; [125080]

(2) how many contractors have been removed from the Warm Front scheme by Eaga Partnership because of unsatisfactory performance; [125087]

3) what sanctions are applied by Eaga Partnership when contractors carry out unsatisfactory work as part of the Warm Front scheme. [125088]

Ian Pearson: The Scheme Manager, the Eaga Partnership, continually monitor and audit contractors appointed to work under the Warm Front Scheme. It has introduced vendor-rating systems against which contractors are assessed.

The vendor rating system provides an assessment of contractors using various criteria including (but not limited to) customer service, professionalism and workmanship. The vendor rating of each contractor determines the level of work they receive in the future.

Contractors who irrevocably fall short of these standards can be removed from the Warm Front Scheme. However, no contractors have been removed to date under the second phase of Warm Front.

If a Warm Front customer feels that they have received unsatisfactory service from the scheme they can in the first instance complain to the Eaga Customer Complaints Team. Should they not be satisfied with the response they can pursue matters with the Defra Fuel Poverty Team, Defra Service Standards Complaints Adjudicator Unit, Defra Ministers or The Parliamentary Ombudsman.

With regards to possible redress/compensation, this will depend on the specifics of each case.

Meat: Origin Marking

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what estimate he has made of the percentage of imported foreign meat that was subsequently labelled as being British in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement; [125182]

(2) what steps he is taking to prevent imported foreign meat being labelled as British. [125183]

Barry Gardiner: Where meat has been subject to substantial processing, it is permissible to describe as its origin the country where that change took place. If the absence of information might mislead consumers, then Guidance on Country of Origin Labelling and Clear Food Labelling produced by the Food Standards Agency suggests that both the origin of the meat and the country where the processing takes place should be declared in order to facilitate informed consumer choice. More restrictive rules apply to beef and poultry meat that has not been processed.

Ultimately, the use of misleading labelling, including information on the country of origin, is governed by the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 and the Food Safety Act 1990. The Food Standards Agency is currently revising its Guidance, and my Department is closely involved with this.

Milk

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he has taken to protect the UK milk production sector from European competition. [125225]

Barry Gardiner: If the UK milk production sector is to remain competitive it must become more efficient and market-focused. In England, the Government are helping it to do so through a range of measures, including:

(i) our support for English Farming and Food Partnerships (which is promoting collaboration and co-operation between farmers and between farmers and the rest of the food chain);

(ii) the Food Chain Centre (which has been promoting benchmarking and investigating the scope for efficiencies with supply chains); and

(iii) the Dairy Supply Chain Forum (which aims to increase the efficiency and promote the sustainable development of the dairy supply chain).

Defra has also awarded grants of over £1.3 million under the Agriculture Development Scheme to projects that aim help the dairy sector become more efficient. We understand that a strategic action plan for the dairy industry in Wales has been developed to encourage effective measures that will stimulate innovation and product development.

Rights of Way

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects to consult on regulations under sections 54 and 56 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 on the extinguishment of public rights of way at the cut-off date. [124670]

Barry Gardiner: I expect the Department to issue a consultation paper on these regulations by September 2007.

River Thames: Environment Protection

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will take steps to ensure that the Thames Basin Heaths Special Protection Area (SPA) Delivery Plan prevents irreversible damage to the SPA and the habitat of the woodlark, nightjar and Dartford warbler. [124445]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 5 March 2007]: The Government office for the South East continues to work in partnership with Communities and Local Government, Defra, Natural England and the South East England Regional Assembly to develop a strategic approach to the required housing delivery around the Thames Basin Heaths Special Protection Area, whilst ensuring that the site is appropriately protected from future impacts in accordance with the habitats directive.

The draft Thames Basin Heaths Delivery Plan is currently being considered as part of the Examination in Public (EiP) of the South East Regional Spatial Strategy. The assessor appointed to examine this draft Delivery Plan published his report to the EiP Panel on 19 February 2007. This report will be debated further on 22 March 2007 at an EiP session.

Sewers

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what length in miles of unadopted sewers there is in each region of England. [125533]

Ian Pearson: The most recent Ofwat estimates of private, unadopted, pipework outside the property curtilage, in England, by water and sewerage company area, are set out in the following table:

Water and sewerage company	Length of unadopted sewers (kilometre)
Anglian	21,000
United Utilities	21,000
Northumbrian	9,000
Severn Trent	29,000
Southern	13,000
South West	5,000
Thames	26,000
Wessex	8,000
Yorkshire	16,000

Single Farm Payments: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex have not received a single farm payment for 2006. [125473]

Barry Gardiner: As of 28 February 2007 a total of 88,842 customers have received either a full or partial 2006 Single Payment Scheme payment, representing 81.5 per cent. of the estimated total claimant population of 109,000.

The total value of 2006 payments is £965.53 million, 62.8 per cent. of the estimated total fund of £1.54 billion.

These figures include 2,577 partial payments (including Euro payments) and 2,298 full payments which were made in the last week, as well as over 3,300 top-up payments which were made to customers who previously received a partial payment.

Detailed analysis of the payments made under the Single Payment Scheme is not yet available.

Sugar Beet: Biofuels

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to help sugar beet farmers diversify their markets to use their crop for fuel production. [125561]

Barry Gardiner: Following the reform of the sugar regime, farmers can grow sugar beet on set-aside land for bioethanol use and can claim the European Union's €45 per hectare Energy Aid payment for sugar beet on non set-aside land.

The Government are promoting the production of bioethanol through a 20p per litre duty rate cut. To further develop the supply of biofuels, a Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation will be introduced to require 5 per cent. of fuel sold in the UK to come from a renewable source by 2010.

We are aware that British Sugar are building a biofuel processing plant in Norfolk that will use sugar beet as one of the feedstocks.

Wood: Burma

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to reduce imports of timber from Burma (a) to the UK and (b) to the EU. [122611]

Barry Gardiner: The UK supports the EU's Forest Law Enforcement, Governance and Trade (FLEGT) action plan which envisages voluntary partnership agreements with individual countries to promote trade in legally produced timber. Burma is not a FLEGT partner country and its timber exports are therefore not promoted under this scheme. In the UK, the Government maintains a long-standing policy of discouraging British companies from trading with Burma.

TRANSPORT

A50: Road Traffic

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the last five noise level readings were for the A50 Doveridge bypass; and when each was taken. [126099]

Dr. Ladyman: Noise level readings are not routinely taken for trunk roads and none have been taken for the A50 Doveridge bypass.

Departments: Disclosure of Information

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make available to the participants the minutes of the meeting held on 13 November 2006 between himself, the hon. Member for Richmond Park, Mrs. Eileen Dallaglio and others. [125220]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Following the undertaking that I gave at the meeting on 13 November 2006, copies of the Minutes have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Departments: Security

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many current passes to his Department have been allocated to employees of private companies. [126761]

Gillian Merron: The Department has 4,711 valid passes issued to contractors and consultants providing services to its headquarters and agency premises.

Level Crossings: Accidents

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents occurred at railway level crossings in each of the last five years; and how many of those were due to (a) signal failure and (b) (i) pedestrians and (ii) vehicles on the line. [126469]

Mr. Tom Harris: Statistics on accidents at level crossings and their causes are given in the annual reports on railway safety, now produced by the Office of Rail Regulation and previously by the Health and Safety Executive. Copies are available in the House Library.

The Rail Safety and Standards Board have estimated that 96 per cent. of the risk at level crossings is due to the behaviour of crossing users.

M5: Accidents

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the accident rate is on the stretch of the M5 motorway between each of the junctions from 8 to 11A; what the average accident rate is on each motorway in England; and if he will make a statement. [125679]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 6 March 2007]: Actual figures for individual stretches of motorway are not normally available. However, the accident rate on the M5 motorway, between each of the junctions from 8 to 11 a, averaged over the period 2003-05, is as follows:

Junction	Accident rate (accidents per 10^8 vehicle km[1])
J8-9	8.8
J9-10	5.2
J10-11	8.3
J11-11a	8.1

[1]100 million vehicle kilometres

The accident rate for each motorway in England, averaged over the period 2003-05, for which figures are available, is as follows:

Motorway	accidents per 10^8 vehicle km^2)
2	10.9

These figures have been obtained exceptionally but should not necessarily be used for comparison purposes as each motorway differs in length and usage.

Petrol Stations

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to require details of additives to petrol and diesel by refineries to be displayed to customers at the point of sale at petrol stations. [126123]

Dr. Ladyman: I have no plans to impose such a requirement, since to do so would place a burden on industry without significantly adding to the protection available to consumers.

Fuels can contain a wide range of additives. Information on the composition of these would be unlikely to be comprehensible to motorists and may well be proprietary to the fuel supplier.

It is unlikely that such a requirement would have prevented the recent incident in which fuel was found to be contaminated with silicon, since the contaminant had not been deliberately added to the fuel at any stage and the suppliers were unaware of its presence.

Ports: Liverpool

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects a decision to be announced on the application for the post panamax terminal in the port of Liverpool. [126555]

Dr. Ladyman: A decision on the application for the Seaforth River Terminal Harbour Revision Order will be announced as soon as all the necessary statutory procedures have been completed.

Roads: Noise

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of the concreted trunk road network has had a quieter surface installed since July 2000; and which roads with concrete surfaces (a) have and (b) have not had work begin. [126096]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has a policy of using quieter surfaces as a matter of course whenever a road needs to be resurfaced. Since July 2000 approximately 35 per cent. of the concrete sections of the strategic road network have been surfaced with quieter materials. Tables (A) and (B) indicate concrete sections surfaced and sections not surfaced respectively.

Safety Belts

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent estimate he has made of the number of (a) fatalities and (b) injuries sustained in road crashes where the failure to wear a seat belt was a contributory factor. [124615]

Dr. Ladyman: Statistical data on failure to wear a seatbelt as a contributory factor is not collected. Research reported in the recently published "Second Review of the Government's Road Safety Strategy" and "Road Safety Research Report No. 76: Trends in Fatal Car-occupant Accidents" both published on 26 February 2007, estimates that about a third of fatally injured car occupants were not wearing their seatbelts. For 2005 figures it represents about 565 people, and it is estimated that about 370 people might have survived if they had been properly restrained. A research report giving further details has also been published by TRL limited. These three reports can be downloaded from the following links:

Copies of the reports are also available from the Libraries of the House.

Shipping

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve short sea shipping in UK coastal waters. [126476]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department promotes coastal shipping where this makes sense and has provided over £34 million of grant support for water freight projects since 2000.

In 2005, we introduced the new Waterborne Freight Grant scheme to assist shipping companies with their operating costs where there are environmental benefits to be gained from modal shift.

On a day to day basis we look to Sea and Water, the industry-led organisation which has received Department funding of £120,000 per annum since its formation in 2003, to take the lead in promoting coastal shipping services.

Shipping: EC Action

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the European Commission Green Paper on maritime transport policy. [126402]

Dr. Ladyman: The UK national consultation ended on 28 February 2007 and in total the Department has received 37 written responses to the consultation from interested parties.

Many of these are umbrella responses from trade associations and other membership bodies representing a wide range of stakeholders.

Southern: Rolling Stock

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made in securing the early release by Southern of the class 319 trains for use on the Thameslink service; and if he will make a statement. [125994]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department for Transport is continuing to work with First Capital Connect and other industry partners to try to find a solution which would enable Southern to release the remaining 12 of its dual-voltage Class 319 units in advance of the end of its franchise in December 2009.

Transport: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Disability Discrimination (Transport Vehicles) Regulations 2005 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126642]

Gillian Merron: The Disability Discrimination (Transport Vehicles) Regulations 2005 were accompanied by a full regulatory impact assessment, including one-off and recurring costs to business. A copy was placed in the House Library.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Carriage of Dangerous Goods and the Use of Transportable Pressure Equipment (Amendment) Regulations 2005 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126645]

Dr. Ladyman: The total costs to industry estimated in the final regulatory impact assessment (RIA) were:

(a) for the first year after the proposals came into force, a one-off cost of £25 million—£53 million (incurred as a result of implementation of new security requirements following the events of 9/11);

Additionally, £0.05 million or less incurred as a result of further safety measures.

(b) £80 million (in present value terms) incurred over the remaining nine years (primarily relating to approval of bulk containers and changes to classification, packaging and vehicle marking in relation to class 7 radioactive materials as required by the EC directives.

The cost to regulators was absorbed in the normal running costs of the Department.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing Directive 2002/15/EC, on the working time of persons performing mobile and road transport activities to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126648]

Dr. Ladyman: The European Road Transport Working Time Directive 2002/15/EC is intended to help prevent "mobile workers" (mainly drivers and crew of HGVs, buses and coaches) from being forced to work excessively long hours. The directive also helps promote road safety and to ensure fair competition across Europe (by delivering a "level playing field" on working time).

The regulatory impact assessment (RIA) for the Road Transport (Working Time) Regulations 2005 (SI 2005/639), which implemented directive 2002/15/EC in Great Britain, estimated a one-off cost to industry of £25 to £50 million and a recurring net cost of £280 to £565 million per annum. The RIA did not estimate a one-off cost for regulators but estimated recurring enforcement costs of £120,000-£217,000 per annum. Copies of the RIA are available in the Libraries of the House, but early indications suggest that the compliance cost to industry may have been overestimated.

The Government have begun a review of the UK's implementation of the directive which will look at, among other things, the administrative burden placed on business by the implementing regulations.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Carriage of Dangerous Goods and Use of Transportable Pressure Equipment Regulations 2004 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126656]

Dr. Ladyman: The total costs to industry estimated in the final regulatory impact assessment (RIA) were:

(a) a one-off cost of £47 million incurred in the first year after the proposals came into force (primarily related to the increased scope of driver training to drivers working in petroleum transport sector);

(b) a further £293 million (in present value terms using a discount rate of 3.5 per cent.) incurred over the remaining nine years.

The cost to regulators was absorbed in the normal running costs of the Department.

WALES

Big Lottery Fund

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on the effect on lottery funding for projects in Wales of the allocation of funding from the Big Lottery Fund to projects being developed for the 2012 Olympics. [126306]

Mr. Hain: I have regular discussions with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on matters affecting Wales.

The Lottery has brought over £0.9 billion of awards to good causes in Wales since 1994. I, along with Cabinet colleagues and Assembly Ministers, am working to minimise the impact of the Olympics on Lottery funding for good causes in Wales.

I am determined, also, that Wales will make the most of the opportunities presented by the Games in terms of business opportunities, tourism, investment and participation in sport.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Liaison Committee

21. Pete Wishart: To ask the Leader of the House if he will review the composition of the Liaison Committee. [126354]

Mr. Straw: I have no plans to propose to the House any changes to the principles underlying the composition of the Liaison Committee. These are that the Committee should comprise the chairmen of the other select committees of the House, with—at present—a senior former select committee chairman added to the Committee who serves as its chairman.

Citizenship Education

24. Mr. Marsden: To ask the Leader of the House what discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues on how public understanding of the workings and processes of Parliament can be improved by citizenship education in schools. [126357]

Mr. Straw: I have not held specific discussions on this issue.

Communications Allowance

Mr. Heald: To ask the Leader of the House what the estimated level of the new communications allowance is; and whether the incidental expenses provision allowance will be changed once the new communications allowance has been introduced. [125710]

Mr. Straw: The Members Estimate Committee is currently considering this and is expected to make proposals imminently, which will be published in a report from the Committee.

Members' Constituency Work

Mr. Heald: To ask the Leader of the House how much hon. Members were allowed to spend on publicity, literature and communications to constituents in (a) 1996-97 and (b) 2006-07. [125712]

Mr. Straw: Communications to constituents is ordinarily charged by hon. Members to their parliamentary allowances. Members can spend any amount on such items up to the relevant annual limit, provided the expenditure conforms to the rules and guidance published by the Department of Finance and Administration in the Green Book.

In 1996-97 the then office costs allowance (OCA) was set at £47,568, while the 2006-07 incidental expenses provision (IEP) is £20,440. The OCA also covered staffing costs as well as general office costs, whereas in 2006-07 there is a separate staffing allowance in addition to the IEP.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Parking Spaces

20. Chris Bryant: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many drivers have parking spaces at the Palace of Westminster allocated to them by the House authorities. [126353]

Nick Harvey: There are 32 parking spaces allocated by the House of Commons authorities to drivers at the Palace of Westminster.

Lady Thatcher Statue

22. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many representations he has received about the statue of Lady Thatcher in Members' Lobby. [126355]

Nick Harvey: The Advisory Committee on Works of Art has received two representations about the statue of Lady Thatcher in Members' Lobby. I am not aware of any other representations to the Commission.

Hospitality: Dining Rooms

23. John Mann: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what estimate the Commission has made of the cost to the public purse of providing hospitality via the Commons dining rooms. [126356]

Nick Harvey: After inclusion of purchase costs and the cost of staff directly engaged by the Refreshment Department in the booking and delivery of banqueting services, a net profit of over £960,000 was made from hospitality and other events held in the House of Commons private dining rooms in 2005-06.

This figure does not include overheads such as accommodation, procurement, utilities, staff training or pension costs which are not calculated separately.

House of Commons: St. George's Day

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what plans the House authorities have to celebrate St. George's Day. [125702]

Nick Harvey: Continuing its theme of celebrating the British Patron Saints' Days, the Refreshment Department will celebrate St. George's Day on 23 April by offering special dishes throughout its cafeterias and in the Members' and Strangers' dining rooms. Menus will showcase prime English meats, poultry, vegetables, cheeses and other seasonal produce, sourced by the Department's wholesalers from farmers and small producers throughout the English regions. Also, the Union flag will be flown from Victoria Tower on St. George's Day.

Portcullis House: Flags

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if he will place in the Library a copy of the health and safety report into the access to the flagpole on Portcullis House. [122443]

Nick Harvey: A copy of the health and safety report will be placed in the Library.

Repairs and Maintenance

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how much the Commission spent on (a) acquisitions of office space, (b) refurbishment and (c) maintenance on the House of Commons estate in each year since 1990. [120445]

Nick Harvey: Since 1990 the main acquisition of office accommodation has been the construction of Portcullis House over a number of financial years at a capital cost of £234 million. Leasehold space was taken on at 7 Millbank during the 1990s; the annual rental is currently £4.7 million. More recently, additional leasehold space has been taken on a temporary basis at 4 Millbank at an annual rental of £0.7 million to provide decant space for use while core parts of the estate are refurbished. Major office refurbishments undertaken in the period have included:

1 Parliament Street and Derby Gate
Norman Shaw North
Norman Shaw South
Commons Court Offices
St. Stephen's Tower offices

Care of the Palace of Westminster and the parliamentary outbuildings was transferred to Parliament by the Parliamentary Corporate Bodies Act in April 1992. Over the years the interpretation of maintenance and building activity, as well as the accounting regime used to record expenditure, has changed, making it difficult to give figures on a consistent basis. The published accounts show the following costs for accommodation services:

	£ million
1992-93	21.9
1993-94	25.9
1994-95	22.1
1995-96	33.2
1996-97	20.9
1997-98	22.1
1998-99	23.3
1999-2000	27.2
2000-01	23.8
2001-02	35.8
2002-03	36.0
2003-04	24.3
2004-05	25.7
2005-06	24.7

For 2003-04 onwards, a more detailed breakdown is available as follows:

			£ million
	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Current expenditure
Office refurbishment	0.6	0.6	1.7
Office maintenance	2.1	2.1	2.4
Other accommodation costs including security	21.6	23.0	20.6
Total	24.3	25.7	24.7
Capital expenditure
Office furniture	0.1	0.1	0.1

Cost trends can be influenced by major projects. For example, the increase in office refurbishment expenditure in 2005-06 reflects the initiation of the Press Gallery refurbishment.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Children: Day Care

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of child care (a) places and (b) providers (i) opened and (ii) closed in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by (A) the private, voluntary and independent sector and (B) the state sector. [125622]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 6 March 2007]: The information requested about child care places and providers broken down by sector is not available.

The Department is unable to provide accurate details of closure rates for child care places and providers prior to 2003.

Since March 2003 data on closure rates have been available from Ofsted. Their data on closures include registered places in settings which are transferring ownership, and in settings which move from one Ofsted category to another, not just in those which are ceasing trading.

Ofsted have produced figures on the numbers of registered child care providers and places on a quarterly basis from March 2003. Their latest figures were published in their report "Registered Childcare Providers and Places, December 2006", which is available on their website, www.Ofsted.gov.uk/

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many childcare places for children under five were available in Warrington in each year since 1997. [125796]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 6 March 2007]: The available information on the number of registered child care places for children under eight in Warrington local authority area is shown in the tables. The latest figures on registered child care provider and places are available on the following website:

Curriculum

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether it is the policy of his Department that the Key Stage 3 curriculum should be less knowledge based and more skills based. [124617]

Jim Knight: Our policy is that the Key Stage 3 curriculum should ensure that young people secure the key discipline concepts, skills and knowledge to gain an understanding of the subjects they have studied. It should also equip young people with the wider personal, learning and thinking skills needed for everyday life.

Departments: Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) for which future projects his Department is considering a private finance initiative deal; what the estimated life time value is of each potential contract; and what period each will cover; [125186]

(2) what percentage of his Department's budget was taken up by private finance initiative commitments in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and if he will make a statement; [125194]

(3) what percentage of his Department's budget will be taken up by private finance initiative commitments in each of the next 10 years, assuming that the budget grows in line with the Treasury's estimates for gross domestic product over the period; and if he will make a statement. [125195]

Jim Knight: PFI credits relate solely to schools capital funding. Future PFI credits available to the Department as part of its capital baseline are largely assigned to the Building Schools for the Future (BSF) programme. PFI contracts usually cover a 25 to 30 year period. After this, the buildings will normally transfer to the local authority which is the signatory to the contract. Partnerships for Schools, our delivery partner for BSF, is working with each local authority which has joined the programme to establish which school projects are suitable for investment through PFI. This is decided on value for money grounds and is usually for those projects where the school is to be largely rebuilt, rather than refurbished.

Percentage budget figures for PFI credits over the last 10 years to 2006-07, and planned for the years 2007-08 to 2010-11, are set out in the following table. The Department has no plans beyond the next spending review period ending 2010-11. The PFI percentage figure is established by dividing PFI credits by the total schools capital funding baseline, including PFI credits.

	Percentage
1998-99	12
1999-2000	25
2000-01	17

2006-07	22
2007-08	20
2008-09	20
2010-11	16

The changes in the PFI percentage reflect, from year to year, the different rates at which PFI credits and other allocations have increased.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many exclusions there were in each local education authority in (a) 1997 and (b) 2006. [124633]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

School Fruit and Vegetable Scheme

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in English schools receive free fruit on a daily basis; what the annual cost is of this scheme; what estimate he has made of the cost of extending this scheme to all primary aged school children; and if he will make a statement. [125083]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

There are currently 1,961,316 children participating in the school fruit and vegetable scheme in 16,505 schools. The cost is £36.2 million for produces and delivery and £0.5 million for administration in the current 2006-07 financial year. We have not made a detailed estimate of the cost of extending the scheme to all primary aged school children.

Schools: Calderdale

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assistance has been (a) requested by and (b) given to (i) the local education authority in Calderdale to support schools in special measures and (ii) schools in special measures. [124636]

Jim Knight: A range of support is available to local authorities to help them to improve their schools, including guidance from the Department on schools causing concern, central funding from a variety of sources, a number of intervention and capacity building programmes and a network of school improvement delivery agencies some of whose work includes the provision of teaching materials and consultancy support. Every local authority has been allocated a share of an additional £30 million, over the 2006-07 and 2007-08 financial years, to support their school improvement work. Calderdale's share of this was £138,600.

Additional funding is also available from the Department's interventions budget, to support failing and underperforming schools. Calderdale local authority was allocated £170,000 from the interventions budget in 2003-04, £184,500 in 2004-05 and £75,000 in 2005-06. This funding included support for the North Halifax Federation, including £67,000 for a school that was in special measures to support its transition to closure and successful merger with another school.

Schools: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to support school sport in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex. [125528]

Jim Knight: As part of the national School Sport Strategy, all schools in Eastbourne are part of the Hailsham School Sport Partnership (a family of schools which work together to increase participation in PE and school sport). The partnership has received over £1 million in the past three years to support its work in raising participation levels, linking schools to local sports clubs, and increasing the number of pupils involved in sports volunteering. It has seen the percentage of pupils participating in at least two hours of high quality PE and school sport a week rise from 80 per cent. in 2003 to 92 per cent. in 2006.

A further two School Sport Partnerships cover the rest of the schools in East Sussex. The total investment in these three partnerships has been over £3 million since 2003/04. The partnerships also benefit from extra funding for: Competition Managers in the area—raising the quality and quantity of school competition; a Community Sports Coach—bringing a sports specialist into schools; and school swimming—helping weak swimmers become more confident in the water before they finish primary school.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex provide fruit for their pupils each day. [125530]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

There are 149 schools in East Sussex, including 16 schools in Eastbourne, that participate in the school fruit and vegetable scheme.

Secondary Education: Curriculum

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the (a) risks and (b) consequences of doing nothing to the curriculum as part of the review of the secondary curriculum. [122807]

Jim Knight: If we do nothing to the secondary curriculum schools will not have the flexibility and space for stretching students and helping those who have fallen below the expected level in English and mathematics. We risk therefore being unable to increase the number of students who reach the age of 14 at a level which enables them to take full advantage of the increased choices we are making available in the 14-19 phase. The consequence of that will be that some young people become disengaged from learning and unable to meet their aspirations. Those young people are more likely to drop out of education and training post 16 and are less likely to succeed in later life.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 1025W, on secondary education: curriculum, whether the supporting materials produced to accompany the secondary curriculum review are intended to accompany the revised National Curriculum as non-statutory guidance; whether the supporting materials will be sent to schools; and on what legal basis these materials will be sent to schools. [124856]

Jim Knight: Supporting materials produced to accompany the secondary curriculum review are intended as guidance only and therefore non-statutory. They will available to schools via the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority website.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 1025W, on secondary education: curriculum, when the Director of Curriculum at the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority visited South Africa; and how much the visit cost. [124858]

Jim Knight: The Director of Curriculum was in South Africa from 16 February to 21 February 2007. The event was paid for by the Western Cape Education Department.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 1025W, on secondary education: curriculum, how many consultation documents have been (a) requested and (b) provided by the Qualifications Curriculum Authority in (i) printed format and (ii) other formats. [124912]

Jim Knight: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority has so far received three requests to provide consultation documents in printed format. These have been provided. No requests have been received to provide the consultation documents in other formats.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 1025W, on secondary education: curriculum, what steps the Qualifications Curriculum Authority has taken to ensure that parents respond to the secondary curriculum review. [124913]

Jim Knight: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority has a number of regional events planned with parents and students. It will use these to encourage parents to respond to the consultation on the secondary curriculum review. The widespread media coverage generated by the consultation launch, will mean that many parents are already aware that the consultation is taking place.

Sure Start Programme

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many grants were awarded to organisations for the purpose of meeting the capital costs of acquiring property for proposed new Sure Start centres; and what the value was of those grants. [126276]

Beverley Hughes: The General Sure Start Grant (GSSG) provided local authorities with a total of £813 million capital for the period 2006-08. The funding can be used for the developing of Sure Start children's centres, including acquiring, refurbishing, or building new property. The Department does not collect specific data on capital spent acquiring property for the purpose of developing children's centres.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures are (a) in place and (b) planned to recover Sure Start grants from organisations that have failed to open child care centres as planned; and if he will make a statement. [126403]

Beverley Hughes: Local authorities are responsible for how they use funding allocated to them through the General Sure Start Grant (GSSG) for the delivery of children's services. They have the freedom to use this funding to develop a range of provision including creating Sure Start Children's Centres, supporting the local child care market and developing extended schools services, in line with Government guidance. This will often involve using the local private, community or voluntary organisations to provide these services. If these organisations fail to deliver these services as planned, it is the responsibility of local authorities to recover this funding.

LAs have been asked to notify and consult with DfES about any proposal to sell or otherwise dispose of, or change the use of, buildings or other tangible assets which have been paid or partly paid for by a DfES capital grant. Notification should be at least three months before any planned disposal is intended to take place, where the market value exceeds £2,500.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Electoral Register

Damian Green: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what guidance the Electoral Commission has given returning officers on removing from the Electoral Register those not entitled to vote; and if he will make a statement. [125650]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that the guidance manuals it issued to electoral registration officers in England, Scotland and Wales in 2005 and 2006 included advice on eligibility for remaining on the electoral register. In July 2006, the Commission issued a circular to electoral registration officers on the extension by the Electoral Administration Act 2006 of the scope of their duties in relation to maintaining the electoral register, including removing those who are not eligible to be on it. I have arranged for a copy of this circular to be placed in the Library. The Commission has also provided further advice on this issue at its training and briefing seminars to support electoral administrators at the May 2007 elections.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have applied for a postal vote in each Northern Ireland constituency for the forthcoming election to the Assembly; and how many applied for such a facility in (a) the last general election and (b) previous Assembly election. [123491]

Mr. Hanson: The following table gives the breakdown by constituency of how many people have been issued with postal ballot papers. Figures for the number of postal ballot papers applied for are not available.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the account taken of costs of determining whether to seek to obtain an anti-social behaviour order (ASBO) in Northern Ireland; and what representations he has received from public authorities on this matter since the introduction of ASBOs in Northern Ireland. [126962]

Mr. Hanson: It is entirely the decision of the relevant authorities whether or not to apply for an antisocial behaviour order and this includes considering any issue relating to the cost. Any cost associated with seeking an antisocial behaviour order must be set against the cost of allowing the antisocial behaviour to continue unchallenged.

The NIO has no record of any representations from public authorities on this matter other than in response to the public consultation on the antisocial behaviour order proposals in 2004.

Colorectal Cancer: Screening

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects bowel screening to be available in the Province; and if he will make a statement. [119304]

Paul Goggins: My Department is working with the health service to enhance the capacity of the symptomatic service, with the aim of introducing bowel cancer screening in 2009.

Before a full programme can be implemented in Northern Ireland, detailed planning is required in order that the introduction of bowel screening does not adversely impact on services for those patients with symptomatic disease. In addition, infrastructure development and capacity building is required so that the necessary resources, people and skills are in place to ensure a quality service. My Department is currently working with the relevant health professionals to address these issues and thereby enhance the capacity of the symptomatic service.

Demonstrations: Londonderry

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what notification was given by the organisers of the parade that took place in Londonderry on Sunday 28 January 2007 to commemorate the events that took place there in January 1972. [117956]

Paul Goggins: An 11/1 Notification form was submitted to Strand Road PSNI station on 22 November 2006.

Departmental Equipment

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Rayleigh, Official Report, column 1276W, on departmental equipment, whether the computers stolen from his Department held information about the names and addresses of government employees and other Crown servants in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement on the security implications of the thefts. [119404]

Paul Goggins: Names and addresses were not held on any of the departmental computers that were stolen in the past nine years. While all these losses were regrettable, I am satisfied that the security of individuals or the Department has not been compromised.

Departments: Energy

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what strategy he has put in place for (a) the use of renewable energy and (b) meeting energy targets in his Department's buildings; and if he will make a statement. [125402]

Mr. Hanson: Government Departments in Northern Ireland have been purchasing electricity from renewable sources since 2001. This approach is being continued in the general requirement for Departments to source at least 10 per cent. of their electricity requirements from renewable sources by March 2008.

To encourage the installation of renewable energy technologies by Government Departments, some £6.5 million has been made available in 2006-07 and 2007-08 under the Environment and Renewable Energy Fund which was launched a year ago.

Beyond this period, this work will be carried forward under the Northern Ireland Sustainable Development Strategy which requires the Government estate to be carbon neutral by 2015. From 31 March 2007 all Departments and district councils will be under a statutory duty to act in the way best calculated to contribute to the achievement of sustainable development in Northern Ireland.

With regard to targets, Departments (and other public bodies) have been made aware of the objectives contained in the Government White Paper published in 2003 entitled "Our Energy Future—Creating a Low Carbon Economy", and repeated in the 2006 Climate Change Programme, "Tomorrow's Climate, Today's Challenge". All Departments are required to monitor their energy use and provide annual returns of energy consumption and cost in respect of all buildings which they occupy.

Educational Psychology

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many whole-time equivalent educational psychologists are employed by each education and library board in the Province. [119152]

Maria Eagle: The education and library boards employ the following numbers of whole-time equivalent educational psychologists:

Education and library board	Number
Belfast	26.64
North Eastern	21.98
Western	24.60
Southern	28.98
South Eastern	25.90

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils are being seen by educational psychologists in each education and library board area. [119154]

Maria Eagle: Within the education and library boards educational psychologists are currently seeing the following numbers of pupils.

Education and library board	Number
Belfast	8,450
North Eastern	7,354
Western	10,379
Southern	7,200
South Eastern	7,470

Electoral Register

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are registered to vote in each Northern Ireland constituency for the forthcoming election to the Assembly; and how many were registered for (a) the last general election and (b) previous Assembly election. [123493]

Mr. Hanson: The following table gives the breakdown by constituency of how many people are or were eligible to vote at the 2003 Assembly election, the 2005 parliamentary election and the 2007 Assembly election. The 2007 Assembly election figure is lower than the total possible electorate (i.e. total number registered to vote) because it does not include those who are registered but who are not eligible to vote at this election (such as those who have not turned 18). The 2005 parliamentary figure includes those whose names were 'carried forward' from the previous register.

Health Services

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what role the proposed Community Commissioning Associations (CCAs) will have in the new health structures; how membership of CCAs will be determined; and what consultation has been undertaken on this proposal. [123839]

Paul Goggins: The Review of Public Administration (RPA) provides for local commissioning arrangements to be developed at a level below local commissioning groups.

To give effect to that ministerial commitment my officials have been consulting with relevant stakeholders regarding who best to secure the involvement of clinicians and others in local integrated primary care-based commissioning. Uniquely in Northern Ireland, this will embrace social care as well as health services. The intention is to place responsibility for the commissioning of safe, effective and responsive services with local physicians and other health and social care professionals. Active engagement with service users and carers will also be a key feature of the new arrangements. The aim is to secure improved services which are more sensitive to the needs of individuals.

Final decisions regarding the way forward have, however, yet to be taken.

Hospitals: Parking

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1719W, on hospitals: parking, what percentage of revenue raised from parking charges is available to health trusts to spend on frontline services; and what criteria are used when determining how such resources are spent. [126945]

Paul Goggins: Where a health and social services trust charges for car parking at a hospital under an income generation scheme, all of the revenue raised is available for use as decided by the trust to enhance and improve patient care. Such resources are therefore spent alongside that raised through the normal commissioning process and the trust will decide to which medical specialty they should be allocated.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1719, on hospitals: parking charges, for what reason the private finance initiative operator at the Royal Group of Hospitals is unable to report income from car parking charges. [126964]

Paul Goggins: The private finance operator of the car park at the Royal Group of hospitals, car park services, bears all the costs of operating the car park and accrues all profits in return. The amount of revenue raised is therefore not included in the financial records of the Royal Group of hospitals HSS trust. The trust has written to the operator requesting information on revenue raised. I will write to the hon. Lady as soon as the information has been received and place a copy in the Library.

Junior Doctors: Working Hours

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to limit the working hours of junior doctors in the Province; and what restrictions there are on the maximum periods of time for which junior doctors can work without a break. [119147]

Paul Goggins: In 1991 my Department introduced a package of measures known as the New Deal designed to reduce junior doctor's hours. In addition, the European Working Time Directive, introduced in 2004, set further limits on hours of work.

My Department has established an advisory group to assist Health and Social Services employers in improving their compliance with the hours of work and rest requirements for junior doctors. The European Working Time Directive sets out a number of different rules on rest requirements for junior doctors including for example a maximum period of six hours work after which a minimum rest period of 20 minutes should be provided.

Knockbracken Health Care Park: Mental Health Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are to reduce the number of acute mental health in-patient beds at Knockbracken Health Care Park. [119303]

Paul Goggins: The Eastern Health and Social Services Board is finalising plans to restructure acute mental health beds in the Eastern Board area, which includes Knockbracken Healthcare Park. These plans will be subject to full public consultation.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation with (a) patients, (b) carers and (c) health professionals has been conducted into proposals to reduce the number of acute mental health in-patient beds at Knockbracken Health Care Park. [119308]

Paul Goggins: The Eastern Health and Social Services Board conducted an audit of acute psychiatric in-patient care in 2003-04. Users and carers were involved throughout. In addition, the board sponsored users and carers travelling to England to examine alternative services to in-patient care.

Macular Degeneration

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provision is available in the Province for treatment of wet age-related macular degeneration; and whether pegaptanib sodium injections may be used within the NHS in Northern Ireland for the treatment of wet age-related macular degeneration. [119148]

Paul Goggins: Specialised treatments are available for the treatment of wet age-related macular degeneration, including photodynamic therapy, which is provided by ophthalmologists at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

It is for health and social services boards, as commissioners of services, to prioritise how funding is used, taking into account local circumstances, the strategic objectives established for the HPSS and demands and pressures generally for access to a wide range of new effective drug therapies. None of the boards currently funds the use of pegaptanib sodium injections.

In determining the priorities for funding, we would expect boards to take account of the available evidence of the clinical and cost-effectiveness of any treatment. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) is currently assessing the clinical and cost-effectiveness of pegaptanib, and the Institute's final guidance is expected in October 2007.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to ensure that the Department for Health, Social Services and Public Safety provides funding to treat wet age-related macular degeneration sufferers with a licensed anti-vascular endothelial growth factor, when such treatment is recommended by an ophthalmologist, from now until the publication of National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines later in 2007. [126318]

Paul Goggins: The Department has allocated an additional £24 million to health and social services boards in 2006-07 and 2007-08 for specialist hospital drugs. It is for the health and social services boards, as commissioners of services, to prioritise how funding is used, taking into account local circumstances, the strategic objectives established for the HPSS and demands and pressures generally for access to a wide range of new effective drug therapies.

In determining their priorities for funding, we would expect boards to take account of the available evidence of the clinical and cost-effectiveness of any treatment. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence is currently assessing the clinical and cost effectiveness of pegaptanib and ranibizumab, and the Institute's final guidance is expected in September 2007.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans are in place to treat those with wet age-related macular degeneration in Northern Ireland with new treatments which have recently become available. [126319]

Paul Goggins: It is for the health and social services boards to plan and commission services for the people in their areas. Specialised treatments are available for the treatment of wet age-related macular degeneration, including photodynamic therapy, which is provided by ophthalmologists at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

Two treatments for wet AMD, pegaptanib and ranibizumab, are currently being appraised by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) and the Institute is expected to publish its guidance in September 2007. When the appraisal guidance is published, the Department will consider the applicability of the NICE guidance to the health and personal social services.

Mental Health Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are to restructure acute mental health beds within the Eastern Health and Social Services Board area. [119310]

Paul Goggins: The Bamford Review of Mental Health and Learning Disability recommended that acute in-patient services should be provided as part of an integrated model of crisis services with locally accessible units, utilising where possible the facilities of general hospitals. The Eastern Health and Social Services Board is in the process of finalising plans to restructure acute mental health beds in the Eastern Board area. These plans will be subject to full public consultation.

NHS: Negligence

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many clinical negligence cases are pending in each health trust in the Province; how many negligence cases have been made against each health trust in the Province in each of the last 10 years; how many were upheld; and what the total estimated cost incurred as a result of clinical negligence in the Province was in each of the last 10 years, broken down by health trust. [119149]

Paul Goggins: Information for the last five years (from 2001-02 to 2005-06) has already been placed in the Library. Information is not available prior to 2001-02 and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

The information regarding the total estimated cost incurred as a result of clinical negligence in the Province in each of the last 10 years broken down by health trust, is not currently held centrally in that format and will take some time to collate. I will write to the hon. Member when the information is available and place a copy in the Library.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his estimate is of the funding required to cover clinical negligence costs in the Province in 2007-08. [119150]

Paul Goggins: £11 million.

Police Service of Northern Ireland: Catholicism

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the 30 per cent. target for Roman Catholic representation in the Police Service of Northern Ireland envisaged under the Patten recommendations to be achieved. [117955]

Paul Goggins: Annex B of the St. Andrews Agreement makes it clear that the 50:50 provisions will lapse when the target for Catholic officers has been achieved. The Government's target is to increase Catholic representation in the PSNI regulars to 30 per cent. by 2010-11.

Police Service of Northern Ireland: Manpower

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police officers are serving in the Police Service of Northern Ireland, broken down by ethnic origin. [119312]

Paul Goggins: I am advised that as at 1 February 2007 there are 7,557 regular officers in the Police Service of Northern Ireland. Their ethnic background can be broken down as follows:

	Number
White	7,326
Pakistani	1
Black Caribbean	1
Black Other	1
Chinese	5
Indian	1
Mixed Ethnic	5
Other	9
Not stated	208

The PSNI have a number of positive outreach campaigns aimed at recruiting people from ethnic minorities, including the translation of advertisement and literature into four different languages.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) police officers and (b) civilian staff working for the Police Service of Northern Ireland are wholly employed on work connected with inquiries established by (i) the Government and (ii) the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland. [125661]

Paul Goggins: Crime Support Department has a number of staff wholly employed undertaking work related to public inquiries set up by Government.

The number of PSNI officers and civilian staff in these areas are as follows:

	Number
Police officers	4
Civilian staff	60.5

The Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland does not establish inquiries. However, PSNI's Historic Enquiries Team is conducting investigations into issues raised by the Office of the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland in their recent Operation Ballast report. No HET staff are wholly employed on work relating to investigations carried out by the police ombudsman.

Respite Care

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to increase respite care provision in Northern Ireland. [126958]

Paul Goggins: In 2007-08 the Government will invest an additional £11.5 million in community care services designed to help vulnerable people to live independent lives. Respite care is an important and integral component of these services and I expect to see substantial improvements in terms of access and quality.

Thalidomide

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to assist thalidomide victims in the Province. [119155]

Paul Goggins: There is no specific Programme of Care for thalidomide victims. Anyone leaving acute care as a result of thalidomide is treated under the Physical Disability Programme of Care in their respective boards and trusts.

Tomography

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients in each health trust area received (a) an ultrasound scan, (b) an X-ray and (c) a CT scan in each of the last five years; and how many patients are waiting to have (i) an ultrasound scan, (ii) an X-ray and (iii) a CT scan performed in each health trust in the Province. [119151]

Paul Goggins: The number of patients in each health trust area who received (a) an ultrasound scan, (b) an X-ray scan and (c) a CT scan in each of the last five years are detailed in the following tables.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan: Equipment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 26 February 2007, question 111865, what differences there are between the Tempest and Mastiff vehicles, with regard to (a) normal operations in theatre and (b) mine protection; and if he will make a statement. [125002]

Mr. Ingram: Mastiff has been procured to meet the requirement for a medium protected patrol vehicle. It will be used to transport conventional forces who will conduct patrolling tasks and other duties as military commanders see fit. It has been optimised for this role through a series of modifications, which include additional protection measures and self defence equipment.

The Tempest Mine Protected Vehicle has been configured for use by Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) teams for specialist tasks such as EOD reconnaissance, rescue and recovery and route proving; they have some UK specific EOD modifications.

I am withholding details about specific levels of protection as the information would, or would be likely to, prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of our armed forces.

Afghanistan: Peace Keeping Operations

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will increase the number of (a) fixed wing and (b) rotary heavy lift aircraft deployed to Afghanistan. [124134]

Des Browne: We currently assess that there are sufficient air assets in Afghanistan for Commanders to do the jobs they need to do.

I announced a substantial force package uplift on 26 February which included, among other things, the deployment of four Sea King helicopters and an additional C-130 Hercules which will significantly improve our lift capabilities in Afghanistan.

Armed Forces: Medical Records

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what systems are in place to catalogue and account for medical records of British service personnel; [121519]

(2) how many British service personnel's medical records are missing. [121520]

Derek Twigg: A complete medical record is maintained for every member of the armed forces. This facilitates where necessary any ongoing medical treatment and supervision wherever the individual is serving, and provides an audit trail of responsibility for those engaged in the care and treatment of patients.

The custody and security of medical and dental documents of all personnel is the responsibility of the senior Medical Officer (MO) or (for the Navy) the Medical Branch Rating (MBR) of the establishment or ship in which the individual is serving. To prevent breaches of medical confidentiality, accidental or otherwise, all medical records are kept secure at all times. They are not kept in the possession of any person other than the MO or medical staff in the course of their duties. When not in use all such documents, notes, correspondence and external media used to store medical data are kept in a locked container.

Quarterly musters of all medical records held are carried out in all primary care units against unit nominal lists, and more frequently when required (e.g. when a unit is formed or deployed). During musters, medical records are scrutinized by physically inspecting the main service medical record known as "F Med 4" form which are a series of documents which record an individual's medical history. These are cross-checked against other records to ensure that personnel remain in-date; records are accurate; and no treatments or appointments are outstanding. Scrutiny of medical records is carried out on receipt of a new "F Med 4" and on notice of drafting or deployment.

When an individual is receiving secondary-care treatment in an NHS hospital, any medical notes are the responsibility of the NHS Trust where the treatment is taking place. When an individual is discharged from hospital, the hospital discharge report is enclosed in the "F Med 4", along with other clinical reports such as Laboratory, Physiotherapy and X-ray. The same procedures apply for documentation from MOD Regional Rehabilitation Units, Departments of Community Mental Health and other directly managed units such as the Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre at Headley Court.

There is currently no centrally available source of information regarding the number of missing medical records, and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information could be obtained only by requesting every military medical centre in the UK and overseas to provide details of records not held at their last quarterly medical records muster.

Armed Forces: Orthopaedics

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel have suffered amputations as a result of wounds received on active service in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan. [119395]

Derek Twigg: The Complex Rehabilitation and Amputee Unit (CRAU) at the Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre (DMRC), at Headley Court in Surrey, has since 1 June 2006 (the date on which it became fully operational) treated a total of 42 service amputees. Of these, 14 were casualties from Op. Telic (Iraq) and six from Op. Herrick (Afghanistan).

Prior to CRAU becoming operational, comprehensive information on the number of military personnel who have suffered amputations as a result of wounds received on active service was not held centrally. To provide this information would require the examination of the individual medical records of each patient who has been classified as very seriously injured (VSI) or seriously injured (SI) in Iraq and Afghanistan. These records can only be viewed for non-clinical reasons with the express consent of each individual concerned, to protect patient confidentiality.

Army: Afghanistan

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officers serving with the British Army in the Helmand Province of Afghanistan have passed an oral examination in the Pashto language. [124667]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 5 March 2007]: All regular and reserve service personnel deploying on operations receive some level of language training, ranging from a few hours to a ten week course. Selected individuals receive longer periods of training.

There are currently 25 members of the British Army who have passed a speaking exam in Pashto. Of these, 16 are Army officers, one of whom is currently deployed in the Helmand Province of Afghanistan.

Astute Class Submarines

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what meetings he has had with representatives of BAE Systems on the finalisation of a price for Astute boats two and three. [125806]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 March 2007]: There have been no meetings regarding the finalisation of prices for Astute boats 2 and 3 between my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence and representatives of BAE Systems.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the workforce at the Atomic Weapons Establishment is expected to retire in the next five years. [125805]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 March 2007]: The Ministry of Defence does not hold such details about the workforce at the Atomic Weapons Establishment which is managed under Government Owned/Contractor Operated arrangements. However, the AWE contractor has advised that approximately 12 per cent. of the current workforce will reach retirement age before March 2012.

Atomic Weapons Establishment: Finance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much each of the armed services is contributing to the planned additional spending at the Atomic Weapons Establishment in each of the next five years. [124587]

Des Browne: As the White Paper, "The Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent", published in December 2006, made clear, the investment required to maintain our deterrent will not come at the expense of the conventional capabilities our armed forces need. The additional investment at the Atomic Weapons Establishment averaging £350 million per annum over the years 2005-06 to 2007-08 was included in the Defence Budget through the 2004 Spending Review process. The Defence Budget for future years will be set in the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Bombs

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements he has made to destroy the stockpiles of cluster munition shells 155mm HE M483 in the second half of 2007, as stated in March 2006. [125874]

Mr. Ingram: The disposal of the 155mm HE M483 began in late 2004 and is continuing. A contract was let under the NATO Maintenance Supply Agency in conjunction with the Dutch Ministry of Defence and awarded to an Italian company, Esplodenti Sabino. Under current plans, the final disposal will be completed in autumn 2007.

Bombs: Operation Allied Force

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the RBL755 cluster bombs dropped during Operation Allied Force were dropped in (a) Kosovo, (b) Serbia, (c) Montenegro and (d) Albania. [126281]

Mr. Ingram: Of the 531 RBL755 cluster munitions dropped during Operation Allied Force, 32 were dropped on Serbia and the remainder on Kosovo. No RBL755 were dropped on Montenegro or Albania.

Defence: Procurement

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision has been made to replace assets lost as a result of (a) damage and destruction during operations and (b) reduced service life due to increased use. [121877]

Mr. Ingram: We do not make financial provision in anticipation of damage to or destruction of equipment during operations. Where possible, damaged equipment is restored, drawing on funding from the Treasury Reserve as appropriate. Equipment which has been destroyed may also be replaced through a call on the Reserve, though in some cases we may choose to restore the capability rather than seek a like-for-like replacement.

We continue to monitor whether the current high operational tempo is likely to result in a reduced service life for some equipment, and will take appropriate resource allocation decisions if this proves to be the case.

Departments: PFI

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for which future projects his Department is considering a private finance initiative deal; what the estimated lifetime value of each potential contract is; and what period each will cover. [125188]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is considering using the private finance initiative for the following projects which are at preferred bidder status:

Project name	Estimated contract length (years)
Future Strategic Tanker Aircraft (FSTA)	27
Future Provision of Marine Services (FPMS)	15
Corsham Development Project (CDP)	25
Defence Training Rationalisation (DTR)	30

I am withholding details of the estimated lifetime value of each potential contract. The information would, or would be likely to, prejudice the commercial interests of the Department as these projects are still subject to continuing negotiations with their preferred bidder.

The Department is also considering the use of the private finance initiative for a joint project with the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, the Search and Rescue Helicopter project. The estimated capital value of this project is £400 million with an estimated contract length of 25 years.

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many work permits were applied for by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [126797]

Derek Twigg: The number of work permits applied for by the Department and its agencies in each of the last five years is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

EH101 Helicopters

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the original order was for Merlin Mark 1 helicopters; and how many were subsequently brought into service. [124596]

Mr. Ingram: 44 Merlin Mk1 helicopters were ordered and all were subsequently brought into service.

HMS Grimsby

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what he expects the total cost of repairs to HMS Grimsby to be; what her current status is; when he expects her to become operational; and if he will make a statement. [125394]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 7 March 2007]: It is not possible to identify separately the repair costs for HMS Grimsby as these have been combined with upkeep costs as part of her Ships Support Period Contract. The combined value, however, of both the repair and upkeep work for the vessel is some £3.7 million. The work is progressing well and HMS Grimsby is on schedule to return to operational service in February 2008.

Identification Friend Foe Systems

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which (a) RAF and (b) Army Air Corps aircraft and helicopters have been fitted with the Successor Identification Friend or Foe System; and what plans he has to fit systems to those which have not. [122224]

Mr. Ingram: The following RAF and Army Air Corps aircraft and helicopters have been, or are being fitted, with the Successor Identification Friend or Foe (SIFF) system transponder:

TriStarK/KCMk1
TriStar C Mk 2/2a
VC10CMk1K
VC10KMk3
VC10KMk4
BAe 125, BAe 146
Nimrod R Mk 1
Islander AL Mk 1
Islander CC Mk 2
Islander CC Mk 2a
Hercules C130K
Sentry E-3D
Dominie T Mk1
Hawk, Tornado GR4
Harrier GR9, Harrier T12
Tornado F3 (also fitted with interrogator)
Chinook Mk 2/2a
Gazelle
Puma
Lynx Mk 7
Lynx Mk 9.

Military Aid: Colombia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department had with the Colombian Defence Minister during his recent visit on (a) UK and (b) EU support for Plan Colombia, part II; and if he will make a statement. [124583]

Des Browne: Both I and the Minister of State for the Armed Forces in separate meetings discussed the current security situation in Colombia, progress on human rights within the Colombian armed forces, and UK-Colombia security co-operation with Minister Santos during his recent visit. The EU support for Plan Colombia, part II, was not raised.

Naval Bases: Ambulance Services

John McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what mechanisms ambulance cover is provided at (a) HM Naval Base Clyde and (b) HM Naval Base Raleigh. [126084]

Mr. Ingram: Ambulance cover at both HMNB Clyde and HMS Raleigh is provided by the relevant local ambulance service (the Scottish Ambulance Service and the South Western Ambulance Service respectively). At both bases this cover is augmented by local on-site ambulances.

John McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to change ambulance cover at HM Naval Base Raleigh. [126295]

Mr. Ingram: There are no plans to change ambulance cover at HMS Raleigh.

Nuclear Submarines

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the additional costs are of (a) maintaining and protecting continuous at sea deterrence and (b) keeping a submarine-based nuclear force without continuous at sea deterrence. [123986]

Des Browne: As paragraphs 5-7 and 5-8 of the White Paper: 'The Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent' (Cm 6994) make clear, our policy is to maintain continuous at sea deterrent patrolling to ensure our deterrent remains fully credible. There would, theoretically, be a number of alternative postures to continuous patrolling but we do not regard them as providing credible deterrence. However, for a given size of fleet, the cost difference between maintaining continuous deterrent patrolling and not doing so would potentially be relatively minor since the costs directly associated with operating the submarine on patrol are a very small proportion of the overall costs of maintaining, supporting and operating the deterrent. Total expenditure on the capital and running costs of the Trident nuclear deterrent, including the costs of the Atomic Weapons Establishment, in 2006-07 is expected to be around £1,500 million.

Nuclear Weapons

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will delay a decision to replace Trident to allow time for a more thorough strategic analysis of the issues and for a wider public debate. [120658]

Des Browne: The White Paper concerns decisions on the replacement of the submarine delivery platform not the Trident missiles or warheads.

The White Paper set out fully why we believe it is necessary for the UK to retain a minimum independent nuclear deterrent, and why decisions are needed now if we are to maintain deterrent capability at the end of the lives of the Vanguard class submarines. I also covered these issues in detail in my evidence to the Defence Committee on 6 February.

In setting out the Government's position on 4 December 2006, Official Report, columns 21-24, the Prime Minister also set out a timetable for a process of public and parliamentary debate. As part of this process, my ministerial colleagues and I have been discussing the future deterrent in a wide range of forums. For example, there has been a full debate in the House of Lords, and I have given a speech at King's College, London; provided the Defence Committee with wide-ranging evidence; taken part in a televised debate with CND; and discussed the future deterrent with a panel of experts at RUSI. On 14 March, at the conclusion of this process, there will be a full debate and vote in the House of Commons. This has given plenty of opportunity for all to consider and debate the issues.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the replacement of Trident on the nuclear weapons proliferation regime. [120659]

Des Browne: The Government are strongly committed to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT), which is the cornerstone of the nuclear non-proliferation regime. The White Paper on the Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent published on 4 December 2006 (Cm 6994) makes clear that renewing our minimum nuclear deterrent capability is fully consistent with all our international obligations, including those under the NPT.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average annual in-service cost of the UK's nuclear deterrent, including the Atomic Weapons Establishment, was in each year from 1998 to 2005, calculated using the method applied to calculate the in-service costs quoted in paragraph 5 to14 of the White Paper on the Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent. [123988]

Des Browne: As set out in paragraph 5 to 14 of the White Paper on the 'Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent' (Cm 6994), we estimate that the in-service costs of the UK's nuclear deterrent will be around 5 to 6 per cent. of the defence budget once the proposed fleet of replacement SSBNs comes into service. This calcution is based on initial whole life estimates of in-service and disposal costs for the deterrent capability and the estimated costs of the Atomic Weapons Establishment, averaged over the currently expected life of the new submarines and compared to the current defence budget. Taking similar costs for the current system, from 1998 to 2005, and comparing them to the actual defence budgets for those years, the average annual in-service cost was around 4 per cent. of the defence budget. The cost of the deterrent in 2006-07, including the cost of the Atomic Weapons Establishment, is expected to be around £1,500 million, or just over five per cent of the current defence budget.

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria were adopted in deciding the number of (a) warheads, (b) missiles and (c) submarine launch platforms required to provide for a minimum nuclear deterrent. [126308]

Des Browne: I refer the hon. Member to my written ministerial statement of today publishing the Ministry of Defence's initial response to the Defence Select Committee's report on the White Paper. "The Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent" (Cm 6994, published December 2006).

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors were taken into account in identifying the United Kingdom's vital national interests in the White Paper on the future of the United Kingdom's nuclear deterrent Cm 6994. [127305]

Des Browne: As stated in paragraph 3-4 of the White Paper "The Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent" (Cm 6994, published December 2006),

"Our focus is on preventing nuclear attack. The UK's nuclear weapons are not designed for use during military conflict but instead to deter and prevent nuclear blackmail and acts of aggression against our vital interests that cannot be countered by other means."

It is a key part of our deterrence posture that we retain ambiguity about precisely when, how and at what scale we could contemplate use of our nuclear deterrent. We would only consider using nuclear weapons in self-defence—including the defence of our NATO allies—and even then only in extreme circumstances. That has been and will remain our policy.

Submarines: Repairs and Maintenance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what policies are in place to ensure the maintenance of the manufacturing and skills base of the UK's submarine industry. [125804]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 March 2007]: As stated in the Defence Industrial Strategy, it is government policy to retain the UK submarine manufacturing and skills base for the foreseeable future as it will be essential to the maintenance of the UK's independent nuclear deterrent. Key to that is the establishment of a design and build programme which balances sustainability requirements with military need and affordability. MOD is working closely with industry to agree such a programme, together with other issues such as collaboration and rationalisation to ensure a viable enterprise well into the future. The Government response to the House of Commons Defence Committee's report "The Future of the UK's Strategic Nuclear Deterrent: the Manufacturing and Skills Base" (HC 59 dated 19 December 2006) provides further information on this issue.

Trident: Legal Opinion

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has requested the legal services of his Department to provide him with an assessment of whether any decision to replace (a) the Trident launch platform, (b) Trident missiles or (c) Trident nuclear warheads with new components would be compatible with the United Kingdom's legal obligations under Articles 1 and 6 of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. [126301]

Des Browne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by hon. Friend, the Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells), the Minister of State in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Alan Simpson) on 6 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1843-4W. The Government set out its position on the international law position in paragraphs 2-9 and 2-10 of the White Paper "The Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent" (Cm 6994, published December 2006).

Urgent Operational Requirements

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) pursuant to the answer of 2 February 2007, Official Report, column 963W, on urgent operational requirements, what records are kept of formal requests made by lower echelon commanders which have been submitted to theatre commanders for consideration as urgent statements of user requirement requests; [124995]

(2), what records are kept of urgent statements of user requirements generated by commanders-in-theatre approved by the chain of command; [124998]

(3) at what stage an urgent operational order is considered formally to have formally come into being; and by whose decision. [124999]

Mr. Ingram: Requests by lower echelon commanders are staffed through the in-theatre chain of command, with both the unit and the brigade in theatre keeping relevant records.

In the Land environment, if the requirement is for a new item of equipment or for more equipment, where insufficient stocks are held on the inventory for the current operations, the request is forwarded to the Divisional Equipment Capability (EC) Cell for further staffing. The Divisional EC Cell constructs an Urgent Statement of User Requirement (USUR) in consultation with the originator to ensure that the exact requirement is captured and submits it to the Permanent Joint Headquarters (PJHQ). Records of the USURs are held in the EC Cells in the appropriate theatre.

Royal Navy and Royal Air Force requirements are staffed up the appropriate chain of command, with USURs then submitted to PJHQ in a similar way.

If PJHQ endorses the requirement, the USUR is passed to MOD Centre for action. Records of endorsed USURs are held in PJHQ and MOD Centre.

Once endorsed by PJHQ, the USUR is considered to have become an Urgent Operational Requirement (UOR), allocated a unique number and tracked on a central UOR database.

Warships: Deployment

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy warships of frigate destroyer size and above are deployed on operations; and what the maximum numbers deployed were in each year since 1997. [125396]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 7 March 2007]: The number of warships on operations varies considerably within and between years. The number of warships of frigate/destroyer size and above currently deployed on operations is eight. Data on all past ship deployments are not held centrally.

Warships: Decommissioning

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels were paid off in the last six months; and which Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels he expects to be paid off in the next six months. [125395]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 7 March 2007]: No RFA vessels were paid off in the six months to 1 March 2007. Future plans for the structure of the RFA have yet to be finalised.

Written Questions

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that all written questions on British nuclear weapons tabled for answer on or before 12 March will be answered with a substantive response before 14 March. [126717]

Des Browne [holding answer 9 March 2007]: We will endeavour to answer every question asked on British nuclear weapons prior to the debate on 14 March. Questions tabled on or after 12 March, however, may not appear in the Official Report before the debate.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

British Library

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people used the facilities of the British Library in 2005-06. [126268]

Mr. Lammy: The British Library Funding Agreement includes a set of metrics—a number of which are based on use of services—against which they report. For 2005-06 their outturns against these metrics were as follows:

Metric	2005-06 outturn
Number of visits to reading rooms	462,207
Number of items supplied/consulted remotely and on-site	5,877,321
Number of children attending educational sessions + Number of visitors to Library's 'learning' website	302,367
Number of visitors to the Library's on-site and virtual exhibitions	865,813
Number of searches of Library's on-line catalogue	24,626,166

Olympic Games: Civil Servants

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff in her Department are employed on London 2012-related matters; and how many have private sector experience. [125385]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 5 March 2007]: Within my Department there are at present 49 full-time equivalent staff spending the majority of their time employed on London 2012-related matters.

In addition, there are a further eight full-time equivalent staff in the Olympic Programme Support Unit, which provides cross-programme support for the Olympic Board and is based, for administrative purposes, within my Department.

Of these 57 full-time equivalent staff, 10 contract and seconded staff, and other full-time equivalent staff, have been recruited specifically for their experience of procurement, project management, finance and infrastructure transactions, all gained partly or wholly in the private sector. Other full-time equivalent staff also have experience of working in and with the private sector but specific records on levels of experience are not available.

Football: Tickets

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions her Department has had with the footballing authorities on ticket pricing. [126067]

Mr. Caborn: Neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State nor I has held discussions with the football authorities on ticket pricing.

The Government have no role in the commercial and sporting operation of professional football. The issue of ticket prices is a matter between the individual clubs and the relevant football authorities.

Institute for Public Policy Research

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding the Countryside Agency has provided to the IPPR or IPPR Trading Ltd. in each year since May 1997; and what the purpose was of such funding. [123895]

Barry Gardiner: I have been asked to reply.

When it was still part of The Countryside Agency[1], the Commission for Rural Communities (CRC) agreed some sponsorship funding for the Institute for Public Policy Research (IPPR) North towards its "A New Rural Agenda" project. The Countryside Agency's sponsorship funding was for a total of £25,000 over two years:

2006-07	12,500

The purpose of this funding was:

(a) to encourage some fresh thinking about rural issues and policies;

(b) to provide the CRC with opportunities to engage in the debate this project was expected to generate;

(c) to open up opportunities for read-across with CRC work; and

(d) to learn more about the working methods of think tanks which could be of use to the CRC.

[1] The Countryside Agency is now part of Natural England.

National Lottery: Grants

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much and what proportion of lottery money was provided to (a) sports and (b) other community projects in each of the last five years. [126959]

Mr. Caborn: The sports good cause has received 16.66 per cent. of operator-related national lottery good cause income in each year since 1998. The total amount of lottery money raised for the sports good cause in the last five years is set out in the table.

Total lottery income to the sports good cause

	£ million[1]
2001-02	302
2002-03	258
2003-04	227
2004-05	240
2005-06	244
Total	1,271

[1] Figures rounded to nearest £ million.

The other good causes combined have received 83.33 per cent. of operator-related national lottery good cause income in each year since 1998. The total amount of lottery money raised for the other good causes in the last five years are set out in the table.

Total lottery income to other good causes

2001-02	1,515
2002-03	1,332

Total lottery income to other good causes

	£ million[1]
2003-04	1,163
2004-05	1,231
2005-06	1,248
Total	6,489

[1] Figures rounded to nearest £ million.

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the amount of lottery money that will be provided to (a) the Olympics, (b) sports and (c) other community projects in each of the next five years. [126960]

Mr. Caborn: It was always understood when we bid that national lottery funding for London 2012 would involve some loss of income to the non-Olympic good causes. Non-Olympic distributors may lose an average of 5 per cent. of their income because of sales diversion to Olympic lottery games over the period 2005-06 to 2012-13. In addition, we have already announced that £410 million will be taken from non-Olympic lottery proceeds between 2009 and 2012. No decision has been made about how that amount will be shared between the various non-Olympic good causes nor on the further use of lottery funding to meet any of the £900 million in additional costs that have been announced. It is therefore not possible to provide the estimates requested.

New Opportunities Fund: Sports

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total value of (a) awards and (b) payments made from the New Opportunities Fund for physical education and sport has been in the 2006-07 financial year; and if she will make a statement. [126492]

Mr. Caborn: The figures in the table reflect the total value of awards and payments made from the New Opportunities Fund for the financial year 2006-07. The financial year has not ended so the figures provided are YTD figures.

	Awards made	£ Payments made
New Opportunities for PE and Sport (NOPES)	19,397,449	187,760,665
Community Sport	9,099,153	23,925,051
School Sports Co-ordinators	10,643,835	10,090,561
Totals	39,140,437	221,776,277

These figures do not include Awards for All and other grants that have funded sport indirectly.

Olympic Delivery Authority

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff are employed in each division of the Olympic Delivery Authority; and how many have over five years' relevant experience in the private sector. [125384]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 5 March 2007]: The Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) has supplied me with the following breakdown of the divisional deployment of the 117 staff they currently employ, as detailed in the following table:

Division	Number of staff
Chief Executive's Office	2
Chairman's Office	1
Construction	3
Design and Regeneration	16
Development Control	7
Finance	9
Health and Safety	2
Human Resources	6
Infrastructure and Utilities	5
IT	2
Legal	10
Programme Assurance Office	1
Communications	12
Procurement	5
Property	5
Risk and Audit	1
Security	3
Transport	27

In order to build a work force capable of demonstrating the world-class business performance the ODA needs to help deliver the London 2012 Games, the ODA continually seeks to fill skills gaps utilizing the best of private and public sector expertise available. Detailed information on the level of experience of the 117 individual staff members currently employed could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. However, the ODA's executive team (chief executive and directors) has spent approximately 55 per cent. of their total employment years in the private sector.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the cost of providing Olympic standard shooting ranges at Woolwich. [125296]

Mr. Caborn: The cost of providing Olympic standard shooting ranges at the Royal Artillery Barracks (RAB), Woolwich, is contained within the $32 million cost of works identified in the Candidate File, at 2004 prices. Work is now under way to outline the full scope of the works needed at the RAB site, including detailed feasibility work.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will place in the Library minutes of all meetings of the Budget and Revenues Sub-Groups set up to consider the advice provided by PricewaterhouseCoopers on Olympic costs in 2004. [125375]

Tessa Jowell: The remit of the Budget and Revenue Sub-Group (February 2004 to July 2004) was to look at the costs, revenues and strategic issues affecting the proposed Olympic budget prior to the bid. The notes of the meetings of the sub-group contain information which is directly relevant to current commercial negotiations which could be prejudiced by its release.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the opening Olympic and Paralympic ceremony is expected to cost. [125816]

Tessa Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Wantage (Mr. Vaizey) on 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1405W.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the London Development Agency has spent on (a) acquiring and (b) mediating land on the Olympic Park; and what estimate she has made of the likely value of that land after the Games are over. [126568]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The London Development Agency (LDA) expects to spend around £700 million on land acquisition and £220 million on land remediation in the Olympic Park. The LDA are currently working to determine the land value post games.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what grants and funding facilities Lancashire will be able to apply for in connection with the 2012 Olympics. [126639]

Mr. Caborn: Both UK Sport and Sports England award Lottery grants and distribute funding provided by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, in line with their own policies and priorities for the development of sport.

£40 million is available for the Community Club Development Programme in 2006-08 and a proportion of the £35 million allocated to the National Sports Foundation will also be spent on facilities. In addition, we expect that local authorities will be investing around £1 billion in sports services (facilities and development) over the next three years.

There are no grants or funding available for facilities specifically in connection with the 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games, including for the purpose of facilities being selected as a pre-Games training camp. It is assumed that projects which have a clear long term rationale will continue to be considered on the basis of existing strategic priorities and funding criteria, but any potential usage for training and preparation camps should be regarded as added value, rather than a core element of the case for funding.

The London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) has announced that it will make around £9 million available to overseas Olympic and Paralympic teams to use pre-Games training camps in the UK to prepare for the 2012 Games. This scheme will enable all 203 National Olympic Committees (NOCs) and the 161 National Paralympic Committees (NPCs) to apply for credit of up to £26,000 towards the cost of preparing their athletes at UK designated pre-Games training camps.

Police: Costs

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Criminal Justice and Police Bill—Police Powers to close Disorderly Licensed Premises to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125607]

Mr. Woodward: There is no current Criminal Justice and Police Bill going through Parliament which includes measures to close disorderly licensed premises. However, powers in the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 relating to the closure of licensed premises on the grounds of disorder were replaced and extended by powers in the Licensing Act 2003. We have no current estimate of the actual cost of using these powers. Their deterrent value, along with the use of voluntary closures and other strategies to prevent crime and disorder, mean such powers are used minimally.

Princess of Wales: Monuments

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent by (a) her Department and (b) public bodies for which she is responsible on (i) security, (ii) cleaning, (iii) repair, (iv) refurbishment and (v) other costs in relation to the Princess Diana Memorial Fountain in each of the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement. [126498]

Mr. Lammy: The Royal Parks Agency (TRP) has responsibility for maintaining the Diana Memorial Fountain. In the 12 months up to the end of January 2007 TRP spent a total of £86,579 on security and cleaning and £111,449 on maintenance and other costs.

The cost per visitor in the period was 28 pence.

Regeneration: Finance

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of her Department's spending was devoted to (a) urban and (b) rural regeneration and redevelopment in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05 and (iii) 2005-06. [125888]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sport Action Zones

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many sport action zones were planned in 1999-2000; how many were created in each year since then; how many are still operating; and if she will make a statement. [126496]

Mr. Caborn: A total of 30 sport action zones were originally planned in two phases with the first 12 pilots being approved in 1999 and established in 2000-01. Funding for sport action zones ceased in 2006, but much of the work of the zones is continuing through Sport England's Community Investment Fund (CIF) and the Community Sports Networks.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the original budget was for sport action zones (SAZ) when they were announced in 1999-2000 for each of the 10 planned years of investment; how much was spent on SAZs in each year to date; how much her Department plans to spend on SAZs in each of the next four financial years; and if she will make a statement. [126497]

Mr. Caborn: In 2000 Sport England announced a package of £750 million investment over 10 years in community sport which included funding for 12 designated sport action zones. The figure for the total spent in each year is not available, but core funding for each zone totalled £350,000 over the five years of planned investment. A further £1.998 million magnet funding was also awarded to the scheme. Any future investment in sport action zones has been mainstreamed through Sport England's Community Investment Fund (CIF).

Sports: Obesity

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to tackle obesity through sport. [117904]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 5 February 2007]: My Department is promoting sport for people of all ages and backgrounds, both as something enjoyable and worthwhile in itself and, where appropriate, as something that has a vital role to play in tackling obesity.

As part of my Department's ongoing work to halt the year-on-year rise in obesity for the under-11s by 2010, we have been working closely with our target-holding partners, the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Skills, on how best to tackle this serious public health problem.

The National School Sport Strategy, jointly implemented by DCMS and DfES, is a key component of a multi-faceted, 'whole school' programme of addressing obesity. The 2005/06 school sport survey found that overall 80 per cent. of pupils participate in at least two hours of high quality PE and school sport a week. This exceeded the target of 75 per cent. for 2006 and demonstrates a considerable increase from the estimated 25 per cent. in 2002. This target will rise to 85 per cent. by 2008. By 2010 the ambition is to offer all children at least four hours of sport a week.

Furthermore, we are working with school sports partnerships to increase participation in physical activity by overweight and obese children.

In addition, we have a PSA target to increase by 3 per cent. between 2005 and 2008 the number of adults and young people aged 16 and above from priority groups (in this context defined as those with a physical or mental disability, black or minority ethnic groups, those from socioeconomic groups C2, D and E, and women) who participate in active sports at least 12 times a year and engage in at least 30 minutes of moderate intensity level sport at least three times a week.

Regional Sports Boards in partnership with Community Sports Networks are responsible for delivering the target in each of the Government regions. Sport England is also a key partner in our delivery chain for obesity with successful action dependent on good regional co-ordination and close working with primary care trusts and local authorities to increase participation.

We have now invested over £1 billion in 4,000 new or refurbished sports facilities in order to help deliver this target and we are working to ensure that the 2012 Olympic Games creates a lasting legacy of increased participation in sport and physical activity.

Sports: Training

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the number of (a) sports and (b) sports coaches whose organisational bodies do not qualify for access to the UK's coaching certificate because they do not have a recognised national governing body; and if she will make a statement. [126322]

Mr. Caborn: UK coaching certificate (UKCC) qualifications are currently being implemented in 21 sports.

In each of these sports, the qualifications are developed by national source groups, led by the appropriate recognised British or home country governing body and including representatives from other recognised home country governing bodies.

We are considering the expansion of UKCC beyond the initial identified sports but we do not currently envisage funding the development of UKCC qualifications in the small number of sports without a recognised national governing body.

Access to UKCC qualifications is not dependent on membership of a specified governing body. When a UKCC qualification in a particular sport is endorsed, it does not prevent organisations from continuing to offer their existing coaching qualifications nor are coaches legally required to take the UKCC qualification in order to continue coaching.

Swimming Pools: South East Region

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport in respect of which outdoor lidos in the South East Government Office area renaissance investment has been provided; and if she will make a statement. [12[illegible]04]

Mr. Caborn: The Heritage lottery fund has supported the restoration of a number of lidos across the UK but none of these are sited within the SE GO area.

All requests for lottery funding, including applications to regenerate outdoor lidos, will be considered on merit and in line with the set criteria for funding.

Television: Violence

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to reduce the impact of violence on television on children. [126640]

Mr. Woodward: Parliament has charged the independent broadcasting regulator, Ofcom, with maintaining standards to protect children from harmful material. Ofcom's Broadcasting Code includes specific requirements to protect people under 18. Within this framework, it is the broadcasters' job to make judgments about what individual programmes should contain and when they are broadcast.

Ofcom also have a statutory duty to promote media literacy so people can access and critically assess a wide range of media. It also helps them understand and operate technology in a way which enables them to maximise the benefits, and minimise the potential harms of the electronic media.

Tourism: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many tourists visited Lancashire in each of the last five years. [126152]

Mr. Woodward: The tables show the number of visits to Lancashire and the North West from (i) UK residents (with an overnight stay) and (ii) overseas residents.

Domestic overnight trips[1]

	Lancashire	Million North West
2001[2]	—	13.7

[1] The methodology for the UKTS changed in 2005 meaning that comparisons with previous years should be treated with caution. This change occurred as a result of concerns with the quality of 2004 data, which are thought to be an under-representation of the true position.

In addition, account should be taken of the number of day visits made to, or within, the North West (Lancashire not available). The Leisure Day Visits Survey in 2002-03 recorded a total of over 100 million tourism day visits to destinations in the North West. It is not possible to provide a time series for this information as the surveys are run intermittently.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Royal Lancashire Society

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been granted by the North West Development Agency to the Royal Lancashire Society; and for what purpose. [120909]

Margaret Hodge: Regional development agencies were given the strategic lead for tourism in the regions and responsibility for ensuring that appropriate delivery structures were in place in April 2003. Delivery responsibility was devolved to regional tourist boards which were funded by regional development agencies.

The North West Development Agency (NWDA) has not given any direct funding to the Royal Lancashire Agricultural Society. However, the NWDA did provide £1,255,000 to the Lancashire and Blackpool Tourist Board (LBTB) for the year 2006-07. From this, the tourist board granted £3,000 towards the staging of the 2006 Royal Lancashire show, on the grounds that the show would serve to raise the profile of the LBTB and the Lancashire rural tourism initiative. The NWDA"s strategy for tourism in England's north-west identifies the show as one of a number of events of national and international significance that take place across the region. The show has also been identified for support in the Lancashire and Blackpool visitor economy strategy 2006 - 2016, because of its potential for further development of the visitor economy.

Lancashire and Blackpool Tourist Board has delegated authority to invest in those projects which it believes will raise its profile. The Royal Lancashire Agricultural Society agreed to publicise Lancashire and Blackpool Tourist Board by promoting their logo and mentioning the tourist board in press releases.

In addition, an undergraduate has been placed with the Royal Lancashire Agricultural Society for nine months (until July 2007) to assist with the marketing of the 2007 show. This post is being jointly funded through the Lancashire rural tourism initiative, which is also supported by the NWDA, and Lancashire County Developments Limited.

Bankruptcy: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many local businesses in Lancashire went bankrupt in each of the last five years. [126150]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Regional insolvency statistics are only available on the basis of the locations of official receivers' offices, each of which covers a group of county courts where the cases are heard and the courts having jurisdiction over these. It is not possible to provide precise statistics by administrative geographies such as counties, constituencies or Government Office regions. The following table provides figures for self-employed bankruptcies and company compulsory liquidations dealt with by courts having insolvency jurisdiction and located within Lancashire[1]. These statistics are considered to be closest to those requested, however they should not be treated as entirely reliable estimates for the county of Lancashire.

	Bankruptcy orders for self employed individuals	Company compulsory liquidations

British Telecom: Billing

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to ensure that Ofcom investigates British Telecom's decision to introduce a penalty charge for customers who do not pay by direct debit. [125085]

Margaret Hodge: I have raised the matter with the chief executive officer of the independent regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom). Ofcom is considering whether any of the suite of changes BT has recently made raise any regulatory issues.

For a number of years, BT has applied a price differential between customers who pay their accounts by direct debit and those who pay by other means. This reflects the higher processing and debt management costs associated with payments not made by direct debit. Such differentials are common practice among communications providers and utility service providers.

From 1 May 2007 BT is changing how it presents this differential from a discount for those customers paying by direct debit to a charge for those paying by other means. BT has combined this change with an increase of £6 a year in the charge (from £12 to £18). But the increased charge will not apply to special tariff schemes for vulnerable customers provided under the Universal Service Obligation.

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on BT's decision to impose a charge on customers who do not pay their bills by direct debit; and what subsequent action he has taken. [126556]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 9 March 2007]: I have received representations from a number of hon. Members on behalf of constituents and have raised the matter with the chief executive officer of the independent regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom). Ofcom is considering whether any of the suite of changes BT has recently made raise any regulatory issues.

For a number of years, BT has applied a price differential between customers who pay their accounts by direct debit and those who pay by other means. This reflects the increased processing and debt management costs associated with payments not made by direct debit. BT has combined this change with an increase of £6 a year in the charge (from £12 to £18). But the increased charge will not apply to special tariff schemes for vulnerable customers provided under the Universal Service Obligation.

Construction

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to tackle payment abuse in the construction industry; and if he will make a statement. [126749]

Margaret Hodge: The DTI is developing detailed proposals to amend the adjudication and payment provisions in Part II of the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996. I intend to publish a consultation paper on the proposals to follow up our previous joint consultation with the Welsh Assembly Government on 'Improving payment practices in the construction industry'.

Defence Equipment: Indonesia

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the level of Indonesia's debt to the Export Credits Guarantee Department is for guarantees issued for (a) goods in the defence sector as a whole and (b) Hawk aircraft. [125898]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 7 March 2007]: At the end of February 2007 unrecovered claims under Indonesia's debt rescheduling agreement with the Export Credits Guarantee Department stood at £757 million, of which approximately 75 per cent. is defence-related. Hawk aircraft account for approximately 60 per cent. of the defence-related figure.

Departmental Opinion Polls

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what opinion polls of (a) his Department and (b) the public his Department has commissioned in the last two years; and what the (i) cost and (ii) purpose was of each poll. [117925]

Mr. Darling: The information is as follows:

(a) The Department commissions an annual survey of DTI staff, at an external cost of around £20,000 a year. It also conducts some smaller and one-off surveys as part of its internal communications with a minimal external cost.

(b) The Department does not centrally collect the information sought and to provide it would entail disproportionate cost. Details and costs of DTI surveys, some of which ask respondents to give opinions, are available from the website at www.dtistats.net/surveyactivity.

Departmental Recruitment

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total cost was of advertising positions in his Department in each year since 1997. [117926]

Mr. Darling: When running recruitment campaigns we use the advertising media most likely to attract people with the necessary skills. Across the civil service a range of media are used—from local newspaper, specialist magazines and the internet, to the public sector sections of national newspapers. Individual management units generally meet recruitment costs from their own delegated budgets and there are no centrally held records.

BAE Systems

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many current security passes to enter his Department's premises have been issued to employees of BAE Systems; and if he will list the BAE Systems employees who hold such passes. [126536]

Jim Fitzpatrick: No current photographic security passes have been issued to employees of BAE Systems to enter the Department's premises.

Pendle

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what expenditure is planned to be carried out in Pendle by his Department in the years up to 2010; and if he will make a statement. [120613]

Margaret Hodge: The Department for Trade and Industry (DTI) has no expenditure planned in Pendle in the years up to 2010. However, DTI is the sponsor department for the North West Development Agency (NWDA); and the NWDA plans to spend the following on projects in Pendle in the years up to 2010:

	£ million
2006-07	4.9
2007-08	6.7
2009-10	1.2

In addition, expenditure on regional programmes, such as the Business Link Service, will also benefit Pendle.

In terms of service provision, it is not possible to determine the exact levels of funding for regional programmes, as the take-up of services in Pendle in the years up to 2010 cannot be forecast.

Digital Broadcasting

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with Ofcom on the impact on the Programming Making and Special Events sector of the Digital Dividend Review; which industry representatives have been consulted by Ofcom during the review; and if he will make a statement. [121070]

Margaret Hodge: The matters raised are the responsibility of the Regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom) which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly, I have asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Gentleman. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on the likely impact of the Digital Dividend Review on the newsgathering operations of UK broadcasters. [124824]

Margaret Hodge: Management of the radio spectrum in the UK is the responsibility of the Office of Communications (Ofcom) the independent communications regulator. Matters concerning the Digital Dividend Review should be addressed directly to Ofcom.

Energy

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the Energy White Paper. [122509]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 February 2007]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my written statement of 22 February 2007, Official Report, columns 63-64WS.

Fruit: Prices

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to revise his Department's national pricing code of practice to include soft fruit and vegetables. [126217]

Mr. McCartney: No such steps are necessary. The Code of Practice for Traders on Price Indications approved under the Consumer Protection Act 1987 applies to all types of goods, including soft fruit and vegetables; as well as to services, accommodation and facilities.

IPPR

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding regional development agencies have provided via the Northern Way to (a) the IPPR and (b) IPPR Trading Ltd in each year since its creation; and for what purpose. [125715]

Margaret Hodge: I am informed by the regional development agencies that they have made no payments to IPPR or IPPR Trading Ltd with Northern Way Growth Funding, but they are currently discussing a possible contract with them.

Overseas Trade

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the primary (a) imports and (b) exports are between the United Kingdom and (i) Montserrat, (ii) the Cayman Islands, (iii) the Turks and Caicos Islands, (iv) Gibraltar, (v) Tristan da Cunha, (vi) Madagascar, (vii) Bermuda, (viii) New Zealand, (ix) Australia and (x) St. Helena. [125853]

Mr. McCartney: Information on the UK's primary products traded with the aforementioned countries is given in the following table:

Postal Services: Buses

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the financial expenditure on post bus services was in each of the last five years; how many post buses there were in each of those years; and if he will make a statement on the levels of public usage of the service. [127090]

Jim Fitzpatrick: This is an operational matter for Royal Mail. Adam Crozier the chief executive has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Gentleman.

Radio Frequencies: Licensing

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Wireless Telegraphy (Licence Charges) (Amendment) Regulations 2000 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125611]

Margaret Hodge: The matter raised is the responsibility of the independent regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom), which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly, I have asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Member. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Supermarkets: Codes of Practice

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Undertakings on Supermarket/Supplier Relations (Code of Practice) to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125618]

Mr. McCartney: The information is as follows.

(a)(i) and (ii) No assessment of the one-off cost of implementing the Undertakings on Supermarket/ Supplier Relations (Code of Practice) has been made. However, consultation on the remedies suggested by the Competition Commission in its 2000 monopoly report on the grocery market and subsequent negotiation of the supermarkets code of practice was a significant project for OFT and DTI lasting some 18 months. Considerably more resources were employed on this project than was normal for the creation of monopoly remedies, given the size and importance of the market and the complexity of the issues involved.

(b)(i) No assessment of the recurring cost to business of implementing the undertakings has been made.

(b)(ii) The undertakings are monitored and enforced by the OFT as part of its function of monitoring, enforcing and reviewing all remedies imposed following Competition Commission inquiries to ensure their continuing effectiveness. The OFT does not keep records or estimates of the costs of monitoring and enforcement of each individual remedy for which it is responsible. However, the supermarkets code and the grocery market generally have accounted for a substantial part of the resources employed in the OFT's work on remedies.

Telephone Services

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the use of 087 and 0845 telephone numbers by businesses; and if he will instruct Ofcom to review the effect of using such numbers on customers. [122280]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 22 February 2007]: The matter raised is the responsibility of the independent regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom), which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly, I have asked the chief executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Gentleman. Copies of the chief executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Telephones: Fees and Charges

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers Ofcom has to restrict telephone companies' (a) prices and (b) payment charges. [126572]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The matter raised is the responsibility of the independent regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom), which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly, I have asked the chief executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Gentleman. Copies of the chief executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many telephone operators in the UK have a Universal Service Obligation (USO); and what restrictions the USO places on the operator's charging and pricing policy. [126573]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 9 March 2007]: Two UK telephone operators have a Universal Service Obligation (USO); BT and Kingston Communications. USO providers are required to put in place special tariff schemes for vulnerable consumers. Affordability is a key criterion for the approval of such schemes by the independent regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom).

Trade Promotion

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which non-EU countries he has set as priorities for Ministers in his Department to visit to promote trade over the next 12 months. [124786]

Mr. McCartney: Ministers will visit a range of markets for trade promotion purposes over the next 12 months.

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which countries Ministers in his Department plan to visit on trade promotion visits between March 2007 and December 2007; which Ministers will visit each; and on what dates the visits are planned. [124810]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 2 March 2007]: Ministers will visit a range of markets for trade promotion purposes over the next 12 months.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 18 December 2006, Official Report, column 1503W, when she expects the UK-Afghanistan Enduring Relationship Action Plan to be published. [125349]

Margaret Beckett: The official review of the Joint Declaration of an Enduring Relationship between the UK and Afghanistan was agreed by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and President Karzai during President Karzai's recent visit to the UK (14-15 February). I have placed a copy of the review, in the form of the Enduring Relationship Action Plan, in the Library of the House.

Afghanistan: Criminal Code

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made since the April 2002 Geneva conference in establishing a permanent criminal code for Afghanistan. [127073]

Dr. Howells: An interim criminal code for courts in Afghanistan has been in use since 2004. This interim code was developed with the support of the Italian Government, as Afghanistan's partner nation on criminal justice reform.

A draft of the permanent criminal procedure code has now been drawn up by the Afghan Government and it is anticipated that it will go before Parliament by mid-2008.

Afghanistan: Drugs

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the UK gives the Government of Afghanistan in identifying areas for possible poppy crop eradication as referred to in the answer to the question tabled by my hon. Friend the Member for Boston and Skegness (Mark Simmonds) of 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 52W, on Afghanistan; and what criteria are used to determine the suitability of areas for eradication efforts. [127068]

Dr. Howells: The UK helps the Afghan Government co-ordinate eradication to ensure it is targeted in areas with access to alternative legal livelihoods, as set out in the National Drug Control Strategy. Areas identified for eradication are determined by a set of criteria which take into account a wide range of factors. These include: distance to markets, water availability, agricultural diversity, population density, extension of government, access to non-farm income and credit, and activities of development programmes.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support (a) the Government and (b) British forces in Afghanistan are providing to opium crop eradication activities in Afghanistan in 2007. [127072]

Dr. Howells: The main focus of UK support to the Afghan eradication effort is in identifying poppy fields for destruction. We also provide some financial and logistical support. UK military forces deployed under the International Security Assistance Force contribute to the broader counter-narcotics effort by providing the secure environment in which the rule of law can be applied, reconstruction can take place and legal rural livelihoods can be developed. They are not there to take direct action against the drugs trade and do not eradicate.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the UK has held discussions with the Government of Iran on counter-narcotic issues in Afghanistan. [127075]

Dr. Howells: Our embassy in Tehran liaises with the Iranian authorities on counter-narcotics issues, including those relating to Afghanistan. We also maintain contacts with the Iranians on counter-narcotics issues in London and Kabul.

Ministers and officials from the UK and Iran have also attended many multilateral meetings at which Afghan counter-narcotics issues have been discussed, such as the good neighbourly relations declaration ministerial in June 2006.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Cotswold of 27 February 2007, Official Report, columns 1192-3W, on Afghanistan: opium, what reasons were given by the Afghan Government for their decision not to use ground-based spraying on opium poppy crops in 2007; and if she will make a statement. [127074]

Dr. Howells: The Afghan Government made their decision not to conduct ground-based spraying this year following wide consultation and internal discussion, but chose not to make their reasons public. The Afghan Government have expressed their determination to tackle opium poppy cultivation in Afghanistan through a variety of means, including by carrying out robust manual and mechanical targeted eradication this year, as set out in the national drug control strategy. If this proves ineffective ground-based spraying will be on the list of options for next year.

Bangladesh: Corruption

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the extended detention of 30 politicians and businessmen in Bangladesh on corruption charges. [126694]

Dr. Howells: We understand that the recent detentions of those suspected of involvement in corruption have been made under the 1974 Special Powers Act, which provides for detention to be extended beyond the initial 30 day limit. While we support the right of the Government of Bangladesh to take legitimate measures against corruption and the abuse of public office, we continue to urge the Government, army and law enforcement agencies to act impartially, with respect for public safety, human rights, media freedoms and the rule of law.

Bosnia: UN

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's position is on the future of the Office of the High Representative in Bosnia-Herzegovina. [122952]

Margaret Beckett: The Peace Implementation Council (PIC), on which the UK sits, reviewed its decision to close the Office of the High Representative (OHR) when it met on 26-27 February.

While the security situation in Bosnia-Herzegovina remains, and is likely to remain, stable, the UK has been concerned at a recent increase in nationalist politics, including in some cases anti-Dayton political rhetoric. Against the backdrop of the completion of the Kosovo Final Status process, the UK will argue at the PIC that closure of the OHR should be delayed beyond June 2007 to ensure the international community's capacity to safeguard progress in Bosnia-Herzegovina and assist its further political development.

China: Censorship

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the decision by the Chinese Government to restrict the number of internet outlets. [126709]

Mr. McCartney: We are aware of the Chinese Government's announcement that they intend to restrict the number of new internet cafes and bars opening this year. We are concerned by any measures that could further limit freedom of information in China. We raised our concerns about restrictions on access to information at the recent UK-China Human Rights Dialogue on 5 February.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of people using the internet in China over the last two years; and what her assessment is of the level of restrictions placed on internet users in China. [126710]

Mr. McCartney: We estimate that there are more than 130 million internet users in China (9 per cent. of all Chinese), an increase of £36 million since 2004. We are concerned by China's continued restrictive regime on access to information, including the blocking of websites and tighter controls on blogs and search engines. We raised our concerns most recently at the UK-China Human Rights Dialogue on 5 February.

Democratic Republic of Congo: Asylum

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Congolese authorities on the removal of failed asylum seekers from the UK to the Democratic Republic of Congo; and if she will make a statement. [126120]

Mr. McCartney: Officials from our embassy in Kinshasa and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London have frequent discussions with their Congolese counterparts both in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) and London about the removal of failed asylum seekers from the UK. The most recent discussions surrounded the return of 38 Congolese nationals on a charter flight to the DRC on 26 February. These discussions included an assurance from the Congolese Government that returnees would be well treated upon their return and of their continued cooperation for future returns. We also continue to work with the Congolese authorities on encouraging the voluntary return of failed asylum seekers to the DRC.

BAE Systems

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many current security passes to enter her Department's premises have been issued to employees of BAE Systems; and if she will list the BAE Systems employees who hold such passes. [126535]

Mr. Hoon: We have four BAE Systems staff members details registered on our pass system. However, to date, one individual only has been issued with a Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) pass. This was a contractor pass issued in January 2007 and allows only limited access to and within our buildings.

We do not provide any personal information relating to individuals who have been issued with FCO passes.

Departments: Travel

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much her Department spent on travel in each year since 1997. [125850]

Mr. Hoon: The following amounts were spent on travel in the UK and overseas by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in each of the last nine financial years, rounded to the nearest £100,000.

	Amount (£ million)
1997-98	31.0
1998-99	30.6
1999-2000	36.0
2000-01	36.3
2001-02	43.1
2002-03	40.2
2003-04	40.4
2005-06	47.8

For an explanation on why expenditure has increased, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for North-East Hertfordshire (Mr. Heald) on 25 January 2007, Official Report, columns 1948-49W.

East Timor: Violence

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on recent unrest in Dili; and what action her Department is taking to resolve conflict in East Timor. [126698]

Mr. McCartney: We are concerned by the deterioration of the security situation in East Timor and the resulting casualties.

Our Embassy in Jakarta (which covers East Timor), with the assistance of our Honorary Consul in Dili, provides regular reports on developments. We have deployed a team of four officers to Dili, who are assessing the situation on the ground and will ensure that consular arrangements for British nationals are sufficiently rigorous.

During financial year 2005-06 the Government contributed funding of £295,971 through the joint Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Ministry of Defence and Department for International Development Global Conflict Prevention Pool to projects with the objective of supporting conflict reduction in East Timor. We continue to contribute to projects supporting the development of a democratic society and human rights training through our Embassy in Jakarta's bilateral programme for East Timor.

The UK has played a key role in the UN Security Council to ensure a robust UN Mission is in place in East Timor which focuses on areas of potential instability and conflict. We urge all concerned to bring an end to the violence and resolve the problems within the framework of the constitution and laws.

European Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Government plans to sign the Council of Europe Convention on Action Against Trafficking in Human Beings. [126853]

Dr. Howells: On 22 January my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced the UK's intention to sign the Council of Europe Convention on Action Against Trafficking in Human Beings. The UK is currently examining how to implement the convention and cannot give a specific date for signature. However, having signalled our intention to sign we are now committed to implementing the convention and putting in place a framework which will provide real protection and support to all victims of trafficking.

India: Pakistan

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the inaugural joint panel to combat terrorism between India and Pakistan; and what assessment she has made of (a) India and (b) Pakistan's internal efforts to combat religious extremism. [126695]

Dr. Howells: We welcome the establishment of the Joint Anti-Terrorism Mechanism between India and Pakistan and see this as a positive development towards regional security in South Asia. Both sides have expressed their determination to counter terrorism and extremism. Both countries have agreed that specific information will be exchanged to hold investigations related to terrorist acts and to prevent violence and terrorist acts in these countries.

We also welcome the work that both countries currently undertake to combat religious extremism. We work closely with both the Governments of India and Pakistan to counter the threat from international terrorism and the extremism that fuels terrorism.

International Whaling Commission

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department has taken to encourage EU countries that are not members of the International Whaling Commission and potential accession states to join the International Whaling Commission. [125540]

Margaret Beckett: Since the last meeting of the International Whaling Commission (IWC) in June 2006, Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) posts in Bulgaria, Croatia, Cyprus, Estonia, Greece, Latvia, Lithuania, Macedonia, Montenegro and Serbia have made representations to host Governments, encouraging them to join the IWC and vote in favour of maintaining the world-wide moratorium on commercial whaling.

My right hon. Friend the Minister for Europe raised the matter with the Foreign Minister of Andorra in October 2006.

The FCO has distributed copies of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs publication 'Protecting Whales - A Global Responsibility' to 57 countries, including all potential EU candidates.

Croatia and Cyprus have now joined the IWC. Estonia, Greece, Latvia and Romania have committed themselves to joining as soon as domestic legislative procedures allow.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions the Minister for Europe has had with the Foreign Ministers of (a) Montenegro and (b) Liechtenstein on their countries' possible membership of the International Whaling Commission; and if she will make a statement. [125968]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Europe has had no such discussions.

Our embassy in Berne raised the subject of the International Whaling Commission (IWC) membership with the Government of Liechtenstein in September 2006. The response was that Liechtenstein's limited administrative capacity made IWC membership unfeasible.

Our ambassador in Podgorica raised the subject of IWC membership with the Government of Montenegro on 27 February. The Montenegrin Government are considering the matter.

Iran

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 27 November 2006, Official Report, columns 470-72W, on Iran, what the terms of the flexibility about the modalities for opening negotiations were that Dr. Solana presented on behalf of the E3+3 during the 6th June 2006 and September 2006 discussions with Dr Larijani. [123866]

Margaret Beckett: In his contacts with Dr. Larijani in June and September 2006, Dr. Solana explained that in order for negotiations to begin on the proposals of the E3+3 (France, Germany, UK + China, Russia, US), Iran would need to address the requirements of the International Atomic Energy Agency's Board of Governors and the United Nations Security Council. These include the Security Council's legally binding requirement that Iran should suspend all uranium enrichment related and reprocessing activities. Dr. Solana explained that if Iran did so, we would be prepared to suspend further action against Iran in the Security Council. He indicated that the E3+3 might be prepared to be flexible about the timing and format of any meetings, if Iran was prepared to comply with its obligations. With our support, Dr. Solana is continuing his efforts to encourage Iran back into negotiations and details of his conversations with Dr. Larijani therefore remain confidential.

Iran: EC Action

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her European counterparts on the imposition of additional EU financial measures against Iran; and if she will make a statement. [124845]

Margaret Beckett: EU Foreign Ministers discussed the implementation of Security Council Resolution 1737 at the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 22 January. They agreed that the EU should implement the measures in the Resolution, including the financial measures, robustly and effectively. A common position reflecting their decisions was adopted on 27 February; an accompanying EC regulation is being finalised. As well as freezing the assets of entities listed by the Security Council, the EU will be able to freeze the assets of other individuals and entities who meet the criteria set out by the Security Council, namely individuals and entities engaged in, directly involved with or providing support for Iran's proliferation of sensitive nuclear activities and the development of nuclear weapons delivery systems.

Iran: Hezbollah

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to prevent the flow of funds provided to Hezbollah by Iran. [123983]

Margaret Beckett: We remain deeply concerned that Iran continues to finance groups undermining peace in the middle east, including Lebanese Hezbollah. Lebanese Hezbollah's External Security Organisation (ESO) is proscribed in the UK under the Terrorism Act 2000. ESO is also on the list of terrorist organisations subject to an EU-wide assets freeze. We will have no hesitation in taking robust action against any individual or entity in the UK found to be financing ESO or any other proscribed group.

Iraq

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who she plans to attend the expanded neighbours meeting in Baghdad on 10 March on behalf of the UK; and if she will make a statement. [125340]

Margaret Beckett: We welcome the plans of the Government of Iraq to hold a number of expanded regional neighbours meetings and look forward to playing our part in making them a success. The UK has consistently called for Iraq's neighbours to support the efforts of the Government of Iraq to deliver security, stability and development for the Iraqi people.

We were in close touch with the Government of Iraq and other partners about the appropriate level of attendance on 10 March. This meeting was at senior official rather than ministerial level, and may form part of preparation for a later ministerial event, possibly in April. We were represented by our ambassador in Baghdad and a senior official from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London.

Iraq: Peace Keeping Operations

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the impact of the implementation of the Baghdad security plan on the security situation in Basra. [124848]

Margaret Beckett: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made clear to the House on 21 February, we welcome the Iraqi-led Baghdad security plan, and recognise the critical importance of security in the capital to the future of the country, Official Report, columns 262-63. It is too soon to judge the plan's impact, though some of the early indications of the performance of the Iraqi security forces are encouraging. Thus far, we do not believe the plan has had any direct impact on the security situation in Basra, though naturally we are keeping this under close review.

Kosovo

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the security situation in Kosovo; and what assessment she has made of the events there of 11 February 2007. [122954]

Margaret Beckett: The United Kingdom offers its sincere condolences to the families who lost loved ones following the violent demonstrations in Pristina on 10 February [not 11 February]. We respect and defend the right to peaceful protest. But there is no place in Kosovo, now or in the future, for violence as a means to secure political objectives. Those who resort to or incite violence jeopardise Kosovo's stable future and damage their own cause in the eyes of world opinion.

The security situation in Kosovo remains calm but tense. We call on the parties to engage constructively during UN Special Envoy Martti Ahtisaari's phase of consultation.

Lebanon

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in establishing a Special Tribunal for Lebanon; when the tribunal is expected to begin its work; and if she will make a statement. [124846]

Margaret Beckett: Following approval by the UN Security Council, the UN Secretary-General's Personal Representative passed the draft text of the statute on the establishment of a Special Tribunal for Lebanon to the Lebanese authorities on 10 November 2006 for their agreement.

However, on 11 November 2006, Hezbollah and its allies withdrew from the Lebanese Cabinet. Nevertheless, on Saturday 25 November the Cabinet, minus Hezbollah and its allies, went on to approve the draft statute. The statute is now awaiting parliamentary approval; although, in the context of the current Lebanese political impasse it is unclear if and when this will happen. As such, we cannot estimate when the tribunal will begin its work.

Libyan Arab Republic

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she plans to invite the President of Libya to visit the UK. [126999]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no current plans to invite Colonel Qadhafi to visit the UK. However, the UK welcomes the progress that Libya has made since its historic decision to renounce weapons of mass destruction. We are increasing co-operation, including through the exchange of high-level visits that began with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's visit to Libya in March 2004 and has included a visit to Libya by my right hon. Friend, the Member for Norwich, South (Mr. Clarke), the then Home Secretary in 2006.

Libyan Arab Republic: Exports

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the value of British exports to Libya was in 2006. [127000]

Dr. Howells: Total exports from the UK to Libya in 2006 were £203 million.

Malta: Illegal Immigrants

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the Government are providing to Malta to help tackle illegal immigration from Africa to the island. [126983]

Mr. Hoon: The Government are working closely with the Maltese authorities to help tackle illegal immigration. We are doing so both bilaterally and through the EU. Last year we sent a Home Office expert on interviewing and nationality identification to Malta for one month, to form part of the EU Border Management Agency FRONTEX-led mission. We also deployed an expert official on returns from the Special Operations Unit within the Home Office, to look at ways of improving Malta's returns programme.

At present, we have two joint proposals for funding being considered by the European Commission. The first focuses on a joint charter flight to send failed asylum seekers from the UK and Malta back to their country of origin. The second, a proposal to establish a joint unit of migration intelligence analysts on Lampedusa and Malta, is part of our wider work to disrupt irregular migration flows from East Africa to the EU under the East African Migration Routes Initiative.

Marie Therese Nlandu

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she made to the authorities in the Democratic Republic of Congo on the treatment in detention of Marie Therese Nlandu. [126713]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are closely following the continued detention of Mme Nlandu. Our ambassador in Kinshasa has raised the case of Mme Nlandu on several occasions with Congolese Ministers, the Congolese Interior Minister and President Kabila's advisers. He raised the case with President Kabila himself on 2 February. Embassy officials in Kinshasa have also been present during some of her appearances in court and visited her in prison on 16 February. We will continue to monitor her situation and treatment closely. International partners are doing the same.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she expects to reply to the letter of 15th January from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton on Mr M. G. Atiq. [124056]

Margaret Beckett: I replied to my right hon. Friend on 26 February.

Middle East: Armed Conflict

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Government of Israel on its recent operations in Nablus and the curfew it has imposed on the residents of Nablus. [125234]

Dr. Howells: We are concerned by the impact of Israel's military operations in the occupied Palestinian territories. Israel, like all states, has the right to defend itself against terrorism, which the UK condemns absolutely. However, Israel must ensure that its actions comply with international humanitarian law, and minimise the impact on civilians. Our embassy in Tel Aviv raised our concerns regarding the impact of the military incursion in Nablus with the Israeli Defence Force on 8 March.

Nepal

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations her Department has made to the Government of Nepal on human rights. [126269]

Dr. Howells: During my visit to Nepal in September last year, I stressed the need for the Government of Nepal to address the question of impunity which has done so much to undermine public confidence in the state security system. We also continue to work with the EU, other international partners and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to increase awareness of human rights violations in Nepal and urge the Government of Nepal and Maoists to meet their commitments to uphold human rights standards.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of ethnic minority rights in Nepal. [126270]

Dr. Howells: The question of ethnic minority rights in Nepal has come to the fore recently in the form of disturbances and protests in the Terai region. We have called for all parties in the interim Parliament to acknowledge the rights of ethnic minority groups and have stressed the need for greater inclusion, not only in the political process, but in society as a whole. The comprehensive peace agreement has done much to raise the expectations of a number of disenfranchised groups in Nepal. It is important that the coming interim Government ensure that ethnic minority rights are addressed urgently. Failure to do so risks undermining the peace process as Nepal moves towards elections to a constituent assembly in June.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the level of women's rights in Nepal. [126273]

Dr. Howells: In April 2006, Nepal had its second 'people's movement' against the autocratic rule of the King. Women played a significant part, coming onto the streets in huge numbers to demand a more inclusive democratic system of government. Their protests did much to ensure that gender equality and justice were placed on the national agenda. This new emphasis on equal rights resulted in the passage of legislation which requires 33 per cent. of women's representation at all levels of the state structure and, for the first time, allowed for the right to citizenship to be passed on through the mother not just the father.

But the inclusion of women in society remains largely cosmetic. The current Government, due to be replaced by an interim Government in the coming weeks, have only one female Minister. Although the interim Parliament formed in January has an increased number of women, this is largely due to the Maoists who fielded women for 37 per cent. of their 83 seats. Moreover, although the interim constitution notes the inclusion of traditionally marginalised groups such as women, it remains to be seen whether the constituent assembly elections will include the 33 per cent. of women candidates required by legislation.

Discrimination in Nepal is rooted in culture and religion and while legislation can make it unlawful, it will take a long time to change attitudes and perceptions. A huge cultural shift is required if women in Nepal are to participate in the peace process and play a significant part in the constituent assembly. In addition, structural changes in society are necessary in which poverty and the education of women need to be addressed.

If Nepal is to continue to move towards a peaceful future, it is vital that the rights of women and other minority groups are addressed. We will continue to work with our international partners and women's groups in Nepal to uphold their rights.

Through our embassy in Kathmandu, and the office of the Department for International Development, we have pressed high level politicians to include women as an integral part of the peace process. We will continue to encourage and enable meaningful representation and participation of women in all aspects of the peace process. The UK-drafted Security Council on Nepal (UN Security Resolution 1740) contains a specific reference to the need to pay special attention to the rights of women in the development of a democratic new Nepal.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the political situation in Nepal. [126274]

Dr. Howells: The Nepalese Government and people are to be congratulated on the progress made so far in the peace process. In less than a year, Prime Minister Koirala and the alliance of seven democratic parties has signed a Comprehensive Peace Agreement with Maoists, drafted and agreed an interim constitution, formed an interim Parliament including 83 nominated Maoist MPs and secured a UN Security Council Resolution providing for a UN Mission to monitor weapons and combatants and provide technical assistance to the election process.

However, the process remains fragile and will require commitment from all parties as well as the support of the international community to continue to make progress towards free and fair elections to a constituent assembly in June.

Peace in Nepal though has raised the expectations of ethnic and other minority groups who have long pressed for greater representation in Parliament. A failure to address these demands has led recently to violent disturbances, particularly in the Terai region where members of the Madhesi community are demanding proportional representation, a federal system of Government and a greater voice in the interim Parliament.

Elections will be key to sustaining the momentum and giving voice to the marginalised. But there is a fine balance between the political imperative of rushing them through quickly and the risk of their being flawed so that the results carry no legitimacy.

Another area of concern is the behaviour of the Maoists, who have yet to meet fully their obligations under the Comprehensive Peace Agreement. Intimidation and extortion remain commonplace. It will be vital for Maoists to take seriously their responsibilities as they come into the interim Government, end abuses, support the rule of law and work to deliver services through the state system rather than parallel systems of their own.

The UK has played a leading role in supporting the peace process. The long-standing relationship we enjoy with Nepal has allowed us to provide views and guidance which are welcomed. We will continue to work, with the EU and other international partners to help Nepal progress further towards a sustainable and peaceful future.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of human rights in Nepal. [126275]

Dr. Howells: The Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) signed in November last year includes extensive human rights provisions. All parties are bound by the CPA to co-operate with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR). Despite this unequivocal language, the Maoists, the Nepal army and the Government have failed to co-operate fully with the OHCHR.

With Maoist combatants in cantonment sites and Nepal Army soldiers largely confined to barracks, human rights violations have decreased since the ceasefire. However, there are still regular reports of incidents of Maoist intimidation and extortion and the Government of Nepal have yet to establish rule of law throughout all areas of the country.

We are concerned about the human rights situation in Nepal and in particular reports that a number of human rights defenders, members of civil society and the media regularly face threats and intimidation. We have urged all sides in the peace process to allow human rights organisations to carry out their work free from intimidation and interference.

We have also pressed the Government of Nepal and Maoists to take urgent steps to tackle impunity. The lack of a credible Government response to the question of impunity risks undermining the peace process and decreases public confidence in the state security system. In the run-up to elections to a constituent assembly, it is vital that the Government and Maoists work hard to create an environment that will enable all political parties to campaign and voters to cast their ballots in a free and fair atmosphere.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the proposals for the scheduled elections in Nepal; and what (a) discussions she has had with and (b) information she has received from the UN on the prospects for the elections. [126809]

Dr. Howells: Elections to the constituent assembly are scheduled for June 2007. Credible, free and fair elections will be key to sustaining the momentum of the current peace process as well as giving a voice to marginalised groups in Nepal. But it is vital that conditions are right for holding the elections. There needs to be proper preparation for the elections including voter education and there needs to be an environment that allows all democratic political parties to campaign freely and people to vote without fear. A flawed election will serve no-one's interests.

The Election Commission, supported by the UN election team, has made good progress. The registration of voters is almost complete (the overall increase in the voters list is estimated at around 20 per cent.) and almost all the 25 UN Electoral Advisers are now in Nepal. Through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Global Conflict Prevention Pool, we have committed funds directly to the Election Commission to assist in their preparations.

However, the Election Commissioner has recently declared that he is unable to make progress on preparations for the elections until the necessary legislation has been passed. This requires decisions in the Parliament on the type of voting system necessary and appropriate. At a press conference in New York on 26 February, the UN Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Ian Martin, said that the Election Commission faced considerable challenges if an election is to take place in June (further information on the press conference can be found on the UN website at:

http://www.un.org/apps/news/infocusnewsnepal.asp?sID=36.

I discussed the prospects for elections with Ian Martin when we met on 5 March during his visit to London. I reassured him of the UK's support for the peace process in Nepal and our wish to see free and fair elections which should lead to a fully inclusive and democratic constituent assembly.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the living conditions of Maoist rebels in Nepalese rehabilitation cantonments; and what impact she expects the departure of rebels from camps to have on the 2006 ceasefire between rebels and the Nepalese Government. [126806]

Dr. Howells: Under the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) of November 2006, the Maoists agreed that their People's Liberation Army (PLA) would be confined to seven main cantonment sites, spread across Nepal, while the Nepal army would be confined to barracks. Maoist weapons would be stored in sealed containers, to which they would keep the keys, but the UN would monitor the integrity of the containers and the confinement of combatants to the camps. Maoists moved the PLA and their weapons to the proposed cantonment sites almost immediately and the UN has moved quickly to complete the registration of combatants and storage of weapons.

The CPA required the Government of Nepal to provide the infrastructure of the camps and to ensure that combatants were given adequate shelter and provisions. However, this process has been slow and, in the early days, international donors provided some assistance (the Department for International Development provided practical support on the provision of water and sanitation for the camps and the Indian Government provided tents to house the PLA and containers to store the weapons).

Recently, we received reports that a number of former PLA combatants had temporarily left the Shaktikhor cantonment site in Chitwan complaining that the Government of Nepal were failing to provide sufficient food and water to the camps. However, their weapons remained under UN supervision. The question of Maoists leaving cantonment sites was reported to, and discussed by, the Joint Monitoring Co-ordinating Committee, chaired by the UN Mission in Nepal (UNMIN) on 22 February. UNMIN had previously expressed its concern to the Government of Nepal about the living conditions at the cantonment sites and had called on the Government and Maoists to work together to make immediate arrangements to improve these conditions.

We were concerned at reports that former members of the PLA had left the cantonment site, in a clear breach of the Agreement on Monitoring of Arms and Armies of 8 December 2006. However, it is important to note that weapons storage and monitoring remained in place and that all sides to the agreement worked closely to ensure that combatants returned quickly to the cantonment site following the intervention of the Maoist leadership and a commitment from the Government of Nepal to meet their demands on funding, provisions and camp infrastructure.

We are confident that this incident will not affect the positive progress of the ongoing peace process in Nepal.

North Korea: Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what effect suspension of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea's nuclear activity she expects to have on British interests in (a) the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and (b) the Republic of Korea. [124700]

Mr. McCartney: We welcome the 13 February Agreement and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea's commitment to suspend nuclear activities. This is an essential first step towards the goal of full denuclearisation in North Korea and towards ensuring stability in the Korean Peninsula, which is clearly in UK interests.

Pakistan: Blasphemy

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received of blasphemy trials taking place in Pakistan. [127141]

Dr. Howells: We follow closely the subject of blasphemy trials in Pakistan. Officials receive reports on blasphemy trials from human rights groups and monitor cases reported in the media.

Together with EU partners, we regularly raise our concerns about blasphemy legislation and its frequent abuse with the Government of Pakistan. My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Trade, most recently raised this issue in correspondence with the Government of Pakistan in February.

Pakistan: Land Mines

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Government of Pakistan on the proposal to land-mine parts of the Pakistan-Afghanistan border. [127071]

Dr. Howells: The subject was discussed when my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister met President Musharraf in Pakistan on 19 November 2006. We recognise the efforts being made by Pakistan to curb cross-border infiltration on the Pakistan-Afghanistan border and its commitment to continue this work, but urge Pakistan to find solutions with less destructive long-term humanitarian consequences. We note that President Musharraf announced on 2 February that he has decided for the time being not to mine the border.

Saudi Arabia

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Foreign Office Ministers visited Saudi Arabia in 2006; and whom they met. [126994]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend, the Leader of the House the then Foreign Secretary, visited Saudi Arabia in April 2006.

He had substantive meetings with Prince Saud al-Faisal (Foreign Minister), Crown Prince Sultan and Sheikh Saleh bin Humaid (President of the Majlis al Shura).

Security Guards

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans she has for the regulation of private military and security companies based in the United Kingdom. [127017]

Dr. Howells: In late 2004 my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House the then Foreign requested a review by officials of the options for the regulation of the overseas operations of private military and security companies (PMSCs) registered in or operating from the United Kingdom. This was to follow up on the Green Paper of 2002, 'Private Military Companies: Options for Regulation' and to respond to the increase in the activities of PMSCs in areas of conflict overseas. The review highlighted complex issues which need full consideration before a decision is taken on the way forward. The Government will keep the House fully informed of their proposals in this area.

Somalia: Armed Conflict

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations her Department has made to the United Nations on resolving the on-going conflict in Somalia; and what estimate she has made of the impact this conflict has had on the numbers of people seeking asylum from that country within the United Kingdom. [125844]

Mr. McCartney: The UK, through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London and our missions in New York, Nairobi and Addis Ababa, is in frequent contact with the UN and related bodies about the situation in Somalia. In particular, we are stressing to the UN and other key members of the international community the historic opportunity we have to bring stability to Somalia.

We continue to monitor closely the security situation, particularly in and around Mogadishu. We do not have figures for Somalis seeking asylum in the UK as a direct result of the current situation, but note that a major deterioration in security could cause people to leave their country and seek to claim asylum elsewhere. Therefore, we are working for an effective deployment of African Union troops in conjunction with a successful National Reconciliation Congress that brings greater inclusivity. The first detachment of Ugandan troops has arrived in Mogadishu. Together, these will help bring stability to Somalia, which we would expect over the longer term to lead to a reduction in asylum seekers.

Sudan: Armed Conflict

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations her Department has made to the United Nations on resolving the conflict in Sudan; and what estimate she has made of the impact this conflict has had on numbers of people seeking asylum from that country within the United Kingdom. [125845]

Mr. McCartney: The UK has played a leading role in negotiating all the UN Security Council Resolutions (UNSCR) on Darfur.

Ministers and officials are in constant contact with the UN Secretariat about Darfur. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, visited New York on 21 February to press the UN for more rapid action on deployment of the African Union/UN hybrid force and for urgent action on the political process.

We believe that the next step is for the UN Security Council to impose tougher measures on the Government of Sudan and rebel groups in view of their failure to co-operate with the UN. We will be pressing the council for the extension of the existing arms embargo and for sanctions on more individuals in accordance with UNSCR 1591 (2005).

The numbers of Sudanese asylum applications received in the UK between 2004 and 2006 have dropped. The total number of applications, excluding dependants, at the height of the Darfur conflict in 2004 was 1,305; in 2005 the figure fell to 885; and in 2006 to 675. The 2005 and 2006 figures are provisional.

Syrian Arab Republic

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment her Department has made of Syrian co-operation with the International Independent Investigation Commission established pursuant to Security Council Resolutions 1559 (2005), 1636 (2005) and 1644 (2005). [124847]

Margaret Beckett: The International Independent Investigation Commission produces quarterly reports on the progress of the investigations including on how Syria is co-operating with the Commission. The most recent report, dated 12 December 2006, stated that the co-operation of Syria with the Commission was timely and efficient. Earlier reports had highlighted difficulties with Syrian co-operation.

The UK continues to insist on Syria's "full and unconditional" co-operation as called for in Security Council Resolution 1559.

Timor-Leste

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to her answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 21W, on Timor-Leste, if she will urge the UN Secretary-General to place the final report from the Commission for Reception, Truth and Reconciliation in East Timor on the agenda of a meeting of the Security Council. [125259]

Mr. McCartney: The CAVR Commission for Truth and Reconciliation was appointed by the then UN Transitional Administration in East Timor at the urging of the National Council of Timorese resistence, a representative East Timorese political body. Its report was delivered to East Timorese President Gusmao in October 2005, who subsequently presented its findings to the Timorese Parliament. The report has not yet been discussed by the East Timorese Parliament. However, in addressing the UN Security Council on 23 January 2006 President Gusmao expressed caution about the recommendations contained in the report, noting the need to achieve restorative justice rather than punitive justice and warning of the need to consolidate democracy in East Timor and Indonesia. In the absence of further interventions by the East Timorese Government and Parliament, we do not believe it will serve the interests of the people of East Timor for the United Kingdom to call for the report to be placed on the agenda of the UN Security Council at this stage.

Turkey

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will invite the President of Turkey to make a state visit to the UK. [126970]

Mr. Hoon: The Government have no current plans to invite the President of Turkey to make a state visit to the UK.

The UK values extremely highly our relationship with Turkey. My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary and I all visited Turkey in 2006, and the Turkish Foreign Minister met my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I in London in July. Other ministerial bilaterals take place regularly.

Turkey: EC Enlargement

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking in relation to progress on Turkey's membership of the European Union. [126991]

Mr. Hoon: The Government strongly support Turkey's objective of EU accession and welcomed the agreement at the December 2006 General Affairs and External Relations Council that negotiations should continue. As well as working for sustained progress towards this goal, the Government are also providing practical assistance. Under the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Global Opportunities Fund—Reuniting Europe programme, we funded projects valued at over £800,000 in 2006-07, including on political reform, the justice system and human rights.

Congressional UK Caucus

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funding her Department plans to allocate to support events undertaken together with the Congressional UK caucus in the United States. [126185]

Mr. McCartney: There are no plans to allocate funding on a formal basis. However, our embassy in Washington does, from time to time, host events in conjunction with the caucus on the occasion of ministerial or parliamentary visits.

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/secretariats/economic_and_domestic/policy_review/index.asp and copies have been placed in the Library for the reference of Members. There are no non-ministerial members of the working groups.

Further information about the deliberations of the working groups and the other work strands supporting the policy review, including the citizen's forums, have now been published on the Cabinet Office website:

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/policy_review/index.asp and copies are available in the Library for the reference of Members.

More detailed information relating to the proceedings of working groups, including when and how often they meet and who attends any particular meeting, is generally not disclosed, as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

11 Downing Street

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the answer of 7 February 2007, Official Report, column 1009W, on 10 Downing street: repairs and maintenance, how much was spent on the refurbishment and maintenance of (a) the Downing street offices and (b) the 11 Downing street flat in each year since 1997-98. [124548]

Hilary Armstrong: The Downing street complex is maintained to standards appropriate to its Grade 1/2 listed status in consultation with English Heritage. In addition to providing office accommodation the building also fulfils an important representational role. For details of the total costs of refurbishment, maintenance and structural improvements between 2002-03 and 2004-5, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer the Prime Minister gave the hon. Member for Bridgwater (Mr. Liddell-Grainger) on 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 2393W. The cost of refurbishment, maintenance and structural improvements for 2005-6 was £306,222. This expenditure was to maintain the fixed assets, plant and machinery, the fabric of the building, floors, walls and ceilings and the upkeep and repair of heritage assets, and to ensure a safe working environment for staff and visitors. For details of maintenance, decorating and otherwise improving 10 and 11 Downing street for before 2002-03, I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Prime Minister gave the hon. Member for Southend West (Mr. Amess) on 21 July 2005, Official Report, column 1937W.

For details of routine maintenance on the flat above 11 Downing street, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer the Prime Minister gave the hon. Member on 19 December 2006, Official Report, column 1808W.

For details of expenditure on work to the flat above No. 11 Downing street in previous years, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) on 10 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1836-37W, and 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 54W.

Edward Miliband: The parliamentary reception was hosted by my hon. Friend the Member for High Peak (Tom Levitt) in his role as chair of the All-Party Group on the Community and Voluntary Sector. The reception was funded by the charity from within their existing budgets.

Information: Training

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will place in the Library a copy of the (a) presentation and (b) handouts produced for her Department's seminar on information sharing on 7 February 2007. [124358]

Hilary Armstrong: I will place in the Library copies of the presentations delivered to and circulated at "The Power of Information" seminar held on 7 February 2007 as part of the Policy Review work.

TREASURY

Broadband

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Wifi spectrum is planned to be auctioned; and which parts of spectrum will be available. [123000]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

The matter raised is the responsibility of the independent regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom), which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly, I have asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Gentleman. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Departments: Official Hospitality

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cost to the public purse was of the event held at No. 11 Downing Street on 26 February for film makers. [125757]

John Healey: No cost was incurred.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his Department's total expenditure on preparations for potential UK entry to the euro was in each year since 1997. [126766]

Ed Balls: Since December 1997, the Euro Preparations Unit in the Treasury has worked with stakeholders from across the economy to ensure that euro preparations are at an appropriate level. The costs of the Euro Preparations Unit are met from within the Treasury's departmental expenditure limit.

Job Creation: Environment

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of jobs that could be created in the environmental technology sector in each of the next five years. [125935]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

The UK environmental goods and services industry is strong, well established and diverse, employing approximately 400,000 people in around 17,000 companies, with an estimated annual turnover of £25 billion. A joint DTI/Defra report published in November 2006 estimated that this turnover would increase to more than £34 billion by 2010 and £46 billion by 2015. Although the Government have not produced forecasts for employment in each of the next five years, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has estimated that over 100,000 new jobs could be created in the sector over the next 10 years.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to reply to the letter of 22 January from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Miss M. Griffin. [127279]

Dawn Primarolo: I have replied to my right hon. Friend.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the process was by which the Olympics budget as it appeared in the London 2012 Candidate File was agreed. [125377]

Tessa Jowell: I have been asked to reply.

Co-ordinated by London 2012 Ltd., the London 2012 Candidate File was agreed by Government and all other Olympic stakeholders including the Greater London Authority and the British Olympic Association in October 2004.

Unemployment

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many economically inactive people of working age there were in the UK aged (a) 18 to 24, (b) 25 to 49 and (c) 50 years and over and were neither (i) disabled and (ii) a lone parent in each month since 1992. [125895]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking how many economically inactive people of working age there were in the UK who were aged (a) 18 to 24, (b) 25 to 49 and (c) over 50 years and over and were neither (i) disabled and (ii) a lone parent in each month since 1992. (125895)

The following table gives estimates of the total number of inactive people of working age, together with estimates of inactive people after excluding those who were either lone parents or disabled, by age, in each year for which data are available since 1999. Comparable estimates are not available for 2000, or for earlier periods. These estimates are not seasonally adjusted. Data is only available for the April-June quarter of each of these years.

Estimates are taken from the Labour Force Survey (LFS). As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Children: Abuse

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate he has made of levels of under-reporting of childhood sexual abuse. [126298]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office has not recently conducted or commissioned any research with regard to the under-reporting of childhood sexual abuse.

Community Policing: Lincolnshire

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what programmes on community safety have been funded by his Department in North Lincolnshire in each year since 1996; and what the cost was of each such programme. [122790]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is set out in the following table.

Departments: Visits Abroad

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total expenditure for visits, other activities and commitments outside the UK undertaken by his Department's Ministers and officials was in each of the last three years. [123682]

Mr. Byrne: The Department's expenditure on foreign travel and accommodation in each of the last three years was:

	Travel	Accommodation	£ Total
2003-04	4,447,233	—	4,447,233
2004-05	5,472,578	6,583,194	12,055,772
2005-06	6,881,152	3,775,458	10,656,610

Separate records were not kept of foreign accommodation costs in 2003-04 and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The difference in costs over the period reflects the changing nature of the Home Office's business, in particular the growth of international terrorism, migration and international travel. Collaboration and information exchange with other countries on counter-terrorism activities and border control have become increasingly critical to the effective discharge of the Department's responsibilities for asylum, immigration and national security. This has involved higher levels of overseas travel.

For ministerial foreign travel, which is included in the above, I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer given by the Prime Minister on 19 December 2006, Official Report, column 1808W.

The Department incurs additional expenditure outside the UK, in connection with border control, international crime and anti-terrorism responsibilities. Details of this expenditure could only be identified from within records of total operational spend at disproportionate cost.

Drugs: Money Laundering

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1748W, on drugs: money laundering, what correspondence his Department has received from Michael A. Braun on the Serious Organised Crime Agency and Operation White Dollar; and if he will make a statement. [126751]

Mr. Coaker: None.

Entry Clearances

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Mohammed Reza, Home Office reference R1040509, a constituent of the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, will receive a response to his application for indefinite leave to remain submitted in December 2005. [124765]

Mr. Byrne: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 5 March 2007.

Foreign National Prisoners

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 106W, on foreign national prisoners, on how many of the foreign prisoners released from HMP Peterborough in the 12 months to 31 March 2006 who were eligible for deportation, the immigration and nationality directorate keeps electronic records; and if he will make a statement; [125273]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost of providing information on offences committed by foreign national prisoners discharged from HMP Peterborough in the 12 months to 31 March 2006; and if he will make a statement. [125274]

Mr. Byrne [holding answers 5 March 2007]: The immigration and nationality directorate holds electronic records of all foreign national prisoners who have been notified to IND for consideration of deportation. However, historic data are drawn from a number of manual and electronic sources.

Prisons keep records of foreign nationals released from or transferred across the prison estate. This record does not record the offences committed by individual prisoners. Manually identifying and cross-referencing IND and prison records to provide information on the foreign national prisoners released from HMP Peterborough could be done only at disproportionate cost.

The Home Secretary has identified that there is no unique identifier to link individuals who come into contact with the asylum and immigration and criminal justice systems. We have therefore commenced development of a comprehensive approach to identity management across all Home Office areas.

Heroin

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the possible effects of the prescription of heroin to long-term addicts on the NHS on the levels of crime. [126601]

Mr. Coaker: It is not possible currently to estimate the likely effect on crime of heroin prescription to long-term addicts. The current evidence base indicates that heroin prescribing is only suitable in a small number of cases. In the vast majority of cases, it is not a safer or a more effective option than methadone prescribing.

The National Treatment Outcome Research Study (NTORS), the most important UK research on drug treatment, showed that for every £1 spent on treatment, at least £9.50 is saved, mainly in the costs of reduced crime. Thus there are clear economic benefits to treating drug misusers. However, this study provided no information of the relative impact of different types of treatment.

Research is under way to build our knowledge in this area. The Home Office has commissioned the Drug Treatment Outcomes Research Study (DTORS) which will evaluate the impact of current drug treatment services on drug and alcohol use, offending, and health and social outcomes. Additionally, Government-funded projects to enhance the evidence base for the clinical use of heroin in drug treatment are currently under way.

Identity Card Scheme

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what progress has been made in tendering the contracts for the (a) refurbishment and (b) construction of the regional offices required to administer the national identity card scheme; [113898]

(2) what the locations are of the regional offices required to administer the national identity card scheme. [113899]

Joan Ryan: The Identity and Passport Service currently has no plans to set up further regional offices in addition to the current seven regional passport offices, in London, Newport, Peterborough, Glasgow, Durham, Liverpool and Belfast. An expanded local office network is already being put in place in order to meet and interview first-time applicants for passports and to prepare for recording biometrics. This office network consists of 69 offices throughout the UK, in the following proposed locations:

Aberdeen, Aberystwyth, Andover, Armagh, Barnstaple, Belfast, Berwick-upon-Tweed, Birmingham, Blackburn, Boston, Bournemouth, Bristol, Bury St. Edmunds, Camborne, Carlisle, Chelmsford, Cheltenham, Coleraine, Crawley, Derby, Dover, Dumfries, Dundee, Edinburgh, Exeter, Galashiels, Glasgow, Hastings, Hull, Inverness, Ipswich, Kendal, Kilmarnock, Kings Lynn, Leeds, Leicester, Lincoln, Liverpool, London, Luton, Maidstone, Manchester, Middlesbrough, Newcastle, Newport, Newport (Isle of Wight), Northallerton, Northampton, Norwich, Oban, Omagh, Oxford, Peterborough, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Reading, Scarborough, Shrewsbury, Sheffield, St. Austell, Stirling, Stoke-on-Trent, Swansea, Swindon, Warwick, Wick, Wrexham, Yeovil and York.

The network will be supplemented by remote interview sites for remote communities, where applicants will conduct their interview by video conferencing. The contract for this office network was awarded in early 2006 to Mapeley, and the offices are currently being leased and fitted out for use by IPS.

These offices will open in 2007 and the network will subsequently be used for the National Identity Scheme. Where the network of enrolment centres needs to be further expanded, we will first seek to use high street offices that are already used by central and local government. We will also look at options for the private sector providing outlets and any contracts will be tendered as appropriate.

Kennett Prison: Manpower

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers have been recruited to work at the new prison HMP Kennett in Merseyside. [124410]

John Reid: So far, 30 prison officers have been recruited to work at Kennet prison. Further recruitment is under way.

Migration: Languages

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the compatibility of compulsory English language requirements for migrants with European Union law. [124402]

Mr. Byrne: We are satisfied that the arrangements for requiring applicants for permanent settlement and naturalisation to demonstrate a knowledge of English are fully compatible with European law. The integration of migrants is a matter for member states' competence.

Offenders: Learning Disability

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisoners in Lancashire have learning difficulties. [125754]

Phil Hope: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available centrally. However, a project undertaken by the Dyslexia Institute in Yorkshire and Humberside looked at the incidence of dyslexia and related learning disabilities among the prison population. The findings suggested that 20 per cent. of the prison population have some form of unseen (hidden) disability which will affect and undermine their performance in both education and work settings. A further 32 per cent. of the sample who were given an in-depth assessment had literacy difficulties but did not show positive evidence of the characteristics of dyslexia, dyspraxia or other unseen disabilities.

Office of Surveillance Commissioners

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which public authorities the Office of the Surveillance Commissioners inspects and monitors in respect of (a) property interference, (b) intrusive surveillance, (c) directed surveillance and (d) using covert human intelligence sources. [125639]

Mr. McNulty: The public authorities liable to oversight by the Office of Surveillance Commissioners are, in respect of property interference, those authorities with which the authorising officers described in section 93(5) of the Police Act 1997 (as amended) hold positions; in respect of intrusive surveillance, those authorities with which the authorising officers described in section 32(6) of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 (RIPA) (as amended) hold positions; in respect of directed surveillance, those public authorities listed in Schedule

1 of RIPA (as amended) and in respect of using covert human intelligence sources, those public authorities listed in Part 1 of Schedule 1 of RIPA (as amended).

Police Custody: West Ham

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the adequacy of provision of custody space at police stations in West Ham constituency. [125221]

Mr. McNulty: The provision of custody accommodation in West Ham is a matter for the Commissioner for the Metropolitan Police.

Police: Hospitals

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there are on duty in hospitals in Lancashire (a) during the day and (b) at night. [124975]

Mr. McNulty: This is an operational matter for the chief constable.

Prison Service: Manpower

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers were employed in each prison by HM Prison Service on 31 December (a) 2005 and (b) 2006; and what the planned number of officers was in each case. [124826]

John Reid: Information on the number of prison officers, senior officers and principal officers employed and the operational staffing requirement for every Prison Service establishment on 31 December 2005 and 2006 are contained in the following tables.

Prisoners: Day Release

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of prisoners on day release. [123787]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the numbers of temporary release licenses issued to prisoners in prison establishments within England and Wales can be found in table 10.6 in the Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2005, a copy of which can be found within the House of Commons Library. This table can also be found at the following website:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs07/hosb1806section10.xls

It should be noted that the table refers to the number of releases rather than the number of prisoners, so the same prisoner could appear multiple times in the table. Further, the table includes releases that last longer than one day.

These figures are management information and may be subject to change.

Racial Violence: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported racist offences in Lancashire there were in each of the last 10 years. [125746]

Mr. McNulty: The available information is given in the tables.

Racially aggravated offences are available only from the police recorded crime series from 1 April 1999.

Table A: Number of racially aggravated offences recorded for Lancashire police force area, 1999-2000 to 2001-02[1]

[1] Numbers of recorded crime were affected by changes in reporting and recording following the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS) in April 2002. These data are therefore not directly comparable with earlier years.

Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Bill: Parts 1 and 3 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125610]

Mr. McNulty: Chapter I of Part I of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 (RIPA), which provides for the lawful interception of communications, entered into force in October 2000. When the RIP Bill was tabled, its regulatory impact assessment (RIA) estimated, accurately, total compliance costs to business (communications service providers (CSPs)) would not exceed the measure of significance (£20 million) used by the Regulatory Impact Unit of the Cabinet Office.

Chapter II of Part I of RIPA, which provides for the lawful acquisition and disclosure of communications data, entered into force in January 2004. In line with section 24 of RIPA, arrangements are in place for CSPs to recover the costs incurred by them in complying with disclosure required by public authorities. We estimate that in 2005-06 public authorities paid communications service providers less than £20 million for disclosing communications data when required to do so.

Part III of RIPA, which provides for the investigation of protected electronic data, is not yet in force although the Government have completed a public consultation on a draft code of practice which Parliament will be invited to approve shortly. The RIA for the RIP Bill estimated total compliance costs to business relating to Part III were not expected to exceed the measure of significance. That estimate is still valid.

Sexual Offences: Peterborough

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many registered sex offenders lived in the Peterborough city council area as at 31 December 2006; and if he will make a statement. [126226]

Mr. Coaker: The available data are not collated on a borough or constituency basis. Data on registered sex offenders are collated at multi-agency public protection arrangements (MAPPA) area and police basic command unit (BCU) levels within areas. MAPPA areas are coterminous with police and probation areas. The data are published in (MAPPA) annual reports which are available in the House Libraries and at:

http://www.probation.homeoffice.gov.uk/output/page30.asp

The Peterborough city council area is not coterminous with any area or BCU but is covered by the data relating to the Northern BCU area in Cambridgeshire's MAPPA annual report. These data represent the number of registered sex offenders as at 31 March 2006—153 in the Northern BCU.

Theft: Vehicle Number Plates

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many number plate thefts were detected in (a) West Ham constituency and (b) London in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05 and (iii) 2005-06. [125222]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not available centrally.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Bailiffs: Licensing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what regulations are in place on the licensing of bailiff operators. [126040]

Ms Harman: Certificated bailiffs are governed by the Distress for Rent Rules 1988 and the Distress for Rent (Amendment) Rules 1999. High Court Enforcement Officers are governed by the High Court Enforcement Officer's Regulations 2004. Activities of County Court bailiffs employed by Her Majesty's Courts Service are regulated by the terms of their contracts of employment. All other private bailiffs are currently self-regulated.

The Tribunals' Courts and Enforcement Bill was introduced in the House of Lords on 16 November 2006 and had its Second Reading in the House of Commons on 5 March 2007. The Bill provides for the regulation of all enforcement agents, including bailiffs, who are not Crown employees. They will all have compulsory criminal record checks, all be subject to the same complaints system and all have to hold a certificate issued by a county court judge. In the longer term the Government are proposing that all non-Crown employed enforcement agents be licensed by an independent regulator, the Security Industry Authority.

Departments: Consultants

Mr. Francois: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the (a) organisations employed by her Department to provide and (b) cost to the public purse of providing external consultancy advice on departmental rebranding since December 2006. [125770]

Ms Harman: Part of my Department, the Public Guardianship Office, is using one company called Parity Resourcing Solutions to provide a consultant for implementation of new branding for the PGO.

Costs incurred since December 2006 are £22,325 including VAT.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many submissions her Department received in response to the consultation on the draft Freedom of Information and Data Protection (Appropriate Limit and Fees) Regulations 2007; if she will post all responses on her Department's website; and when the final regulations are expected to be laid before Parliament. [126501]

Vera Baird: My Department has received 182 replies to the consultation on the draft Freedom of Information and Data Protection (Appropriate Limit and Fees) Regulations 2007. The consultation closed on 8 March 2007.

We will publish a summary of the responses to the document in line with the consultation code of practice set out by the Cabinet Office, which will be available on the departmental website.

We will analyse the responses to the consultation exercise before considering laying regulations.

Magistrates: Training

Philip Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance and training is given to magistrates and magistrates' clerks on the use of their powers under section 6 of the Immigration Act 1971. [125928]

Ms Harman: A justices' clerk or legal adviser advises magistrates in all cases in which an application under section 6 of the Immigration Act 1971 is made. As qualified barristers or solicitors, they are fully trained and experienced in the research of legal issues. In giving advice, justices' clerks and legal advisers have access to the statutory provisions and commentary on it, as well as Home Office circulars giving guidance. Because of the relative infrequency of such applications, however, there is no specific national training for legal advisers or magistrates on the topic, although some courts may provide specific local training.

HEALTH

Abortion: Young People

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many girls (a) under the age of 15 and (b) aged 15 to 18 years had abortions in each year between 1999 and 2005. [123935]

Caroline Flint: The available information is set out in the following table.

Notes:
1. Prior to Q1 (April to June) 2001-02, A and E attendance data were only collected annually and as a total for types of A and E department. At this time, this did not include walk-in centres.
2. Attendances at A and E departments broken down by A and E type were first collected in Q1 (April to June) 2002-03.
3. From Q1 (April to June) 2003-04, attendances at walk-in centres were included in attendance information for all types of A and E department. Walk-in centres are considered to be a type 3 A and E service.
4. Admissions via A and E departments were first collected in Q2 2002-03, for type 1 A and E departments.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many attendances at type 1 accident and emergency departments there were in each year since 1997, broken down by NHS organisation. [123123]

Andy Burnham: The information is not available in the format requested.

The available information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the average cost of providing care for a patient who has been admitted to hospital via a type 1 accident and emergency department. [123149]

Andy Burnham: Cost data collected from the national health service does not distinguish between different admission methods.

We are therefore unable to identify separately the costs of providing care for patients admitted to hospital via a type 1 accident and emergency department.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the emergency spell differential tariff rate in controlling levels of emergency admissions. [123150]

Andy Burnham: There has not been an assessment of the emergency spell differential tariff rate in controlling levels of emergency admissions. The differential tariff is a method of managing financial risk to commissioners and providers associated with emergency admissions, and not a method of controlling emergency admission levels.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 2 February 2007, Official Report, column 543W, on accident and emergency departments, what measures she uses to assess the critical size of a hospital; using these methods, if she will define the critical size of a hospital; and what the evidential basis was for the statement that a consensus is emerging on the critical size of a hospital. [123741]

Andy Burnham: There is no central criterion or measure of a critical size of hospital as it will depend on local circumstances. However, we would expect that population demographics are one factor that the local national health service would consider in ensuring the provision of appropriate services, including accident and emergency facilities, to meet people's needs.

The increasing consensus among professional bodies that a critical size of hospital is required to ensure that specialist facilities are available to treat all patients with emergency needs safely is evidenced through a number of publications that such bodies have produced in the past.

Alzheimer's Disease

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent assessment she has made of medical developments allowing earlier identification of Alzheimer's disease; [124676]

(2) what recent assessment she has made of research on the delays in the onset of dementia which may result from early identification of Alzheimer's disease; and how she plans for such research to inform NHS practice. [124677]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The NICE clinical guideline on "Dementia: supporting people with dementia and their carers in health and social care", published in November 2006, recommends that as part of their role, primary health care staff should consider referring people who show signs of mild cognitive impairment for assessment by memory assessment services to aid early identification of dementia.

The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the national health service. A number of national programme studies on Alzheimer's disease and on dementia currently under way are likely to provide evidence of relevance to our understanding of the onset and development of the condition.

The main part of the Department's expenditure on health research is allocated to and managed by NHS organisations. Details of individual projects supported in the NHS, including a number concerned with the identification, detection or progress of Alzheimer's disease, can be found on the national research register at:

www.dh.gov.uk/research

Ambulance Services

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the letter to her from the Minister of State, Department of Health, responsible for delivery and reform, published on her Department's website on 31 January 2007, whether paramedics are expected to take all patients from 999 calls to accident and emergency. [123068]

Andy Burnham: The Department has made clear that ambulance clinicians are not expected to take all patients from 999 calls to accident and emergency departments. Some calls may be resolved over the telephone, and some patients may be treated at the scene or in the community and therefore do not need to go to hospital. In 2005-06, national health service ambulance trusts in England received 5.96 million 999 calls, and attended 4.77 million incidents. Of those incidents attended, 73 per cent. resulted in an emergency patient journey. Guidance was issued in 2002, 2004 and 2005 to this effect.

My letter to the Secretary of State for Health expressed the need to build on the Department's action to date on this issue, and emphasised that more patients could be treated at the scene or in the community.

Ambulance Services: Pendle

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ambulances are based in Pendle; and how many were based there in 2003. [126050]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not held centrally.

Aneurysm Screening

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) of 31 January 2007, Official Report, columns 402-03W, on aneurysm screening, what assessment she has made of the cost of establishing a national screening programme for men aged 65 and over for abdominal aortic aneurysms. [123156]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Preliminary cost analysis by the UK National Screening Committee's Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm (AAA) Screening Working Group indicates that a full roll-out of an AAA screening programme for men aged 65 would cost between £20 and £25 million revenue to implement in England in year one. Final costs will be subject to a number of factors such as the configuration of services. This is ongoing work.

Blood Cholesterol

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to set targets for reducing blood cholesterol levels in England to the same level as that indicated in the guidelines produced by the Scottish Intercollegiate Guidelines Network. [124778]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department's policy on cholesterol targets is set out in the national service framework for coronary heart disease, and reflected in key drivers of practice such as the quality and outcomes framework of the general medical service contract.

The guidelines produced by the Scottish Intercollegiate Guidelines Network are welcomed as a contribution to policy development. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) is currently working on guidance on lipid management, due out later this year. That guidance will set out any revisions to current policy on targets for controlling cholesterol.

Care Homes: Standards

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2007, Official Report, column 1411W, on care homes, what form the public consultation on review of the National Minimum Standards for Care Homes will take; and how members of the public will be able to participate in the consultation. [120950]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The consultation will be available on the Department's website. Hard copies will be provided on request. Members of the public will be able to respond via email or post their responses to the addresses given in the consultation document.

Chase Farm Hospital

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the option to retain Chase Farm hospital's (a) accident and emergency department and (b) consultant-led maternity services is in accordance with the Government's national clinical strategy. [124710]

Andy Burnham: As part of the work leading up to the launch of the formal public consultation on the Barnet, Enfield and Haringey clinical strategy, NHS London has asked Professor Sir George Alberti, the NHS National Director for Emergency Access, to work with the local NHS and offer an independent view on the clinical case for change.

It is for the local NHS, in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders, to plan, develop and improve services for local people. Any change to local services would only happen after full public consultation with local people.

Chiropody: Greater London

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines her Department has issued on eligibility and access criteria for podiatry services; and what steps she has taken to assess compliance with such guidelines in (a) Bexley primary care trust and (b) London primary care trusts. [123699]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There are no central guidelines in respect of eligibility or access criteria for podiatry services and we have no plans to carry out an assessment. It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) in partnership with local stakeholders to commission services in order to meet local needs. Strategic health authorities are responsible for ensuring that PCTs fulfil this duty.

Chlamydia Infection: Screening

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects each primary care trust to start Chlamydia screening as part of the national chlamydia screening programme. [122785]

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of primary care trusts is participating in the Chlamydia screening programme; and when she expects 100 per cent. geographical coverage to be achieved. [123137]

Caroline Flint: In November 2005 the operational management of the national chlamydia screening programme was transferred to the Health Protection Agency (HPA). To the end of December 2006, we had 43 per cent. of Primary Care Trusts reporting data to the HPA. This covers 35 programme areas. More programme areas have started screening since then. The next data will be reported to the HPA in April.

We expect to see 100 per cent. geographical coverage during 2007. Strategic health authorities have submitted plans to screen at least 15 per cent. of their population aged 15-24 by March 2008.

Cochlear Implants

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cochlear implant operations were performed on patients resident in England in (a) English and (b) Welsh hospitals in each of the last three years. [119329]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) shows that there have been 1,406 cochlear implant operations performed on patients resident in England in the last three years (2003-04 to 2005-06). HES is only able to supply data on operations conducted in national health services hospitals in England. Data have been supplied for residents of English strategic health authorities.

The Department does not hold data on the number of cochlear implant operations performed in Welsh hospitals on patients who are resident in England.

Coeliac Disease

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had on extending the range of foodstuffs available by prescription to sufferers of coeliac disease. [118956]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have had no such discussions.

Community Hospitals: Finance

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria govern primary care trusts' applications to access the funds allocated for community hospital refurbishment; and if she will make a statement. [120949]

Andy Burnham: Strategic health authorities have been asked to submit only schemes that fit with their strategic priorities, meet local need and demonstrate value for money. Individual schemes are expected to meet the design principles set out in "Our Health our care, our community—investing in the future of community hospitals and services". The role for the Department is to validate that these criteria have been met and to reassure itself that the schemes deliver the objectives set out in "Our health, our care, our community—Investing in the future of community hospitals and services".

Dental Services

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what average number of units of dental activity she expects an average patient to consume in a year. [124937]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not made any assumptions nationally about average numbers of units of dental activity for patients. Primary care trusts are responsible for commissioning dental services on the basis of local needs assessments.

Dental Services: Leeds

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to increase the number of NHS dentists and oral health specialists operating in the Leeds area. [123327]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Leeds primary care trust is working to improve access to national health service dentistry. It has recruited three additional dentists in North West Leeds and has established the Leeds Dental Advice Line to help patients access dental services, including emergency services.

Dexrazoxane

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will bring forward proposals to use dexrazoxane for the prevention of cardiac damage caused by antibiotics. [116838]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A marketing authorisation for Cardioxane (dexrazoxane) was approved in the United Kingdom in July 2006, initially to Chiron Corporation Ltd. The current marketing authorisation is held by Novartis Pharmaceuticals UK Ltd following a change of ownership application, completed in September 2006.

Cardioxane is authorised for prevention of chronic cumulative cardiotoxicity caused by doxorubicin or epirubicin (anthracycline antibiotics) use in advanced and/or metastatic cancer patients after previous anthracycline containing treatment.

Disability Aids: Children

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what entitlement there is for disabled children to have aids and equipment provided for them by primary care trusts. [123533]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Children, Young People and Maternity Services National Service Framework (NSF) sets out high expectations of what we think health and social care services for children should be. While all the standards within the NSF are relevant to disability, standard 8 specifically relates to disabled children who need ongoing health and social care interventions having access to high-quality evidence-based care delivered by staff with the right skills.

As a result of implementation of the children's NSF, disabled children, young people and their families should experience services based on assessed needs, which promote inclusion and, wherever possible, enable them to live ordinary lives. Provision of aids and equipment is based on an assessment of need, not an entitlement to specific items or services. Decisions on whether or not to meet individual equipment needs are based on assessments carried out at a local level.

The "Transforming Community Equipment Services' Project—helping to make independence a reality" is undertaking a radical review of community equipment and wheelchair services with a view to implementing a new model of service delivery by autumn 2007, with the objective of developing a new model of service delivery in collaboration with all key stakeholders. We anticipate that a new model of service delivery, capable of implementation by autumn 2007, will involve a greatly expanded role for the third sector.

Drugs: Rehabilitation

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many drug treatment services have provision for crèche facilities in relation to (a) day care and (b) residential care. [121228]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available centrally.

Durham Primary Care Trust: Finance

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what cash savings have been made as a result of the amalgamation of trusts into Durham Primary Care Trust; and what savings are projected in the next 12 months. [124685]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The costs of the changes that were announced on 16 May will depend on a number of factors, including the location of new organisations being created, the number of people in the new organisations and new pay ranges for very senior managers, as well as changes in estate costs following reconfiguration.

These arrangements are currently being worked up and discussed with trade unions and staff. Until those discussions have been concluded and the detail of new arrangements agreed, it is not possible to confirm or accurately forecast costs.

Commissioning a patient-led national health service is designed to deliver £250 million savings from administration costs through streamlining for reinvestment in frontline services. The savings are expected to be realised by the end of 2007 and then every year for reinvestment beginning in 2008-09.

Strategic health authorities (SHAs) have been asked to oversee the Generation of the savings locally. Each SHA has a cost "envelope" that it should realise but it is for local determination to work out the best way of achieving these savings.

Folic Acid

John Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the potential health benefits of compulsory fortification of flour with folic acid, with particular reference to spina bifida and other neural tube defects; and if she will make a statement. [124140]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department currently recommends that women trying to get pregnant should take a daily 400 microgram folic acid supplement from the time they stop using contraception until the 12th week of pregnancy. Women should also eat foods containing folate—the natural form of folic acid—such as green vegetables and brown rice as well as fortified bread and breakfast cereals. Folic acid helps prevent neural tube defects including spina bifida in the newborn.

The Food Standards Agency is currently undertaking a consultation exercise on the options for increasing the folate intake of young women to reduce the number of pregnancies affected by a neural tube defect. One of the four options being considered is the mandatory fortification of bread or flour with folic acid. The closing date for comments is 13 March 2007.

Food: EC Law

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Food Standards Agency has received a copy of the European Commission consultation document on the proposal that the European Food Safety Authority be permitted to charge fees for the consideration of dossiers submitted under European food law; and if she will make a statement. [123949]

Caroline Flint: The Food Standards Agency has received a copy of the Commission's consultation document, and has co-ordinated and submitted a reply on behalf of the United Kingdom Government. The response agreed with the principle of charging for work done in assessing authorisation files, but indicated that such charging should be limited to circumstances in which the applicant is the sole commercial beneficiary. The comments also underlined the important need to take account of the potential impact on small and medium-sized enterprises. These would be at a particular disadvantage with any charging arrangements.

General Practitioners

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to ensure that primary care trusts support general practitioners in delivering services to patients in innovative ways; and if she will make a statement. [122740]

Andy Burnham: Practice-based gives primary care professionals an opportunity to engage in commissioning and redesign services to better meet patients' needs. PBC gives general practitioners more responsibility for local health budgets. This acts as a driver for more responsive and innovative models of joined-up support within communities, delivering better health outcomes and well-being, including a focus on prevention.

All primary care trusts (PCTs) had arrangements in place to support general practitioners in commissioning and delivering services as part of PBC by December 2006, providing each practice with an indicative budget, information on activity and an incentive to become engaged. PCTs are expected to support practices that are innovative and entrepreneurial, working with them to redesign clinical pathways and secure the services that are needed locally.

New guidance published on 28 November 2006 sets out further obligations on PCTs to help advance PBC. Strategic health authorities are expected to assure themselves that there is a quality framework to support PBC.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the briefing paper issued in 2006 by her Department entitled "An assessment of the clinical effectiveness, cost and viability of NHS General Practitioners with Special Interest (GPSI) services" in relation to the efficacy of moving clinical services from district general hospitals to GP surgeries. [122769]

Andy Burnham: None yet. The commitment to offer more national health service services closer to people's homes was announced in the White Paper "Our Health, our care, our say", which was published in January 2006. Subsequently, in February 2006 we launched the "Care Closer to Home" demonstration project to support delivery of the White Paper commitment. The research paper was published some months later and we will take it into account in evaluating the demonstration project.

General Practitioners: Bedfordshire

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funds were spent by Bedfordshire primary care trust and its predecessors to ensure that doctors' surgeries and general practices can undertake the shift in patient services from the secondary sector to primary care in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [122832]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not held centrally.

Health Care Professionals: Recruitment

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of which developed countries attract the largest numbers of health care professionals from less developed countries with inadequate domestic health care systems. [107215]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government do not currently collect these data. Nevertheless, the 2006 World Health Report "Working Together for Health" looked at patterns of health care professionals migrating to Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) countries. The report says that while statistics on global flows of health workers remain far from complete, nearly 25 per cent. of doctors trained in sub-Saharan Africa are working in OECD countries (from 3 per cent. in Cameroon to 37 per cent. in South Africa). Nurses and midwives trained in sub-Saharan Africa and working in OECD countries represent 5 per cent. of the current work force (again a wide range from 0.1 per cent. in Uganda to 34 per cent. in Zimbabwe). Table 5.1, a copy of which has been placed in the Library, says that among OECD countries there is a range as to the percentage of doctors trained abroad (from 4 per cent. in Portugal to 34 per cent. in New Zealand (33 per cent. for the United Kingdom) and for nurses (0 per cent. for Finland to 21 per cent. for New Zealand (10 per cent. for the UK). It is important to note that the report does not specify the number of these overseas-trained doctors and nurses who come from developing countries.

Health Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has been made of the impact of clinical assessment, treatment and support services on local health economies. [123262]

Andy Burnham: The clinical assessment, treatment and support (CATS) scheme will improve local community access to healthcare services, in line with the White Paper "Our Health, our care, our say" which signalled our intention to bring services closer to patients.

There is a robust process to ensure there is both local support and a capacity need for such schemes, and to reduce the risk that a scheme will destabilise existing national health service providers. An impact analysis of the scheme is currently under way, commissioned by the North West Strategic Health Authority (SHA). The SHA is working closely with the local acute trusts to ensure that any impact is managed and the positive benefits of the scheme for the whole health economy are delivered.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the quality of the treatment in a clinical assessment, treatment and support clinic will be recorded and assessed. [123330]

Andy Burnham: All independent sector providers who are awarded contracts to provide clinical assessment, treatment and support services will be registered with the Healthcare Commission under the Care Standards Act 2000 and the Private and Voluntary Healthcare (England) Regulations 2001 No. 3968.

Strict contractual performance management of independent sector treatment centres is undertaken by the Department's commercial directorate. There are also contractual and statutory reporting obligations to the Department, the Healthcare Commission and referrers.

Health Services: Braintree

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of the proposed independent sector treatment centre in Bocking, Braintree on the future of the proposed community hospital on the site of St Michael's Hospital, Braintree. [123425]

Andy Burnham: The introduction of independent sector treatment centres (ISTCs) is expected to increase patient choice and accessibility across the region. It is for strategic health authorities to manage the integration of ISTC schemes with local national health service provision.

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions have taken place between her Department and the Mid Essex Primary Care Trust on the location of the proposed independent sector treatment centre in Bocking, Braintree; [123426]

(2) what consultation with Mid Essex Primary Care Trust took place before the announcement of Mercury Health as the preferred bidder for the provision of an independent sector treatment centre in Bocking, Braintree. [123427]

Andy Burnham: Engagement with the local national health service on the Essex independent sector treatment centre (ISTC) scheme was with the local strategic health authority (SHA), not directly with the primary care trusts. At the time of Mercury Health's appointment as the scheme's preferred bidder, which was agreed with the East of England SHA, the locations of the proposed ISTC sites, including a potential location in Braintree, had not been finalised.

Location proposals for the ISTC scheme were agreed with East of England SHA. It is anticipated that there will be three ISTCs in the region located in Braintree, Basildon and Southend; locations have been adopted to facilitate easier access for patients in Essex in relation to healthcare services.

Health Services: Children

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the National Clinical Director for Children, Young People and Maternity Services was first asked to produce her reports (a) "Making it better: For children and young people" and (b) "Making it better: For mother and baby", published on 6 February. [123134]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State asked Sheila Shribman on 7 November 2006 to produce these reports. They are part of a series of published reports by National Clinical Directors (NCDs), setting out the clinical case for change in their respective specialties. NCDs are experts, and each oversees the implementation of a national service framework (NSF) and represents the professional and client group interests and issues in the Department. NCDs work with policy and delivery teams, clinical networks and the national health service management community to achieve joined-up action. Dr. Shribman is in charge of implementation of the NSF for Children, Young People and Maternity Services.

Health Services: EC Nationals

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the net cost or benefit to the UK was of reciprocal arrangements for reimbursing the costs of treatment of EU citizens treated in other member states (a) in total and (b) in respect of each member state in the most recent year for which figures are available. [123506]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table shows, in resource terms, the estimated net costs to the United Kingdom of the European Union reciprocal arrangements for health care. These are net health care claims estimated in accordance with existing arrangements under the regulations. These figures reflect the fact that more people go abroad (to work, retire or go on holiday) than come to the UK.

Estimated net claims by other European Economic Area member states during 2005

	In sterling (Thousand)
Country	2005
Total	433,441
Austria	2,304
Belgium	776
Cyprus	3,570
France	64,154
Germany	5,103
Greece	-219
Ireland	280,304
Italy	976
Malta	1,713
Netherlands	3,047
Portugal	1,142
Spain	68,972
Sweden	-37
Switzerland	1,636

Notes:
1. The information is compiled in line with the requirements of "Government Accounting 2000" and National Audit Office (NAO) and used for Resource Accounting and Budgeting (RAB) purpose during 2005-06.
2. Figures are in thousands and rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. Any necessary additional resource adjustments would be included in future years e.g. other new member states.
4. We have waiver arrangements with a number of member states which means they have agreed to bear the costs of each other's insured persons, for example Denmark and Luxembourg.

Health Services: North West Region

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the setting up of clinical assessment, treatment and support clinics in Lancashire and Cumbria will improve accessibility for patients. [123260]

Andy Burnham: Clinical assessment, treatment and support services in Cumbria and Lancashire will provide more services closer to patients' homes and reduce the number of appointments a patient needs to attend before hospital treatment.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the need for the clinical assessment, treatment and support scheme in Lancashire and Cumbria was first identified; and how the need was tested and assessed. [123261]

Andy Burnham: The need for clinical assessment, treatment and support (CATS) services for Cumbria and Lancashire was identified two years ago by the former Cumbria and Lancashire Strategic Health Authority following the success of a similar scheme in Greater Manchester.

It is estimated that across the north-west the number of patients waiting for treatment needs to be reduced from 119,000 to 65,000 in order to achieve the 18-week maximum waiting time from general practitioner referral to treatment by the end of 2008. A combination of pathway reform, demand management and additional activity such as that offered through CATS is required to achieve this reduction in waiting list numbers.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) GPs in Lancashire and Cumbria will be able to choose not to refer patients and (b) patients in that area will be able to choose not to go to a clinical assessment, treatment and support service. [123329]

Andy Burnham: Decisions about where patients are referred for treatment will continue to be made by patients and their general practitioners (GPs). The clinical assessment, treatment and support services in Cumbria and Lancashire will provide an additional referral option for patients and their GPs.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much Netcare will be paid over its five-year contract to deliver clinical assessment, treatment and support services in Lancashire and Cumbria. [123331]

Andy Burnham: No contract has been awarded for clinical assessment, treatment and support services in Cumbria and Lancashire. The commercial terms between the Department and Netcare are still subject to negotiation.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what interaction GPs will have with healthcare professionals staffing clinical assessment, treatment and support schemes in Lancashire and Cumbria. [123332]

Andy Burnham: The Cumbria and Lancashire clinical assessment, treatment and support scheme is an integrated scheme between primary and secondary care. Communication between all health care providers in the local health economy is important to achieving this. Local clinicians have already been engaged with the scheme's preferred bidder to this end, to achieve an integrated pathway for patients.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) from where staff working in clinical assessment, treatment and support service clinics in Lancashire and Cumbria will be recruited; [123333]

(2) how many staff, and at what grades, will be employed by Netcare in Lancashire and Cumbria to deliver the clinical assessment, treatment and support service contract; [123334]

(3) who will draft and agree the protocols under which the staff employed in Lancashire and Cumbria by Netcare will work. [123335]

Andy Burnham: The contract for clinical assessment, treatment and support (CATS) services is still under negotiation. All independent sector health care providers awarded contracts under phase 2 of the Independent Sector Treatment Centre procurement are required to comply with the policy of additionality which exists to ensure the conservation of national health service clinical skills in key professions.

As contract negotiations are still ongoing, precise staff numbers, experience, and skills sets are not finalised. However, it is thought that the scheme could employ approximately 150 whole-time equivalent clinical and non-clinical staff.

An independent sector provider awarded a contract to provide CATS services would be required to produce a workforce strategy, which would set workforce protocols. The protocols would be reviewed and approved by the Department.

The independent sector provider's workforce policies are required to comply with all applicable and current United Kingdom employment legislation and departmental guidance and to demonstrate workforce best practice. In addition, independent sector providers are required to comply with the provisions of "Safer Recruitment—A Guide for NHS Employers (May 2005)".

Home Helps

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the total number of home help hours delivered in England in each year since 1997-98. [124929]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The total number of home help hours delivered during the year is not collected centrally. The number of hours of home help delivered in England during a sample week in September of each year from 1997 to 2005 is shown in the table.

Estimated number of contact hours of home help delivered during a sample week, September

	Rounded numbers
	Number of hours
1997	2,607,500
1998	2,607,400
1999	2,684,200
2000	2,791,300
2001	2,881,700
2002	2,983,200
2003	3,174,800
2004	3,359,000
2005	3,567,500

Notes: 1. The table contains estimates for missing data.
2. Households receiving home care purchased with a direct payment are excluded.

Hospices: Children

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department expects to give guidance to the Association of Children's Hospices on the distribution of (a) year two and (b) year three funding of the moneys allocated to children's hospices to replace the loss of Lottery funding; and if she will make a statement. [119140]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We are currently reviewing the process used for the hospice service grants in 2006-07 and are collecting information on the hospice service schemes supported this year. We will be discussing with the Association of Children's Hospices and other key stakeholders any revisions necessary to the process for 2007-08 and 2008-09. We will be issuing further information for applicant organisations once this has been completed.

Hospitals: Waiting Lists

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's latest estimate is of the additional cost required to meet the 18-week waiting time target (a) in 2006-07, (b) 2007-08 and (c) the months April to December 2008. [124930]

Andy Burnham: The 2004 comprehensive spending review provided for an extra £1,000 million and £1,900 million in 2006-07 and 2007-08 respectively for extra out-patient and in-patient activity needed to cover demand growth, existing waiting time initiatives and progress towards the 18-week waiting time target. The current spending review, which will deal with 2008-09 onwards, has yet to be completed.

Infertility Treatment

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the statement by the Minister of State, Department of Health, the hon. Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) Official Report, columns 125-26WH, on infertility treatment, what funding she is providing for Infertility Network UK to conduct the work she has commissioned; what areas she expects to be covered by Infertility Network UK in the course of its work; when she expects the work to be completed; whether she plans to publish a report on the work completed; whether she plans to publish an interim report; and if she will make a statement. [123496]

Caroline Flint: We are giving a three-year project grant to Infertility Network UK to help primary care trusts share best practice in the provision of fertility services and engage with fertility patients in the planning and prioritisation of services. In the current year, the project funding is £21,000, increasing to £25,000 in 2007-08 and 2008-09. This is in addition to three-year core funding of £30,000 a year.

Once Infertility Network UK has completed an analysis of current provision, we will discuss taking the initial findings forward with including making the results of this work publicly available. As the project progresses, they will liaise with primary care trusts to discuss approaches to the provision of fertility services and the dissemination of good practice.

Influenza

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which groups of workers would be eligible for antiviral prophylaxis in (a) an outbreak of avian influenza and (b) an influenza pandemic; and if she will make a statement. [123126]

Caroline Flint: In the event of an outbreak of avian influenza any workers who have been or could be exposed to infection through their work activity will be offered the antiviral oseltamivir subject to an individual risk assessment by the Health Protection Agency. Such workers are likely to include poultry workers on the infected farm, vets, catchers and cullers of poultry, and contractors involved in carcase disposal and site decontamination.

Our current United Kingdom strategy is to use antiviral drugs predominantly for treatment of people with pandemic influenza. We are currently considering the practicalities of giving short courses of anti-virals (as prophylaxis) to members of the household of a person with pandemic influenza. However, this would require a larger stockpile than currently planned.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many courses of oseltamivir have been used in the prophylaxis of poultry workers and others potentially exposed to avian influenza in (a) 2005, (b) 2006 and (c) 2007. [123127]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of courses of anti-virals used in the prophylaxis of poultry workers and others potentially exposed to avian influenza is as follows:

		Number
2005	Essex quarantine incident	10
2006	Norfolk H7N3 incident	129
2007	Suffolk avian influenza incident	554

Maternity Services: Disadvantaged

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what effect she expects the recommendations in the report by Dr. Sheila Shribman, "Making it better: For mother and baby", commissioned by her Department, to have on maternity services in areas of urban and rural deprivation; [124106]

(2) how the recommendations of the report by Dr. Sheila Shribman, Making it better: For mother and baby", commissioned by her Department, will inform the work of primary care trusts in redesigning maternity services. [124107]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Dr. Shribman's report did not make specific recommendations. However, it did set out the clinical case for change in maternity services to ensure all women have access to high-quality, safe and responsive services. We will shortly be publishing a document which will describe a programme for improving choice, access and continuity of care in maternity services. The document will set out how commissioners can use the health reform agenda to ensure their services are sensitive to the needs of their population and take into account geographical and health inequality factors.

Maternity Services: Shrewsbury

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the proposals by the Staffordshire, Shropshire and Black Country Newborn Network to downgrade the neonatal unit at Royal Shrewsbury hospital to level 2; and why it is proposed that the unit should no longer have level 3 status. [123642]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: National health service West Midlands reports that the maternity unit at Royal Shrewsbury hospital has never been the equivalent of a level 3 unit. Therefore, the proposals, which will be subject to public consultation, should not be viewed as a downgrading of Royal Shrewsbury hospital's maternity unit.

Mid Essex Primary Care Trust

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many administrative staff there were in each of the three individual primary care trusts that have been merged into Mid Essex primary care trust prior to the merger; and what the corresponding figure is for the newly merged primary care trust. [126037]

Andy Burnham: Information regarding Mid Essex primary care trust (PCT) is not currently available, but will be published in late April.

Information for the three individual primary care trusts prior to the merger is contained in the following table.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much each former individual primary care trust in the newly formed Mid Essex Primary Care Trust spent annually on its finance department prior to the merger of the three primary care trusts; and how much has been spent since the merger into one primary care trust. [126038]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not held centrally.

Midwives: Leicestershire

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwives were in training in Leicestershire teaching hospitals in each year since 1997. [123186]

Andy Burnham: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwives were employed in the NHS in Leicestershire in each year since 1997. [123191]

Andy Burnham: The number of midwives employed in the national health service in Leicestershire in each year since 1997 is shown in the following table. 2005 is the latest year for which centrally validated figures are available.

Monitor

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the annual budget is of Monitor; when it was set up; how many paid officials it employs; whether it shares office premises with another publicly-funded body; what annual rental is paid on its offices; and if she will make a statement. [126728]

Andy Burnham: Monitor (whose statutory name is the Independent Regulator of NHS Foundation Trusts) was established in January 2004 further to section 2 of, and Schedule 2 to, the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 (which has since been consolidated into the National Health Service Act 2006).

Monitor's annual budget for 2006-07 is £12.8 million, £0.5 million of which relates to Monitor's involvement in the Department's whole health community diagnostic exercise for the acute and mental health national health service trusts.

I am advised by the chairman of Monitor that it currently employs 69 full-time staff and the annual rental paid on its offices, which are not shared with any other publicly funded body, is approximately £358,000.

NHS Foundation Trusts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members there are of each NHS foundation hospital trust in England; and what the annual cost of servicing the membership has been in each case. [121479]

Andy Burnham: I am advised by the chairman of Monitor (the statutory name of which is the Independent Regulator of NHS Foundation Trusts) that the most up-to-date membership figures for each national health service foundation trust are contained in Monitor's recent submission to the Health Committee's inquiry into patient and public involvement in the NHS, a copy which is available in the Library (HC 278-11). At the time of Monitor's submission in January 2007, there were approximately 625,000 members of the then 54 NHS foundation trusts.

The annual cost of servicing the membership of individual NHS foundation trusts depends on a number of factors, including their size. Detailed figures may be obtained by contacting the chairs of individual NHS foundation trusts direct.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 20 February 2007, Official Report, columns 672-73W, on NHS foundation trusts, if she will list references to the growing body of evidence that performance and responsiveness have improved across the national health service foundation trust sector. [124535]

Andy Burnham: Monitor (the statutory name of which is the Independent Regulator of NHS Foundation Trusts) routinely publishes information on the performance of national health service foundation trusts on its website at www.monitor-nhsft.gov.uk. Key publications include "NHS Foundation Trusts: Report for six-month period to 30 September 2006" and "Review and Consolidated Accounts of NHS Foundation Trusts 2005-06", the latter of which was laid before Parliament on 12 December 2006. The financial results for the nine-month period to 31 December 2006 are due to be published in mid-March 2007.

The results of the 2005-06 annual health check exercise by the Healthcare Commission, which are publicly available on its website at www.healthcarecommission.org.uk, show that foundation trusts are delivering improved care for patients required by their commissioners and to nationally prescribed standards, and value for money.

Other evidence includes publications by the Foundation Trust Network at www.foundationtrustnetwork.org such as "Foundation Trusts: two years on" which provides further independent evidence that foundation trusts are demonstrating the capacity for improving patient services that their greater freedom and independent corporate governance brings.

NHS Treatment Centres: Private Sector

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the funding for the proposed independent sector treatment centres will be on-balance sheet; and if she will make a statement. [122943]

Andy Burnham: Where assets under the Independent Sector Treatment Centre programme are likely to revert to the national health service these will appear on balance sheet. Funding for this is through the NHS capital allocations and is included in the Department's accounts.

NHS: Drugs

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the pooled treatment budget for NHS drugs is in London, broken down by primary care trust. [123387]

Caroline Flint: The information in the table shows the pooled drug treatment budget allocations for London primary care trusts in 2006-07 and proposed allocations in 2007-08.

NHS: Eastbourne

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS (a) dentists and (b) patients were registered in Eastbourne constituency in each year since 1997. [125471]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Table 1 shows information on the number of national health service dentists and the numbers of patients registered with an NHS dentist as at 31 March 1997 to 2006 for the Eastbourne parliamentary constituency, under the old contractual arrangements.

Under the new dental contractual arrangements, introduced on 1 April 2006, registration data are no longer collected centrally. Instead, there is a new measure on patients seen within the last 24 months. The latest information of numbers of NHS dentists and patients seen within the last 24 months is provided in tables 2 and 3. These data are only available at England, strategic health authority (SHA) and primary care trust (PCT) levels and not at constituency level. The Eastbourne constituency is covered by Eastbourne Downs PCT.

Table 1: General dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS): Number of NHS dentists and patients registered with an NHS dentist within Eastbourne constituency as at 31 March each year

NHS: Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will assess the outcome of her policy to ensure that overspending NHS organisations achieve run-rate balance in March 2007 by (a) health economy and (b) individual NHS organisations; and whether she monitors the monthly income and expenditure of NHS organisations forecasting deficits in 2006-07. [123130]

Andy Burnham: In 2006-07, one of the Secretary of State's key financial objectives was to achieve recurrent monthly run rate balance across as many national health service organisations as possible by 31 March. We will assess progress against this target for individual organisations and the NHS as a whole at the end of the year. The income and expenditure of all NHS organisations are monitored on a monthly basis.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS trusts she expects to be in financial deficit at the end of the 2006-07 financial year. [124405]

Andy Burnham: The report "NHS Financial Performance Quarter Three 2006-07", published on 20 February contains details of the forecast financial outturn position for all NHS organisations. Copies of the report are available in the Library. Final accounts for each national health service organisation will be published in the autumn.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons her Department produced the NHS investment maps published on 27 February; when her Department was instructed to produce these maps; who in her Department asked for the maps to be produced; and what the overall cost to the public purse was of producing the maps. [124927]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The maps were commissioned by Ministers on 14 February, to convert existing data about the hospital and primary care buildings programme into a more accessible format for the NHS and the public.

The overall cost was £3,200, including set-up costs, which will enable the Department to re-use the templates for different data sets and for a number of different communications vehicles.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department expects to publish (a) primary care trust allocations for 2008-09 and (b) its final report on its review of the weighted capitation formula; what major milestones exist as part of her Department's review of the weighted capitation formula; and if she will make a statement. [124935]

Andy Burnham: The date for the announcement of revenue allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs) post 2007-08 has not yet been determined.

The Advisory Committee on Resource Allocation (ACRA) is reviewing elements of the weighted capitation formula, as is usual before a new round of allocations. ACRA will be making recommendations on changes to the weighted capitation formula to Ministers in the autumn of 2007, in time to inform allocations for 2008-09.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date strategic health authorities are required to submit 2006-07 month 12 financial performance data for their entire health economies to her Department. [124936]

Andy Burnham: Strategic health authorities will send the Department month 12 provisional outturn forecast positions for their organisations on 11 May 2007.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary care trusts received funding below the national capitation formula in 2006-07; and by what total amount. [126917]

Andy Burnham: In 2006-07, 175 primary care trusts received funding below their weighted capitation targets. This represented £1.1 billion in cash terms.

NHS: ICT

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to maintain incentive payments to general practitioners to use the choose and book system. [123758]

Andy Burnham: A decision has yet to be made.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance her Department has issued to local service providers on delivering the integrated NHS national programme for IT; and what requirements have been placed on such providers; [123994]

(2) how many local service providers have indicated that they will not be delivering the national integrated programme for IT; and if she will make a statement. [123995]

Caroline Flint: The role of national programme local service providers (LSPs) is to deliver information technology systems and services across the national health service within clusters of strategic health authorities, in London (BT), the south (Fujitsu), and the north, midlands and east (CSC). LSPs ensure the integration of existing local systems and, where necessary, implement new systems so that the national applications can be delivered locally, while maintaining common standards. All LSPs have contracted to develop and deliver a fully integrated NHS care record solution, and are in the process of doing so.

Like all contracts, those between the Department and the LSPs provide for obligations and undertakings on either party. Among the key requirements which the contracts place on the LSPs are that functions and services are shown to work before they are bought. If providers do not deliver to their contractual obligations they are not paid. In this way the cost of non-delivery rests with the supplier, not the taxpayer. So, for example, we have retained extensive rights under the contracts to defer payments, receive compensation for missed milestones and, if necessary, terminate contracts, for failure to achieve required performance or deployment activity. We also reserve the right to consent to the appointment of key personnel of the prime contractor and material subcontractors, and have an interventionist approach to assurance including step-in rights or the appointment of a third party in certain critical circumstances if necessary.

These arrangements have been devised to secure an optimum balance between cost, risk, incentive and quality of outcome for the provision of the systems and services that we have specified for the benefit of patients, the NHS and taxpayers.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria her Department is employing to determine whether the NHS national programme for IT is successful; and if she will make a statement. [123996]

Caroline Flint: The successes of the national programme are visible every day of the week in hospitals, general practices and pharmacies across the national health service, and the benefits are being experienced by doctors, nurses and, most importantly, patients. On any typical day the national programme currently enables over 100,000 prescriptions to be transmitted electronically, reducing errors and inefficiencies; 16,000 choose and book electronic bookings to be made, putting patients in charge of their care and reducing significantly the numbers not attending outpatient appointments; almost 1.5 million queries to be processed on the patient demographic system, ensuring receipt of around three-quarters of a million letters a year that would otherwise be posted to the wrong address and enabling patient information to be handled more efficiently; over 100,000 NHSmail users, each of whom has an email address for life, to send 1 million secure emails, one third of which contain confidential patient information; 20 new secure broadband connections to be installed; and 33,000 general practitioners (GPs) to use the quality management analysis system (QMAS) to deliver better care to patients under the new GP contract.

Meanwhile, we are developing plans to respond to a recommendation, made by the National Audit Office in its June 2006 report on the national programme, for the publication of an annual statement quantifying the benefits delivered by all aspects of the programme, set against the costs incurred. The aim is for the first statement, to include information for 2006-07, to be available in summer 2007.

NHS: Procurement

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what mechanisms her Department has available to hold DHL, as holder of the contract to manage supply chain and procurement services for the NHS, to account should the national procurement savings target not be met; [125415]

(2) what financial incentives DHL receives as part of its contract to manage supply chain and procurement services for the NHS. [125416]

Andy Burnham: DHL receives financial remuneration for operating NHS Supply Chain in the form of a transaction fee for every item ordered.

DHL has a significant incentive to maximise sales volume by lowering selling prices, investing in increasing capacity, and improving product quality and service performance. There are significant contractual constraints on the maximum remuneration payable including a profit cap. Therefore savings flow through to national health service trusts, which in turn ensures benefit to NHS patients by reducing the overall cost of patient care.

The NHS Business Services Authority manages the outsourced DHL contract to run the business now known as NHS Supply Chain, ensuring compliance with all contractual obligations.

NHS: Surveys

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the NHS GP patient survey of hospital choice provided by Ipsos MORI. [122391]

Andy Burnham: The general practitioner patient survey is expected to cost no more than £11 million. The total cost of the hospital choice element of the survey will depend on the number of responses received by Ipsos MORI from patients, but is likely to be in the region of £2.5 million.

The hospital choice survey will be handed out to patients who have been referred between 16 January and 30 March 2007.

NHS: Training

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with (a) the Department for Education and Skills and (b) the Learning and Skills Council on ways to reduce the number of health care staff without a level 2 qualification. [123402]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national health service invests heavily in making training and development opportunities available for people who join NHS organisations at a relatively low skills level.

The Department is working closely with the Department for Education and Skills, the sectors skills councils for health and social care, employers and other key stakeholders to consider the implications of the Leitch review of skills for the health and social care work force.

Out-patients: Attendance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many out-patient did-not-attends there were in each quarter since the quarter ending June 1997 (a) in England and (b) broken down by NHS organisation; and what proportion this represented in each quarter. [123144]

Andy Burnham: Information on the number and percentage of did-not-attends (DNAs) for first, follow-up and total consultant-led out-patient attendances has been placed in the Library. Data have been supplied for 1996-07 to the second quarter of 2006-07. However, the data for 1996-07 to 1999-2000 are at England level only and on annual basis only; and the data for 2000-01 are on an annual basis only.

Patient Choice Schemes

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the (a) introduction and (b) roll-out of the (i) choice and (ii) choose and book system. [123607]

Andy Burnham: The cost of the choose and book computer system will be £64.5 million for system development and related service charges under a core contract with Atos Origin spanning five years. This core contract covered release 1 of the software, delivered on time and to budget on 2 July 2004, a disaster recovery service to ensure resilience and continuity of the service, a helpdesk service to answer user inquiries, and a programme to keep the underlying technologies up to date over the lifetime of the contract. At the end of January 2007, expenditure against this contract was £34.6 million, up from £26.4 million at April 2006.

A further £39.7 million has been spent on the additional functionality and services that the original business case, approved by HM Treasury in October 2003, envisaged were likely to be required as the system rolls out. These costs are expected to total £79.5 million over the five-year period. To date expenditure has covered releases 2 and 3 of the software, a number of minor enhancements increasing the breadth of functionality in response to user comments and changing policy requirements, the delivery and support of a demonstration environment to facilitate clinical engagement, and an additional test environment to ensure that the new software performs as required. An additional £36 million has been spent on supporting the technical configuration of 109,000 local desktop computers and infrastructure to make them compatible with choose and book and with subsequent national programmes for information technology systems. Training has also been provided to trainers and 50,000 end users. These items were also included in the original business case.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms she has put in place to measure the change in the overall administrative burden of managing referrals referred to in the answer of 13 June 2006, Official Report, column 1152W, on the choose and book system. [123608]

Andy Burnham: None. The choose and book system should reduce the overall administrative burden of managing referrals. For example, it eliminates the need for hospitals to correspond with patients over possible appointment times, and absolves practice staff and patients from the need to chase responses to referrals.

Pre-eclampsia

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) women, broken down by age group, and (b) babies in England died from pre-eclampsia in each of the last five years for which figures are available; what recent research she has (i) commissioned and (ii) evaluated on this condition; what recent discussions she has had with members of the medical profession on pre-eclampsia; and if she will make a statement. [119951]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Data on the number of stillbirths and maternal deaths where pre-eclampsia and eclampsia was identified as the cause of death are shown in the following tables. The number of maternal deaths are also broken down by age group.

Babies do not die from pre-eclampsia, but from the effects of it. They mainly die from prematurity associated with early delivery. More rarely, death occurs following eclampsia in the mother where, for example, the oxygen to the baby is interrupted or from antepartum haemorrhage associated with severe pre-eclampsia. Mothers who have experienced chronic pre-eclampsia may have babies who are small for gestational age and they are also at risk.

The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the national health service, and through its health technology assessment programme is undertaking a systematic review of the methods of prediction and prevention of pre-eclampsia. The results of the review will be published early next year.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary care trusts operate referral management schemes; what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of such schemes; what safeguards she has put in place to ensure that referral management schemes operated by the independent sector do not compromise the care offered to patients; whether referral management schemes have the statutory authority to override GP referrals; and if she will make a statement. [123069]

Andy Burnham: Information on how many primary care trusts operate referral management centres is not held centrally. Primary care trusts with their partners, including the independent sector, have been advised that it is good practice to review and where necessary develop existing referral management centres to make sure that they create tangible benefits for patients, and uphold the principles set out in 'Care and resource utilisation: ensuring appropriateness of care', published on 14 December 2006. This is available in the Library and at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidanceArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4141316&chk=iJxRrx

Referral management centres are not subject to legislative provision.

Rice: Imports

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many shipments containing US long grain rice have been rejected at UK ports of entry for failing to comply with emergency EU legislation on GM Rice (LL601) since August 2005; and what the volume was of each shipment. [123683]

Caroline Flint: Commission Decision 578/2006 came into force in August 2006 and required all imports of United States (US) long grain rice into the European Union to be certified free from the unauthorised genetically modified (GM) rice LL601. This Decision was replaced in September by Decision 601/2006, which was amended in November to require such imports to be subject to additional re-testing at the point of import. Two shipments of US long grain rice arriving in the United Kingdom have been rejected, as they arrived in September 2006 without the necessary certificate, and testing at the port indicated the presence of the unauthorised GM rice. These shipments were of 183 and 22 tonnes.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of (a) HIV, (b) chlamydia, (c) gonorrhoea, (d) syphilis, (e) genital warts and (f) genital herpes there have been in England since 1997, (i) in total and (ii) broken down by (A) strategic health authority area and (B) primary care trust area. [123141]

Caroline Flint: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases: Havering

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) 15 to 19-year-olds and (b) adults over the age of 19 in the Havering Primary Care Trust area were (i) diagnosed with and (ii) tested for sexually transmitted infections in each of the last five years. [123585]

Caroline Flint: Information on sexually transmitted infections (STIs) in residents in the Havering Primary Care Trust (PCT) area is not available. Information from Barking and Dagenham, which hosts the nearest/adjacent genitorurinary medicine (GUM) clinic has been given in the table.

Specific sexually transmitted infections diagnosed by age group in the GUM clinic in the Barking and Dagenham PCT, London.

Notes:
1. Information by age-group is not available for attendances at GUM clinics, but is available only for the five major STI diagnoses (uncomplicated chlamydia, uncomplicated gonorrhoea, genital warts, genital herpes and infectious syphilis).
2. The data available from the KC60 statutory returns are for diagnoses made in GUM clinics only. Diagnoses made in other clinical settings, such as general practice, are not recorded in the KC60 dataset.
3. The data available from the KC60 statutory returns are the number of diagnoses made, not the number of patients diagnosed. For example, individuals may be diagnosed with several co-infections and each diagnosis will be counted separately.
4. Data on patients PCT of residence is not available.
5. Data on patients tested for STI by age-groups is not available.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases: Young People

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reported cases there were of sexually transmitted infections in each year between 1999 and 2005 in girls (a) under the age of 15 and (b) aged 15 to 18 years. [123936]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 25 January 2007, Official Report, column 2048W, to the hon. Member for Aldridge-Brownhills (Mr. Shepherd).

Skin Cancer

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the proportion of all cancers for which skin cancer will account in 2022; [124256]

(2) what estimate she has made of the rate of change in the number of skin cancer cases over the next 15 years. [124258]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Departmental analysts estimate that skin cancer as a proportion of all cancers in 2022 will be 3.5 per cent. (this excludes all cases of non-malignant melanoma of the skin).

Additionally, we estimate that the number of cases skin cancer will increase by 41 per cent. over the next 15 years, from an estimated 7,484 cases in 2007 to an estimated 10,550 in 2022 (this excludes all cases of non-malignant melanoma of the skin).

Slimming: Drugs

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of (a) the availability of slimming pills online and (b) the effect of online availability on the prevalence of addiction to such pills. [126041]

Caroline Flint: Addictive drugs, including psychostimulants such as amphetamines, may be included as a constituent of slimming pills online. There is no direct evidence of the impact on the prevalence of addiction to such pills of the availability of such products online.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency-monitors the online availability of medicines. United Kingdom as based websites which are identified dealing in breach of medicines legislation are referred for appropriate enforcement action. Websites discovered operating illegally outside the European Union are referred to the relevant authority in the country concerned for appropriate action.

The Department continues to ensure that there is access to credible information about the risks of all drugs, including the possible dangers involved in addiction. In particular, the information campaign, FRANK, communicates the known harmful effects of all illegal and harmful drugs, including amphetamines.

Smoking: Shropshire

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many council staff in Shropshire will be trained to enforce the smoking ban in bars, restaurants and shops; and how much money has been allocated for this training. [123050]

Caroline Flint: The local authorities that will be responsible for the enforcement of smoke-free legislation are set out in the Smoke-free (Premises and Enforcement) Regulations 2006. As local authorities will enforce smoke-free legislation in a way that is most appropriate to their local areas, no estimate of the number of enforcement officers can be provided, because these decisions will be taken locally.

The funding allocation to individual local authorities is set out in Local Authority Circular (2006) 17. A copy is available in the Library.

In addition, the Department is funding centralised training on smoke-free legislation for two members of staff from each local authority with enforcement responsibilities. The training will be delivered by the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health, and will focus on supportive, non-confrontational and consistent methods to build compliance with smoke-free legislation to create an environment where enforcement action will be minimised.

Social Services

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what targets have been set for local authorities by central Government regarding social care; and when each target was introduced. [124533]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: "National Standards, Local Action; Health and Social Care Standards and Planning Framework 2005/06-2007-08", published in July 2004, set out a standard-based planning framework for health and social care and standards for national health service health care to be used in planning, commissioning and delivering services.

The standards set out are focused on the provision of NHS health care, but recognise the need to develop services in a co-ordinated way, taking full account of the responsibilities of other agencies in providing comprehensive care and in particular, the statutory duties of partnership on all NHS bodies and local authorities established under the Health Act 1999 and the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003. This introduced requirements on both the NHS and local authorities to work together to achieve the co-operation needed to bring about improvements in health care.

The following specific targets for 2005 to 2008 were set for local authority social services and social services in partnership with the NHS:

improve the quality of life and independence of vulnerable older people by supporting them to live in their own homes where possible by:

increasing the proportion of older people being supported to live in their own home by 1 per cent. annually in 2007 and 2008; and increasing by 2008 the proportion of those supported intensively to live at home to 34 per cent. of the total of those being supported at home or in residential care.

increase the participation of problem drug users in drug treatment programmes by 100 per cent. by 2008 (from a 1998 baseline); and increase year-on-year the proportion of users successfully sustaining or completing treatment programmes.

and although measured through NHS indicators, social services provide a major contribution to:

improve health outcomes for people with long-term conditions by offering a personalised care plan for vulnerable people most at risk; and to reduce emergency bed days by 5 per cent. by 2008 (from the expected 2003-04 baseline), through improved care in primary care and community settings for people with long-term conditions.

Turnaround Programme

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Northavon of 15 January 2007, Official Report, column 930W, on the turnaround programme, which organisations were identified as being a category 1 priority requiring urgent intervention. [121856]

Andy Burnham: Between December 2005 and February 2006 KMPG was contracted to undertake an assessment of the financial position of a number of trusts and primary care trusts. It categorised each organisation as follows:

Immediate priority. Need for urgent intervention to drive turnaround.

Additional expertise/resource needed to support the turnaround.

Drive/focus. Maintain high priority of actions.

Regular challenge of management. Encourage to share what works and deliver easy wins.

In the summer of 2006, the national programme office for turnaround reviewed the composition of the turnaround cohort in consultation with SHAs. Thus from August 2006 the turnaround cohort was increased to 143, which became 104 organisations following the PCT reconfiguration in October 2006. The organisations were re-categorised as high priority and priority.

A list of the revised organisations has been placed in the Library.

University Hospital Birmingham: Renewable Energy

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has received on the energy performance and use of renewable energy in the University Hospital Birmingham private finance initiative buildings being erected. [124637]

Andy Burnham: The University Hospital Birmingham private finance initiative buildings which are currently being erected have been designed to be energy efficient. Once completed these buildings will be capable of complying with the Government's new energy efficiency performance target and be at least 20 per cent. more efficient than the current hospital buildings. In addition, the private finance initiative contractors are looking into the possibility of using renewable energy sources at this site.

Varicose Veins: Surgery

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many varicose vein operations were carried out in the NHS in each of the last three years; and what the cost was of such operations in each year. [121414]

Andy Burnham: The number of varicose vein procedures carried out in the national health service in 2003-04, 2004-05 and 2005-06 and the cost to the NHS were as follows:

	Number of procedures	Estimated cost to the NHS (£ million)
2003-04	42,810	41.6
2005-06	35,316	40.2

The number of procedures were obtained from the reference costs data 2004, 2005 and 2005-06 and the total costs were calculated using the unit costs from the same source. The estimates:

cover planned, both day case and elective, admissions for services provided by NHS trusts and primary care trusts but do not include non-elective procedures or procedures carried out in the out-patient setting; include the costs of excess bed days;

exclude any services commissioned or contracted out to non-NHS providers.

West Hertfordshire NHS Trust: Manpower

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from St. Albans City and District Council on financial deficits within West Hertfordshire NHS Trust. [124654]

Andy Burnham: The Department is aware of three letters from St Albans city and district council which have been answered.

Written Questions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to answer question 112026, tabled on 24 January 2007 by the hon. Member for Twickenham, on representations from professional bodies about proposals in the Foster Review. [123030]

Andy Burnham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 1 March 2007, Official Report, column 1550W.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre: Health Services

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what expenditure was incurred by Bedfordshire primary care trust and Bedford primary care trust in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2004-05 in treating detainees from the Yarl's Wood Detention Centre; and how much has been incurred in 2006-07. [127092]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally. This is a local matter. It is for Bedfordshire primary care trust to commission appropriate services for those detained at Yarl's Wood over and above the primary health care services provided on site by the Home Office.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Departments: St George's Day

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans her Department has to celebrate St George's Day. [125785]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport issues the guidance for flying flags on Government buildings. This includes recommending flying the St George's flag on St George's Day, 23 April, on buildings with two or more flag poles, provided it is flown alongside the Union flag with the Union flag in the superior position. Two of DCLG's HQ buildings, Eland House and Ashdown House, have a second flag pole, and the St George's flag will be flown on these to celebrate St George's day.

Discrimination: Sexuality

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what progress has been made on the proposed sexual orientation discrimination regulations; and if she will make a statement. [124841]

Mr. Woolas: The Government laid before Parliament the Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2007 on 8 March 2007. The new regulations will protect individuals from discrimination on the grounds of their sexual orientation in the provision of goods, facilities, services and education, the management and disposal of premises and the exercise of public functions.

Equality Act 2006

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which gay rights organisations she has met in relation to the Equality Act 2006; and how many such meetings she has had. [122248]

Meg Munn: The Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government has had three meetings with Stonewall, a gay rights organisation, regarding the Government's proposals for the Equality Act (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2007.

Housing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the (a) total public subsidy and (b) contributions through (i) capital grants, (ii) gifts of land, (iii) dowries and (iv) gap funding made available to registered social landlords have been since 1997; and what amount this represents per home. [105273]

Yvette Cooper: Capital grant is the major form of public subsidy provided to registered social landlords (RSLs). The following table shows the capital grant provided to RSLs in 2005-06, and the other public subsidy associated with the grant payments.

	£ million
Total public subsidy	1,929
Capital grant	1,795.4
Gifts of land	Not available
Dowries	[1] —
Gap funding	3.9

[1] On dowries provided as part of a large scale voluntary transfer I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 8 January 2007, Official Report, column 370W. We do not hold figures nationally. Details of dowry payments made are matters between the local authority and the registered social landlord.

The average grant per unit of a social rented scheme allocated through the Housing Corporation's affordable housing programme in 2005-06 was around £62,000. A further average £700 was provided through other public subsidy for these schemes.

In 2005-06 the Department entered into five new gap funding arrangements with registered social landlords who received negative value housing stock under large scale voluntary transfer arrangements. The 2005-06 gap funding payments of £3.9 million averaged £510 per property transferred to those five RSLs in that year. A total of 19 large scale voluntary transfers were completed in 2005-06.

Information on the average grant per RSL home funded by English Partnerships funding is not available.

Housing: Inspections

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps her Department takes to ensure that applicants to become home inspectors are checked by the Criminal Records Bureau. [124818]

Yvette Cooper: A Criminal Records Bureau check is a mandatory requirement that must be undertaken by all potential home inspectors when they apply to join a home inspector certification scheme.

Housing: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many new affordable houses were built in Lancashire in each of the last five years. [125315]

Yvette Cooper: The numbers of affordable homes provided in Lancashire in each of the last five years are tabulated as follows. Affordable housing includes social rent, low cost home ownership and other sub-market rental products. Some affordable housing units are provided through the acquisition and refurbishment of dwellings purchased on the open market and these figures are also included.

Affordable homes provided: Lancashire

	Affordable homes provided[1]
2001-02	534
2002-03	623
2003-04	432
2004-05	412
2005-06	547

[1] Includes new build and acquisitions.

Source:
Housing Corporation, statistical returns from local authorities.

Lancashire has been defined to include the following local authorities: Burnley, Chorley, Fylde, Hyndburn, Lancaster, Pendle, Preston, Ribble Valley, Rossendale, South Ribble, West Lancashire, Wyre, Blackpool (unitary) and Blackburn with Darwen (unitary).

Housing: Standards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what information she has on the standard assessment procedure (SAP) rating of homes, broken down by tenure, in (a) 1996, (b) 2001 and (c) the latest period for which figures are available; what the minimum SAP rating is to achieve the decent homes standard; and if she will make a statement. [124598]

Yvette Cooper: The English House Condition Survey (EHCS) reports for 1996, 2001 and 2004 give details of average SAP ratings for dwellings in England, broken down by dwelling type, age and tenure. Copies of these reports are available in the Library of the House, or from the Communities and Local Government website at http://www.communities.gov.uk/ehcs

There is no specific SAP rating required by the decent homes standard. However, in order for a home to be decent it must have both efficient heating and effective insulation, and must be free of category 1 hazards under the housing health and safety rating system, including hazards from cold.

An SAP rating of less than 35 (using the 2001 SAP methodology) has been established as a proxy for the likely presence of a category 1 hazard from excess cold.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, how much funding each neighbourhood renewal area in England received directly from her Department and its predecessor to support regeneration projects in each year from 2001-02 to 2005-06; what funding has been allocated to each local authority for the same purpose in 2006-07 and 2007-08; to which programmes within each neighbourhood renewal area funding has been allocated; and how much was allocated to each programme. [114875]

Mr. Woolas [pursuant to the reply, 17 January 2007, Official Report, c. 1218W]: The Department for Communities and Local Government and its predecessors, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) and the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (DTLR), provided £3.208 billion in direct funding to 90 neighbourhood renewal areas in England from 2001-02 to 2005-06; and has allocated £2.224 billion for the period 2006-07 to 2007-08. Total funding for the period 2001-02 to 2007-08 is £5.433 billion. A detailed breakdown of funding provided to each neighbourhood renewal area and the allocations for each local authority and each programme have been placed in the Library of the House.

Overcrowding: Eastbourne

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many (a) households and (b) children are living in overcrowded housing in (i) Eastbourne and (ii) East Sussex. [125486]

Yvette Cooper: There are two measures of overcrowding—the statutory definition and the bedroom standard.

Using the bedroom standard, the only recent estimate of the number of overcrowded households in East Sussex is 4,000. This is from an ad hoc report based on combined data from both the Survey of English Housing and the Department for Work and Pensions' Family Resources Survey for the three years 2000-01, 2001-02 and 2002-03.

Reliable estimates for the number of children living in overcrowded accommodation in East Sussex are not available. Separate data for Eastbourne are also not available.

Estimates based on the statutory standard are not available because the underlying data are not collected systematically. A one-off estimate was made in 2004 that approximately 20,000 households across the whole of England were in conditions of overcrowding that breached the statutory standard. This estimate was based on data from the Survey of English Housing for the period 2000-01 to 2002-03 and from the 2001 English House Condition Survey. Equivalent estimates for East Sussex and Eastbourne are not available.

Public Footpaths

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make it a requirement for planning authorities to consult the Ramblers Association and other recognised interest groups when planning applications are made under the Town and Country Planning Acts which include proposals for the creation of new public footpaths, cycleways and bridle paths. [124647]

Yvette Cooper: Local planning authorities are already required to inform these groups of changes to rights of way by sending them copies of the statutory notices of the relevant orders. The orders are the Town and Country Planning (Public Path Orders) Regulations 1993, the Public Path Orders Regulations 1993, the Wildlife and Countryside (Definitive Maps and Statements) Regulations 1993 and the Rail Crossing Extinguishment and Diversion Orders Regulations 1993.

Department of the Environment circular 2/93 "Public Rights of Way" advised local authorities that they should also consult these groups before making these orders. We have no evidence that these long-standing arrangements are not working in practice.

My Department intends, however, to consult on matters relating to statutory consultees on planning applications later this year, and, it will be open to the Ramblers Association and other rights of way interests to make representations about their status as consultees.

Public Houses

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) how many building preservation notices were placed on public houses in each of the last three years; and if she will list them; [125070]

(2) how many successful appeals there were against building preservation notices placed on public houses in each of the last three years; and if she will list them. [125069]

Yvette Cooper: We have identified one public house, the Old Parr's Head in the London borough of Islington, which has been the subject of a building preservation notice over the last three years. That case did not result in the building being added to the statutory list of buildings of special architectural or historic interest. There is no procedure for appealing against building preservation notices.

Regeneration: Finance

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the name is of each organisation which has received funding from the Single Pot. [125878]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

Regional development agencies annually spend in excess of £1.7 billion of Single Pot funding with over 6,000 external organisations to deliver a variety of initiatives, services, and projects. The details of these transactions are not held centrally and so further information cannot be given owing to disproportionate costs.

Tattooing: Standards

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which councils in the UK operate a system of minimum standards and registration for tattoo parlours. [124888]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

Local authorities in England have powers to regulate businesses providing tattooing under the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982. The 1982 Act enables local authorities to require the registration of tattooing practitioners and premises and to introduce local byelaws about the hygiene of the practitioner, premises and equipment used.

Local tattooing byelaws are confirmed by the Secretary of State. However, information about those councils in England which have had local tattooing byelaws confirmed could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, as it would involve identifying, obtaining and examining departmental records dating back to 1982.

Local authorities in London generally use powers in private legislation to regulate tattooing businesses—the Greater London Council (General Powers) Act 1981 or the London Local Authorities Act 1991. Therefore, the Department does not hold the information requested relating to London local authorities.

Information relating to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland may be requested from the relevant administrations.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 6 December 2006, Official Report, column 474W, on the Valuation Office Agency, if she will give an example of a feature associated with a dwelling currently coded with WK that has value significance. [114574]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the VOA website at www.voa.gov.uk.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Poverty

13. Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to reduce the level of child poverty in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [126374]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Work is the most sustainable route out of poverty. With record numbers of people in work, we are making good progress. This includes the Gentleman's constituency where there is an 82 per cent. employment rate—which is even better than the UK average.

Departmental Office Closures

14. Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will discuss with the Secretary of State for the Home Department and the Chancellor of the Exchequer the effect of the closure of their Department's offices in North Northamptonshire on numbers of jobseeker's allowance claims in the area. [126375]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The number on JSA has fallen by a quarter in Wellingborough since May 1997. I have no current plans to meet the Home Secretary or the Chancellor to discuss these matters.

Personal Accounts

15. Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what responses he has received to his Command Paper, "Personal accounts: a new way to save". [126376]

James Purnell: The consultation on the detailed proposals set out in the White Paper ends on 20 March. The proposal to establish personal accounts has been broadly welcomed in this House and by many others. The contribution on our detailed proposals ends next week. In light of these responses it is our intention to bring forward legislation in the next parliamentary session.

Pensions

16. Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what support his Department has made available to those who lost occupational pensions prior to the introduction of the pensions protection fund. [126377]

James Purnell: The Pensions Act 2004 puts in place a range of measures to provide support, advice and protection to schemes and to scheme members.

In particular, the financial assistance scheme provides support for members of defined benefit occupational pension schemes which started to wind up, underfunded, between 1 January 1997 and 5 April 2005.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his oral statement in response to an intervention by the hon. Member for Leyton and Wanstead of 16 January 2007, Official Report, columns 668-69, on the Pensions Bill, if he will ensure that personal accounts in which individuals are auto-enrolled are by default subject to lifestyling; and if he will make a statement. [123239]

James Purnell: There will be a requirement for personal accounts to include a default investment fund for members who do not exercise an investment choice. The default investment fund will be lifestyled to ensure that risk is reduced as members approach retirement.

Other investment choices will exist for members and will be determined by the executive delivery authority and, subsequently, the personal accounts governing body, using their skills, expertise and consideration of the pension's environment. These additional investment choices will take into account the needs of members and may or may not include lifestyling.

Armed Forces: Pensions

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how he expects survivors' benefits to be arranged as an aspect of the personal accounts in the planned pension reform; in what circumstances and to whom a survivor's benefit will be paid; in what circumstances it would not be paid; what would happen to an individual's personal account money in those circumstances; and if he will make a statement. [123227]

James Purnell: Personal accounts will be a multi-employer occupational pension scheme. Arrangements for dealing with survivors' and dependants' benefits will be a matter for the scheme rules, as is the case for other occupational pensions, and will need to operate within the existing legal framework.

Benefits

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the claimant off-flow rates from (a) incapacity benefit and (b) severe disability allowance were in each of the last 15 years, broken down by reason for leaving the benefit; [101750]

(2) how many payments for (a) incapacity benefit and (b) severe disability allowance payments were terminated (i) as a result of employment and (ii) for other reasons, broken down by reason in (A) each London borough and (B) the UK in each of the last five years. [101751]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the proportion of homes in each Government office region which had not received leaflets on the dangers of carbon monoxide poisoning by December 2006. [123165]

Mrs. McGuire: This information is not available in the format requested.

However, research commissioned by the Health and Safety Executive in 2006 from University college London suggests that some 45 per cent. of households have received no information about gas safety issues. The Government have called on the gas industry to show leadership in raising public awareness of gas safety issues among the public.

Children: Maintenance

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the Child Support Agency determines child maintenance amounts for payments between parents who are subject to a joint residency order with regard to the care of their child. [122128]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the chief executive. He will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 12 March 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how the Child Support Agency determines child maintenance amounts for payments between parents who are subject to a Joint Residency Order with regard to the care of their child. [122128]

For a case under old rules where, a non-resident parent has care for a child for at least 104 nights a year (that is, two nights a week on average), an allowance can be made in the maintenance formula for sharing the care of that child. The maintenance payment due to the child is then reduced pro-rata by the number of nights a week the child stays with him.

For a shared-care case under the new rules, if a non-resident parent provides overnight care for a child for at least 52 nights a year, an adjustment is also made to the amount of child maintenance due.

Child maintenance is not reduced if the child stays with the non-resident parent for less than 52 nights a year.

If the care of the child is shared on a 50 per cent. basis, the entitlement to Child Benefit will determine who the parent with care is for child maintenance purposes.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he intends, under the system proposed in the White Paper 'A new system of child maintenance', that child maintenance cases where both parents' names appear on the birth certificate will be given priority over cases where the father is unknown. [123160]

Mr. Plaskitt: There are no plans to give priority to child maintenance cases where both parents' names appear on the birth certificate. However, as now, a person who applies for child maintenance should provide sufficient information to identify the non-resident parent.

Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will review the effectiveness of data collection and reporting systems at the Child Support Agency. [126358]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the right hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 12 March 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will review the effectiveness of data collection and reporting systems at the Child Support Agency. [126358]

Until 2005, the Agency's IT difficulties meant that robust information regarding cases on the new computer system was unavailable. In order to resolve these difficulties, the Agency begun working with the Department's Information Directorate (responsible for National Statistics and Business Information) to revise and quality assure statistical data. Since then, much progress has been made.

Under the Operational Improvement Plan the management information produced by the Child Support Agency is expanding and improving. Additional tables have been made available in each successive Quarterly Summary Statistics report since September 2005, and this report now provides a much fuller picture of the Agency's operations than has been available in the past.

The Agency's management information and data reporting is also undergoing an increasingly robust scrutiny process. Whilst this has resulted in the recalculation of some information previously reported, it represents an important part of a process to ensure the Child Support Agency has a highly effective process of data collection and reporting.

The Child Support Agencies Quarterly Summary Statistics can be accessed online at www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/csa.asp

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress his Department is making on achieving targets set out for the Child Support Agency under the operational improvement plan. [126361]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 12 March 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what progress his Department is making on achieving targets set out for the Child Support Agency under the Operational Improvement Plan. [126361]

The initial phase of the Operational Improvement Plan has focused on the organizational and operational restructuring of the Agency, and the training of our people to increase our capacity and capability. No commitments were made for the first year but once this phase is complete we can expect to see more clearly the benefits of the Plan.

However, even now early results show improvements in several key areas and more money is already getting to more children; at the end of December 2006 compared with a year ago the Agency was providing:

More money for more children—58,000 more children were in receipt of maintenance or had a maintenance-direct arrangement in place.

A higher proportion of non-resident parents paying or using maintenance direct—59 per cent of new scheme cases with a liability made a payment or arranged Maintenance Direct (up from 54 per cent)

A fall in uncleared applications of 13 per cent (across both schemes) since March 2006 which in the last three months have been at their lowest since comparable records began in May 1999.

Applications cleared more quickly: 55 per cent within twelve weeks (up from 49 per cent and meeting target level for March 2007) and 74 per cent within six months (up from 64 per cent)

Improving Client Service—The Agency answered 97 per cent of queued calls over 12 months (up from 90 per cent)

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Departments: Consultants

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which external consultants were used by (a) his Department and (b) each of its agencies in relation to private finance initiatives in 2005-06; and what the (i) nature and (ii) cost of the work was in each case. [123008]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department has one existing private finance initiative contract, let in 1998 and expanded in 2003, with Land Securities Trillium (LST) for the provision of fully serviced accommodation. To support the Department in the management of this complex PFI contract, external consultants have been commissioned to provide professional advice. The costs incurred by the Department in year 2005-6 are described in the table.

External consultants	Nature of the work	Cost of the work in 2005-06 (£)
Lovells.	To provide legal advice on the contract and contractual interpretation	221,151

Departments: Marketing

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the expenditure has been on (a) managing his Department's corporate identity and (b) branding in each year since 1997-98. [123167]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed on 8 June 2001 from parts of the former Department of Social Security, the former Department for Education and Employment, and the Employment Service. Information prior to 2001 is not held centrally and can be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

To accommodate this change, the Department's corporate identity needed to be developed. This work included new branding design, staff research and consultation, and the application of the logos to key items such as stationery, building signs and electronic media. This cost for this was £232,044.

A review of our corporate identity was undertaken in 2004, which included a branding review. This was to support the organisational design with a new corporate image. The cost of this review was £92,751, and included design, product management and production.

We have this last year developed easy to understand guidelines for use by staff and also external organisations, so that the integrity of the Department's identity is upheld where it is used or displayed. The cost of the development and production of these guidelines has been £45,663.

Disability Allowances

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants of (a) incapacity benefit, (b) disability living allowance and (c) severe disablement allowance there were in each year since its introduction, broken down by type of disability; and what the expenditure was in each case in each year. [116596]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Financial Assistance Scheme: Take-up

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people have registered for assistance under the financial assistance scheme; [120243]

(2) how much has been paid out by the financial assistance scheme; [120306]

(3) how many people are receiving payments from the financial assistance scheme. [120307]

James Purnell: It is for the trustees of the pension schemes to apply for assistance rather than individual members. Of 995 schemes that have been notified to FAS, 659 have subsequently qualified. 'Notification' of a scheme occurs when trustees or members formally notify FAS of their scheme's basic details, after which a scheme can then be considered for FAS qualification. We estimate that 40,000 members of qualified schemes will be eligible for FAS. The vast majority of these potential recipients have yet to reach payment age and our best estimate is that perhaps 9,000 people are already 65.

On the basis of operational data to the end of December, we estimate that trustees have made applications for assistance for 1,900 people. We are only able to pay them once the trustees have provided acceptable data on the members, which is taking longer than we had hoped.

As at 23 February 2007 the financial assistance scheme was making payments to 967 qualifying members. A further 79 will be paid as soon as they have confirmed their personal details. This gives a total of 1,046 members who have been assessed as eligible for assistance.

As at 23 February 2007 payments had totalled £3,421,457 gross, (£2,656,622 net).

Housing Benefit

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many requests to suspend the direct payment of local housing allowance to tenants have been received by local authorities in the 18 pathfinder areas; how many have resulted in the suspension of direct payments to tenants; and if he will make a statement. [125028]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Housing: Repossession Orders

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many households in the private sector in each of the 18 Pathfinder areas have (a) accrued arrears, (b) been served with a notice of possession and (c) been evicted; and if he will make a statement; [122410]

(2) what proportion of local housing allowance claimants in each of the 18 Pathfinder areas have (a) accrued arrears, (b) been served a notice of possession and (c) been evicted; and if he will make a statement. [122411]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Incapacity Benefit

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of new incapacity benefit claims were for reasons of mental ill health in the last period for which figures are available. [126372]

Mr. Jim Murphy: In the year to May 2006, 34.5 per cent. of all new incapacity benefit claimants cited mental and behavioural conditions as the primary reason for their claim.

We are working with stakeholders as part of our welfare reform plans to address the many barriers people with mental health conditions still face in playing their full role in the economy and the workplace.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of incapacity benefit claimants ceased to claim the benefit in each year from 1976-77 to 2005-06; and if he will make a statement. [102235]

Mrs. McGuire: There is a strong relationship between on-flows and off-flows from incapacity benefit, and generally, both have been falling year on year as a proportion of the caseload. So falling off-flows are a result of falling on-flows.

Information is not available prior to 1996. The available information is in the following table.

Incapacity benefit terminations in the year ending February each year as a proportion of the caseload

	Percentage
1996	38.5
1997	39.4
1998	38.8
1999	36.6
2000	35.4
2001	29.3
2002	29.1
2003	27.9
2004	27.5

1.These figures have been updated to include late notified terminations, including terminations for retirement pension.
2. All figures have been revised, and may be subject to further change; Figures prior to 2004 are subject to minor changes. Figures for 2004 include fewer late notifications than previous quarters and will be subject to greater change in future. Figures for the latest quarter do not include any late notifications and are subject to major changes in future quarters. For illustration purposes, total terminations for May 2004 increased by 33 per cent. in the year following their initial release.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the estimated on-flows for incapacity benefits are for each year to 2019-20, broken down by (a) region and (b) the age groups (i) 18 to 29, (ii) 30 to 39, (iii) 40 to 49, (iv) 50 to 59 and (v) 60 years and over. [124077]

4. These projections do not take into account any of the proposed policy changes in the papers entitled: "A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work", or "Security in retirement: towards a new pensions system."

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individuals who would otherwise qualify for incapacity benefit are affected by (a) whole and (b) partial withdrawal of benefit owing to their receipt of an occupational pension; and what the total annual benefit forgone from this clawback was in each of the last five years. [124080]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is in the following tables.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many incapacity benefit recipients in each Government region experienced (a) mental and behavioural and (b) physical disorders in each year since 1997, broken down by type of disorder. [124081]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to answer of 8 November 2006, Official Report, column 1630W, on Jobcentre Plus, what methodology the Department used to generate the estimates. [124090]

Mrs. McGuire: Forecasts of incapacity benefits are constructed by extending historic patterns in benefit on-flows and off-flows into the future. Events such as entering the benefit, moving between rates, gaining additional entitlements and leaving the benefit are simulated on the basis past trends examined by age and gender. Assumptions covering these events give rise to a predicted future caseload.

Jobseekers Allowance: Disqualification

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) fixed and (b) varied length referrals were made to jobseeker's allowance claimants in each quarter since 1997; and how many of each type of referral resulted in a benefit sanction being imposed in each quarter. [123581]

Lone Parents: Employment

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what evidence his Department has collected on the barriers to work for lone parents with children aged over 11. [126364]

Mr. Jim Murphy: A large majority of lone parents say that they want to work. We want to provide lone parents with the help and support to enable them to do so. We understand that in order to do this we need to address the barriers that lone parents face in returning to work. The Department collects a range of evidence on the choices and constraints faced by lone parents in making decisions about paid work. Many of these have also been raised in two independent reviews by Lisa Marker and David Freud. We will need to consider these reports carefully before we move ahead.

New Deal

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of new deal leavers entered sustained, unsubsidised jobs in each year since the scheme began. [111293]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information is in the following table.

Percentage of leavers to sustained unsubsidised employment from new deal

	New deal for young people	New deal 25 plus	New deal for lone parents
1998	51	—	9
1999	45	—	20
2000	43	—	31
2001	42	32	35
2002	40	28	35
2003	40	27	31
2004	39	30	30
2005	34	28	28

Notes:
1. Years are calendar years.
2. Latest complete year information is to December 2005.
3. The percentages in the table are calculated from all those who leave the programme, regardless of whether they directly enter employment.
4. A person is defined as leaving new deal for young people and new deal 25 plus to sustained, unsubsidised, employment if they do not return to claim jobseeker's allowance within 13 weeks.
5. Information for leavers from new deal 25 plus is only available from April 2001 onwards.
6. A person is defined as leaving new deal for lone parents to sustained, unsubsidised, employment if they have gained a job that lasts at least 13 weeks, as measured within the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study.
7. A measure of sustainability is not available for new deal for partners and new deal 50 plus.
8. Although a measure of sustainability is available for new deal for disabled people (NDDP), information is not available on whether the immediate destination of leavers from NDDP is to sustained, unsubsidised, employment.
9. Start dates for each programme are: New Deal for Young People: January 1998; New Deal 25 Plus: July 1998; New Deal for Lone Parents: October 1998.

Personal Accounts Consultation

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have responded to the personal accounts consultation process. [118766]

James Purnell: We received around 350 responses to the consultation on the May 2006 White Paper, "Security in retirement: towards a new pensions system". The range of measures set out in this document included proposals on personal accounts.

Further proposals for personal accounts were set out in the December White Paper "Personal accounts: a new way to save". The formal consultation on this is due to end on 20 March. As of 2 February we have so far received a total of nine responses; six from business and three from individuals.

However, the consultation is still under way and we expect the majority of responses to come in close to the consultation deadline.

Personal Income

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the median income for a (a) man and (b) woman aged (i) 21 to 25, (ii) 25 to 30, (iii) 30 to 40, (iv) 40 to 50, (v) 50 to 60, (vi) 60 to 65, (vii) 65 to 75, (viii) 75 to 85 and (ix) over 85 was in each year since 1980. [117852]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Information on individual earnings and income for Great Britain is available in the "Individual Income 1996-97 to 2004-05" publication.

Consistent figures for male and female median incomes are not available prior to 1996-97. Details of median income from 1996-97 to 2004-05 for men and women are shown in the following tables:

Poverty: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of children were living below the poverty line in Lancashire in each of the last 10 years. [125313]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information requested is not available.

Specific information regarding low income for Great Britain is available in "Households Below Average Income statistical report 1994/95-2004/05". The threshold of below 60 per cent. contemporary median income is the most commonly used in reporting trends in low income. Data are not available below regional level so we are not able to provide figures for Lancashire.

Remploy

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made with the review of Remploy. [126371]

Mrs. McGuire: To help develop a five-year restructuring plan the Remploy Board has established a joint working group with the consortium of trade unions, has held informal discussions with other key stakeholders, and is considering proposals for modernising the company to help greater numbers of disabled people into work.

Social Security Benefits: Pensions

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether personal pension accounts will be disregarded for capital assessments in income-related benefits; at what age income from personal pension accounts will be attributed in the assessment of income-related benefits; and what the method of assessment will be of proposed rate of income attribution. [119424]

James Purnell: The introduction of personal accounts will extend the benefits of private pension saving to those on moderate to low income who do not have access to a good employer pension scheme. Together with the reforms to the state pension system which will provide a solid foundation on which to build, this is designed to encourage and support individuals in saving for their retirement.

Personal accounts will be designed to complement rather than compete with existing successful pension provision. We therefore think it is right that funds from all savings or pensions vehicles are treated in the same way, and there are no plans to treat funds associated with personal accounts differently.

The rules, which will also apply to personal accounts, allow funds held under a personal pension scheme by a customer or partner to be disregarded in the calculation of a customer's capital in income-related benefits—income support, jobseeker's allowance (income-based) housing benefit, council tax benefit and pension credit-until the holder reaches the age of 60.

If at any age the holder receives income from the personal pension scheme, that income will be taken fully into account in the assessment of entitlement to an income-related benefit.

However, if a customer aged 60 or over fails to claim the income to which he would be entitled or fails to purchase an annuity with the funds available, the customer will be treated as possessing the amount of income forgone from the date on which it could have been expected to be claimed.

Up to 25 per cent. of any personal pension can be taken as a lump sum, and if this option is taken, that lump sum will be treated as capital for the purposes of income related support in the normal way.

Those with savings pots below £15,000 may take advantage of the trivial commutation rules and take their full savings pot as a taxable lump sum. When someone opts to do that, the lump sum will be subject to the normal capital rules within the income- related benefits.

Social Security Benefits: Poverty

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of how many and what percentage of eligible but not receiving claimants for (a) pension credit, (b) incapacity benefit, (c) jobseeker's allowance and (d) council tax benefit are (i) living below the 60 per cent. relative poverty line and (ii) in each income decile. [124082]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information is not available in the format requested.

Estimates of the percentage of eligible non-recipients of pension credit, jobseeker's allowance (income-based) and council tax benefit living below the 60 per cent. of contemporary median income, and the proportions in each quintile of the income distribution, can be found in the DWP report entitled "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up in 2004/2005". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

Information on incapacity benefit is not available.

Social Security Benefits: Take-up

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in which regions there is low take-up of (a) pension credit, (b) council tax benefit and (c) housing benefit; and what steps are being taken to increase take-up in such regions. [124801]

Mr. Plaskitt: Estimates of take-up are not available below the level of Great Britain. The latest estimates of the take-up of the main income-related benefits—income support, pension credit, housing benefit-council tax benefit and jobseeker's allowance (income-based) in Great Britain—can be found in the DWP report entitled "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up in 2004/2005". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

We are doing a lot to improve take-up. Pensioners applying for pension credit can now access housing benefit and council tax benefit over the phone at the same time via the Pension Service.

The Pension Service is undertaking a wide range of steps to encourage eligible pensioners to claim pension credit—for example, writing to everyone who may have an entitlement to pension credit, encouraging them to apply.

The Pension Service local service is also continuing to work very closely with local partners (including local authorities as well as voluntary organisations such as Help the Aged and Age Concern) to maximise take up by pensioners of all of their entitlements.

Training: Basic Skills

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many client referrals were made from jobcentres to training providers who have won contracts for the provision of basic skills under Learning and Skills Council funding in each of the last six months. [123155]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information is in the following table.

Referrals to Learning and Skills Council basic skills provision

	Number
October	307
November	763
December	946
January	887

Note:
Referrals did not start until late September. The September figures are included in October data as many providers were not set up to accept referrals until October or later.

Voluntary Organisations: Catholic Church

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost was to the public purse of funding for Catholic welfare agencies, excluding those providing housing or adoption services, in each year since 1997. [119979]

Mr. Jim Murphy: [holding answer 19 February 2007]: The Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) was formed in June 2001 from the Department of Social Security (DSS), the Employment Service (ES) and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment (DfEE). Any financial information would only be available from that time.

The Department for Work and Pensions has not provided any direct funding for Catholic welfare agencies.

The Department's agencies have links with many voluntary and charitable organisations and in a number of cases have entered into contracts with them. However, it is not possible to say if payments have been made to any particular faith-based agencies as no record is kept of a supplier's religious affiliation.

I announced on 19 February that I have asked the Department's commercial director to develop a centre of expertise within the procurement team working with the third sector, to specifically cover the needs of faith-based groups. In doing this, I want to make sure that access to contracts for faith groups can be on an even footing with all other private and voluntary sector organisations who wish to compete to deliver our services.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

House of Lords: Powers

Andrew George: To ask the Leader of the House what plans he has to define the (a) powers and (b) functions of the House of Lords in future legislation. [127290]

Mr. Straw: Following the vote in the House of Lords on 14 March 2007 on composition of a reformed House, I propose to reconvene the cross-party talks, which I chair, to assess the outcome of the debates in both Houses. The Government will consider the next move and I will return to this House to make a detailed statement on the way forward.

House of Lords: Reform

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Leader of the House if he will estimate the annual cost of a fully elected upper house. [127296]

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Leader of the House (1) what estimate he has made of the likely capital cost of new (a) facilities and (b) equipment for a reformed House of Lords; [126857]

(2) what estimate he has made of the (a) percentage and (b) actual change in running costs likely to arise from a reformed House of Lords under each option outlined in the Motions debated on 6 and 7 March in the House. [126868]

Mr. Straw: Detailed analysis will be provided once the proposals for a reformed House of Lords are much firmer. I propose to reconvene the cross-party group, which I chair, to assess the outcome of the debates in both Houses. I will discuss the issue within Government and will return to this House to make a detailed statement on the way forward.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Bovine Tuberculosis: Disease Control

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many cattle were compulsorily slaughtered owing to bovine tuberculosis in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) home country and (b) county; [125690]

(2) how many (a) cattle and (b) herds were tested for bovine tuberculosis in each year since 1997, broken down by (i) home country and (ii) county. [125691]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have arranged for the information requested to be placed in the Libraries of the House. Detailed county statistics for 1998-2005 are also available on the DEFRA website:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/stats/county.htm

Flood Control

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of (a) creating natural wetlands, (b) the restoration of natural flood plains and (c) the use of vegetation and planting to trap and direct flood water; and what steps he is taking to encourage such methods; [124946]

(2) what area his Department added to existing (a) natural wetland, (b) restoration of natural flood plains and (c) flood defence walls to prevent flooding in populated areas in each of the last three years for which records are available; [124947]

(3) how much his Department spent on the (a) creation of natural wetland, (b) restoration of natural flood plains and (c) flood defence walls to prevent flooding in populated areas in each of the last three years for which records are available. [124948]

Ian Pearson: In 2004-05 and 2005-06 the Environment Agency spent £17.7 million on wetland habitat and species conservation in England and this included the creation of 943 hectares of Biodiversity Action Plan habitat, of which 809 hectares were floodplain habitats.

Data collation on wetland habitat creation expenditure and delivery commenced in 2004-05 and the figures for 2006-07 are not yet available.

From their records, the Environment Agency's direct expenditure on flood walls in each of the years 2003-04, 2004-05 and 2005-06 in completed major capital projects was £10.5 million, £13.7 million and £35 million respectively. The total construction cost of projects which included these walls was £31 million in 2003-04, £37.3 million in 2004-05 and £81.9 million in 2005-06.

These costs relate only to major capital projects (those with a construction cost in excess of circa £250,000) undertaken by the Environment Agency that were completed during these periods.

One of the aims of "Making Space for Water, the Government's strategy for flood and costal erosion risk management", is to work with natural processes and develop multiple objective approaches that deliver flood risk management and, where possible, other benefits such as environmental, amenity or regeneration.

"Making Space for Water" provides the policy framework for more holistic approaches to flood and coastal erosion risk management. It is drawing on the lessons learnt within the regions at numerous freshwater and saline wetland creation sites. The creation of new targets (Outcome Measures), for all operating authorities, will ensure that habitat creation and the restoration of natural flood plains form a central part of future investment decision making.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding was allocated to the National Energy Efficiency scheme in each year since 1997. [125932]

Ian Pearson: While there is no single, national energy efficiency scheme, we do have a UK Energy Efficiency Action Plan (published in 2004). This brings together all of our separate funding streams and associated policies into a framework for improving energy efficiency across the business, public and household sectors. Energy efficiency policies deliver about half the carbon savings in our Climate Change Programme. Details on the funding for these various schemes is provided in the following table:

£ million

	Carbon Trust formed 2001	Energy Saving Trust	Warm front 2000 inception	Climate change communication	Community energy	UK emissions trading scheme
1997-98	n/a	19.45	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a
1998-99	n/a	19	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a
1999-2000	n/a	22.57	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a
2000-01	n/a	21.97	[1]	n/a	n/a	n/a
2001-02	[2]	22.396	[1]	n/a	n/a	[3]
2002-03	[2]	23.696	[1]	n/a	0.43	[3]
2003-04	[2]	24.481	[1]	n/a	4.31	[3]
2004-05	[2]	27.372	[1]	n/a	4.9	[3]
2005-06	[2]	26.44	[1]	[4]12	5.24	[3]

[2] £207 million total expenditure from 2001-02 to 2005-06.
[3] £215 million for five year programme.
[4] For three year programme.

The funding information provided in the table is not the end of the story as our policies also help generate additional investment. For example, the Energy Efficiency Commitment, our key household policy lever, generated £600 million worth of energy efficiency investment in households in the first three year phase to 2005 alone. We are committed to an obligation on energy suppliers to at least 2020.

Pollution Control: Fees and Charges

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his estimate is of the average percentage of (a) net profits and (b) turnover for (i) small farms and (ii) large farms which is represented by the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Regulation charges of (A) £1,471 and (B) £1,844. [122630]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control (IPPC) Regulation charges quoted are the pro rata charges which the Environment Agency would apply in respect of permits for intensive livestock installations issued in August 2007 covering the period to March 2008. The annual permit charges thereafter are currently set at £2,229 and £2,794 for small and large installations respectively.

IPPC applies to intensive poultry rearing installations with places for more than 40,000 birds, and to intensive pig rearing installations with places for more than 2,000 production pigs or 750 sows. For charging purposes, any installation with places more than 10 times these thresholds is regarded as "large".

Information on profits and turnover is held on a basis in which large farm businesses are those considered sufficient to occupy two or more standard labour requirements. Standard labour requirement (SLR) for a farm business represents the labour requirement (in full-time equivalents) for all the agricultural activities on the farm. All intensive livestock installations subject to IPPC are "large" in these terms.

For poultry installations, annual charges for IPPC permits represent on average 0.2 per cent. of turnover and 5.0 per cent. of net profits, or 0.3 per Cent. and 6.2 per cent. respectively if it is a "large" installation for IPPC purposes. For pig installations, the corresponding figures are 0.4 per cent. and 3.5 per cent, or 0.5 per cent and 4.4 per cent.

Radioactive Materials: Floods

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government has made of the potential (a) environmental and (b) public health consequences of (i) storm-related and (ii) sea-related flooding of a (A) nuclear power plant and (B) radioactive waste storage site. [123412]

Ian Pearson: Assessments of these flood risks are addressed as part of standard regulatory processes.

The safety of nuclear installations in the UK is regulated by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (NII), which is part of the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). Nuclear installations include all UK nuclear power plants and the Low Level Radioactive Waste Repository (LLWR) near to Drigg in Cumbria. Such installations must be licensed under the Nuclear Installations Act (1965). The safety of a nuclear plant is the responsibility of the licensee, who is required to submit to the NII a written demonstration of safety, the 'safety case'.

NII requires that operators' safety cases address internal and external hazards, including various types of flooding. NII assesses the operators' safety cases to establish whether they are adequate. Safety cases are 'living documents' which are periodically reviewed and updated to reflect changing conditions. Changes in flood risk, whether due to changes in natural phenomena or man-made, are taken into account during such reviews.

The environment agencies (the Environment Agency in England and Wales, and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency in Scotland) regulate disposals of radioactive waste. The environment agencies would require any applicant wishing to develop a proposed disposal facility to assess impacts from a wide range of events and processes including those such as coastal erosion. This is in order to demonstrate that risks associated with radioactivity and other potential hazards would be acceptably low. Impacts from coastal erosion were considered in some detail during a recent review of the radioactive waste disposal authorisation for the LLWR near to Drigg in Cumbria.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Northern Ireland Commissioner for Victims and Survivors

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Solicitor-General what progress has been made in the inquiry by Peter Scott, QC into criticisms made by Mr. Justice Girvan of the Northern Ireland Office. [127258]

The Solicitor-General: Since I last updated the House, Mr. Scott has received a further 28 lever-arch files of documentation, bringing the total to 41 files. Most of the documents comprise the files maintained contemporaneously by the two departments concerned, and require careful scrutiny to identify those which are central to the matters which Mr. Scott is investigating.

Mr. Scott has sent questionnaires to 17 potential witnesses and received responses from 14 of them to date. He expects to receive the outstanding responses by the middle of this month. There may be one or two other witnesses whom he will also want to question in due course.

When he has completed his scrutiny of the documentation, Mr. Scott will interview any witness of whom he requires further information or clarification of their statement. Some of those interviews will take place in Belfast later this month and the remainder in London, probably in April and May. He will submit his report to the Attorney-General as soon as possible after completing those interviews and taking any steps which may emerge from them and are necessary to complete his report.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Courts: Salisbury

Robert Key: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she expects (a) construction to start on the new courthouses in Salisbury and (b) the new courts to come into service. [126434]

Ms Harman: We expect that construction on the new courthouse in Salisbury will commence by the end of July 2007, with the courts coming into service in the summer of 2009.

Judges: Housing

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will assess the merits of providing judges with an accommodation allowance per night to be spent either on lodgings or on hotel accommodation at their discretion; if she will estimate the change in costs which would result from the introduction of such a system; and if she will make a statement. [125996]

Ms Harman: While the provision of judges' lodgings is kept under constant review, and the comparative cost of hotels considered, there is presently no intention to provide judges with an independent accommodation allowance while simultaneously running lodgings.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what (a) estimate she has made of the cost and (b) assessment she has made of the merits of providing judges with hotel accommodation instead of judges' lodgings in each location where lodgings are situated; and if she will make a statement. [125997]

Ms Harman: A straight comparison of the cost between housing judges in hotels or accommodating them in lodgings is not easily made. Judges' lodgings are an essential requirement for accommodating high court judges sitting outside of London. They provide a safe and secure environment and enable the judges to work in privacy and ensure confidentiality for extended periods, which hotels are unable to match except at prohibitive cost.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will discontinue judges' lodgings where they are occupied by judges for less than 50 nights in the year; and if she will make a statement. [125998]

Ms Harman: In the current locations where we have a requirement for less than 50 judge nights per year we do not own lodgings; instead we rent them.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what changes to the (a) arrangements for and (b) availability of judges' lodgings have been made since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [126092]

Ms Harman: The following are the major changes that have taken place since 1997:

The lodgings at Mold was closed.

The lodgings at Exeter, Lewes, Oxford and Truro have been replaced with better value accommodation.

There have been a significant number of actions to reduce running costs including the removal of the outdated butler posts.

A more cost-effective system for getting judges to court has been introduced using the Government Car and Despatch Agency.

Introduction of new finance and accounting regimes reducing the management overheads of running the lodgings.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which five judges' lodgings had (a) the lowest occupancy in judge nights and (b) the highest cost per judge night in the last period for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [126093]

Ms Harman: The five judges' lodgings with the lowest occupancy in judge nights during 2005-06 (all of which are hired, not owned) were Warwick, Caernarfon, Lincoln, Northampton and Worcester.

The highest cost per judge night during 2005-06 were Maidstone, Swansea, Winchester, St. Albans and Chelmsford.

The Maidstone lodging is being sold.

In addition, English Partnerships has been meeting management, maintenance, security and other costs at the site from 1 July 2001, and will continue to do so until the redevelopment of the arena by the Anschutz Entertainment Group is completed, expected in summer 2007, at which time Anschutz takes on full responsibility for the dome structure and its immediate surroundings.

All of English Partnerships' costs (gross total of around £32 million to date) from July 2001 to the completion of the arena's construction, and including the costs of the entire sale process, are expected to be recovered from sale proceeds, forecast at £550 million over the period of the deal, which lasts for around another 19 years.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Developing Countries: HIV Infection

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made in making the range of drugs relevant to HIV/AIDS available to people in the poorest countries; and if he will make a statement. [126395]

Mr. Thomas: The international effort to achieve universal access has helped boost the numbers on anti-retroviral drugs (ARV) treatment. In sub-Saharan Africa, the numbers on treatment rose 10-fold from 2003 to 2006 from 100,000 to over 1 million. This is equivalent to 23 per cent. of those needing treatment. Similarly, the number of sites where people can receive treatment has increased significantly, including in Malawi and Zambia where there has been increases of 20 and 30-fold respectively. As of 1 December 2006, Global Fund-supported programmes have put 770,000 people on ARV treatment for HIV. This represents more than one-quarter of the 3 million people on ARV worldwide and is 28 per cent. greater than the Global Fund targets for 2006.

The UK has already pledged to spend £1.5 billion on AIDS programmes between 2005 and 2008: this reflects our commitment to Universal Access. Despite this progress, much still needs to be done. In addition to funding AIDS programmes, we are supporting UNITAID, the new international drug purchasing facility, to fund second-line ARV, paediatric ARVs and TB and malaria drugs predominantly to low income countries. It is hoped that this mechanism will contribute to the necessary reductions in the prices of second-line drugs such as lopinavir/ritonavir and tenofovir (Viread and Kaletra). The UK Government are also helping strengthen the World Health Organisation (WHO) medicines pre-qualification process through UNITAID, in order to speed up the availability of new second-line ARV products. WHO's pre-qualification process is a critical block for low income countries using new ARVs, with a long backlog of medicines seeking pre-approval. The additional funding will accelerate the process.

Disaster Relief: Education

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to ensure that education provision is included within the first phase in all humanitarian responses. [124895]

Hilary Benn: The first task of responding to a disaster should be meeting the priority needs of affected communities; i.e. emergency shelter, food, and water and sanitation facilities.

Following a disaster, the UN humanitarian co-ordinator oversees needs assessments carried out by the lead UN agency for each humanitarian sector. These are used to draw up global "flash appeals" to raise funding from donors.

Under the reform of the international humanitarian system, nine sectors which are deemed to be under-serviced in humanitarian response have become "clusters", co-ordinated by a UN cluster lead who is allocated funds from a global cluster appeal in order to fulfil their leadership role. While education is not currently formally a cluster, in December 2006, the Inter Agency Standing Committee (consisting of the key UN and non-UN humanitarian partners) agreed that the cluster approach would be applied to the education sector, under UNICEF's lead. Education will also be included in the 2007 global cluster appeal.

In countries, this means that following a disaster, UNICEF will present a request for funding for the education sector, based on humanitarian need, to the humanitarian co-ordinator to include in the flash appeal. Where education is deemed to be a priority need, the humanitarian co-ordinator will highlight this and it will be up to donors to provide adequate funding.

Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much the UK has contributed to the Global Fund to help poor countries fight AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria. [126394]

Mr. Thomas: The UK has committed £359 million to the Global Fund over seven years (2002-08) including £100 million for 2006 and the same for 2007, subject to performance. The UK is now the fifth largest donor for the period 2006-07 (after the US, France, Japan and Italy) and the third largest in the EU. The UK's current share of Global Fund contributions is around 8 per cent.

Latin America: Overseas Aid

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to improve lives in Latin America. [126712]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's goal is to reduce poverty and inequality in Latin America in line with the international community's commitment to help achieve the millennium development goals (MDGs) by 2015. DFID's main financial contributions to Latin America are through direct contributions to the multilateral institutions: the Inter-American Development Bank, the World Bank, the European Commission and United Nations. DFID also has a bilateral programme for Latin America (£11 million in 2006-07). The purpose of this programme is to enhance the overall impact of the international system in the region. DFID's assistance to Latin America from 2004-07 is set out in the document entitled "Regional Assistance Plan", copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

DFID is working with the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) and the World Bank, helping them to tackle social exclusion and to provide access to markets and international trade. Efforts are being made to provide accountable and responsive public sector management and effective political systems. DFID also works to improve donor coordination in support of government-led poverty reduction strategies and also to improve regional, analysis and lesson sharing to achieve trade policies that better reflect the impact of trade on poverty and inequality. In the health sector it focuses on improved quality and effectiveness of HIV/AIDS prevention, treatment and care drawing from regional organisations working with the Global Fund for AIDS, TB and Malaria.

DFID is also providing a further £7 million a year to British NGOs working in Latin America under Partnership Programme Agreements with DFID, and funding projects through the Civil Society Challenge Fund.

DFID's programme in Latin America provides flexible and responsive funding and seeks to pilot innovative new approaches. It works with others, for example the UN and international NGOs, to facilitate cooperation between civil society organisations and the World Bank and IDB. It collaborates closely with the complementary programmes of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), and the British Council.

Through the UK Government's Global Conflict Prevention Pool, DFID, alongside the FCO and the Ministry of Defence (MOD), supports security sector reform and small arms and light weapons reduction. The overall aim is to reduce armed violence, establish effective and appropriate rule of law in the region, and provide the security needed to enable development.

Nepal

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) humanitarian, (b) economic and (c) military assistance the UK is providing to Nepal. [126271]

Mr. Thomas: The information is as follows.

Humanitarian assistance

DFID monitors the humanitarian situation in Nepal jointly with the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (UNOCHA) and other international bodies. In 2006-07 DFID provided £400,000 to UNOCHA to facilitate its leadership in this monitoring role, plus to support its coordination of the international response to emerging and ongoing humanitarian crises.

In November 2006 DFID funded a detailed food security assessment by the Government of Nepal and UN agencies. In response to this assessment, DFID has contributed £250,000 to WFP's current emergency operation in the Karnali region of western Nepal.

DFID's overall contribution to humanitarian coordination and assistance in Nepal during this financial year has been £700,000.

Economic assistance

DFID is spending £36 million on development aid to Nepal in 2006-07. This is funding several major programmes that support economic growth, either directly or indirectly. Local livelihoods and economic activity in rural areas are being supported through DFID's Community Support Programme, the Livelihood and Forestry Programme, the Rural Access Programme and Agriculture support programme. In addition, we contribute to the cost of national government programmes in health and education, which increases spending and human development, which in turn will increase economic growth and create a better environment for investment. Finally, DFID's support to Maoist cantonments, the re-establishment of law and order, upcoming national elections and political inclusion initiatives are helping to build the legitimacy of the state and stabilise the country, which is vital for investment and growth.

Military assistance

The UK supports the transition of the Nepal Army to a regular professional army under civilian control. We are working with the Government of Nepal to develop appropriate structures, including a strengthened Ministry of Defence, to help achieve this. We do not supply lethal equipment to the Nepal Army and have no plans to do so. We are assisting with training and equipment to strengthen the Nepal Army's ability to undertake mine clearance.

As part of the peace process, the UK is also supporting the establishment of temporary camps for Maoist combatants, and is funding the United Nations Mission in Nepal to conduct the registration and verification of Maoist arms and combatants.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to prevent the spread of AIDS in Nepal. [126686]

Mr. Thomas: DFID Nepal has been at the forefront of Nepal's response to HIV/AIDS. In October 2005, DFID commenced a five-year, £15-million programme in support of the national HIV/AIDS programme. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) manages DFID's support in conjunction with their management of grants from the Global Fund for AIDS, TB and Malaria. DFID is currently the second major donor to the national HIV/AIDS programme, contributing 24 per cent. of the programme's resources from mid-2006 to mid-2008. DFID support is aligned to the National HIV/AIDS Strategy and its corresponding Plan.

DFID supports 73 projects through 59 NGOs or community-based organisations in 27 of Nepal's 75 districts. DFID is the lead donor in support of services to: mobile populations; injecting drug users; people living with HIV/AIDS; prison populations; men having sex with men and male sex workers. The activities implemented range from information and awareness; peer education; voluntary counselling and HIV testing; harm reduction (including rehabilitation); care and support to people living with HIV/AIDS and safe blood supply.

In addition to bilateral assistance, DFID also supports prevention and treatment to Nepali migrants in Nepal and India through the Asia Regional Poverty Fund, a three-year, £2 million project which commenced in February 2006.

Over the last three years, DFID has worked closely with the Government of Nepal (GON), the UN agencies and the World Bank to develop the Three Ones: one policy and programme, one national co-ordination body and one monitoring and evaluation framework.

DFID plans to increase its policy engagement in HIV/AIDS. This will be focused on supporting the establishment of a national multi-sectoral semi-independent unit which can manage the programme, improve fund-flow to communities and attract more resources.

Overseas Aid: AIDS

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department spent on AIDS-related work in 2005-06; and how much has been spent in 2006-07. [126396]

Mr. Thomas: DFID spent £385 million in tackling HIV and AIDS in 2005-2006, an increase of almost 30 per cent. on the 2004-05 figure of £298 million. Figures for 2006-07 are not yet available. These figures were released as part of a draft report on an interim evaluation of 'Taking Action - the UK Government's strategy for tackling HIV and AIDS in the developing World' available on DFID's website at www.dfid.gov. As part of this strategy DFID remains committed to spending £1.5 billion on tackling HIV and AIDS over the three years to 2007-08.

TRANSPORT

Biofuels

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the importance of long-term security in attracting investment to develop biofuel production capacity. [127182]

Dr. Ladyman: We fully recognise the importance of long-term security in attracting investment to develop biofuel production capacity in the UK. We believe that the Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation will provide a high degree of investor confidence in biofuels, and there are already signs that it is leading to increased investment in new biofuel production capacity, with a number of new plants due to come on stream very shortly.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average time was for calls to Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency local office helplines to be answered in the latest period for which figures are available; and what proportion of callers discontinued calls before they were answered. [126870]

Dr. Ladyman: Fiscal year to date figures for DVLA's local office help line shows average speed of answer is 18 seconds. The number of calls discontinued while queuing to advisors is 0.87 per cent.

Driving Offences: Cellular Phones

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the risks of driving while using a hands-free mobile telephone; what research his Department has conducted on the effects on the chance of being in a crash of using a hands-free mobile telephone; and if he will make a statement; [124609]

(2) what research he has conducted on the level of mobile telephone usage by motorists while driving according to (a) gender, (b) age, (c) region and (d) type of car owned. [124610]

Dr. Ladyman: A report prepared for the Department and published in 1997 reviewed the use of mobile phones by drivers. TRL Report 318, "The use of mobile phones while driving: a review" is available from TRL Ltd (www.trl.co.uk).

The Department has not needed to undertake its own further research into the risks of using any mobile phone because research by others adequately covers the subject and confirms that there is little difference in the distraction whether a hand-held or hands-free mobile phone is used. The Department's consistent advice, for example in the Highway code and the THINK Road Safety campaign, has been that mobile phones of any type should not be used while driving.

The research is conveniently summarised in the report of the Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones "Mobile Phones and Health", published in 2000—see paragraphs 5.201 to 5.214, pages 86 to 90 for a summary of research worldwide—available online at: www.iegmp.org.uk/report/text.htm.

The Direct Line Insurance report published in 2002 (available at http://info.directline.com/xxx/news.nsf/6412573869047 4fe00256a6f003a151b/bec9c738833c7fb180256b84002dec5f/$FILE/Mobile%20Phone%20Report.pdf) compares the effect on reaction times from the use of mobile phones with the effect of alcohol. The research underlying the Direct Line report is published as TRL Report 547 available from www.trl.co.uk.

Research completed in 2003 for the Department of Health's Mobile Telecommunications and Health Research programme "Conversations in Cars: The Relative Hazards of Mobile Phones" is expected to be published shortly—available from www.trl.co.uk.

Surveys for the Department on the level of mobile phone use are undertaken twice yearly. The most recently published report "Mobile Phone use by drivers, 2004-06"—report Lf2100—can be downloaded from www.trl.co.uk/store/report_list.asp?pid=211. Surveys are not undertaken regionally but surveys sites are considered representative of the full range of conditions on British roads. They do not attempt to include gender, age and type of car because there is no need for such information.

Level Crossings: Hampshire

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the locations are of half barrier level crossings in Hampshire; and if he will make a statement. [126266]

Mr. Tom Harris: This is an operational matter for Network Rail. The hon. Member should contact John Armitt, the Chief Executive, at 40 Melton Street, London, NW1 2EE.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps either to remove or to upgrade the half barrier level crossings in Hampshire; and if he will make a statement. [126750]

Mr. Tom Harris: Any changes would need to be proposed by Network Rail and agreed by the Office of Rail Regulation, the health and safety regulator for the railway. All level crossings of whatever type are adequately safe when used correctly.

Motor Vehicles: Excise Duties

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) cost and (b) profit components are contained in the convenience charge of £2.50 that the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency levies on online credit card payments of vehicle excise duty. [127153]

Dr. Ladyman: The £2.50 charge for using the credit card for online re-licensing transactions is calculated to cover the specific full costs of providing the credit card as a payment option and is subject to review on an annual basis. No profit element is built into the charge. The charge covers two distinct types of cost:

Credit Card company costs relating to the charges applied for processing credit card payments;

DVLA operating costs relating to the process of credit card payments, credit card enquiries and the investigation of disputed payments.

Motor Vehicles: Registration

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many registered cars there were in 1997; and how many there are in 2007. [125986]

Dr. Ladyman: The latest statistical series on the number of licensed cars and cars registered for the first time were published in Tables 1b and 12b of Vehicle Licensing Statistics 2005. A copy of this report, published on 18 May 2006, was placed in the House of Commons Library and it is also available at:

http://www.dft.gov.Uk/pqr/statistics/datatablespublications/vehicles/licensing/coll_vehiclelicensingstatistics2/vehiclelicensingstatistics2005

Network Rail

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what work has been undertaken to upgrade the East Coast Mainline since 1997; [125980]

(2) what work has been undertaken to upgrade the Great Western Mainline since 1997. [125981]

Mr. Tom Harris: These are operational matters for Network Rail, as the owner and operator of the national rail network. The hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell should contact Network Rail's Chief Executive for a response to his question:

John Armitt
Chief Executive
Network Rail
40 Melton Street
London NW1 2EE

Ports: Liverpool

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the Olive Mount Chord project at the port of Liverpool to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [126532]

Mr. Tom Harris: The project to re-instate the Olive Mount Chord is being promoted by a variety of parties including the Northern Way and Mersey Docks and Harbour Company, working with Network Rail. The completion date for the scheme is a matter for Network Rail and the proposers.

Railways: Construction

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of new railway line he plans to be constructed in each of the next five years. [126867]

Mr. Tom Harris: In July the Secretary of State for Transport will publish a High Level Output Specification for England and Wales. This will set out the railway improvements the Government wishes to buy in terms of capacity, safety and reliability, and the funding to support this for the five-year period from April 2009. It will be for the rail industry to determine what inputs are required to deliver this.

Railways: Freight

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many rail freight routes to major ports have been upgraded since 1997. [125979]

Mr. Tom Harris: This is an operational matter for Network Rail, as the owner and operator of the national rail network. The hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell should contact Network Rail's Chief Executive for a response to his question:

John Armitt
Chief Executive
Network Rail
40 Melton Street
London NW1 2EE

Railways: Greater London

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new railway lines into and in London for which his Department has responsibility have been built since 1997. [125985]

Mr. Tom Harris: This is an operational matter for Network Rail, as the owner and operator of the national rail network. The hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell should contact Network Rail's Chief Executive for a response to his question:

John Armitt
Chief Executive
Network Rail
40 Melton Street
London NW1 2EE

Railways: Overcrowding

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the rates of overcrowding on (a) South West trains and (b) national network trains were in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [127353]

Mr. Tom Harris: Data to which the Department has access is limited to Passengers in Excess of Capacity (PIXC), a measure which applies to weekday commuter trains arriving in London between 7 am and 9.59 am and departing London between 4 pm and 6.59 pm.

The Office of Rail Regulation (ORR) publishes PIXC figures in its National Rail Trends publication. The most recent edition, covering 2005, was published on 5 July 2006.

The document is on the internet at the following address: http://www.rail-reg.gov.uk/upload/pdf/294.pdf and has been made available in the Library of the House.

Roads: Accidents

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road fatalities were caused by defective vehicles in each year from 1997 to 2006. [126397]

Dr. Ladyman: In 2005 there were 91 fatalities resulting from reported personal injury road accidents which involved vehicle defects as a contributory factor.

Contributory factor data were not collected prior to 2005, and 2006 data will be published in summer 2007.

Roads: Construction

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many kilometres of new road lanes, including widening projects, have been built since 1997. [125977]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table shows the number of kilometres of new road lanes that have been built since 1997.

	Lane km added to HA network
1997-98	433
1998-99	107

2006-07	77
Total	1,726

Roads: Noise

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many lane kilometres of the motorway and trunk road network have been resurfaced with a lower noise surface since 1997. [125990]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency's policy to use quieter surfacing materials as a matter of course whenever a road is resurfaced has been in place since 2001. Given this, we have no separately recorded information on quieter surfacing delivered prior to this date.

A total of 8,240 lane kilometres (lkms) of quieter surfacing were delivered between 2000-01 and 2005-06. The agency is forecasting to deliver a further 1,100 lkms during 2006-07.

Speed Limits: Cameras

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road safety cameras there are in each London borough. [126864]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table lists the number of safety camera sites in each highway authority in London.

Tolls

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his latest estimate is of the timetable for the introduction of a national road user pricing scheme. [122803]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 19 December 2006, Official Report, column 1760W.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress made towards a national system of road pricing. [126466]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The Government called for a national debate on road pricing in 2005 and this is now happening.

While no decision has been taken on whether in the future to establish a national scheme of road pricing, the Government are working with interested local authorities who are exploring the scope for developing local schemes as part of a wider package of transport measures, to tackle local congestion.

It is only in the light of the development of such schemes that any decision about national road pricing could be considered.

Tolls: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to introduce a pilot scheme for road charging in Lancashire; and if he will make a statement. [125240]

Dr. Ladyman: It would be for Lancashire to decide whether to put forward proposals for a local road pricing pilot scheme. 10 areas have been awarded pump-priming funding to support the development of Transport Innovation Fund packages that address local congestion problems by combining demand management, including road pricing, with better public transport. Lancashire is not one of these areas.

DEFENCE

Air Force: Calendars

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was of creating the 2007 Royal Air Force desktop calendar. [124457]

Derek Twigg: A total of 1,700 calendars were produced at a VAT inclusive cost of £2,687.22. This equates to a single unit cost of £1.58.

Armed Forces: Health Services

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much funding the Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre at Headley Court has received in each year since 2001; and from which top level budget holder the funding came. [119079]

Derek Twigg: Information on funding in the financial year 2001-02 is not readily available. For subsequent years, annual expenditure on the Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre has been identified as follows:

Financial year	£ million (actual costs)
2002-03	10.29
2003-04	10.43
2004-05	9.44
2005-06	10.75
2006-07	[1]12.84

[1] Current estimate of expenditure for full financial year.

The sums listed represent the bulk of the operating costs and capital expenditure for the year in question. Until the current financial year, all such funding was provided from the centre top level budget. For this financial year, funding for property management, capital works, rent and rates has been provided from the Defence Estates top level budget.

Data for some costs (medical stores and the costs of service personnel temporarily attached to the establishment) are not readily available and have not been included in the aforementioned figures.

Additional funding for a range of projects, not included in the above figures, has been generously provided by the Headley Court Trust.

Armed Forces: Manpower

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers from each country of the Commonwealth are employed in the Forces, broken down by (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) Royal Air Force. [125565]

Derek Twigg: The most recent data available for the nationality of Commonwealth personnel serving in the UK regular forces are shown in the following table.

[1] Royal Air Force data for service personnel who are non-UK nationals have been provided on an ad-hoc basis as nationality data are not centrally held. The figure for service personnel who are UK nationals has been inferred from the total strength of the RAF at 1 April 2006.

[2] Fewer than five. All other figures are rounded to the nearest five.

[3] Includes personnel with nationality recorded as Rhodesian.

[4] Includes personnel with nationality recorded as British Commonwealth/Foreign, Other African Country and Other Asiatic Country, and 75 RAF personnel recorded as Commonwealth by birth, but with no nationality recorded.

Note:
Data are for UK regular forces (trained and untrained), including nursing services and excluding full time reserve service personnel, Gurkhas, the home service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment and mobilised reservists.

Armed Forces: Postal Services

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent changes have been made to the procedure by which members of the armed forces stationed overseas receive parcels free of charge; and if he will make a statement. [127357]

Derek Twigg: A free packet scheme was first introduced on 17 April 2003, as a temporary measure unique to Iraq, at a time when service personnel did not have access to the welfare facilities that are now available in theatre. When the provision of goods and services in Iraq reached the required standard, the decision was taken to end the scheme on 8 April 2004. It was later re-introduced for a period of one month before Christmas 2004, and subsequently confirmed by the then Secretary of State for Defence, prior to Christmas 2005, that the pre-Christmas free packet scheme was to become a standard element of the operational welfare package. The free posting dates for Christmas 2006 were 10 November to 8 December inclusive, for which Royal Mail Group charged the Ministry of Defence £577,000; this sum does not include the costs for additional air transport and onward distribution that were also paid for by the Department.

The Ministry of Defence makes no charge to carry postal packets through the British Forces Post Office system to personnel on operations. The cost that is payable is that charged by Royal Mail Group to carry the items from local post offices to the British Forces Post Office Depot at Mill Hill, London.

Armed Forces: Surveys

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the latest Continuous Attitudes Survey from each of the services. [121502]

Derek Twigg: The latest Royal Navy, Royal Marine, Army and RAF Continuous Attitude Surveys are in the final stages of completion and will be available at the beginning of May. I will make arrangements to place copies in the Library of the House and on the MOD Freedom of Information Website.

Army: Recruitment

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many different application forms a potential officer recruit to the Army must complete before entering Sandhurst; and what estimate he has made of the effect of that number on the number of recruits choosing to join the armed forces. [125852]

Derek Twigg: A candidate for a commission in the British Army has to complete a Potential Army Officer Information form, an Army Officer Selection Board Curriculum Vitae, an Application for a Commission in the British Army, an Army Medical Questionnaire and a MOD Security Questionnaire. If an individual is successful and takes up the offer of a Commission and place at the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst, they will be required to complete the following prior to arrival: Personal Details form, Medical Declaration and Pre Course Briefing form.

The Army has no evidence that the number of forms is any deterrent to applicants.

Atomic Weapons Establishment: Finance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the defence budget was spent on the Atomic Weapons Establishment in each of the last 10 years; and what the planned figures are for the next five years. [124588]

Des Browne: The percentage of the planned defence budget spent on the Atomic Weapons Establishment in each of the last 10 years is as follows:

	Outturn spend as a percentage of the planned budget
1996-97	1.3
1997-98	1.4
1998-99	1.3
1999-2000	1.3
2000-01	1.2
2001-02	1.1
2002-03	1.1
2003-04	1.1
2004-05	1.3
2005-06[1]	1.8

The forecast percentage of the planned defence budget to be spent at the Atomic Weapons Establishment is 2.4 per cent. in 2006-07 and 2.7 per cent. in 2007-08. This is due primarily to the programme of additional investment in sustaining key skills and facilities announced by my right hon. Friend the Member for Airdie and Shorts (John Reid) on 19 July 2006, Official Report, column 59WS.

We will continue the programme of investment in sustaining capabilities at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, both to ensure we can maintain the existing warhead for as long as necessary and to enable us to develop a replacement warhead if required. This, and our plans for the maintenance of the independent nuclear deterrent were set out in the White Paper "The Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent" (Cm 6994), published in December 2006.

BAE Systems

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many current security passes to enter his Department's premises have been issued to employees of BAE Systems; and if he will list the BAE Systems' employees who hold such passes. [126502]

Derek Twigg: Employees of BAE Systems that require access to MOD establishments are issued with a variety of security passes, depending on the nature of their business, the authorised access required and the duration of their requirement for access. Information is not held centrally on how many security passes have been issued and it would incur disproportionate cost to collate this data.

Ballistic Missile Defence

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 601W, what the well-established technical co-operation programmes are through which the UK makes a contribution to the US missile defence system; and if he will make a statement. [126953]

Des Browne: The UK/US technical co-operation programmes cover a wide range of missile defence activities. These include current and future missile threat assessment, threat launch detection, threat tracking, command and control aspects, sensors, weapon systems and the consequences of interception. The joint co-operation programmes have allowed both the UK and US to improve our joint understanding of missile defence issues, and have allowed UK-developed technology with potential missile defence applications to be demonstrated to the US.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the work of the UK Missile Defence Centre. [126955]

Des Browne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 28 June 2006, Official Report, column 402W, to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock).

Departmental Records

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date he expects (a) the project to safeguard a number of files which had been stored in the Old War

Office Building and were affected by asbestos to be completed and (b) (i) documents relating to the visit to London in 1974 of the then Turkish Prime Minister, Bulent Ecevit, and (ii) all other affected documents to be released. [123455]

Derek Twigg: It is anticipated that the project to scan the files affected by asbestos contamination of the Old War Office basement will be completed by early 2008. The project was originally expected to finish in July 2007, but the number of pages needing to be scanned has proved to be higher than estimated, requiring a six month extension.

Freedom of Information requests frustrated by the contamination of files are being addressed in the order in which they were received as the files reconstituted by the project become available, although it will take at least nine months to process the backlog. All files scanned as part of this project will, in due course, be reviewed in accordance with established procedures. Those that The National Archives require for permanent preservation will be transferred there in accordance with the Public Records Acts.

There is no file in the asbestos contaminated archive specifically related to Bulent Ecevit's visit to London in 1974. Although the archive contains a large number of files which have Turkey in their title, given the date in question only one of these could conceivably have covered the Ecevit visit. This file has been reconstituted and examined, but unfortunately holds no relevant information.

Departments: Public Expenditure

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the planned programme budget was for his Department in each of the last 10 years (a) in real terms and (b) as a percentage of gross domestic product. [121876]

Des Browne: Since 1998, Defence spending plans have been set as part of the Government's Spending Review process. Prior to this, spending plans were set on an annual basis. The Government accounting process has changed progressively over this period due to the introduction of Resource Accounting and Budgeting (RAB). The terms in which these budgets were set are therefore not directly comparable.

It is however possible to make a broad comparison between the near cash element of budgets under RAB and the cash element of the budget before the introduction of RAB[1].

On this basis, the near cash/cash elements of the planned budget in real terms (2006-07 base year) and as a percentage of GDP are set out as follows:

	Cash/Near cash budget in real terms (2006-07 base year) (£ billion)	Cash/Near Cash budget as a percentage of GDP
1997-98	27.0	2.6
1998-99	26.8	2.5
1999-2000	26.4	2.4
2000-01	26.9	2.4
2001-02	26.9	2.3
2002-03	26.8	2.3
2003-04	27.5	2.3
2004-05	27.7	2.2
2005-06	28.3	2.2
2006-07	28.7	2.2

For the first two of these years, the Government made it clear that it would work within the existing spending plans while it tackled the structural deficit it inherited and set new policy objectives and spending priorities. Since the first two years, the average annual real increase in the cash/near cash element of the Defence budget, has been over £300 million.

The figures in the table do not include the cost of operations as these are claimed against the Reserve in-year and are reported in Departmental Expenditure figures. The most recent edition of Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses, available online at www.hm-treasury.gov.uk, records that total government expenditure on defence, including operations, was 2.5 per cent. in 2004-05 and estimated at 2.5 per cent. in 2005-06.

Departments: Redundancy

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on (a) involuntary and (b) voluntary staff exit schemes in (i) his Department and (ii) each agency of the Department in each year since 1997-98; how much is planned to be spent for 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [123922]

Derek Twigg: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

We do hold information on a Department-wide voluntary early release scheme which was launched in March 2005, in connection with the civil service-wide reductions required under the 2004 Spending Review. Under this scheme 643 staff left in 2005-06, at a cost of £41 million; 660 staff left in 2006-07 at a cost of £43 million; a further 706 are planned to be released at an estimated cost of £80 million in 2007-08.

Hercules Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the effect on (a) serviceability and (b) availability of C130s has been of the introduction of the Hercules Integrated Operational Support contract provided by Marshall Aerospace. [123000]

Mr. Ingram: The Hercules Integrated Operational Support (HIOS) contract's primary output is to provide Fit For Purpose (FFP) aircraft available to the Front Line Command. To qualify as FFP an aircraft must be reliable, safe and capable of performing the task on a given day.

HIOS is still in its transitional phase, and is due to complete on 30 November 2007. Nevertheless, between 1 September 2006 and 31 January 2007 (the most recent period for which data is available), there was a modest increase in FFP aircraft of 3 per cent. (whilst also reducing costs) when compared with a similar time frame under the previous aircraft support arrangements. This performance is expected to improve progressively as the full benefits of HIOS take effect.

Mental Health

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2006, Official Report, columns 625-26W, on mental health, what the assessed establishment requirement is for each category of mental health worker; and where each is based. [124740]

Derek Twigg: As stated on the 29 January 2007, Official Report, column 25W, the DMS uniformed regular requirement figures have been reviewed and the new manning requirements for 2007 for all cadres will be formally announced in the near future. The new requirement figures may cause the current number and configuration of established posts or "establishment" to change.

The following table shows the current number and location of establishment for uniformed psychiatrists and registered mental health nurses (RMHN) for each Service:

As stated in the answer given on 7 March 2007, Official Report, 1986W, the MOD no longer employs mental health occupational therapists, but does employ civilian clinical psychologists, psychiatrists and mental health nurses. However, the figures for their establishment are not held centrally. I will write to the hon. Member with these figures once they have been collated and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Military Police

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Defence Police College opened at Southwick Park; and what the cost was of establishing this facility. [122111]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 22 February 2007]: The Defence Police College opened at Southwick Park on 15 September 2005.

The post-project evaluation records the cost of establishing the facility as £7.139 million after the first year, including financial provisions to conclude building works.

Navy: Officers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Commanders, (b) Captains, (c) Commodores and (d) Rear Admirals are on the (i) active and (ii) reserve lists; and how many were on the lists in 1997. [126292]

Derek Twigg: The information requested is detailed as follows:

	2007	1997
Rear Admiral	[1]25	[2]27
Commodore	58	[3]—
Captain	221	307
Commander	831	910

[1] 15 are in RN/NATO posts. Others are Tri Service appointments in MOD
[2] 21 were in RN/NATO posts
[3] Not a substantive rank. Officers in Commodore appointments are included in the figure for Captains

All senior officers have reserve liability on leaving the Service until the age of 60. This was applicable in 1997 and is the same in 2007.

Nuclear Submarines: Decommissioning

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of decommissioning (a) nuclear submarine hulls, reactor compartments and propulsion reactors, (b) warhead design and production facilities at Aldermaston and (c) fissile material stores at Sellafield should it be decided to go ahead with a replacement for Trident; and whether any independent audit of such decommissioning expenditure has been made. [126307]

Des Browne: Paragraph 7-5 of the White Paper: "The Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent" (Cm 6994) indicated that decisions on whether to acquire a replacement for the Trident missile are unlikely to be needed until the 2020s. The White Paper set out the decisions needed now to join the programme to extend the life of the Trident D5 missile and to start detailed concept work on new submarines to replace the Vanguard class.

The Ministry of Defence has made provision in its accounts for a wide range of nuclear decommissioning liabilities. The latest estimate of these liabilities is shown in the Ministry of Defence annual report and accounts for 2005-06, HC1394, which were certified by the Comptroller and Auditor General. More detail is set out in the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, West (Paul Flynn) on 24 July 2006, Official Report, columns 778-79W.

The estimate for the in-service costs of the UK's nuclear deterrent, once new submarines come into operation, set out at paragraph 5-14 of the White Paper include an allowance for the decommissioning costs of a successor system. This estimate has not been subject to external scrutiny. At this very early stage, we are not in a position to provide a breakdown of decommissioning costs in the way requested.

Investment at the Atomic Weapons Establishment has been increased in recent years primarily in order to ensure we can sustain the existing Trident warhead in-service for as long as necessary. This investment involves the replacement or refurbishment of a number of facilities related to the design and production of nuclear warheads. Proceeding with the plan to replace our Vanguard-class submarines and participate in the life extension programme for the Trident D5 missile would not have a material effect on these plans. As the White Paper makes clear, decisions on whether and how to replace or refurbish our warhead stockpile are likely to be necessary in the next Parliament.

Facilities at Sellafield are the responsibility of the Nuclear Decommissioning Agency and British Nuclear Group Sellafield Ltd.

Nuclear Weapons

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for North Devon of 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 1877W, on nuclear weapons, what estimate he has made of the cost of decommissioning future (a) submarine reactor hulls and cores and (b) facilities used to create future fissile nuclear materials and nuclear warheads for any replacement Trident nuclear programme after 2055. [126918]

Des Browne: As I explained to the hon. Member for North Devon (Nick Harvey) on 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 1877W, the estimate of in-service support costs of the UK's nuclear deterrent set out at paragraph 5-14 of the White Paper, "The Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent" (Cm 6994), includes an allowance for the decommissioning of a successor to the current system. At this very early stage, we are not in a position to provide figures in the way requested.

In 1995, the UK announced that it had ceased production of fissile material for weapons purposes. This moratorium remains in place, and we do not envisage any requirement to change this position.

The UK's current warhead design is likely to last into the 2020s, and decisions on whether and how we may need to refurbish or replace it are likely to be necessary in the next Parliament.

Proof of Identity: Ministry of Defence

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many current security passes there are for the Ministry of Defence main building. [124495]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 5 March 2007]: Across the MOD central London office buildings (Main Building, Old War Office Building and St. George's Court) there are currently 18,026 active security passes. Separate figures are not available for Main Building alone.

Smith Institute

Mr. Heaton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money from the public purse (a) his Department and (b) its agencies gave to (i) the Smith Institute and (ii) its subsidiary SI Events Limited in each year since 1997; and for what purpose each payment was made. [123105]

Derek Twigg: No payments have been made by the Defence Bills Agency (DBA) or the Ministry of Defence's Trading Funds to the Smith Institute or SI Events.

A small percentage of MOD's contract payments are not made by the DBA or Trading Funds, but are made locally against contracts placed on behalf of other Government Departments, joint venture and NATO contracts and contracts placed through collaborative projects. However, this information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Television and Play Stations

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on (a) television sets and (b) Sony Playstations for the use of service personnel in each of the last three financial years for which figures are available. [116678]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 18 January 2007]: Information on the total number of televisions and Playstations purchased across Defence over the last three financial years is not held centrally and could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

However, figures for expenditure on televisions and Playstations for personnel deployed on operations in Iraq and Afghanistan for the calendar years 2005, 2006 and 2007 to date are available. These are as follows:

	Televisions	Playstations
2005	56,039	8,357
2006	135,937	25,571
2007 to date	67,700	4,199

Trident

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the change in the cost of nuclear decommissioning liabilities which would arise from the replacement of the Vanguard class Trident nuclear submarines; what factors are included in the estimate; and if he will make a statement. [116644]

Des Browne: It is too early to make a reasonable estimate of the nuclear decommissioning liabilities associated with a new class of submarines built to maintain our nuclear deterrent. However, the nuclear liabilities in the Department's annual report and accounts for 2005-06, HC1394, include a figure of £333 million for all current in-service submarines, including the Vanguard class. More detail on the MOD's current nuclear decommissioning liabilities is set out in the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, West (Paul Flynn) on 24 July 2006, Official Report, columns 778-79W.

Warships

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what definitions his Department uses of the terms (a) reduced readiness, (b) extended readiness and (c) low readiness; how many ships are in each category; and if he will make a statement. [124593]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to my letter of 6 March 2007, to the hon. Member for New Forest East (Dr. Lewis), a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Alternative Medicine

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the pilot project to provide complementary and alternative medicine-CAM-within the NHS in Northern Ireland will be administered. [119305]

Paul Goggins: GPs attached to the selected practices within the pilot will refer their patients for treatment to one of the therapy groups included on the scheme. These are at present osteopathy, chiropractic, homeopathy, acupuncture, massage and aromatherapy. Get Well UK will receive the referral and contact the patient to make an initial appointment for them. The use of Get Well UK will remove the administration burden from the CAM therapist, and allow them to focus totally on patient care. All stakeholders (patients, practitioners, GPs) will be asked for their feedback. This information will be collated by Get Well UK and will be independently evaluated.

A steering group will be established, chaired by the Department and containing key stakeholders from the health and social services boards, the various CAM therapy governing organisations, GPs and the health and social services councils. This group will monitor the service, including that provided by Get Well UK, and evaluate the feedback from GPs, patients and practitioners. The group will consider where necessary during the pilot any changes that need to be implemented to ensure that the scheme meets its aims and objectives.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether members of the NHS Directory of Complementary and Alternative Practitioners will have to apply to be recognised as a Get Well UK therapist operating in Northern Ireland. [119306]

Paul Goggins: Practitioners wishing to participate in the pilot scheme were required to register with Get Well UK. Practitioners are able to join the NHS register of complementary and alternative medicine practitioners for a fee, but being on the register does not provide proof that the person or organisation registered is qualified or competent. It remains the responsibility of the person or body who engages the services of any practitioner to ensure that they are properly qualified.

The recruitment and quality assurance system provided by Get Well UK on behalf of the Department is robust. As well as asking about practitioners' qualifications and training, copies of all certificates and insurance details are kept on file, references are taken and police checks conducted to comply with The Protection of Children and Vulnerable Adults (NI) Order 2003. Get Well UK also conducts face-to-face interviews to ensure the suitability of practitioners to work in the health service as part of a multi-disciplinary team.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what experience of (a) delivering complementary and alternative medicine and (b) operating in Northern Ireland, Get Well UK has. [119307]

Paul Goggins: Get Well UK was formed in May 2004 and has delivered five complementary medicine contracts in NHS primary care settings since that time. It was established as a not-for-profit organisation specifically to deliver complementary and alternative medicine services. Its managing director has 10 years' experience of managing and delivering complementary medicine services. The Board includes people at both chair and chief executive level within the NHS and an osteopath of 30 years' standing who was the medical director of an osteopathic school and a council member of the General Osteopathic Council.

Get Well UK was given a special award in the 2005 Awards for Good Practice in Integrated Healthcare, "Integrated Health Futures Award: recognising innovation to improve health". This was in recognition of the specific skills, infrastructure and exacting quality standards built into Get Well UK's service delivery.

Get Well UK has not operated in Northern Ireland previously.

Ambulances

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many ambulance service vehicles were in operation in each ambulance district in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years, broken down by type. [126942]

Paul Goggins: The number of ambulance service vehicles in operation in each Ambulance Division in each of the last five years are set out in the following table:

Domestic Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) gross and (b) net revenue from domestic rates in Northern Ireland was in (i) 2004-05 and (ii) 2005-06; and what the estimated level is for 2006-07. [120835]

Mr. Hanson: The gross collectable rate for domestic properties in NI for 2004-05 was £343,759,491.47. The net revenue collected for domestic properties in 2004-05 amounted to £328,376,655.77.

The gross collectable rate for domestic properties in NI for 2005-06 was £379,372,507.06. The net revenue collected for domestic properties in 2005-06 amounted to £367,620,688.16.

The estimated gross collectable rate for domestic properties in NI for 2006-07 is £425 million. The estimated net revenue collected for domestic properties in 2006-07 will be in the region of £383 million.

Firearms

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many firearms certificate applications were made in each Police Service of Northern Ireland district command unit area in each of the past three years; and how many of those applications were (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful. [123488]

Paul Goggins: The chief constable has provided, in the following table, details of firearms applications from 1 February 2005 (when a new computer system was introduced) to December 2006. The figures cannot be disaggregated by district command unit.

	Granted	Refused
2005	11,984	270
2006	27,690	147

The figures include certificates granted to both first time applicants and to persons whose previous certificate had expired. The figures for 2006 were inflated by a backlog of applications carried forward from 2005.

Housing: Waiting Lists

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to reduce housing waiting lists in Northern Ireland; and what targets have been put in place relating to the reduction of such lists. [126963]

Mr. Hanson: The Government are committed to reducing housing waiting lists and are investing in a range of measures to achieve this objective.

The main method of meeting housing need is through reallocation of existing stock supplemented by additional new build. There are also strategies in place to purchase suitable homes and to bring vacant properties back into social housing use. The private rented sector has also grown significantly and is increasingly an important source of housing supply.

The current five-year social housing development programme makes provision for 1,500 social housing units annually, subject to the availability of funding. The need for additional social housing is addressed in the current comprehensive spending review. The Semple review into affordability, which is due to be published shortly, is expected to contain recommendations to help reduce waiting lists.

Maternity Services

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much funding was allocated to maternity services in each health board area in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [127114]

Paul Goggins: The planned funding allocated to maternity services (both acute expenditure and community midwifery spend) in each health board area in each of the last three years as shown in the following table.

Board	2004-05	2005-06	£000 2006-07
EHSSB	22,174	23,794	25,621
NHSSB	15,710	17,200	18,362
SHSSB	12,529	13,421	14,589
WHSSB	10,503	11,374	11,678

Note:
The planned hospital spend relates to Obstetrics and does not include specialist neo-natal care, for example in a Special Care Baby Unit, that would be recorded under Acute services.

Further information would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Nurses: Pay

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the rates of pay are for each grade of nurse Northern Ireland; and what the percentage change was to the rate at each grade in each of the last six years. [127130]

Paul Goggins: Nurses in the Health and Personal Social Services are paid on the Agenda for Change pay bands 5, 6, 7, 8a, 8b or 8c depending on the job undertaken. The pay band ranges at April 2006 are band 5 (£19,166 to £24,803), band 6 (£22,886 to £31,004), band 7 (£27,622 to £36,416) band 8a (£35,232 to £42,278), band 8b (£41,038 to £50,733), and band 8c (£49,381 to £60,880). All nurses have received similar percentage pay increases in the last six years; the percentage pay increases that have applied are shown in the following table:

	Percentage increase
2001	3.7
2002	[1]3.6
2003	3.225
2004	3.225
2005	3.225
2006	2.5

[1] Or £400 whichever is the greater

Physiotherapy

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who the members of the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety physiotherapy taskforce are; and for what reason they were appointed in each case. [127123]

Paul Goggins: I established the physiotherapy taskforce to address and provide workable, realistic solutions to the current situation of reported high levels of graduate unemployment among newly trained physiotherapists. It was considered important to involve representatives of the profession, the commissioners, employers and work force planners. Membership of the taskforce therefore comprises representatives of the Chartered Society of Physiotherapy, the trade union, HSS Trust physiotherapy management and Human Resources; a member of the physiotherapy work force and a physiotherapy student. A full list of members will be placed in the Library.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety physiotherapy taskforce has met since its formation; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the minutes of each meeting. [127125]

Paul Goggins: The Physiotherapy taskforce met twice. The first meeting was held 9 November 2006 and the second on 21 November 2006. Further correspondence occurred via email. The taskforce have reported to me and I have endorsed their proposals for immediate action to fund 10 time-bound three-month placements for newly qualified physiotherapists. Copies of the minutes of both meetings will be placed in the Library.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many physiotherapy graduates were working as volunteers in each health trust area in Northern Ireland in each of the last six years; and how many such volunteers went on to gain employment within each trust. [127126]

Police Service of Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the Police Service of Northern Ireland took a career break in each of the last five years, broken down by grade; how many of those involved have since returned to work; what the Police Service of Northern Ireland's policy is on career breaks; when it was last reviewed; and if he will make a statement. [123515]

Paul Goggins: The current policy on career breaks within the Police Service of Northern Ireland was introduced in May 2006 and is due for review in May 2007. Prior to the introduction of this policy there was no formal facility or policy for career breaks. Police officers could avail of unpaid leave but no figures have been collated relating to this. The number of officers who have taken career breaks under the current policy is 12, of which one has returned to work.

	Constables	Inspector
2007	—	1

The policy on career breaks is designed to provide a means for police officers who have completed their initial probationary period to spend a period of time away from work pursuing other activities without giving up their career, and can last for between one to five years. While on a career break, officers may not pursue a business interest or other paid employment, or full time education unless it falls within policy guidelines and regulations. Although unpaid, officers retain their salary points and rank and sympathetic consideration is given to officers with regard to returning to their previous post. Should it be necessary, appropriate training can be provided on return.

Respite Care

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were waiting for respite care in each health trust area in Northern Ireland as of 1 March; and how many of those have been waiting (a) 0-3, (b) 3-5, (c) 6-9, (d) 10-12, (e) 13-16 and (f) longer than 16 months. [126961]

Paul Goggins: Information on the total number of people waiting for respite care is not available centrally. Information is, however, available on the number of adults waiting for respite care at 31 December 2006 (the latest date for which such information is available) and is shown, according to the time bands for which the information is collected, in the following table.

3. Adults are defined as persons aged 18 and over.

Social Security Benefits: Fraud

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures are taken to ensure that fines imposed for benefit fraud in Northern Ireland are paid. [119344]

Paul Goggins: Any fine imposed by a court will result in a fine notice being issued to the defendant, stipulating a period of time to pay and giving the defendant the opportunity to apply to the court for further time to pay or for an order to pay by instalments. The notice will also include a warning that non-payment will result in the issue of a warrant committing the defendant to prison and additional costs attendant upon such issue.

If payment is not received within the period allowed, a "Warrant of Commitment for Sum Adjudged to be paid by Conviction" will be automatically issued to PSNI to either collect the money or lodge the defendant in HM Prison/YOC.

Warrants are registered and sent to the District Command Unit in which the defendant is believed to reside. Management of the execution process varies across District Command Units according to available resources and competing operational demands. While the execution of some warrants will not present difficulties, others may be problematic and will necessitate a more determined effort by police.

Although not an exhaustive list, the following enquiries should be carried out:

Personal calls to the address shown on the warrant at different times of the day and days of the week.

Enquiries with neighbours, friends and family where appropriate.

Checks on ICIS and PPS Case Prep.

Enquiries with local Criminal Intelligence Officer.

Enquiries with Criminal Intelligence Officer at previous address/address last proceeded against where appropriate.

Enquiries with previous investigating officers where applicable.

All actions are logged on a warrant action sheet and attached to the warrant. This will be the original contemporaneous record of efforts made to execute the warrant. From a technical perspective, a new integrated IT application has been developed which will manage all warrants from their issue at court through to execution. This system, along with other measures under consideration, should lead to improved monitoring and accountability.

Special Educational Needs

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) special educational needs tribunal cases and (b) special educational needs judicial review cases there were in each education and library board in each of the last five years. [124369]

Maria Eagle: The number of appeals to the special educational needs tribunal in each education and library board for each of the last five years is shown in the following table:

	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006

Sports: Facilities

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many public sports facilities in Northern Ireland offer sunbeds for public use. [127115]

David Cairns: None of the 26 district councils offer sunbeds for public use.

[126548]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department of Trade and Industry issues licences to import firearms that fall under the Firearms Act 1968, as amended.

A total of 92 open import licences were granted from 1 January 2006 to date that would allow arms to be imported from any country other than a member state of the European Union (AY). These licences are valid for non prohibited firearms such as bolt action rifles and certain shot guns.

A total of 53 specific import licences were granted from 1 January 2006 to date that would allow the import of arms from (a) Bosnia and Herzegovina (BA), (b) Croatia, (c) Serbia (XS) and Montenegro prohibited under section 5 of the Firearms Act 1968, as amended. Businesses: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring cost of implementing the directive on the restriction of the use of certain hazardous substances in electrical and electronic equipment in the UK to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126643]

Malcolm Wicks: The Regulatory Impact Assessment which accompanied the regulations estimated one-off costs to businesses to be in the region of £150 million. Recurring costs were estimated to be in the region of £70 million to £150 million per annum to businesses. The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has an agreement in place with the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to enforce the UK Regulations at a cost of £0.4 million per annum.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the End-of-Life Vehicles (Producer Responsibility) Regulations 2005 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126650]

Malcolm Wicks: The Regulatory Impact Assessment which accompanied the regulations identified no significant one-off costs. Recurring costs to businesses were estimated to be between £23 million and £36 million per annum. Costs to the regulators are estimated to be £0.1 million per annum.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the End-of-Life Vehicles Regulations 2003 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126671]

Malcolm Wicks: The Regulatory Impact Assessment which accompanied the regulations estimated one-off costs to businesses to be between £650 million and £850 million. Recurring costs were estimated to be between £8 million to £10 million per annum to businesses and between £0.4 million and £0.5 million per annum to the regulators.

Corruption

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent estimate he has made of the annual cost to the British economy of corruption. [126939]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

The report on "Bribery and Corruption: Impact on UK Small and Medium Sized Enterprises (SMEs)" by the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants (ACCA) states that "because of its clandestine nature, it is difficult to estimate the true extent and cost of the problem of bribery and corruption".

Transparency International's Bribe-payers Index (BPI) aims to evaluate the supply side of corruption by asking business experts in emerging economies for their impressions of the likelihood that companies from the listed countries pay or offer bribes in their business activities. The UK is sixth out of 30 countries, the second G7 country and third EU country in the table.

Mechanisms are in place to address offences of bribery committed overseas by UK nationals or UK registered bodies through Part 12 of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001, which clarified the application of existing bribery law to the bribery of foreign public office holders and gave our courts jurisdiction over such offences. DFID has recently committed funds to the City of London police to establish a dedicated police unit dealing solely with offences of bribery overseas.

Departments: Orders and Regulations

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many pages of regulations his Department laid before Parliament in 2006. [126890]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department put before Parliament 63 sets of regulations in 2006. However, we do not hold, centrally, information on the number of pages per set of regulations.

Information is held on the Office of Public Sector Information (OPSI) website, www.opsi.gov.uk, for every set of regulations.

Departments: Sales

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 8 February 2007, Official Report, column 1167W, which fixed assets his Department sold for less than £10,000 in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06; and what the (i) sale value, (ii) purchaser and (iii) date of sale was of each asset. [126803]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Details of fixed assets sold by the Department of Trade and Industry for less than £10,000 during 2004-05 and 2005-06 are as follows:

	Fixed asset type	Proceeds (£)	Purchaser	Date of sale
(a)	2004-05
	Microfabrication building[1]	1.00	Laboratory of the Government Chemist	31 August 2005

Departments: St. George's Day

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans his Department has to celebrate St. George's Day. [125703]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department of Trade and Industry plans to fly the St. George's flag on St. George's Day.

MG Rover

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether funds have been transferred from his Department's science budget to the budget for work associated with the collapse of MG Rover; and if he will make a statement. [126308]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 8 March 2007]: DTI 2007-08 budgets face significant pressures. In order to manage these, the Department has identified budget reductions that will allow savings to be recycled to pressures. However it has also been necessary to use some of the accumulated unspent funds within the science budget to seek to manage these pressures. The pressures that require funding include, but are not limited to, the rescue package for British Energy, costs associated with the MG Rover collapse, pan European space projects and the implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. There will be no direct hypothecation of savings identified to individual pressures.

National Income: Europe

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which sub-regions in Europe have a gross value added rate under 75 per cent. [127371]

Margaret Hodge: Eurostat does not publish gross value added data, but instead publishes data for gross domestic product (GDP) for all regions and sub-regions in the European Union (EU). For the current round of structural funds, areas in receipt of convergence objective funding—the highest level of funding—were defined as those NUTS 2 regions with GDP per capita less than 75 per cent. of the EU average, expressed in terms of purchasing power parities (PPP), using the average of data for the years 2000, 2001 and 2002.

The latest data available at NUTS 2 (sub-regional) level from Eurostat are for the year 2004. The following table shows all NUTS 2 regions in the EU with GDP per capita in 2004 less than 75 per cent. of the EU average, including all 27 current member states, in terms of PPP.

Post Office: Rural Areas

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the proportion of people in rural areas who use post offices regularly; and what research he has evaluated on that proportion. [126597]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department has considered information on post offices in rural areas from a range of sources including Postcomm, Post Office Ltd. and National Federation of Sub-Postmasters. Post Office Ltd.'s rural pilot activity report, published in March 2006, indicates that the rural network serves a rural population of 21 million people. However, analysis of customer usage levels also indicates that a total of 1,600 rural post offices serve fewer than 20 customers a day.

Research: Finance

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made on achieving the European Union target of three per cent. of GDP being allocated to research and development investment by 2010; and if he will make a statement. [126678]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 March 2007]: The aspiration for investment in R&D across EU countries to reach 3 per cent. of GDP by 2010 is a challenge for Europe as a whole. But it is not necessarily appropriate for an individual member state.

In the light of UK circumstances, the 10-year Science and Innovation Framework set out a long-term ambition to see the total R&D to GDP ratio in the UK increase to 2.5 per cent. of GDP by 2014. The R&D measure is the Gross Expenditure in Research and Development (GERD), which is the sum of R&D performed in business (BERD) and public expenditure on R&D, by Government Departments and higher education.

The latest available GERD and BERD figures for the UK and the EU are in the following table.

GERD as per cent of GDP

	2003	2004
United Kingdom	1.8	1.7
EU25	1.8	1.8
EU15	1.9	1.9

BERD as per cent of GDP

	2003	2004	2005

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made by his Department of the possible effect on international competitiveness in (a) biosciences, (b) engineering sciences and (c) medical research of the 2007-08 reduction in funding to the UK Research Councils; and if he will make a statement. [126679]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 March 2007]: In order to help to manage the significant pressures on the Department's budget in 2007-08, a decision has been made to use some of the accumulated unspent funds within the science budget. This decision will not affect research projects which are already being funded.

The UK has a strong track record in research excellence, and benefits from a consistently good performance across disciplines. On the basis of an independent report, it is currently ranked second in the world in biosciences and health-related sciences, and fourth in engineering. The report is available on the DTI website at:

http://www.dti.gov.uk/files/file27339.pdf

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he plans to assess the impact on scientific research of the planned reduction in funding to UK Research Councils in 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [126680]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 March 2007]: In order to help to manage the significant pressures on the Department's budget in 2007-08, a decision has been made to use some of the accumulated unspent funds within the science budget. This decision will not affect research projects which are already being funded. The sum in question amounts to less that 1 per cent. of the nearly £10 billion awarded to science over the three-year spending period.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 2 March 2007, Official Report, column 1602W.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Drinking Water

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what consideration the House authorities have given to providing filtered tap water as an alternative to bottled water in committee and meeting rooms; and what estimate has been made of the costs of providing (a) tap and (b) bottled water in these rooms in 2007-08. [126935]

Nick Harvey: The Serjeant at Arms has submitted a paper on the provision of water to committees for the Administration Committee's meeting on 13 March.

Freedom of Information

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer of 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 1451W, on Freedom of Information, whether the log of FOI requests is available for inspection by hon. Members. [126957]

Nick Harvey: The logs used to track the House's responses to FOI requests are maintained on computer spreadsheets. The logs include personal data relating to requesters and other third parties, a brief summary of the request and an indication of any exemption that might have been applied. Rather than providing full details of each request and response, each log makes reference to documents held in electronic and paper format; it is these documents that provide information relating to the full text of the request and the exact nature of the response. Therefore, in their current form, the logs are not available for general inspection by hon. Members. Further consideration will be given to producing and making available for inspection a summary of requests and responses. I will write to the hon. Member with the outcome of that work in due course.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Business Rates

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average business rates bill was in (a) England and (b) each government office region in England in each year since 1996-97; and what she estimates it will be in 2006-07. [114720]

Mr. Woolas: The average business rates bill (in £s) in both England and in each Government Office region in each year since 1996-97, including the estimated average figures for 2006-07, are shown in the following table.

	North East	North West	Yorkshire and the Humber	East Midlands	West Midlands	East of England	London	South East	South West	England
1996-97	5,335	4,895	5,235	5,434	5,335	6,873	11,921	7,432	4,881	6,804

The data are taken from NNDR returns submitted by billing authorities. Average business rate is calculated by dividing the net rate yield from local authority's lists by the number of hereditaments on local list as at 31 December of the previous year.

Comparisons across regions and years may not be valid as the rateable values for individual properties, and hence actual rates bills, vary greatly. Changes in the figures for the years around 2000-01 are affected by transfers of properties from the central list to local lists, transfers of Crown properties to local lists and the adjustments made to the multiplier at the time of the 2000 revaluation to take account of losses from appeals. Changes in the figures for the years around 2005-06 are also affected by adjustments made to the multiplier at the time of the 2005 revaluation.

Energy: Conservation

David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects to publish the conclusions of her inter-departmental taskforce on the improvement of energy performance in existing buildings. [123271]

Yvette Cooper: The Review of the Sustainability of Existing Buildings is looking at improving the performance of existing buildings in terms of their water efficiency and resilience to climate change, as well as energy efficiency. An initial analysis of the energy efficiency of existing dwellings was published on the CLG website in November 2006 and further work is under way.

Fire Services: Costs

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the rental cost of each regional fire control centre, over the full period of its lease, inclusive of VAT and increases produced by the mechanism for future regular rental upratings. [126285]

Angela E. Smith: The rental costs of each Regional Control Centre (RCC) are shown in the following table. The costs given are over the full period of the lease, inclusive of VAT and uplifted in line with the terms of the lease. The costs, other than for London, are based on rents agreed with the developer of each RCC. Procurement of the London RCC is in progress. RCCs should be able to recover the VAT.

RCC	Estimated cost (£ million)	Lease term (years)
East Midlands	45	25
East of England	50	25
North East	31	20
North West	45	25
South East	54	25
South West	34	20
West Midlands	50	25
Yorkshire and Humberside	33	20

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which public body will pay the rental cost of each regional fire control centre from the date at which rent is payable until each emergency fire control in each region has migrated to the relevant regional control centre. [126286]

Angela E. Smith: In the period between the practical completion of a Regional Control Centre (RCC) building and the migration of the Fire Control system to that centre, the accommodation costs (including rent and facilities management) will be met by the Department for Communities and Local Government. During that period the building will be fitted out, the IT installed and tested and staff trained.

Home Information Packs

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much her Department has spent on (a) administration, (b) legal fees, (c) special advisers, (d) the website and (e) other costs for the home information packs programme; and what funding was originally allocated to the programme. [103847]

Yvette Cooper: The following table indicates how much the Department of Communities and Local Government has spent on administration, legal fees, external advisers, the website and other costs associated with the Home Information Pack Programme from April 2004 up to the end of January 2007. Consumers spend billions of pounds each year on the transaction costs they incur when buying and selling homes. HIPs are designed to cut waste from home buying and selling as well as providing important energy information to help cut carbon emissions. The money has been spent on: developing and testing the home condition report and other components of the pack; putting in place a quality assurance framework to protect consumers and guarantee standards; developing the necessary systems; and explaining the changes to the public and industry stakeholders.

	Total (£)
Admin spend—including salaries of those working on HIPs policy and implementation	1,529,450
Legal fees	153,903
External advisers	5,32,629
Website	103,588
Other costs—including research and area trials	2,645,151
Communications	1,800,004
Total programme spend	10,155,275
Grand total [1]	11,684,725

[1] Expenditure as recorded in the Department's accounting system from April 2004 to January 2007 inclusive.
The budget for the programme for the period 2004-05 to 2006-07 is £16 million.

Home Inspectors

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on the suspension of the two consultants employed by her Department in relation to the regulation of home inspectors; and what communications her Department has had with the (a) Office of Government Commerce and (b) National Audit Office on the matter. [114491]

Yvette Cooper: The Department looked into this matter and concluded that it would not be using these consultants' services any further. The NAO are now conducting an inquiry into the role played by the consultants in question.

All three certification schemes approved have been assessed by a panel with the independent chair nominated by OGC, without the involvement of the consultants referred to.

Lighting: Pollution

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she will consult on draft guidance on light pollution; and if she will make a statement. [126892]

Angela E. Smith: Policy responsibility for statutory nuisance from artificial light rests with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. Planning controls which provide an important mechanism for limiting the effects of light pollution are the responsibility of Communities and Local Government. This means that the two Departments work closely together on this subject and are currently collaborating on the preparation of planning guidance for local planning authorities on light pollution covering both planning and pollution aspects. We will consult on this draft as soon as possible.

Local Authority Business Growth Incentive Scheme

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much was spent on introducing the Local Authority Business Growth Incentive Scheme; and what the cost of administering the scheme was in 2005-06. [126855]

Mr. Woolas: The Department cannot provide a breakdown of the costs involved in setting up and administering the Local Authority Business Growth Incentive Scheme. The Department does not monitor resource at this level of detail.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average time taken to process a Local Authority Business Growth Incentive Scheme award has been since the Scheme's inception; and what proportion of awards have been paid on time. [126878]

Mr. Woolas: Valuation Office Agency source data are provided to this Department in January of each year for the purpose of calculating Local Authority Business Growth Incentive (LABGI) Scheme awards. Announcements of LABGI grant determinations are then made in February of each year. In the first two years of the scheme, this commitment to provide these determinations in February has been met. In both cases, payments followed in March.

Local Government Finance: Population Mobility

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what research her Department (a) has carried out and (b) intends to carry out on the implications of population mobility on public service costs to local authorities. [122084]

Mr. Woolas: Communities and Local Government have neither carried out or currently intend to carry out research on population mobility.

However, officials will discuss research relating to the implications of population mobility on funding that has been undertaken by Local Government representatives in the Settlement Working Group meetings. These will be held between February and mid-June.

Local Government: Vacancies

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance her Department issues to local authorities on the advertising of job vacancies. [125969]

Mr. Woolas: The Department does not issue guidance to local authorities on the advertising of job vacancies. Local government is responsible for its own recruitment practices, and is subject to the same employment laws as other sectors.

Social Rented Housing: Standards

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1800W, which planning authorities in Hampshire are not applying the percentages for social housing set out in Planning Policy Guidance Note 3. [126411]

Yvette Cooper: PPG3 has been superseded by PPS3, however there were no percentages for affordable housing set out in PPG3.

PPS3 asks local authorities to set a target for the amount of affordable housing to be provided in their local development documents, based on an understanding of the needs of the area. PPS3 gives a national indicative site size threshold of 15 dwellings to which the policy should apply, although local planning authorities can set lower minimum thresholds where viable and practicable.

Thames Gateway: Bridges

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects to make a decision on the Thames Gateway Bridge. [126515]

Meg Munn: We are currently reviewing the inspector's report, inquiry evidence and post-inquiry representations. A decision regarding the Thames Gateway bridge proposal will be issued as soon as possible.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan: Peace Keeping Operations

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to encourage NATO countries to send additional forces to Afghanistan. [126977]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friends the Defence Secretary, the Foreign Secretary and other Ministers are in regular contact with our NATO counterparts to ensure that commanders on the ground have access to the resources they need to carry out the International Security Assistance Force's (ISAF) mission and to ensure NATO Allies regularly review their contributions to Afghanistan. At the recent NATO Foreign Ministers' meeting in Brussels, 26 January, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary reaffirmed the need for all NATO Allies to play their part in ensuring ISAF's success. Military advice on force and capability requirements is provided by the Supreme Allied Commander Europe using the force generation process.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 23 February 2007, Official Report, column 992W, on Afghanistan: peace keeping operations, what she expects the UK contribution to the European Security and Defence Policy mission to Afghanistan to be. [127069]

Dr. Howells: On 12 February, the General Affairs and External Relations Council of the European Union approved the concept of a European security and defence policy mission to Afghanistan in the field of policing with linkages to the wider rule of law. Discussions are under way in Brussels on the development of a Concept of Operations (CONOPS), which will detail the composition, objectives and cost of the mission. We plan to contribute to the mission but are awaiting the issuance of the CONOPS to determine the exact form and extent of our participation.

I also refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave him on 23 February 2007, Official Report, column 992W.

Africa: Illegal Immigrants

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the (a) Mauritanian and (b) Libyan Governments on port security and illegal immigration from Africa. [126976]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed the issue of port security or illegal migration from Africa with either the Government of Mauritania or the Government of Libya. We continue to discuss these important issues with both Governments at a working level.

Albania: EC Enlargement

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she has received requests from Albania for UK assistance in that country's efforts to meet the criteria for EU membership. [126986]

Mr. Hoon: The UK has been working for some time to assist the Government of Albania in their efforts to meet the criteria for EU membership. The UK contributes politically through the EU's Stabilisation and Association process and practically through Government-funded projects in the country which focus on developing administrative and technical capacity.

Democratic Republic of Congo: Children

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she expects the United Nations Envoy on Children and Armed Conflict to report following her mission to the Democratic Republic of Congo. [126697]

Mr. McCartney: The United Nations Special Representative on Children and Armed Conflict, Ms Radhika Coomaraswamy, visited the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) between 4-9 March. She will brief the diplomatic community on return to New York after 14 March.

The Special Representative's visit aims to ensure greater protection for children as the DRC emerges from years of civil war. She will discuss with the Congolese Government the issues of children associated with armed groups, sexual violence and impunity.

Progress on disarmament and demobilisation of child soldiers in the DRC has been relatively successful. But their reintegration back into society has been slow. The UK has given £15 million to the World Bank-led regional multi-country demobilisation and reintegration programme and £3 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross for programmes including child reintegration. We will continue to press the new DRC Government to take responsibility for reintegration and make it a priority.

European Union: Constitution

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will provide for a referendum on any proposed EU constitution. [126993]

Mr. Hoon: The Government have confirmed repeatedly that the treaty establishing a constitution for Europe would be ratified by the UK only after a positive vote in a referendum. However, there is no consensus at present among EU member states on the future of the constitutional treaty. The way forward will be discussed at the European Council in June. The Government make no presumption regarding the outcome of these discussions and will not speculate about their outcome.

Foreign Relations

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received of (a) the meeting of the foreign ministers of India, China and Russia in Delhi on 14 February 2007 and (b) the outcomes of the meeting. [127335]

Dr. Howells: Our High Commission in Delhi regularly reports on India's foreign policy and relations with third countries, including emerging groupings such as the India-Russia-China forum. A Joint Communique was issued after the meeting held on 14 February in Delhi. In their joint statement, the Ministers reaffirmed that trilateral co-operation was not directed against the interests of any other country and was, on the contrary, intended to promote international harmony and understanding and find common ground amidst divergent interests. They also emphasised the strong commitment of India, Russia and China to multilateral diplomacy. The full text of the statement can be found at:

http://www.mea.gov.in/declarestatement/2007/02/14js01.htm.

Guinea: Armed Conflict

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on recent protests and conflict in Guinea; and what representations she has made to the Government of Guinea on the imposition of martial law by President Lansana Conte. [126738]

Mr. McCartney: We have been concerned by recent events in Guinea and regret the loss of life resulting from clashes between protesters and security forces. In conjunction with the EU and other international partners in Conakry, our ambassador has made several representations to the Guinean Government expressing our concern and our hope that all issues could be resolved peacefully and constitutionally. We note, and welcome, the lifting of martial law on 23 February, the end to the national strike, and the appointment of Lansana Couyate as the new Guinean Premier. We hope that Mr. Couyate will move soon to appoint a new, broadly-based and consensual Government to move Guinea forward.

North Korea

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the progress of the six party talks on North Korea in Beijing. [126753]

Mr. McCartney: The latest round of six party talks (6PT) ended in agreement on 13 February with all parties renewing their commitment to the Joint Statement of 19 September 2005. Specifically the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) agreed to shut down its Yongbyon nuclear facility and allow inspections by International Atomic Energy Agency personnel. In return, the parties have agreed to provide economic, energy and humanitarian assistance to the DPRK up to the equivalent of one million tons of heavy fuel oil. The agreement also establishes five working groups tasked with formulating plans to implement the Joint Statement. They will focus on DPRK-US relations, DPRK-Japan relations, denuclearisation, economy and energy co-operation and Northeast Asia Peace and Security Mechanism. The next round of the 6PT is scheduled to take place on 19 March, before which it is expected that all five working groups will have had a chance to hold initial discussions.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her US counterparts on the amount of Voice of America broadcasting to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. [126755]

Mr. McCartney: The issue has not been raised with my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary. However, we understand the US Administration has requested an increase in funding from US$4.6 million to US$8 million for the Korean services of Voice of America and Radio Free Asia for the next financial year.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to her US counterpart on recent talks between the US and North Korea in New York. [126692]

Mr. McCartney: The US and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) held bilateral talks earlier this week in New York as part of the agreement reached at the latest round of the six party talks on 13 February. The discussions provided an opportunity for both sides to discuss bilateral concerns in an attempt to move towards normalisation of relations between the two countries. Given that these were bilateral meetings, the UK did not make any representations. Both countries have reported that the talks were constructive and a wide range of issues were covered.

The agreement reached on 13 February is a step in the right direction towards the peaceful denuclearisation of the Korean Peninsula. The UK will take every opportunity to urge the DPRK to fulfil the commitments it has entered into.

Philippines

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make arrangements for a visit to the Philippines to promote British interests there. [126756]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no current plans to visit the Philippines. However, my hon. Friend the Minister for the Middle East plans to visit the region. The bilateral relationship between the UK and the Philippines is good, with strong political, trade and investment links. We work closely with the Philippino Government on key areas of shared concern including counter-terrorism, human rights, development, conflict prevention and peace building.

Russia

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans she has to increase the number of ministerial visits to Russia to improve relations with that country. [126982]

Mr. Hoon: There were 15 ministerial visits to Russia in 2006, including my visit to Moscow in September. Russia's presidency of the G8 ensured a large number of ministerial visits and official contact during the year.

Russia remains an important partner in achieving the Government's International Strategic Priorities across a range of foreign policy issues. We shall look to take whatever practical opportunities arise to maintain direct productive contacts at ministerial level both here and in Russia. The most recent ministerial visit to Russia was by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, in February 2007.

Sakhalin Island: Pipelines

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the Government is giving to British oil companies to negotiate with Russian authorities on the Sakhalin project. [126992]

Mr. Hoon: The Government have remained in close touch with the investors during their negotiations with the Russian authorities on the Sakhalin II project. Commercial negotiations between the investors and the Russian authorities regarding future project arrangements concluded in December 2006, and are now in the implementation phase.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry raised the issue with his Russian counterpart in February 2007 and we continue to monitor the situation.

Somalia: Terrorism

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of (a) recent attacks on Mogadishu's airport and (b) the effect such attacks will have on the work of African Union peacekeepers in Somalia. [126711]

Mr. McCartney: We have noted that mortar attacks on Mogadishu airport have taken place, most recently on 6 March. Despite efforts by the Transitional Federal Government of Somalia some rogue elements continue to mount limited attacks. We condemn those responsible for the recent attacks in Mogadishu and call on all parties to reject violence and commit to peaceful dialogue.

We cannot predict the effect any further attacks will have on the work of the African Union Mission in Somalia (AMISOM). However, we hope that the arrival of the AMISOM will help to improve security in Somalia.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Government of Sri Lanka on the position of Tamil civilians who reside in areas where there have been military encounters with militants for the Liberation of Tamil Tigers Eelam. [126699]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary expressed to the Sri Lankan Foreign Minister, Rohitha Bogollagama, whom she met in London on 7 March, the Government's serious concern at the humanitarian impact of the conflict and the cost in terms of violence to the civilian population of Sri Lanka. The full text of my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's statement following their meeting is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website at:

http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029391629&a=KArticle&aid=1171458466111.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the recent arrests of Sri Lankan policeman and soldiers in connection with a series of abductions and killings across the country; and what recent assessment she has made of the impartiality of the Sri Lankan armed and police forces. [126707]

Dr. Howells: We have previously raised with the Sri Lankan Government our concern that their national forces are not taking effective measures to safeguard civilians. This followed credible reports of a number of instances where it appeared that the actions of those forces had resulted in the loss of civilian life. Although there has been some media reporting, we have not received any specific reports on the allegations or the circumstances of the arrests currently in question.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made clear our concern, for the many Sri Lankan civilians who have become victims of violence since the escalation of the conflict, when she met with Rohitha Bogollagama, the Sri Lankan Foreign Minister, on 7 March. Promoting reform in the security sector to improve accountability and promote adherence to internationally accepted human rights standards is a key strand of the UK's Peace Building Strategy in Sri Lanka. The Global Conflict Prevention Pool, a Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Department for International Development and Ministry of Defence administered fund, supports this work.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received from the Norwegian-led Sri Lankan Monitoring Mission; and whether her Department has a standing information sharing agreement with the Mission. [126708]

Dr. Howells: There is no formal agreement for the sharing of information between the Sri Lankan Monitoring Mission (SLMM) and the Government. The SLMM was created as an integral part of the Cease-Fire Agreement and receives its mandate from and reports to the parties to the 2002 Sri Lanka Cease-Fire Agreement. We are not a party to that agreement. We do, however, through our High Commission in Colombo have routine contacts with the SLMM as well as with other organisations and actors in the Sri Lankan peace process.

Sri Lanka: Arms Trade

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent estimate she has made of the amount of arms entering Sri Lanka; and what assessment she has made of the effect of the entry of arms into the country on the peace process there. [126812]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary clearly expressed our view that no party to the conflict will prevail through a military solution alone when she met the Sri Lankan Foreign Minister on 7 March. The availability of illegally-imported weaponry, while not a cause of the conflict in itself, is undoubtedly an aggravating factor and one which acts to prolong the conflict in Sri Lanka. Through the Global Conflict Prevention Pool (a Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Department for International Development and Ministry of Defence administered fund), the Government are working with Saferworld to help the Sri Lankans to develop a national strategy to counter the proliferation of small arms and light weapons.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response the UK has made to the recent peace agreement in East Sudan. [126205]

Mr. McCartney: We welcome the conclusion of the Peace Agreement on eastern Sudan between the Government of Sudan and the Eastern Front rebel group in Asmara on 14 October 2006. We hope that the Agreement will form the basis for lasting peace and security in eastern Sudan. We call on the parties to continue to work together to achieve this.

Sudan: Oil

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had on a potential oil embargo on Sudan with EU counterparts. [126204]

Mr. McCartney: Recent discussions with our EU partners have focussed on building support for further targeted sanctions against individuals involved in the Darfur conflict and an extension of the existing UN arms embargo on Darfur to the whole of Sudan. We have made it clear to partners that we believe further measures will be necessary if this package does not deliver the requisite co-operation from the parties to the conflict in Darfur.

Tajikistan: Religious Freedom

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support she is making available to promote legislation in Tajikistan that respects the freedoms of all religious communities and individuals; and what representations she has made to the UN Tajikistan Office of Peace-Building on the promotion of freedom of religion. [126696]

Mr. Hoon: Our ambassador in Dushanbe, together with his EU colleagues, is following developments relating to the draft law on religious organisations extremely closely.

The UN special rapporteur on freedom of religion or belief, Asma Jahangir, recently visited Tajikistan to examine questions related to respect for freedom of religious communities and individuals. The UN special rapporteur will present a report of her visit to the UN Human Rights Council.

The UK has funded a wide range of projects in Tajikistan which support the development of independent media and civil society. We also work closely with the international community in Tajikistan, including with the UN Tajikistan Office of Peace-building and the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe, who have programmes on developing civil society, promoting good governance and monitoring human rights.

Timor-Leste

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the situation in East Timor. [126975]

Mr. McCartney: Our Embassy in Jakarta covers East Timorese affairs with the assistance of our Honorary Consul in Dili. They provide regular reports on developments in East Timor. The Embassy deployed a team of four officials to Dili on 7 March to assess the situation on the ground and to ensure that consular arrangements for British nationals are sufficiently rigorous. They reported that Dili was calm at the time of their arrival, but that the security situation remains fragile and susceptible to change at any moment.

We are concerned by the deterioration of the security situation in East Timor and the resulting casualties and have urged all concerned to bring an end to the violence and resolve the problems within the framework of the constitution and laws.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the United Nations envoy in Timor-Leste on progress with the peace process there. [126810]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had any discussions with the special representative of the Secretary-General (SRSG) to East Timor. However, the UK has played a key role in the UN Security Council to ensure a robust UN Mission to East Timor has been put in place in Dili, focusing on areas of potential instability and conflict. Our officials in New York and Dili have met with the SRSG on a number of occasions. We have highlighted the importance of political reconciliation and the need for timely, peaceful and fair elections as an important part of the peace process. The UN Mission has a key role to play in public education, facilitation of political dialogue and assistance with electoral organisation. It is also working to achieve early progress in Security Sector Reform and the judicial sector, not least to ensure that elections take place in a framework that provides for long-lasting stability.

Uganda: Human Rights

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on Government action against High Court judges in Uganda; what assessment she has made of the implications of such activity for (a) human rights, (b) democracy and (c) Commonwealth activity in Uganda. [127088]

Dr. Howells: We are monitoring events surrounding the detention of the alleged People's Redemption Army suspects and the related court proceedings. The violence used by the Government forces at the Uganda High Court on 1 March to frustrate the decision of the High Court to grant the suspects bail has grave implications for the independence of the judiciary, respect for the rule of law and human rights in Uganda. The Uganda judiciary remains on strike in protest at these events.

Our high commissioner in Kampala made representations to the acting Foreign Minister, Henry Okello Oryem, on 2 March. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, raised our concerns with the Ugandan high commissioner in London on 5 March. We are liaising with other international partners, including the Commonwealth Secretariat. We will continue to press all sides to respect the rule of law and abide by the constitution.

Uganda: Judiciary

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the freedom of the judiciary in Uganda. [126693]

Mr. McCartney: The Ugandan judiciary has been relatively free of political interference in recent years. However we are concerned about recent events surrounding the detention of the alleged People's Redemption Army suspects. The violence used by the Government forces at the Uganda High Court on 1 March to frustrate the decision of the High Court to grant the suspects bail has grave implications for the independence of the judiciary, respect for the rule of law and human rights in Uganda. The Uganda judiciary remains on strike in protest at these events.

Our high commissioner in Kampala made representations to the acting Foreign Minister, Henry Okello Oryem, on 2 March. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, raised our concerns with the Ugandan high commissioner in London on 5 March. We will continue to press all sides to respect the rule of law and abide by the constitution.

Ukraine: EU Enlargement

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on Ukraine joining the European Union. [126984]

Dr. Howells: The Government support Ukraine's policy of EU integration and firmly believe that the door to eventual membership should remain open. Article 49 of the treaty on EU states that any European country may apply for membership if it respects the principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, and the rule of law. The Government believe that enlargement has proved our strongest tool for spreading stability and prosperity in Europe.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was allocated to the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service for 2006-07; and what the outturn spending is expected to be. [126088]

Mr. Dhanda: £106,003,000 was allocated to the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service for 2006-07. CAFCASS spent £25,401,400 in the third quarter of 2006-07.

Children: Day Care

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if he will make a statement on his proposals for wraparound child care to be introduced; when such proposals will be published; what representations he has received on such proposals; and how much has been allocated to the initiative; [127006]

(2) which schools will qualify for wraparound funding. [127007]

Beverley Hughes: We want all schools to offer access to extended services by 2010, providing a core offer of activities, with at least half of all primary and a third of secondary schools doing so by 2008. Primary schools are expected to provide, as part of the core offer, access to affordable child care at or through their school from 8 am to 6 pm all year round linked to a varied menu of activities. Secondary schools are not expected to offer formal child care but they are expected to provide access to a varied menu of activities (study support activities such as sports clubs, music tuition, dance, drama and art clubs) before and after school from 8 am to 6 pm and during the school holidays in response to demand. Our proposals for access to wraparound child care through schools were first published in our 10-year child care strategy "Choice for parents, the best start for children" in December 2004. We published further details in June 2005 in the Extended Schools Prospectus "Extended schools: Access to opportunities and services for all". We have received a number of formal and informal representations on this, including a number of parliamentary questions on this subject over the past two years.

We are providing £680 million over 2006-08 to support schools in developing access to extended services. £430 million is being routed via local authorities through the Standards Fund and the General Sure Start Grant, £250 million directly to schools through the School Standards Grant (SSG). Currently, over 4,000 schools are providing access to the core offer of extended services.

City Academies: Contracts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what advice and guidance is given to academies which intend to contract for commercial services with their sponsor. [126066]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 8 March 2007]: The general requirements relating to the procurement of goods and services are set out in the Academies Financial Handbook, which the Department issues to all academies. This includes the requirement for probity in procurement, to demonstrate that all parties are dealt with on a fair and equitable basis and to ensure that there is no private gain. In particular the Financial Handbook requires governors, including sponsor governors, to make formal declarations of their interests in external businesses and to withdraw from any discussions regarding potential contracting with that business.

In addition to any advice—or indeed directions—which the Department may give to academy trusts in relation to the procurement of goods and services, the law also precludes the payment of any charitable trustee—including the governors of an academy, of which the sponsor is one—unless legal authority for that payment is given in the charity's governing documents, or otherwise granted by a court or the Charity Commission.

The Charity Commission approves the governing documents of all companies proposed to be registered charities prior to granting registration, to ensure that any provisions conferring authority on the charity to make a payment to one of the trustees—or a company associated with a trustee—deal with conflicts of interest in a transparent manner.

All academy trusts use the Department's model memorandum and articles of association as a basis for their own, and these include standard conflict of interest provisions recommended by the Charity Commission. These typically require any trustee of the company, who has an interest in a particular contract, to withdraw from discussions in relation to such a contract. In order to comply with these provisions, a sponsor of an academy trust would, for example, be required to withdraw from any meetings at which a discussion took place on the proposed remuneration of either themselves, or a company with which they are associated.

Furthermore, Charity Law places an obligation on charitable trustees to act in the best interests of their respective charities, and contracting with a company in the knowledge that this might not be at the best terms available to the charity, would obviously be contrary to this obligation.

Advice and guidance is also provided through the designated Project Lead within the Department, and academies are also referred to the Public Procurement Regulations 2006.

Computing Industry

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what policies his Department is implementing to ensure that there will be sufficient qualified graduates to meet the demands of the UK computing industry. [106055]

Mr. Dhanda: The Government are committed to increasing the number of young people taking science and mathematics at advanced level and progressing to study science at university and beyond. "The Science and Innovation Investment Framework 2004-2014: Next Steps", published in March 2006, sets out a range of measures to support this.

The latest UCAS figures showing applicants for entry to higher education in 2007 show an increase of 10 per cent. in students studying mathematics and an increase of 15.8 per cent. in students studying mathematics and computer science combined.

eskills UK, the Sector Skills Council for IT and telecoms, has developed, along with employers in the IT sector, the IT Management for Business (ITMB) hons degree. eskills UK has also developed foundation degrees for the IT, telecoms and contact centre sectors, all designed to ensure that graduates get the combination of business and technical skills that are vital to business today and tomorrow.

Departments: Discrimination

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress his Department has made in achieving gender equality in public appointments to bodies which fall within his Department's responsibility since 1997. [125209]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 5 March 2007]: The Government remain committed to improving diversity on the boards of public bodies and the principle of equal representation of women and men in public appointments.

The annual Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies" contains details of the number of women appointed to public bodies each year by Department. For 1997-2006 copies of these documents are available in the Library for the reference of Members. From 1998 copies are also available on the internet at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/other/agencies/public_bodies/

During 2006, women represented 31.6 per cent. of the public appointments made to non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) by the Department for Education and Skills (DfES). In January 2007, 31 per cent. of total public appointments in DfES's NDPBs were held by women.

In 1997, 23.6 per cent. of public appointments made to NDPBs by the Department for Education and Employment were held by women. Subsequent Machinery of Government changes mean that there is no direct comparison between public appointments in 1997 and in 2006.

Departments: St. George's Day

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans his Department has to celebrate St. George's Day. [125784]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills has no plans to celebrate St. George's day.

Education (Student Loans) (Repayment) Regulations 2000

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Education (Student Loans) (Repayment) Regulations 2000 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125614]

Bill Rammell: The regulatory impact assessment prepared for the 2000 regulations estimated the one-off costs to business to be between £40 million and £80 million over the first five years of operation from April 2000 (in net present value terms at 1999). Our most recent estimate of the recurring costs to business is in the region of £20 million per year.

The one-off administrative costs incurred by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs and the Student Loans Company in implementing student loan collection through the tax system was £16.25 million. In the 2005-06 financial year recurring administrative costs amounted to £15.25 million.[1]

[1] All costs are given on a UK wide basis.

Education: Greater London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of 14 year old (a) boys and (b) girls reached each level in the national curriculum tests in (i) English, (ii) mathematics and (iii) science in each London education authority in each of the last five years. [122217]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the House Library.

Higher Education: Student Numbers

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many applications were made to (a) university and (b) Russell Group universities in each year from 1996 to 2007, broken down by (i) socio-economic group and (ii) ethnicity. [122623]

Bill Rammell: The Department does not hold data on numbers of applications by type of institution and (i) socio-economic group, and (ii) ethnicity, or numbers of entrants by type of institution and socio-economic group prior to 2002/03. The latest available information relates to entrants to full-time undergraduate courses and is shown in the following tables.

Despite the claims that some have made that the variable fee system would put off those from less well off backgrounds, the latest UCAS figures for students applying for entry in autumn 2007 indicate that this has not happened. The figures indicate that although applicants from less affluent families are still in the minority, since 2005 there has been a bigger year-on-year percentage increase from applicants from the lower socio-economic groups than from applicants from more affluent backgrounds. As a result, the proportion of applicants who are from the lower socio-economic groups has risen from 30.9 per cent. in 2005 to 31.3 per cent. this year.

Higher Education: Sunderland

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of people in (a) Houghton and Washington East constituency and (b) Sunderland city council area received a degree qualification in each year since 1997. [125297]

Bill Rammell: The latest available data on the number of graduates from Houghton and Washington, East constituency and Sunderland local authority for the academic years 1997/98 to 2005/06 are given in the following table.

Information on the percentage of people in Houghton and Washington, East constituency and Sunderland local authority who receive a degree qualification is not collated centrally.

However, the percentage of working age adults educated to NVQ level 4 and above can be found from the Annual Population Survey.

This shows that in 2005, the percentage of working age adults from Houghton and Washington, East constituency with NVQ4 and above qualifications is 15.7 per cent., the figure for Sunderland local authority is 16.6 per cent., and the comparable figure for England is 26.2 per cent.

Official Cars

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many cars run by his Department were manufactured (a) in the UK and (b) abroad. [104821]

Mr. Dhanda: No cars belonging to the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) were manufactured in the UK. All cars were manufactured abroad.

School Meals

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) with which partnership the School Food Trust is working on its plans for regional training kitchens for the school food workforce; how many such kitchens there will be; and by what date it is planned that the kitchens will be operational; [125819]

(2) what discussions (a) his Department and (b) the School Food Trust have had with private sector companies on the provision and equipment of the proposed regional training kitchens. [125821]

Mr. Dhanda: The School Food Trust (SFT) has been asked by the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) to lead on the establishment of regional training centres in recognition of the fact that the full range of training offered is likely to be broader than cooking skills. The SFT's aim is to establish the first of these in spring 2007 with a national network operational by the end of March 2008.

A target for the number of RTCs has not been set. The final number will depend upon the number and quality of bids, and local needs.

The SFT has been working with partners to develop criteria against which to judge applications to become regional training centres. These partners include school cooks, head teachers, local authorities, private sector catering providers, FE colleges, the Learning and Skills Council, People 1st, the Training and Development Agency, the Food Standards Agency, Department of Health and DfES. Two stakeholder events were held in Birmingham in January.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which baseline year he has selected by which to judge the School Food Trust's performance against its targets of increasing school meal uptake by four percentage points by March 2008 and 10 percentage points by autumn 2009; and how many school meals were consumed in that year. [125820]

Mr. Dhanda: The School Food Trust's performance will be judged against the baseline information on school meals take-up set out in the report on the School Food Trust's first annual survey of take-up of school meals in England for the 2005/06 year. The School Food Trust's survey collected information on the percentage take-up of school meals in primary and secondary schools rather than on the number of school meals that were consumed. The Department did not collect information on the number of school meals that were consumed in 2005/06.

Schools: Greenwich

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much he estimates will be spent in the London Borough of Greenwich from the Building Schools for the Future budget on (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools. [126688]

Jim Knight: Greenwich's wave 1 Building Schools for the Future (BSF) project has been allocated capital funding of £169 million (including ICT) on the basis of the outline business case approved in January 2005. This level of funding will be confirmed only when a final business case for the project is approved which is scheduled to happen later this year. The authority has a further project in wave 5 of BSF. The funding allocation for this project has yet to be agreed.

Primary schools are not covered by BSF, but we are taking a similarly transformational approach to capital investment for the primary sector. The Primary Capital Programme aims to rebuild, remodel or refurbish at least half of all primary schools over the next 15 years. The programme will be rolled out nationally from 2009-10 when all local authorities, including Greenwich, will benefit from a share of £500 million of additional investment. This will be allocated by means of a simple, open formula—still to be determined. Subject to future Government spending decisions, we anticipate that the additional investment will continue at that level throughout the life of the programme.

Science: Curriculum

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which properties of (a) light and (b) sound are expected to be studied under the proposed key stage 3 science programme of study. [126012]

Bill Rammell: Teachers will use the National Curriculum planning guidance, together with their knowledge of pupils' prior attainment and the programmes of study for key stages 2 and 4, to ensure appropriate progression, while taking full advantage of the flexibility offered by the new key stage 3 programme of study. Light and sound are ways in which energy is transferred from one place to another and as such are placed within "Energy, electricity and forces". To signal that the properties and behaviour of light and sound are still a significant component of the key stage 3 programme of study, they are specifically mentioned in the explanatory notes accompanying the range and content section.

Special Educational Needs: East Yorkshire

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many applicants there were per place for each special needs school in East Yorkshire in September of each year since 2000. [126709]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Trade Union Funding

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding his Department has allocated to individual trade unions in the last three years. [114070]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department has not provided any direct funding to individual trade unions in the last three years. However, in common with other Departments and agencies, the Department does provide agreed time off and facilities for trade union representatives to take part in union duties, activities and training.

Written Questions

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will answer the question tabled by the hon. Member for South West Bedfordshire on 28 February 2006, reference 125275, on the collaborative restart of the Northfields Technology College with Houghton Regis Middle School. [127359]

Jim Knight: I refer the hon. Member to the reply issued on 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2245W.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what aggregate reduction in outstanding debt to the Child Support Agency he expects to achieve by agreed write off and revaluation of interim maintenance assessments; [113560]

(2) what process he plans to put in place and what formula he proposes to use to facilitate the revaluation of interim maintenance assessment debt proposed in the White Paper "A new system of child maintenance"; [113561]

(3) whether the revaluation of interim maintenance assessments proposed in the White Paper "A new system of child maintenance" will be subject to agreement by the parent with care. [113568]

Mr. Plaskitt: Given the discretionary nature of the negotiated settlements, we cannot predict the extent to which they will be used and are unable to estimate the impact on debt.

In relation to revaluation of interim maintenance assessments, I refer the hon. Member to the figures given in paragraph 5.42 of the Government's White Paper "A new system of child maintenance".

Subject to consultation, the proposed revaluation of interim maintenance assessments would be based on analysis of information held by the agency on converting interim maintenance assessments to full maintenance assessments. Conversion of punitive interim maintenance assessments almost invariably results in lower rate full maintenance assessments. The factor that we would use to revalue interim maintenance assessments would reflect the average effect of conversion and would be determined closer to the time of the revaluation.

In relation to making the revaluation subject to parent with care agreement', we would consider the detail of the process in the light of views received from the White Paper consultation.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken was to progress clerical Child Support Agency cases to a stage where a first payment was made in each month since January 2005; and if he will make a statement. [122995]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Cregan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which public affairs firms have been given contracts by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies sponsored by his Department in the last five years; and what the purpose was of each contract. [118446]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Department uses private sector contractors to deliver public relations and promotional work in support of communications campaigns on benefits, pensions and other departmental delivery areas. These contractors may include public affairs advice and strategy as part of their offer to private sector and other organisations but the Department does not use these services.

Information on public bodies for which the Department is responsible is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Websites

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many job searches the Jobcentre Plus website handled in each of the last 24 months. [118786]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information is in the following table:

	Number of job searches

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much it has cost to administer the Jobcentre Plus website in each of the last five years. [118788]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Jobcentre Plus website was launched in March 2002. The cost of administering the site in each of the last four financial years is in the following table.

The number of visits made to the website each year has increased from 20.7 million in 2003 to 75.6 million in 2006.

	Cost (£)
2002-03	85,000
2003-04	95,000
2004-05	238,700
2005-06	265,200

Departments: Art Works

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department spent on works of art in each year since 1997. [120452]

Mrs. McGuire: The art works in the Department for Work and Pensions are on loan from and therefore owned by the Government Art Collection.

Departments: Complaints

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff worked in dedicated complaints units in his Department and its executive agencies in (a) 1997-98, (b) 2001-02 and (c) 2005-06; and how many there have been in 2006-07 to date. [121670]

Mrs. McGuire: Complaint handling forms an integral part of many of the job roles in all parts of the organisation, particularly those in customer facing or correspondence teams.

The Child Support Agency is the only part of Department for Work and Pensions with a dedicated complaints unit. Information for the Child Support Agency is not available prior to 2005. As at January 2005 the Child Support Agency had 930 staff either directly in teams handling complaints or teams handling correspondence from hon. Members, stakeholder groups or clients who may have earlier made a complaint. As at December 2006, the number employed on such duties was 892.

Freud Report

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to report the findings and recommendations of the Freud Report. [121458]

Mr. Jim Murphy: David Freud published his report on 5 March. We will consider the report's recommendations very carefully and respond to them in due course.

Full Employment Agency: ICT

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost of the Information and Communication Technology systems for the new Full Employment Agency in Scotland. [120310]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Full Employment Agency is a matter which we are discussing with the Scottish Executive. No estimate has been made by the Department for Work and Pensions of the cost of the Information and Communication Technology systems for the proposed Agency at this stage.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many housing benefit claims were subject to each rate of non-dependant deduction in 2004-05; how many claimants at each rate lived in (a) council housing, (b) registered social landlord housing and (c) the private rented sector; and what percentage of total housing benefit claims each group represents. [108216]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information on non-dependants is only available from the annual 1 per cent. sample, the latest being at May 2004. At present it is not possible to use the May 2004 data as an anomaly has been identified which requires further investigation before they can be used with confidence. The most recent information, as at May 2003, is in the following tables.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research he has commissioned into the operation of non-dependant deductions from housing benefit; and if he will make a statement. [118812]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department last commissioned research into non-dependant deductions in the mid 1990s.

We have no plans to commission further research into the operation of non-dependant deductions from housing benefit, but we will keep them under review.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the proportion of housing benefit that was (a) overpaid and (b) underpaid due to the incorrect application of non-dependant deductions in the latest period for which figures are available. [118814]

Mr. Plaskitt: The housing benefit review survey estimates that in 2005-06 the proportion of housing benefit expenditure overpaid due to incorrect or missing non-dependant deductions was 0.3 per cent. The equivalent figure for underpaid housing benefit expenditure was 0.1 per cent.

The underpayment estimate only covers recipients who were getting less than they were entitled to, and does not include those who were entitled to benefits but did not apply.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many tenants are claiming local housing allowance in each of the 18 pathfinder areas; and if he will make a statement. [125029]

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost of each stage of the roll out of the 0800 number for Jobcentre Plus. [118792]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 13 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the estimated cost of each stage of the roll out of the 0800 number for Jobcentre Plus. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The new 0800 telephone number is only part of a wider package of measures being delivered to improve the process for new and repeat claims to income support, jobseekers allowance and incapacity benefit. The 0800 feature will give the majority of our customers the facility to make a benefit claim in a single call which will be free from landlines.

The new national 0800 number for people making new benefit claims is being rolled out for a one off cost of £1.1m excluding VAT. I cannot provide the cost of running the new service as the telephone charges are the subject of commercial negotiations that we have not yet concluded.

Jobseeker's Allowance: Chorley

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed jobseeker's allowance in Chorley constituency in each of the last 10 years. [125325]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the following table:

Jobseeker's allowance claimants in the Chorley parliamentary constituency, each January 1997 to 2007

1998	1,532

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many former farmers claimed jobseeker's allowance in (a) Chorley constituency and (b) Lancashire in each of the last 10 years. [125326]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Jobseeker's Allowance: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of the resident working age population in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex is in receipt of jobseeker's allowance. [125455]

Mr. Plaskitt: As at January 2007, 2.9 per cent. of the working-age population of Eastbourne were in receipt of jobseeker's allowance. At the same date, 2.2 per cent. of the working-age population of East Sussex were in receipt of jobseeker's allowance.

National Insurance: Jobcentres

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people from (a) Aylesbury constituency, (b) Aylesbury Vale District and (c) Buckinghamshire have been interviewed by Jobcentre Plus in connection with an application for a national insurance number in each of the last five years. [123408]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available.

The available information is that from 1 January 2006 to 22 February 2007, 5,117 applications from Buckinghamshire for national insurance numbers were received at the Isle of Wight Central Control Unit for processing following an interview.

New Deal for Young People

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions under what circumstances participants of the New Deal for Young People may extend their period on Gateway beyond 10 months. [121598]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The New Deal for Young People (NDYP) Gateway period is designed to last for a maximum of four months. People aged 18-24 who have been claiming jobseeker's allowance for six months join the Gateway and receive intensive job search support to improve their job prospects. If an NDYP participant has not found work at the end of the Gateway period, they are referred to one of the NDYP Options. In exceptional circumstances, for example, a family bereavement, a short-term illness, or an option becoming unexpectedly unavailable, the Gateway period can be extended.

Occupational Pensions

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Occupational Pension Schemes (Minimum Funding Requirement and Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 2002 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125620]

James Purnell: The Occupational Pension Schemes (Minimum Funding Requirement and Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 2002 were accompanied by a regulatory impact assessment (RIA), a copy of which is available in the Library. The RIA included an assessment of the impact of the regulations on business, although this will have been affected by the subsequent replacement of the minimum funding requirement by new scheme funding requirements from December 2005. The cost to the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (OPRA) of implementing the regulations, if any, is not separately identifiable.

Older Workers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate his Department has made of the number of workers aged 60 and over. [126393]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There are an estimated 2,052,000 people in work aged 60 or over in Great Britain, 16.8 per cent. of the population in the age group.

Note:

These estimates are not based on the same total population estimates as headline ONS estimates for employment in the same period, but this is unlikely to have much effect on the aforementioned figures.

Pathways to Work

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of recipients of incapacity benefit moving into work in the Pathways to Work pilot areas. [102264]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There have been 24,730 individuals recorded as having entered work through Pathways to Work.

Notes:

1. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

2. Data are to the end of March 2006. This is because the Jobcentre Plus Job Entry Targets (JET) measure was terminated in March 2006 and replaced by a new Job Outcome Targets (JOT) measure. We need to move to capturing job outcomes using this measure; however, JOT data are taken from HMRC and therefore there is a longer delay in using this information.

3. The statistics quoted in this response are taken from the Pathways to Work Evaluation Database.

4. It would not be appropriate to infer any kind of job entry rate from the data supplied in this response as it would be an underestimate of the true underlying job entry rate due to the fact that more recent cases will have had less time to find a job.

5. Job entry figures include all recorded job entries plus Return to Work Credit (RTWC) awards for which no job entry is yet recorded. (By definition, a RTWC award must indicate that a job entry has occurred). Figures for job entries include New Deal for Disabled People (NDDP) job starts.

6. This answer is based on the number of individuals who have entered Pathways and then subsequently found a job. The total number of Pathways job entries is higher as an individual can have multiple spells on Pathways.

Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent estimate he has made of the costs of uprating the basic state pension on the basis of average earnings in each year from 2008-09 to 2015-16; and if he will make a statement. [121809]

James Purnell: Under our reforms, more people will be receiving state pensions based on their national insurance records, and there will be a more generous basic state pension due to the restoration of the earnings link. This provides a solid foundation for private saving. The guarantee credit will continue to provide a safety net and reforms to the savings credit will reduce the spread of means testing and support the savings incentives that are an integral part of the reform package.

The following table contains the projected additional cost of earnings-uprating the basic state pension from 2008 relative to current system spending.

Table 1: Cost of earnings uprating the basic state pension, net of income related benefits

£ billion, 2006-07 prices

	Cost of uprating from 2008
2008-09	0.4
2009-10	0.9
2010-11	1.5
2011-12	2.1
2012-13	2.7
2013-14	3.4
2014-15	4.0
2015-16	4.7

Notes:
1. The analysis is based on the reform proposals presented in the Pensions Bill rather than the White Paper. Some methodological improvements were made to the projections of basic state pension expenditure and revised data has been used between publication of the White Paper and the introduction of the Pensions Bill.
2. Net costs include savings seen from reduced expenditure on other income related benefits (pension credit, housing benefit and council tax benefit). They do not include any change in income tax revenue or national insurance. Annex A of the Pensions Bill RIA shows the cost of earnings uprating the BSP on a gross basis.
3. Net costs assume the pension credit standard minimum guarantee is uprated by earnings from 2008.
4. Figures do not include the effect of any other reform measures.
5. Costs or savings presented in the table are based on long-term projections of United Kingdom benefit spend, consistent with the pre-Budget report 2006.
6. Figures exclude the effect of personal accounts.

Pensions: Public Sector

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to set up an independent review on public sector pensions. [126731]

James Purnell: None.

Pensions: Uprating

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost has been of (a) stationery, (b) postage and packaging and (c) staff hours associated with reissuing the pensions uprating notifications. [125483]

James Purnell: The information to ascertain the costs associated with this exercise is not yet available.

Poverty: Leicester

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) pensioners and (b) children in Leicester have been lifted out of poverty since 199[illegible] [125634]

James Purnell: Specific information regarding low income for Great Britain is available in "Households Below Average Income 1994/95-2004/05", a copy of which has been placed in the Library. The threshold of below 60 per cent. contemporary median income is the most commonly used in reporting trends in low income.

The data source does not allow us to provide robust numbers for estimates below a regional level. Therefore, estimates for Leicester are not available.

Social Security Benefits Agency: Standards

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken by the Benefits Agency to process claims was in the last period for which figures are available. [124464]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Benefits Agency was an Executive Agency of the Department of Social Security (DSS). Both organisations ceased to exist in June 2001 when the Department for Work and Pensions was formed from DSS, the Employment Service and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment; Jobcentre Plus was formed from the Benefits Agency and the Employment Service. Since 2001, further changes in benefit delivery have been made with the formation of the Pension Service and the disability and carers service.

The information requested is not available.

Social Security Benefits: Glenrothes

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Glenrothes were in receipt of (a) attendance allowance and (b) income support in 1997; and how many were in receipt of income support in each of the last five years. [122619]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information for the Glenrothes parliamentary constituency is not available prior to May 2005. The available information is in the following table.

Income support claimants in the Glenrothes parliamentary constituency

2005	4,440
2006	4,490

State Retirement Pensions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in the UK were entitled to a state pension in (a) 1992, (b) 1997 and (c) 2006. [126391]

James Purnell: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the following table.

State pension recipients in GB

	Number
September 1992	9,479,400
September 1997	9,914,700
September 2005	10,568,700
March 2006	10,583,400

Unemployment: Foreign Workers

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of A2 and A8 migration on (a) unemployment and (b) measures to tackle unemployment in the UK. [122313]

Mr. Jim Murphy: In February 2006, DWP published a working paper on the impact of free movement of workers from Central and Eastern Europe on the UK labour market; copies have been placed in the Library. The paper found that there has been no discernible statistical effect of A8 migration on claimant unemployment.

A8 migrants can only usually access benefits once they have been working and registered with the Worker Registration Scheme for at least 12 months. A8 migrants not in receipt of benefit are unable to access Jobcentre Plus schemes. Similarly, A2 migrants cannot generally access the benefit system without having completed 12 months legal work.

We are continuing to monitor the impact of accession country migration on the UK labour market.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if (a) he and (b) Jobcentre Plus will take steps to provide further benefit support and advice for A2 and A8 nationals who become unemployed. [122288]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Income related benefits are only paid to people who have a right to reside and are habitually resident in the UK. Most A8 and A2 nationals can only claim in work benefits while they are working as either a registered worker in the case of an A8 national, or an authorised worker in the case of an A2 national.

Once they have completed 12 months continuous employment as a registered or authorised worker A8 and A2 nationals who remain in the labour market have the same rights to access Jobcentre Plus services including benefit support and advice, as other EEA and UK nationals. We have no plans to extend this support.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent assessment he has made of the level of winter fuel payments in relation to the cost of energy; and if he will make a statement. [127355]

James Purnell: The winter fuel payment is a significant contribution to winter fuel bills which account for around 60 per cent. of the year's total fuel bill. It has risen from £20 to £200 from winter 2000-01 and to £300 for people aged 80 or over from winter 2003-04. These increases have been at a significantly higher rate than inflation. Fuel prices do fluctuate and although fuel prices have risen since 2003, this follows a period of no change between 1997 to 2003. Companies are now starting to announce price reductions in their retail tariffs to domestic customers following recent falls in wholesale gas prices.

Winter Fuel Payments: North East Region

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households in (a) Houghton and Washington East constituency and (b) Sunderland City Council area received winter fuel payments in each of the last five years. [125298]

James Purnell: The information is in the following table. Information on households receiving a winter fuel payment is available only by constituency and local authority from winter 2002-03. Figures for winter 2006-07 are not yet available but we expect the numbers to be similar to those for winter 2005-06.

	Household payments made
	Houghton and Washington, East constituency	Sunderland local authority
2002-03	12,090	40,470
2003-04	12,230	40,660
2004-05	12,450	41,220
2005-06	12,570	41,580

Notes:
1. Figures rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Parliamentary constituencies and local authorities are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.
3. Any residence found to have four or more occupants aged 60 and over is not included in the household figures as it is assumed to be a care home.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much Deborah Mattinson was paid for her presentation to the Chancellor of the Exchequer as part of the policy review seminar on 22 January 2007. [125954]

Mr. McFadden: A range of organisations and individuals have made submissions and presentations to the policy review process. Deborah Mattinson was not paid for her presentation.

TREASURY

Child Care Tax Credits: Eltham

Clive Efford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in Eltham have received child care credits since their introduction. [126682]

Dawn Primarolo: The average number of families in each constituency benefiting from the child care element of Working Tax Credit in 2004-05 are available in the HMRC statistical publication "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. Finalised Awards 2004-05. Geographical analyses", which is available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-geog-stats.htm

Estimates for 2005-06 will be published in May 2007.

No estimates are available for 2003-04, as the only data available are for a sample of cases. Any estimates would be unreliable at constituency level.

Childbirth

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many births there were in the UK in each year since 1995. [126143]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 13 March 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question about how many births there were in the UK in each year since 1995. (126143)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2005, The table below shows the number of live births in the UK each year between 1995 and 2005.

Live births, United Kingdom, 1995 to 2005

	Number of live births
1995	731,882
1996	733,163
1997	726,622
1998	716,888
1999	699,976
2000	679,029
2001	669,123
2002	668,777
2003	695,549
2004	715,996
2005	722,549

In compiling total live births for the UK, figures for live births in England and Wales relate to the number occurring in each calendar year, while for Scotland and Northern Ireland figures relate to the number of live births registered in each calendar year.

Deborah Mattinson

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his role was in selecting Deborah Mattinson to make a presentation as part of the policy review seminar on 22 January. [125993]

John Healey: A range of organisations and individuals have made submissions and presentations to the policy review process.

Departments: Official Engagements

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list his official engagements from 1 January to 28 February 2007. [125953]

John Healey: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Housing Occupancy

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the (a) mean and (b) median number of (i) children and (ii) adults was in households where the household reference person was aged (A) 18 to 24, (B) 25 to 29, (C) 30 to 39, (D) 40 to 49, (E) 50 to 59, (F) 60 to 69 and (G) 70 and over in (1) 1985, (2) 1995 and (3) 2005; [126071]

(2) what the (a) mean and (b) median number of (i) children and (ii) adults was in households where the household reference person was aged (A) 18 to 24, (B) 25 to 29, (C) 30 to 39, (D) 40 to 49, (E) 50 to 59, (F) 60 to 69 and (G) 70 and over and where the household reference person reported their nationality as being from one of the 12 countries which acceded to the EU since 2004. [126072]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 13 March 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking what the (a) mean and (b) median number of (i) children and (ii) adults in households where the household reference person (HRP) was aged (A) 18 to 24, (B) 25 to 29, (C) 30 to 39, (D) 40 to 49, (E) 50 to 59, (F) 60 to 69 and (G) 70 and over in (1) 1985, (2) 1995 and (3) 2005, and also your question asking for similar information for where the household reference person reported their nationality as being one of the 12 countries which acceded to the EU since 2004. (126071 and 126072)

The information requested on numbers of children and adults, separately, in each household, by the age of the household reference person is readily available for the year 2005, but not for 1995 and 1985. Figures for those earlier years could only be provided at disproportionate cost. To provide reliable information on accession countries, figures have been combined across the four quarters in which household information was collected in the Labour Force Survey in the period Autumn 2004 to Spring 2006. The figures are provided in the two tables below.

Income Tax and National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was paid in (a) income tax and (b) national insurance contributions by (i) men and (ii) women aged (A) under 25, (B) 25 to 29, (C) 30 to 34, (D) 35 to 39, (E) 40 to 44, (F) 45 to 49, (G) 50 to 54, (H) 55 to 59, (I) 60 to 64, (J) 65 to 69, (K) 70 to 74, (L) 75 to 79 and (M) over 79 in the latest year for which information is available. [126060]

Dawn Primarolo: The available estimates of the distribution of income tax liabilities can be found in table 3.2 "Distribution of median and mean income tax by age range and gender, 2004-05" on the HM Revenue and Customs website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_distribution/menu-by-year.htm#32

Estimates of the distribution of national insurance contributions by age range and gender for 2004-05 are provided in the following table.

	Male		Female
Age range	Numbers paying NICs (000)	Mean NICs (£)	Numbers paying NICs (000)	Mean NICs (£)

All ranges	14,870	1,500	11 ,250	1,010

[1] Includes females that turned 60 at the end of the financial year but paid NICs as 59-year-olds for some proportion of the year.

[2] Includes males that turned 65 at the end of the financial year but paid NICs as 64-year-olds for some proportion of the year.

Notes:
1. This table is based on age at the end of the financial year. Individuals cease paying NICs when they reach state retirement age; this is 60 for females and 65 for males.
2. Figures are rounded so totals will not necessarily sum to their components.
3. Figures are UK primary accruals for 2004-05 net of rebates. They include Class 1 net, Class 2, Class 3 and Class 4 NICs.
4. The figures are estimated using:
Annual survey of hours and earnings for 2004-05 for the Class 1 age distribution.
Survey of personal incomes for 2003-04, uprated with earnings for 2004-05, for the self-employed age distribution.
DWP contributions and qualifying years tables for 2002-03 for the Class 3 age distribution.

Minimum Wage: Carers

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions took place between his Department and the Department for Work and Pensions on the carer's allowance earnings threshold prior to the increase in the minimum wage to £5.35 in October 2006. [126754]

Dawn Primarolo: HMT and DWP officials discuss a number of issues relating to the benefit system on a regular basis.

Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the titles were of each of the policy papers prepared by the Council of Economic Advisers in the last six months. [125940]

John Healey: As set out in the Treasury press notice of 28 June 2006, the Council of Economic Advisers is made up of individual policy experts who will bring their specialist advice to work alongside individual Treasury teams on the Government's key policy priorities.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his long-term plans are for the Council of Economic Advisers; and if he will make a statement. [125941]

John Healey: The terms of reference for the Council of Economic Advisers were set out in the Treasury Press Notice of 4 August 1997.

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/newsroom_and_speeches/press/1997/press_99_97.cfm

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date his Council of Economic Advisers last met in full; and how many times it met in full in the last 12 months. [125939]

John Healey: Members of the Council of Economic advisers meet regularly during the course of their work.

National Insurance Contributions

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the additional income to the National Insurance Fund which would be raised by removing the upper earnings limit and levying a standard percentage on all incomes above that limit. [126235]

Dawn Primarolo: Removing the upper earnings limit and levying the main percentage rate on all incomes above that limit would result in an additional estimated income to the National Insurance Fund of £6.6 billion in 2006-07.

This estimate is consistent with PBR 2006 assumptions.

National Insurance Contributions: Pensions

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were sent letters from HM Revenue and Customs in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006 inviting them to top up their national insurance (NI) contributions to ensure that they are entitled to the basic state pension; what estimate he has made of the number of these letters which were incorrectly sent to people who had paid their full NI contributions; how many payments HM Revenue and Customs has received from people who had received such incorrect notices; how much was received; how many people have been notified that the letters were incorrect; how many refunds have been made; what circumstances led to the error; and what steps his Department is taking to rectify the error. [125933]

Dawn Primarolo: The following numbers of letters were sent to people to advise them that they had a gap in their national insurance contributions record:

(a) 3.7 million letters were issued in 2004 for the 2002-03 tax year,

(b) 3.2 million letters were issued in 2005 for the 2003-04 tax year

(c) 4.7 million letters were issued in 2006 for the 2004-05 tax year.

It is not possible to provide the information on the following as it is not held:

how many letters were incorrectly sent,

how many payments and what total amount of money HMRC has received from people who had received such notices, how many people were notified the letters were incorrect, how many refunds made.

The reasons for the delay in processing 2004-05 Employers' Annual Returns are well documented and I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 29 January 2007, Official Report, column 346W. There has been no repeat of the processing delays experienced for 2005-06 tax year.

PAYE

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people (a) qualified for and (b) received the £250 credit for filing PAYE returns electronically in each year since its introduction. [127289]

Dawn Primarolo: The online filing incentive is paid to small employers who voluntarily submit their Employer Annual Return online.

Payments of incentives were made to 900,000 small employers in 2005-06 (in respect of Annual Returns for 2004-05). This represents 51 per cent. of the small employer population registered for PAYE in the qualifying period.

Payments of incentives were made to 1.18 million small employers in 2006-07 (in respect of Annual Returns for 2005-06). This represents 67 per cent. of the small employer population registered for PAYE in the qualifying period.

Personal Income

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the information provided in (a) Table 50 and (b) Table 51 of Report No. 1 (the Initial Report on the Standing Reference) of the Royal Commission on the Distribution of Income and Wealth for the years 1980, 1985, 1990, 1995, 2000 and 2005. [127315]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC publish a number of National Statistics on the distribution of wealth. These are available from the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal_wealth/menu.htm

Updating the tables from the 1975 Royal Commission on the Distribution of Income and Wealth would incur a disproportionate cost.

Policy: Reviews

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Ministers attended his round table policy review seminar on 22 January 2007. [125955]

John Healey: The policy review seminars have been open to all non-Cabinet Ministers able to attend.

Revenue and Customs

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was paid to (a) male and (b) female recipients by HM Revenue and Customs aged (i) 18 to 25, (ii) 26 to 30, (iii) 31 to 40, (iv) 41 to 50, (v) 51 to 60, (vi) 61 to 70, (vii) 71 to 80 and (viii) over 80 in the last period for which figures are available. [127008]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Revenue and Customs: Disclosure of Information

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions HM Revenue and Customs provided access to personal tax information to another Government Department or agency in 2005-06; to which Departments or agencies access was provided; and what the reasons were for providing the access. [126739]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs discloses information gathered in carrying out its functions only where there is a statutory power to disclose. There is a wide range of statutory powers to disclose to other Government Departments and agencies. Disclosures are made for the purposes set out in those statutory powers. The information requested is not available.

Stamp Duties: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average stamp duty paid on a house was in Lancashire in each of the last five years. [126149]

Ed Balls: Estimates of amounts of stamp duty payable by each local authority, for 2005-06, were deposited in the House of Commons Library last June.

A table showing total amounts of stamp duty land tax arising in 2005-06 from residential transactions, and numbers of transactions, for counties, will be published in the summer. Reliable information is not available for earlier years.

Tax Evasion

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of income tax revenue lost through tax evasion in the last year for which figures are available. [126241]

Dawn Primarolo: There are currently no reliable estimates of the income tax revenue lost through tax evasion.

Taxation: Electoral Register

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) under what circumstances his Department regards registration as a voter at a UK address as evidence of (a) residency and (b) domicile in the UK for tax purposes; and what account is taken of electoral registration in determining an individual's liability for tax in the UK; [126954]

(2) how many individuals resident in the UK claim non-domiciliary status for UK tax purposes; and what account is taken of the relationship between residency and domiciliary status for UK tax purposes; [127030]

(3) what checks are carried out to verify that (a) UK and (b) Commonwealth citizens who claim non-domiciliary status for UK tax purposes meet the criteria for this status. [127031]

Dawn Primarolo: Registration as a voter at a UK address is part of the evidence considered in relation to whether an individual is resident or domiciled in the UK for tax purposes and any consequent liability to tax in the UK.

Approximately 110,000 individuals claimed non-domicile tax status through self assessment tax returns in the year 2004-05. Liability to UK tax depends on the residence, ordinary residence and domicile status of individuals.

HM Revenue and Customs may ask any individual who claims non-domicile for further information, either as part of self-assessment return procedures or in response to a form DOM1.

Unemployment: Ethnic Groups

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what change there was in unemployment rates for (a) white, (b) mixed Indian, (c) Pakistani, (d) Bangladeshi, (e) other Asian, (f) Black Caribbean, (g) Black African and (h) other ethnic groups in each year for which figures are available. [126133]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 13 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the unemployment rates for (a) white, (b) mixed Indian, (c) Pakistani, (d) Bangladeshi (e) other Asian, (f) Black Caribbean, (g) Black African and (h) other ethnic groups for which figures are available. (126133)

The table overleaf gives the unemployment rates by ethnicity. These rates are not seasonally adjusted. They are published each quarter in Table 10 of the Labour Market Statistics Historical Quarterly Supplement available on the ONS website:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_labour/LFSHQS/Table10.xls

Comparable estimates are not available for 1998 and 2000, and Q1 (January-March) and Q3 (July-September) for the years 1997-2004.

Estimates are taken from the Labour Force Survey (LFS). As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty. This is particularly true for the unemployment rates of some ethnic groups.

VAT

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2007, Official Report, column 1141W, on VAT, if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the letter of formal notice sent from the European Commission to the UK Government on 18 October 2006 and (b) the UK Government's response of 14 December 2006, referring to a complaint about a change in the law on 3 December 2004 on VAT on the supply of services to non-EU customers. [121752]

Dawn Primarolo: This matter is currently under consideration, and is the subject of discussions with the European Commission.

On completion of those considerations and discussions I will write to the hon. Member.

VAT: Fraud

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the loss of revenue to the Treasury from VAT carousel fraud in each of the last 12 months; and what estimate he has made of the potential loss in 2006-07. [126243]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC published annual estimates of the level of MTIC fraud alongside PBR 2006 in 'Measuring Indirect Tax Losses—2006', which is available from the House of Commons Library or from the HMRC website.

HMRC does not produce monthly estimates of revenue losses from carousel fraud and, as yet, no estimate has yet been produced for 2006-07, although operational indicators suggest that MTIC fraud activity has fallen sharply during the year.

Welfare Tax Credits: ICT

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the flexibility of the tax credit IT system; [126767]

(2) what assesament he has made of the risks associated with the tax credit IT system. [126768]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 March 2007]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 26 October 2006, Official Report, column 2028W, and to the Minutes of Evidence given to the Treasury Committee on 19 April 2006 ordered by the House of Commons to be printed 23 May 2006.

Welfare Tax Credits: Telephones

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures are in place to retrieve and transcribe telephone records in the event of a dispute between the tax credit office and its clients regarding information imparted during a call; and if he will make a statement. [126478]

Dawn Primarolo: Calls to the tax credits helpline are digitally recorded and in the event of a dispute that cannot otherwise be settled, HMRC staff will retrieve the recording to establish the facts.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcoholic Drinks: Crime

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the potential effect of a ban on all alcohol advertising on the incidence of alcohol-related crimes. [126596]

Mr. Coaker: While advertising has been shown generally to influence individuals' awareness and attitudes, there is no clear evidence that advertising contributes to criminal behaviour such as violence. However, in response to the Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy (2004), both the Committee of Advertising Practice (CAP) and the Broadcast Committee of Advertising Practice (BCAP) strengthened the non-broadcast and broadcast alcohol advertising code rules. The regulatory bodies; the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) and Ofcom, are undertaking work, designed to assess the impact of these regulatory changes. CAP and BCAP are committed to robust evidence-based rules. If there were new evidence showing major harms, then the codes, or their interpretation, may be reviewed.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the availability of alcohol for sale in supermarkets on levels of criminal and antisocial behaviour in the vicinity of supermarkets. [126218]

Mr. Coaker: The British Crime Survey provides, for England and Wales, general data on; adult victims' perceptions on whether violent offenders were under the influence of alcohol; people's perceptions of whether drunk and rowdy behaviour is a problem in their area; and a range of other data about alcohol related offences. No specific data is collected centrally on crime and disorder in the vicinity of supermarkets.

The Government are determined to see the highest standards of alcohol retailing across the industry including off licences and supermarkets and welcomes the progress that has been made.

We continue to work with the major supermarkets and other retailers to encourage socially responsible retail of alcohol and to tackle some of the associated issues, for example underage sales. Following the success of the Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaigns we will conduct, in May, a national Tackling Underage Sales of Alcohol Campaign.

The Licensing Act 2003 gives local authorities and the police a powerful framework to regulate the sale of alcohol and tackle irresponsible licensed premises. Where crime and disorder arises in the vicinity of licensed premises, the licence can be reviewed and, if appropriate, conditions can be added or the licence can be revoked.

Alcoholic Drinks: Durham

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many alcohol-related offences were committed in (a) County Durham and (b) Easington constituency in each of the last five years. [126449]

Mr. Coaker: From the information collected centrally on recorded crime, it is not possible to identify those offences which are alcohol-related. Such offences are not specifically defined by statute and details of the individual circumstances of offences do not feature in the recorded crime statistics.

Asylum

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers from (a) Somalia, (b) Iraq and (c) Afghanistan had their application refused in 2006. [124775]

John Reid: Information on asylum applications, initial decisions and appeals by nationality are published quarterly and annually. These publications, entitled 'Asylum Statistics 1/2/3/4 Quarter 2006, are too large to be included within the reply. Copies are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Crimes of Violence: Hospitals

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) violent assaults and (b) arrests took place in hospitals in Lancashire in each of the last 10 years; [124973]

(2) how many convictions for offences committed in hospitals in Lancashire were obtained in each of the last 10 years. [124974]

Mr. McNulty: Information from the NHS Counter Fraud and Security Management Service for physical assaults in Acute hospitals in the County of Lancashire is available for 2004-05 and 2005-06: with 297 physical assaults in 2004-05 and 343 physical assaults in 2005-06.

It is not possible to identify separately convictions for offences committed in hospitals from other information held centrally.

Criminal Casework Team

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes have been made to the Criminal Casework Team in each of the last five years. [124220]

John Reid: I have set out the average number of personnel working within the Criminal Casework Team in each of the last five years, 26 October 2006, Official Report, column 2126W. The Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the Home Affairs Committee on 9 October 2006, setting out that this figure had increased to 530 staff. In her letter, the Director General also outlined that a new system of case ownership has been introduced to ensure that all deportation cases are managed and tracked by individual caseworkers as they pass through the system. A copy of this letter is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the budget of the criminal casework team was in each of the last five years; and how it was allocated in each year. [124318]

John Reid: Figures prior to 2004-05 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

From 2004-05, the budget for the criminal casework team (rounded to the nearest £100,000) is in the following table.

2004-05	2,200,000
2005-06	2,500,000
2006-07	10,600,000

The majority of this budget is allocated for staffing costs. The Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Lin Homer, wrote to the Home Affairs Committee on the 9 October 2006 explaining that during 2006 there had been a five-fold increase in staffing levels within the criminal casework team. A copy of this letter is available in the House Library.

Criminal Records Bureau: Standards

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average waiting time is for a Criminal Records Bureau check. [126325]

Joan Ryan: Data concerning the average waiting time taken to complete a disclosure are not a performance target and are not collated by the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB). The CRB operates to a published service standard (PSS) to issue 93 per cent. of standard disclosures within 10 days and 90 per cent. of enhanced disclosures within 28 days. For January 2007, the CRB issued 99.2 per cent. of standard disclosures and 90.8 per cent. of enhanced disclosures within PSS.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of Authentication by Interview officers to be employed by his Department in (a) 2009 and (b) 2010. [125948]

Joan Ryan: The interview officer role will gradually transition to that of interview and enrolment officer from 2009, and staff will be trained accordingly. This is to meet the need for the business additionally to record biometrics from all applicants in readiness for the issuing of second biometric passports and identity cards.

It is expected that there will be a need for more enrolment officers than the roughly 600 interview officers to be employed this year during the implementation of the authentication by interview process. Any additional staff are likely to be required from mid 2009, but it is premature to identify how many this will be as it depends on the date when IPS is ready to start initial biometric enrolment and the rate of increase in volume of customers which will depend on the progressive implementation plan.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Authentication by Interview officers have been recruited; and which company his Department has commissioned to recruit them. [125949]

Joan Ryan: IPS has recruited 55 interview office staff who have started work and offered a job to a further 539 people. Some are to be full time and others are part time staff. Recruitment was carried out by IPS supported by our recruitment partner Barkers, who assisted with application response handling.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the most recent job advertisement for the position of Authentication by Interview officer. [125950]

Joan Ryan: I confirm that the most recent interview officer job advertisements for the recruitment campaign held in September 2006 will be placed in the Library.

Departments: Travel

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many miles staff in his private office travelled on official business in 2005-06. [124732]

John Reid: Departmental records on travel are not kept by length of journey and therefore this question cannot be answered within the disproportionate cost threshold.

All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Ministerial Code, Travel by Ministers and the Civil Service Management Code.

Driving Offences

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were convicted for failing to comply with (a) a stop sign and (b) traffic light signals in each of the last 10 years. [125022]

Mr. Coaker: The information collected centrally does not identify separately offences of neglect of stop signs and traffic light signals.

Available information taken from the Court Proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, from 1995 to 2004 (latest available) is provided in the table.

2005 data will be available later this year.

Number of convictions at all courts for the offence of failing to comply with traffic light signals/signs[1], England and Wales, 1995 to 2004

	Number of offences
	Total
1995	24,480
1996	25,307
1997	23,563
1998	20,966
1999	18,971
2000	21,893

[1] Offences under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 and the Motor Vehicles (Speed Limits on Motorways) Regulations 1973; the Road Traffic Act 1988 and the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1994.

Notes:

1. It is known that for some police force areas, the reporting of court proceedings in particular those relating to summary motoring offences, may be less than complete. Work is under way to ensure that the magistrates courts case management system currently being implemented by the Department for Constitutional Affairs reports all motoring offences to the Office for Criminal Justice Reform. This will enable more complete figures to be disseminated.
2. Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when these data are used.

Driving Under Influence: Durham

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drink driving offences were committed in (a) County Durham and (b) Easington constituency in each of the last five years. [126450]

Mr. Coaker: Available information on the number of convictions at all courts and those dealt with by written warning, taken from the annual Home Office publication "Offences relating to motor vehicles, England and Wales Supplementary tables", for Durham police force area (which is coterminous with the County of Durham), from 2000 to 2004 (latest available) are given in the table.

Data is not available at constituency level.

2005 data will be available later this year.

Number of driving etc. after consuming alcohol or taking drugs[1] offences found guilty at all courts or dealt with by written warning within Durham police force area, 2000 to 2004

	Number of offences

Written warnings	2	0	0	0	11
Total	1,126	1,097	1,136	1,170	1,288

[1] Offences under the Road Traffic Act 1988.

Notes:

1. It is known that for some police force areas, the reporting of court proceedings in particular those relating to summary motoring offences may be less than complete. Elderly: Abuse

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps the Government is taking to reduce the number of cases of abuse or mistreatment of elderly people; [123690]

(2) what steps the Government is taking to ensure that older people are aware of their rights in cases of abuse and mistreatment. [123691]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

The Government deplore abuse of all older people. We have set out standards of care and treatment for older people in the national service framework and in national minimum standards for care homes and domiciliary care agencies. We have also created independent regulators and given them the powers they need to take action against poorly providing performers. Staff who provide personal care to older people in their own homes or in care homes are subject to statutory checks, including checks of their criminal record and the protection of vulnerable adults scheme.

The Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006 introduces a new vetting and barring scheme which will be passed in from autumn 2008. The new scheme will be proactive, with vetting taking place on an individual's first application to work with children or vulnerable adults. This will make it far more difficult for abusers to gain access to the most vulnerable groups in our society.

Statutory guidance has been issued to local authorities on putting in place multi-agency policies and procedures to protect vulnerable people from abuse. "No Secrets" makes it clear that local strategies for the prevention of abuse of vulnerable adults should include plans to disseminate information to users, carers, relevant staff groups and agencies to ensure they are aware of local arrangements including how to report abuse.

The Department has commissioned research, jointly with Comic Relief, on the prevalence and nature of abuse of older people who live in their own homes. It will be published later this year.

Entry Clearances: Marriage

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many marriage visas were granted in each year since 1985. [126044]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the following table. Please note that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office electronic resources only go as far back as 1998 for marriage/fiancé(e) visas.

Applications for UK marriage/fiancé (e) visas issued from 1998 to 2006

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the following table. Please note that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office electronic resources go as far back as 1998 only for marriage/fiancé(e) visas. These statistics therefore cover the years 2005 and 2000 only.

Fingerprints: Children

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what alternatives to a fingerprint database are being considered for children who turn 16 and already have a valid non-biometric passport; and what assessment he has made of their compliance with international requirements for biometrics on passports. [126203]

Joan Ryan: Non-biometric passports remain valid until their date of expiry. This includes passports of five year validity issued to children under the age of 16.

International standards on passports relate only to the passport documents, not systems on which records of passports issued are held.

Identity and Passport Service

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many United States citizens are employed by the Identity and Passport Service. [126177]

Joan Ryan: The place of birth of each Identity and Passport Service (IPS) employee is not held on a database which can be interrogated in order for the IPS to supply this information.

However, the IPS employment eligibility criteria states that posts are open to UK nationals, British protected persons, Commonwealth citizens, EEA nationals of other member states and certain EEA family members, who have no employment restriction or time limit on their permitted stay in the UK and who should also have been a resident for five years immediately preceding their application.

Identity and Passport Service: Correspondence

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will direct the Chief Executive of the Identity and Passport Service to provide (a) substantive replies to correspondence and (b) a response to a request for a meeting from the hon. Member for Bassetlaw in relation to his constituent, Mr. Gordon Wilson of Worksop. [123417]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 26 February 2007]: Bernard Herdan, Executive Director, Service Planning and Delivery for the Identity and Passport Service (IPS) responded substantively to the hon. Member for Bassetlaw on 23 January 2007.

Mr. Herdan wrote to the hon. Member again on 23 February, apologising that he had not addressed directly the issue of a meeting in his earlier letter and for failing to clearly explain that, in the circumstances, he did not feel that a meeting was necessary.

I am however happy to meet with the hon. Member if necessary. However I note that Mr. Gordon Wilson has now been issued a passport.

Illegal Drugs

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents involving the (a) sale and (b) use of illegal drugs on school property were reported in each (i) local education authority, (ii) London borough and (iii) regional police force in each year since 2000. [117795]

Mr. Coaker: The requested information is not available centrally.

Immigration Controls: EC Countries

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's policy is on the proposal for an enhanced role for the EU borders agency Frontex. [123495]

Mr. Byrne: The Government are supportive of Frontex. Its position on the European Commission's proposal on Rapid Border Intervention Teams was stated in an Explanatory Memorandum of 7 September 2006 on Council document number 11880/06.

Immigration: EC Enlargement

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the number of nationals that have moved to the UK following the accession of the most recent members of the EU, broken down by country of origin. [122995]

Mr. Byrne: The Office for National Statistics (ONS) will publish information on visits to the UK by residents from all EU countries including the A8 countries and Romania and Bulgaria (each country listed separately) in its quarterly and annual publications on overseas travel and tourism.

Internet: Fraud

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many complaints of fraud in relation to online retail websites were made in each year since 1997; [126230]

(2) what steps the Serious and Organised Crime Agency is taking to deal with reports of fraud in relation to online retailing; [126231]

(3) how many reported instances of fraud involving online retailing have been referred to the Serious and Organised Crime Agency; and what the status is of investigations in each case in which no legal proceedings are active. [126232]

Mr. Coaker: Information on the number of complaints of fraud in relation to online retail websites is not held centrally.

Along with Class A drugs and organised immigration crime, fraud against individuals and the private sector is one of SOCA's priorities. SOCA is working collaboratively with partners to build knowledge and understanding of fraud and to align operational activity to those frauds and individuals causing the most harm to the UK.

SOCA does not operate a formal referral process in respect of frauds SOCA works collaboratively with partners to identify and protect against those frauds and individuals causing the most harm to the UK and aligns operational activity accordingly. SOCA is unable to comment on ongoing operational activity. As required by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005, SOCA will issue an annual report as soon as possible after the end of financial year 2006-07. This report will cover all SOCA's functions.

The Home Office is represented on an industry-led steering group which aims to tackle 'Card Not Present' (CNP) fraud (which includes fraud over the internet). We support practical measures being introduced by the industry to increase levels of security for internet transactions. These include address verification services (AVS) and card security code (CSC), along with Mastercard secure code and Verified by Visa which require password verification for internet transactions.

Mobile Phone Use

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) prosecutions were brought against and (b) fixed penalty notices were imposed on drivers in each police authority area using mobile phones while driving in 2005; [111398]

(2) what the (a) maximum, (b) minimum and (c) average penalty imposed for driving while using a hand-held mobile phone was in each month in 2005. [111399]

Mr. Coaker: 2005 data will be available later this year.

National Identity Register

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to charge (a) accredited organisations and (b) other Government Departments for identity checking services via the National Identity Register. [123629]

John Reid: It is the Government's intention to fund the National Identity Scheme primarily through fee income for the products and services that arise from the scheme. This may include fees for use of identity verification services.

However, the level of fee and the way it is charged, depends on a number of factors: (a) the final cost of providing such services, as determined in procurement negotiations with suppliers (b) the particular type(s) of identity verification service used and (c) the approval of schedule of fees for the scheme by Parliament.

Offenders: Deportation

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign national prisoners who have (a) reached the end of their sentence and (b) not reached the end of their sentence were detained in immigration detention centres on the last date for which information is available. [123626]

John Reid: The Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the Home Affairs Committee on 19 February 2007, providing a snapshot of the number of time-served foreign national prisoners who are awaiting deportation in both the IND Removals Estate and in prisons. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many cases in which a foreign national was to be deported due to a conviction in the UK were delayed following completion of the prison term where the foreign national was (a) contesting and (b) not contesting the deportation in each of the last five years; [124119]

(2) what the average length of time between the completion of the prison sentence and deportation from the UK, where a foreign national was deported due to a conviction in the UK, has been in the last five years; [124233]

(3) what the (a) longest and (b) shortest period of time has been between the completion of the prison sentence and deportation from the UK where a foreign national is to be deported due to a conviction in the UK in the last five years. [124231]

John Reid: The requested information is not available and could be obtained by the detailed examination of individual case records only at disproportionate cost.

On 19 February the Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the Home Affairs Committee to provide the most recent information available on the deportation of foreign national prisoners. A copy of this letter is available from the Library of the House.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many foreign nationals who have served a prison sentence in the UK and are awaiting deportation have made a complaint regarding the length of time between completion of the prison sentence and deportation; [124120]

(2) how many complaints his Department has received regarding the Criminal Casework Team in each of the last five years; and how many of these resulted in alterations to the Team. [124219]

John Reid: This information is not collected in the format requested and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals are awaiting deportation due to having committed a criminal offence in the UK and following completion of their prison term. [124218]

John Reid: On 19 February the Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the Home Affairs Committee. In this letter the Director General reported that approximately 1,300 time-served foreign nationals are currently in both the IND Removals Estate and in prisons while IND pursues deportation action against them. A copy of this letter is available from the Library of the House.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the average cost of transportation, including security and all other related costs, is for deporting a foreign national who is being deported following a conviction in the UK if the deportation is successful; [124230]

(2) what costs of transportation, including security and all other related costs, of foreign nationals who are being deported due to having committed a criminal offence are irrecoverable where the deportation is (a) rescheduled and (b) cancelled. [124235]

John Reid: We do not differentiate between the cost of deporting ex-foreign national prisoners and other detainees so the information requested is not readily discernible.

The information requested could be obtained only by examination of individual records to establish whether the person had committed a criminal offence at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many attempted deportations of foreign nationals who have served prison sentences in the UK have had to be rescheduled in the last five years. [124232]

John Reid: This information is not collected in the format requested and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost through a manual search of individual case records.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which 10 causes of delay to deportation are the most frequent where a foreign national offender is to be deported following a conviction in the UK; and what steps his Department has taken to tackle them. [124319]

John Reid: The Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Lin Homer, wrote to the Home Affair Committee on 19 February 2007 to provide the most recent information available on the deportation of foreign national prisoners.

In her letter, the Director General outlined the factors that have contributed to delays in deportation and new strategy which has been put in place to ensure that the deportation system is as robust and swift as possible. A copy of this letter is available from the Library of the House.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost per day is of detaining a foreign national awaiting deportation following a conviction in the UK. [124332]

John Reid: The average daily cost of detaining a person in an immigration removal centre is £116.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total cost of detaining foreign nationals awaiting deportation following a conviction in the UK was in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [124333]

John Reid: We do not differentiate between the cost of detaining foreign nationals awaiting deportation following a conviction in the UK and other detainees so the information requested is not readily discernible.

The information requested could be obtained only by examination of individual records to establish whether the person had committed a criminal offence at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what facilities are being used to house the foreign nationals convicted of a crime in the UK prior to their deportation. [124334]

John Reid: The Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Lin Homer, wrote to the Home Affairs Committee on 19 February 2007 to provide the most recent information available on the deportation of foreign national prisoners. In her letter, the Director General set out that prior to removal, foreign national prisoners are housed in both the IND Removals Estate and in prisons. A copy of this letter is available from the Library of the House.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the foreign nationals awaiting deportation have been held in prison in England and Wales for up to (a) one month, (b) six months and (c) 12 months after the end of the sentence handed down by the court to them. [125054]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 2 March 2007]: The Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the Home Affairs Committee on 19 February 2007, providing the most accurate and robust information currently available on the detention of time-served foreign national prisoners. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Open Prisons: Drugs

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were found to be in possession of narcotics in each open prison in each of the last five years. [125342]

John Reid: The information requested is not held centrally and to obtain this information, for the period requested, would be at disproportionate cost.

Passports

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the likely lifespan of the information chip in the new passport. [126305]

Joan Ryan: The Identity and Passport Service believe that the lifespan of the chip in the e-passport will match the full 10-year validity period of the e-passport, assuming the passport is subject to normal usage and levels of "wear and tear".

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether first-time passport applicants will be reimbursed for the cost of travelling to and from an Authentication by Interview centre. [126605]

Joan Ryan: The Government do not propose to offer financial help to those customers attending a passport interview. Interview arrangements and office locations have been designed to keep the cost of attending as low as possible.

Police: North Wales

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces use roads located in the North Wales police area for the purposes of police driver training. [123824]

Mr. Coaker: This is an operational matter for the police and my Department does not keep information on such use of the roads. I understand from North Wales police that their Driving School provides training to a number of other forces. They are also aware that a number of other police forces use roads in the area for police driver training. They do not however keep records of or monitor such usage.

Police: Pay

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on Criminal Investigation Department officers of the abolition of the plain clothes allowance in 2004. [126023]

Mr. McNulty: Plain clothes allowance was paid at an annual rate to officers below the rank of assistant chief constable who were required for a continuous period of not less than a week to do duty in plain clothes. From April 2003 the annual rate was £129. An officer below the rank of superintendent who was required to perform duties in plain clothes for not less than 40 hours in any six month period was paid a plain clothes allowance for these duties at an hourly rate of 6.5p. The rates payable from April 2003 were half those paid in the preceding year and entitlement to a plain clothes allowance ceased entirely with effect from 31 March 2004. No assessment has been made of the cessation of this allowance.

Police: Pensions

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 31 January 2007, Official Report, column 363-64W, on police force pensions, from which Government fund shortfalls in police authorities' funds are topped up. [126002]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office top-up payments are classed as annually managed expenditure (AME) and do not come within departmental expenditure limits (DEL). These arrangements are similar to those used by other unfunded public service pension schemes, for example those for teachers, civil servants and NHS staff. As part of the transition to the new system of financing police pensions, adjustments have been made to the level of Government funding through police grant so that no disadvantage arises at the point of change to the police, local or national taxpayers.

Prisons: Television

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason (a) television and (b) satellite television subscription services are provided to inmates in prison and detention facilities; and if he will make a statement. [125283]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The provision of television in prison, along with other forms of media, enables prisoners to remain in touch with events in the outside world which forms an important part of the rehabilitation process.

Television in cells is an integral part of the Incentives and Earned Privileges (IEP) scheme operated by all prisons. Prisoners who are on the basic level of the scheme do not have access to televisions. A small number of prisons provide satellite subscription services in association area.

Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006

Mike Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects measures in section 35 of the Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006 to come into force. [126294]

Mr. Coaker: We propose to lay an order commencing this provision shortly.

Work Permits: Doctors

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many non-European economic area national (a) junior doctors and (b) qualified doctors (i) were granted a work permit between July 2005 and February 2006 and (ii) have been granted such a permit since July 2006. [122179]

John Reid: Management information does not allow for data to be broken down into the categories of 'junior doctors' and 'qualified doctors'. The number of approved applications recorded under the occupation category of "Doctor" is as follows:

July to February each year.	Approvals
2005-06	2,558
2006-07	1,315

The figures provided are not national statistics but are based on provisional management information and may be subject to change.

Other similar occupation categories for health professionals, e.g. senior house officer, specialist registrar, etc, are not included in the figures provided.

HEALTH

NHS Dentistry

11. Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the level of access to NHS dentistry. [126780]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Access to NHS dentistry is increasing—in April 2006, primary care trusts had commissioned 75 million annual units of dental activity; by January 2007 that had increased to 78.4 million

Children's National Service Framework

12. Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in improving outcomes for disabled children in the ways described by standard 8 of the children's national service framework. [126781]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We are making good progress as we enter the second year of the 10-year framework to improve outcomes for disabled children. Our achievements include: £27 million investment in palliative care over the next three years, we are carrying out a radical review of the provision of community equipment and wheelchair services and investing in the development of an audit tool to assist the health service and local authorities to assess progress in implementing standard 8 of the national standard framework.

NHS Finance

13. Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on NHS financial performance in the year 2006-07. [126782]

Andy Burnham: I refer the hon. Member to the national health service finance report for the third quarter of 2006-07 which we published on 20 February.

This report shows that the NHS as a whole remains on course to deliver net financial balance by the end of this current financial year, and continues to perform well against key service targets.

20. Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if she will make a statement on NHS financial performance in 2006-07. [126790]

Andy Burnham: I refer the hon. Member to the national health service finance report for the third quarter of 2006-07 which we published on 20 February.

This report shows that the NHS as a whole remains on course to deliver net financial balance by the end of this current financial year, and continues to perform well against key service targets.

Maternity Services

14. Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the outcome of the review of maternity services. [126783]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We will be publishing a framework document to support the delivery of choice in maternity services shortly.

GP Practices: Dispensing

15. Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the ability of GP practices in rural areas to dispense medication; and if she will make a statement. [126784]

Caroline Flint: The current review of pharmaceutical services, which includes dispensing by general practitioners, is looking at how we can provide local, high quality services. The review is scheduled to report by the end March and will contribute to a public consultation later in the spring.

Local Involvement Network

16. Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what consultation exercises she has undertaken to assess levels of public support for local involvement networks. [126785]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The decision to establish LINKs resulted from listening to stakeholders and members of the public during the review of patient and public involvement.

The Department sought views from stakeholders and the public on the proposals for LINKs set out in 'A stronger local voice', published in July 2006.

Carers

17. Barbara Keeley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what action her Department is taking to improve advice and support for those with caring responsibilities. [126786]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We recently announced the New Deal for Carers, a package of support including £25 million for short breaks for carers in crisis situations in every council; £3 million towards a national helpline for carers; and £5 million for an experts carers programme. The Chancellor has also announced we will be holding the most far-reaching national consultation ever on the role of carers. In the months ahead we will invite carers' groups and the voluntary sector to help us design a modern vision for caring.

Bank Nurses

18. John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what measures she has considered to reduce the use of bank nurses in the NHS; and if she will make a statement. [126787]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No measures have been considered to reduce the use of bank staff. Bank staff perform an important function in the national health service by providing a flexible workforce. Bank working can also provide a good work life balance for staff. A recent report by the National Audit Office shows that bank nurses provide better value for money than agency nurses.

Organ Transplants

19. Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many people died while on waiting lists for organ transplants in each year since 2001. [126789]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Tragically 2,761 people died while listed for an organ transplant since 2001. 451 people in 2001, 427 in 2002, 485 in 2003, 455 in 2004, 495 in 2005, and 448 people in 2006. I have put a table in the Library showing the breakdown by organ

Number of patients dying 2001-06 while listed for an organ transplant, UK.

Obesity

21. Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to tackle obesity in adults and children. [126791]

Caroline Flint: We are totally committed to tackling obesity, working in partnership nationally and locally. We have set ourselves a public service agreement target to halt the year on year rise in obesity among children aged under 11 by 2010 in the context of a broader strategy to tackle obesity in the population as a whole.

Work-based Learning

22. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that NHS staff have opportunities for work-based learning. [126792]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national health service has received unprecedented levels of investment in recent years. This has allowed the NHS to invest heavily in training and development opportunities for all staff.

Employers have a duty to ensure staff have the appropriate education and training including work-based learning to support priorities and deliver services.

Acute Services

23. Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on proposed changes to acute NHS services in England. [126793]

Andy Burnham: Any proposals for changes to services are a matter for the national health service locally. There is a well established and well understood process for managing consultations on such changes so that patients, the public and local stakeholders can help to inform the local debate.

Asthma: Medical Equipment

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to replace chlorofluorocarbon-based asthma inhalers with CFC-free version for patients over the age of 12. [126729]

Caroline Flint: The transfer of patients to chlorofluorocarbon-free (CFC) metered dose inhalers (MDIs) began in 1995 when the first one was licensed for use in the United Kingdom. Many more have been introduced to the market since that time.

The Government's plan for phasing out CFCs in asthma inhalers is set out in the UK Transition Strategy for CFC-based MDIs, which was developed after consultation with all relevant stakeholders and published by the Department and the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in 1999. It was communicated widely to health care professionals in the national health service, patient groups and patients at that time.

The Department and the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs continue to actively pursue the phase-out of CFCs in MDIs in accordance with the UK Transition Strategy. In February 2007, the UK declared CFCs to be non-essential for four of the six drug categories set out in this strategy.

Audiology: Eastern Region

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average waiting time was for each primary care trust in (a) East of England Strategic Health Authority and (b) South Hertfordshire Primary Care Trust for audiology-related treatment in the last period for which figures are available; [119991]

(2) how many patients were waiting for audiology-related treatment in (a) East of England Strategic Health Authority and (b) South Hertfordshire Primary Care Trust in the last period for which figures are available. [119992]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not held centrally.

Blood: Cholesterol

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the 11 spearhead areas in London towards (a) better detection and (b) more treatment of (i) high blood pressure and (ii) high blood cholesterol levels. [124780]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The new general medical services (GMS) contract specification encourages primary care practices to identify and treat patients with high blood pressure and to test and control cholesterol levels in patients with coronary heart disease, diabetes or stroke. The tables show the number of available points achieved against these indicators demonstrating that general practitioner practices are making good progress of improving these detection and treatment rates.

The applicable quality and outcomes framework (QOF) data has been placed in the Library.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account was taken of NHS guidelines on blood cholesterol levels in Scotland when setting those for England. [124781]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department's policy on cholesterol levels is set out in the national service framework (NSF) for coronary heart disease (CHD). The NSF for CHD set cholesterol levels taking into account the Joint British Societies' recommendations reported in 1998, as well as the Scottish report "Secondary prevention clinics for coronary heart disease: randomised trial of effect on health" written by Campbell, Thain, Deans et al. which detailed emerging evidence in 1998.

Carers: Grants

David Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what her Department's (a) plans and (b) projected budget are for the carer's grant in (i) 2008-09 and (ii) 2009-10; and if she will make a statement; [125148]

(2) how many carers of older people had short breaks funded by the carer's grant in (a) 2002, (b) 2003, (c) 2004 , (d) 2005 and (e) 2006; [125149]

(3) how her Department monitors local authorities' spending of the carer's grant. [125150]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Decisions about the future of the carers grant in the next spending review period will be taken later this year.

Sustaining carers' support will be ensured through the existing system for monitoring councils' performance by the Commission for Social Care Inspection.

The number of carers for older people receiving breaks services through the carers grant in England are shown in the table. Figures for 2002-03 are not available.

Community Hospitals: Hartlepool

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the process is for applying to her Department's community hospital and services programme to build a community hospital in Hartlepool constituency. [124727]

Andy Burnham: The process for applying for funding from the community hospital and services programme is as follows:

Primary care trusts interested in applying for funding should, as a first step, and in partnership with their local practice based commissioners, local community and stakeholders develop or review current plans for community services (including existing community hospitals) against the design principles, as set out in "Our health, our care, our community: investing in the future of community hospitals and services".

PCTs should then submit their proposals to their respective strategic health authorities (SHAs).

The SHAs will assess the bids submitted, and check that they meet local need, demonstrate value for money, and meet with their strategic priorities. Those that satisfy these criteria, will then be passed on to the Department for further consideration.

Contraceptives

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to promote awareness of long acting contraceptives; and if she will make a statement. [124455]

Caroline Flint: The Government recognise the importance of women having access to the full range of contraceptive methods. A guideline has been developed by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence on long-acting reversible contraception (LARCs) and this emphasized the cost effectiveness of currently available LARC methods.

We will be issuing best practice guidance on reproductive healthcare this spring which will include further guidance on improving access to LARCs.

Dental Services

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of people requiring access to NHS dentistry to whom it is unavailable. [125551]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 6 March 2007]: The Department estimates that there are some two million people in England who would like to access national health service dental services but are unable to do so. This estimate predates the dental reforms introduced in April 2006.

The reforms have for the first time give primary care trusts (PCTs) direct control of resources for commissioning local dental services. PCTS are also now responsible for assessing local needs and developing services to reflect these needs. In Cumbria, for example, the local NHS has undertaken considerable work to assess oral health needs and reflect these in its commissioning programme, which has recently included establishing a new practice for some 2,500 NHS patients in Windermere.

Dental Services: East Yorkshire

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many spare units of dental activity there were in East Yorkshire each month since the introduction of the new dental contract; and if she will make a statement. [126816]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under the new dental contracts introduced in April 2006, dental practices provide an agreed level of national health service services over the course of each year. Annual service levels are measured using a weighted indicator of courses of treatment, known as units of dental activity. There are no monthly quotas or targets for units of dental activity.

Since the introduction of the reforms, the level of dental services commissioned by the NHS has grown steadily throughout the year, and primary care trusts are now commissioning more dental services than were provided in 2005-06.

Depression

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has monitored the implementation of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines on depression; and if she will make a statement. [112023]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not directly monitored the implementation of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's (NICE) clinical guidelines on depression. Healthcare organisations' compliance with NICE guidelines is part of the developmental standard D2 which is being assessed in shadow form in the Healthcare Commission's annual health check of mental health trusts in 2006-07. This means that assessment of performance against developmental standard D2 will not feed into the overall annual rating in 2006-07. However, it is expected to form part of the rating from 2007-08.

In May 2006, the Department embarked on the improving access to psychological therapies programme which is intended to increase the availability of evidence based psychological therapies and help full implementation of the NICE clinical guidelines on depression.

Health Services: Mentally Incapacitated

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department will extend the protection afforded by the Protection of Vulnerable Adults Scheme to apply to vulnerable users of NHS facilities. [125086]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: On the recommendation of the Bichard Inquiry we are introducing a new centralised vetting and barring scheme for people working with children and vulnerable people. This scheme, as set out in the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006, will extend the coverage of the existing barring schemes and draw on wider sources of information to provide a more comprehensive and consistent measure of protection for vulnerable groups across a wide range of settings, including the whole of social care and the national health service.

The new scheme will be proactive, with vetting taking place on an individual's first application to work with children or vulnerable adults and will make it far more difficult for abusers to gain access to some of the most vulnerable groups in society. The new scheme will be phased in from autumn 2008.

Hospitals: Crimes of Violence

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent estimate she has made of the cost of violent and abusive patients to West Midlands strategic health authority in terms of extra security, absenteeism, training of staff and legal bills. [124210]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This is a matter for the relevant local national health service organisations. The NHS Security Management Service (NHS SMS) is part of the Counter Fraud and Security Management Service (CFSMS), a division of the NHS Business Service Authority, and has overall responsibility for all policy and operational matters related to the management of security in the NHS. On behalf of the Secretary of State for Health, the NHS SMS determines the policies, legal framework, operational guidance and minimum standards necessary to ensure that the objective of providing a secure environment for the NHS can be achieved. It also provides central and regional support to those charged with undertaking security management work in health bodies, so that the required standards can be met.

Insulin

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps her Department plans to take to ensure that Glockhardt UK passes its technology to another manufacturer in order to guarantee continuity of supply of animal insulins, as discussed at the meeting between Department of Health officials and key stakeholders on 17 May 2006; and if she will make a statement; [126412]

(2) what her Department's strategy is for the supply of animal insulin; when it was published; and if she will place a copy of the strategy in the Library. [126414]

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her letter to the hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Robert Neill), dated 28 November 2006, and her letter to Earl Howe dated 10 July 2006, what her Department's insulin strategy is; when it was published; if she will place a copy of the strategy in the Library; and if she will make a statement. [126267]

Caroline Flint: The Department has received assurances from Wockhardt UK that if at any time in the future it decided to cease supply of its animal insulins, it would actively support another manufacturer with its licence application, sharing licence data to support it coming into the market to the best of its ability. The Department will support and facilitate this process.

The Department's strategy for the supply of animal insulins has been placed in the Library.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her letter of 28 November 2006 to the hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst, on the strategy of supply of animal insulin, whether the provision of the option of animal insulin to patients only if considered appropriate by the health care professionals is in accordance with the Doctor-Patient Partnership outlined by the General Medical Council's new good medical practice guidelines which came into force on 13 November 2006. [126413]

Caroline Flint: All decisions about appropriate treatment regimes for people with diabetes should be made between the individual concerned and their health care professional. The choice of insulin is the result of their joint decision-making process.

Liver Diseases: Alcoholic Drinks

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many diagnoses of alcohol-related cirrhosis of the liver there were in each of the last 10 years, broken down by age. [124017]

Caroline Flint: Information regarding the number of diagnoses of alcohol-related cirrhosis of the liver is collected centrally only for individuals suffering from this condition in secondary (for example, hospital) care. The information is shown in the following table.

All diagnoses count of episodes for alcohol-related cirrhosis of the liver, 1996-97 to 2005-06—national health service hospitals: England

Notes:
1. Finished consultant episode (FCE) An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have one episode of care within a year.
2. All diagnoses count as episodes. These figures represent a count of all FCEs where the diagnosis was mentioned in any of the 14 (seven prior to 2002-03) diagnosis fields in a HES record.
3. K.70.3 Alcoholic cirrhosis of liver—ungrossed data: Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

Lyme Disease

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 30 November 2006, Official Report, columns 916-7W, on Lyme disease, what strategies her Department has in place to deal with the increase in the number of people contracting Lyme disease. [124013]

Caroline Flint: Increases in laboratory confirmed cases have occurred due to both improved ascertainment and increased exposure to infection.

There is now an expanded and improved repertoire of diagnostic tests that have become available in the past three years to enable rapid laboratory confirmation of diagnosis of Lyme disease.

The Health Protection Agency (HPA) provides clinical advice to physicians who care for patients who may have Lyme disease, and has nationwide links to experts in infectious diseases, neurology, rheumatology and other specialties who have a particular interest in Lyme disease, to whom patients can be referred. The HPA takes part in national and international collaborations to improve diagnostic tests and to promote evidence based treatments.

The HPA has raised awareness of Lyme disease through its website and through presentations to, and discussions with, professional and recreational and special interest groups. NHS Direct has published comprehensive information on the disease, including preventive measures, on its website.

Medical Training Application Service

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the projected cost was of the Medical Training Application Service at the instigation of the service; and what the latest estimate is of the cost of the service. [126460]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The projected cost of the medical training application service at instigation was £5.8 million over five years for an England only service. Expanding to United Kingdom wide coverage and incorporating academic/specialty and general practitioner recruitment into a single, two-round recruitment exercise has slightly increased set-up costs. The projected cost of the service is now expected to be £6.3 million over five years.

NHS: Finance

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of NHS deficits on local authority budgets. [126788]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Delivering high quality health and social care while remaining on a sound financial footing can only be achieved by national health service bodies and local authorities working together to make best use of the available resources.

Local area agreements are negotiated between partners to reflect local circumstances.

NHS: Procurement

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information her Department has received from NHS Supply Chain on the consideration that it gives to National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines for medical devices when procuring those items. [125358]

Andy Burnham: NHS Supply Chain has informed the NHS Business Service Authority that they place considerable emphasis on National Institute For Health And Clinical Excellence (NICE) guidelines when evaluating the non-financial aspect of quality in a tender evaluation to ensure that the products they offer are in line with NICE guidance.

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the likely effect on patient access to new medical technologies of NHS supply chain's decision to designate preferred suppliers for product areas for fixed periods. [125359]

Andy Burnham: NHS supply chain does not operate a preferred suppliers list but will manage the procurement and delivery of in scope products through a formal contracting process in-line with the European Union directives. Procurements undertaken prior to the establishment of NHS supply chain were also governed by the EU directives and contracted in the same way.

Transparency is brought to this process by publication of a procurement calendar identifying all opportunities that are available and open to supplier bids. New opportunities will be added on a regular basis. This calendar is available on the NHS supply chain website at www.supplychain.nhs.uk.

NHS supply chain actively monitors the progress of new and innovative products and will work with small suppliers to ensure innovative products can be delivered at the best possible price.

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information her Department has received from NHS supply chain about (a) how it chooses the products included on its preferred supplier lists and (b) how standard prices are set for these products. [125417]

Andy Burnham: The tender process which national health service supply chain use to select which suppliers should be awarded contracts is shown in the table.

NHS: Reform

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to publish further reports on the clinical case for change in the NHS along the lines of those published by (a) the National Directors for Heart Disease and Emergency Case on 5 December 2006, (b) the National Director for Primary Care on 5 February 2007 and (c) the National Director for Maternity and Children's Services on 6 February 2007. [124934]

Andy Burnham: These are personal reports from the national clinical directors. The remaining clinical directors may wish to present their own accounts of the clinical case for change to the Secretary of State in due course.

Obesity: Children

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to tackle childhood obesity. [126730]

Caroline Flint: We are committed to tackling obesity, working in partnership nationally and locally. We have set ourselves a public service agreement target to halt the year-on-year rise in obesity among children aged under 11 by 2010 in the context of a broader strategy to tackle obesity in the population as a whole.

We have improved the co-ordinated delivery of initiatives that contribute to tackling childhood obesity, including working with Ofcom who have recently announced limits on broadcast advertising and promotion of high fat, salt, sugar foods to children, healthy schools, and the national school sport strategy, influencing the curriculum and standards for early years settings. We have also published care pathways for national health service primary care professionals and a self-help guide for patients to help with weight loss.

Our investments have already delivered improvements, for example, free fruit to nearly 2 million four to six-year-olds at English schools; a reformed scheme for families on benefits that will give them access to free vitamins and a choice of fruit, vegetables or milk; 80 per cent. of schoolchildren now doing at least two hours of school sport a week, beating our own target of 75 per cent. for this year; and three quarters of schools are on the healthy schools programme.

Organs: Donors

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to promote organ donation; and if she will make a statement. [127358]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Over 14 million people have registered on the Organ Donor Register (ODR), which represents approximately 23 per cent. of the United Kingdom population. The Department gives around £1 million yearly to NHS Blood and Transplant (NHSBT) to run the ODR and to promote transplantation. The Department also provides section 64 grants to a number of charities.

Over the last five years, the Department has provided dedicated funding—over £4 million in 2006-07—through NHSBT to support a number of specific hospital based initiatives to increase organ donor rates and support transplantation

An organ donation task force is currently identifying barriers to organ donation and will report later this year on what further steps could be taken to increase organ donation rates.

Patient Choice Schemes

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how the (a) budgets and (b) tariffs of the choose and book initiative were set; and what mechanisms are in place (i) to monitor, (ii) audit and (iii) and assess by (A) primary care trusts and (B) the Department; [123571]

(2) what (a) budgets have been set and (b) costs have been incurred for the choice and choose and book systems by each (i) primary care trust, (ii) acute trust and (iii) strategic health authority since its implementation. [123746]

Andy Burnham: The setting of local budgets and the monitoring of local costs for the implementation of choice and choose and book is a matter for local determination.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what mechanisms are in place to assess the value for money achieved by (a) Choose and Book, (b) Choice and (c) whole direct enhanced service system; [123615]

(2) what assessment she has made of (a) whether the significant benefits referred to in the answer of 13 June 2006, Official Report, columns 1153-54W, on the choose and book system, have been delivered and (b) the value for money provided by the choose and book system. [123759]

Andy Burnham: Work is under way in response to the recommendation in the National Audit Office's June 2006 report "Department of Health: The National Programme for IT in the NHS" that an annual statement be published, quantifying the benefits delivered by all aspects of the programme, set against the costs incurred. The first statement is intended for publication in summer 2007.

A new independent research programme will be established this year to evaluate the impact of health reform, including choice, and feed into future policy development. In addition, regulatory and equality impact assessments are being carried out on choice policy in elective care.

There are no plans for a value for money study in respect of directed enhanced services.

Sunbeds: Licensing

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which local authorities have licensing policies covering sunbed use in salons. [124649]

Caroline Flint: There are no central governmental records held on the local authorities that have licensing policies covering sunbed use in salons.

Water

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will commission research into the optimum proportion of the daily recommended intake of fluids which should be taken as water; [124148]

(2) what assessment she has made of the extent to which the public follow the Government's guidelines on how much water to drink; and if she will make a statement. [124149]

Caroline Flint: The Government advise that six to eight glasses (approximately 1.2 litres) of water, or other fluids, should be consumed every day to prevent dehydration. This is based on physiological studies.

The 2000-01 National Diet and Nutrition Survey of adults aged 19-64 years showed that mean consumption of fluid in this age group was around 1.8 litres per day. This includes milk, fruit juice, soft drinks, alcoholic drinks, tea, coffee and water (tap and bottled).

Welfare Milk

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what (a) representations and (b) other information she has received on the financial impact on nurseries and playgroups suffering from delayed payments for reimbursement of the cost of milk from the Welfare Food Reimbursement Unit; [124267]

(2) what value of claims by nurseries or playgroups for reimbursement of the cost of milk from the Welfare Food Reimbursement Unit are awaiting payment; and what the average value was of claims outstanding at any one time in 2006; [124268]

(3) how many claims by nurseries and playgroups for reimbursement of the cost of milk from the Welfare Food Reimbursement Unit are awaiting payment; and how many were awaiting payment at any one time on average in 2006. [124269]

Caroline Flint: On 27 February 2007 there were 5,018 outstanding claims for payment from nurseries and other day care providers relating to milk supplied through the Welfare Food Scheme. The total value of the claims was £1,310,105. Of these, 3,712 (£780,374) were claims for payments to be made by cheque, and the remainder were for payments directly made to bank accounts.

Because of a change in contractor on 1 December 2006, it has taken longer than we would have wished for claims from nurseries and other day care providers to be processed. Those wishing to be paid by cheque have experienced longer delays because the new contractor had to wait for secure cheque stationery to be printed. That stationery has now been printed and the backlog of cheque payments was cleared by 1 March 2007.

Currently, payments in respect of new claims are being made within 15 days of receipt. From 9 March 2007, we expect this to reduce to eight days. Claims that are complicated—usually because not all required information has been provided—take longer to resolve.

Details of the number and value of claims awaiting payment at any one time during 2006 is not available due to the change in contractor.

I have received one representation on behalf of a nursery, concerned about the way with which its outstanding claims were being dealt.

West Hertfordshire Hospitals NHS Trust: Acute Beds

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from West Hertfordshire NHS Trust on the relocation of acute services. [125253]

Andy Burnham: No such representations have been received.

Written Answers to Questions

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Leader of the House how many work permits were applied for by his Department in each of the last five years. [127716]

Mr. Straw: None.

House of Lords: Reform

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Leader of the House what options he has considered for the determination of salaries to elected numbers of a reformed House of Lords. [126876]

Mr. Straw: Paragraph 9.11 of the White Paper said that the recommendations 119-124 and recommendation 126 of the Wakeham Royal Commission would be likely to be "guiding principles" for any changes to the remuneration of Members of the Lords.

Paragraph 10.35 of the White Paper explains that once there are firmer decisions on composition on whether Members of a reformed House should be salaried or receive expenses, the Government will discuss proposals with the other parties and then seek the advice of the Senior Salaries Review Body. Following the votes in the House of Lords on 14 March 2007 on composition of a reformed House, I propose to reconvene the cross-party group, which I chair, to assess the outcome of the debates in both Houses.

Legislation: Reviews

Norman Baker: To ask the Leader of the House (1) if he will make it Government policy for the proposed departmental reviews of legislation to be published; [126949]

(2) if he will bring forward proposals to establish a new Parliamentary Joint Committee on post-legislative scrutiny; [126950]

(3) when he expects to publish the Government's response to the Law Commission's report on post-legislative scrutiny. [126952]

Mr. Straw: Recommendations for the establishment of a joint committee on post-legislative scrutiny, and for greater commitment from Government Departments to post-enactment reviews of legislation, are contained in the Law Commission report on Post-legislative Scrutiny (Cm 6945). These and the other recommendations in the report are under active consideration by the Government. A response to the report will be issued in due course.

Gaming Clubs

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what independent evidence on social impact was requested by the Casino Advisory Panel. [126744]

Mr. Lammy: The primary consideration for the Casino Advisory Panel was to identify areas which would provide the best possible test of social impact.

The panel commissioned one piece of research work to provide background that would assist in the scoping phase of the panel's work. This is titled "Casinos: Social Impact and Regeneration", and is available on the panel's website at:

www.culture.gov.uk/cap

Olympic Games: Greater London

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which sites other than Woolwich have been considered as the potential venue for shooting events for the London Olympics; and if she will make a statement. [127446]

Mr. Lammy: The Royal Artillery Barracks at Woolwich was agreed as the venue for the Olympic and Paralympic shooting events in 2012 following feedback from the International Olympic Committee to the London Bid organisers on the original venue portfolio submitted in 2004. The original proposal was for the National Shooting Centre, Bisley, but the decision was taken to move to Woolwich in order to provide a more compact games that allowed athletes to train and compete within 30 minutes travel time of the Village. The Great Britain Target Shooting Federation and International Shooting Federation (ISSF) were involved in the decisions about the venue for games shooting competitions.

Tote

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent representations she has received on the sale of the Tote; and if she will make a statement. [127516]

Mr. Caborn: The Government have received and are considering a bid for the Tote from a consortium of racing interests and the staff and management of the Tote itself. The Government will announce how they intend to proceed in due course.

TV Licence

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether a person who owns a black and white television set and a digital set-top box needs to purchase a colour television licence. [101365]

Mr. Woodward [holding answer 14 December 2006]: Interpretation of television licence fee regulations is a matter for the BBC as television licensing authority. The Corporation has confirmed its view that, under the current regulations, a colour TV licence is required to install or use a digital set top box to receive television programme services, even if it is used only with a black and white television set The Government accept the Corporation's legal interpretation on this point.

The Government believe that the option of a black and white television licence should remain available through digital switchover. The licence fee regulations laid before Parliament on 8 March 2007 and due to come into effect on 1 April, will include provisions to ensure that a digital set top box used in conjunction with a television set or monitor that can display images in black and white only can be covered by a black and white TV licence.

VisitBritain: Internet

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost was of developing Eviivo, the online booking system used by the VisitBritain website; and how many bookings were taken through this system in the first year of its operation. [126884]

Mr. Woodward: VisitBritain's websites do not operate an online booking system.

Through EnglandNet, VisitBritain offers an online referral service. This enables users of VisitBritain's websites to check availability and pricing of accommodation through existing commercial operators, and then refers them to those operators for completion of bookings.

The technology which powers VisitBritain's EnglandNet online referral service was built by Agilisys and they continue to provide technical services to the project. Eviivo, an associated company of Agilisys, developed the polling technology used by EnglandNet, which is licensed to VisitBritain through Agilisys.

Including the appropriate apportioned project cost elements, the total expenditure on the development of the EnglandNet online referral service has been estimated at approximately £450,000.

EnglandNet is not measured by the number of bookings. However VisitBritain has monitored referrals. Between April 2006 and the end of January 2007, 10,096 referrals were made to commercial operators, with a potential business value of £2,312,590.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Bicycles: Parking

Emily Thornberry: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer of 5 February 2007, Official Report, column 627W, on bicycle parking, which outside security advisers were consulted; and what advice they provided. [126632]

Nick Harvey: The House of Commons does not reveal the sources of external advice it relies on for security. The advice provided was that allowing visitors to bring bicycles onto the Estate would heighten the security risk to the Parliamentary Estate.

Energy Usage

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to his answer of 30 January 2007, Official Report, column 147W, what percentage of energy used on the parliamentary estate was derived from renewable resources in each year; and what targets there are for the future use of such energy. [120473]

Nick Harvey: Since 1 October 2003, approximately 10 per cent. of electricity consumed on the parliamentary estate derived from renewable sources. 10 per cent. of the electricity consumed expressed as a percentage of total energy used on the parliamentary estate in each year since 2003 is given as follows.

	Percentage
2003-04	[1]—
2004-05	5.0
2005-06	4.8

[1]Purchase of electricity from renewable sources started during 2003-04

The House has instructed its supplier to provide 100 per cent. of its electricity from renewable sources from 1 April 2007.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan: Opium

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many hectares of poppy crop in Afghanistan have been eradicated since January 2006; how many hectares have been sprayed; what aid has been paid to poppy farmers; which provinces have been covered by spraying; how many farmers have been offered an alternative crop to plant; and how many farmers have begun to plant an alternative crop. [126705]

Hilary Benn: The UN Office of Drugs and Crime (UNODC) records that 15,301 hectares of poppy crop was eradicated across Afghanistan in 2006, with 95.8 per cent. of the eradication occurring after January 2006. In 2007, some 7,112 hectares of poppy have been eradicated to date. No Afghan province has been covered by spraying. The Government of Afghanistan (GoA) decided, after wide consultation and internal discussion, against the use of ground-based and aerial spraying on opium poppy crops this year.

No direct aid has been given to opium farmers who have had their fields eradicated as this would be contrary to the GoA policy. The policy of the Afghanistan Government is to target eradication on areas where alternative livelihoods already exist. Therefore only those farmers who have alternatives will experience poppy eradication. In support of the GoA's National Drug Control Strategy (NCDS), the UK is playing a major role in supporting the development of legal livelihood opportunities in Afghanistan. DFID's Livelihood Programme is worth £150 million over three years, the majority of which is channelled through three National Priority Programmes which address the multiple constraints that prevent farmers from moving away from poppy cultivation.

DFID's support for the National Rural Access Programme (NRAP) is helping to build essential infrastructure such as irrigation schemes, roads and bridges. This provides much needed infrastructure for economic development and also construction jobs for Afghans at the same time. DFID gave £18 million in 2005-06 for this purpose. Nearly 9,500 km of roads have been built or repaired, as well as schools, health clinics and water schemes. So far the programme has generated over 15 million days of labour.

DFID's support for the National Solidarity Programme (NSP) is helping local communities through elected community development councils (CDC's) identify what development is most needed in their areas and then receive grants to undertake the work. DFID is providing £17 million to support NSP which has established over 16,000 CDCs across Afghanistan and funded over 22,000 projects in the areas of agriculture, education, health, irrigation, power supply, transport and water supply.

DFID support to the Micro-Finance Investment Support Facility of Afghanistan (MISFA) is helping Afghans to invest in income-generating activities and increase their savings. DFID is providing £20 million over three years to help give small loans of around £100 to the poor, including farmers, who cannot get credit from banks. So far, over £90 million worth of loans have been given to over 230,000 Afghans including farmers, shopkeepers, tailors and builders.

DFID has established a £3 million Research in Alternative Livelihoods Fund (RALF) in Afghanistan for applied research into natural resource-based livelihoods. The programme is looking at improved forage and milk production, the introduction of legumes, vegetable crops and saffron, and the medicinal properties of mint as viable alternatives to poppy production for farmers. Mint and saffron are showing early signs of success. The export feasibility of grapes, tomatoes, mushrooms and eggplants is also being examined. This also includes natural products, and post-harvest processing and rural services.

In addition, DFID funds the Development of Sustainable Agriculture Livelihoods Project in the Eastern Hazarajat (SALEH) which provides new and innovative ways for farmers to make a living in Eastern Hazarajat e.g. honey bee keeping and potato farming.

Afghan farmers often make their living through a combination of activities. These may change throughout the year, and include agriculture (crops and livestock); employment (migrant labour); remittances (from family members working away from home); and welfare (for vulnerable groups not able to work). DFID therefore supports a wide range of activities to help farmers move away from poppy cultivation and adopt alternative forms of livelihoods.

Afghanistan: Overseas Aid

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support the UK gives to the purchase of seed and fertiliser for Afghan farmers; and if he will make a statement. [127066]

Hilary Benn: In 2005 DFID contributed £3 million towards a USAID Agriculture Inputs Supply Programme worth $25 million. This programme helped poor and vulnerable farmers across all 34 provinces of Afghanistan gain improved access to subsidised agricultural inputs in order to increase their production of legal crops. The programme has distributed 40,000 metric tonnes of fertiliser and nearly 15,000 tonnes of seed (wheat, potato, onion and carrots) to 537,000 farmers in all 34 provinces.

DFID and USAID found the programme could be made sustainable into the longer-term by supporting input supplies and offering farmers access to credit. USAID now has an input supply programme and DFID is a major donor to the Micro-Finance Investment Support Facility of Afghanistan (MISFA). This offers small loans to poor people, including farmers, who would otherwise not have access to credit. DFID is providing £20 million to MISFA over a three year period.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much humanitarian aid was successfully delivered to Afghanistan in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [126070]

Hilary Benn: According to the United Nations Office for Humanitarian Affairs (UNOCHA), the following has been contributed to the humanitarian effort in Afghanistan over the last three years.

	USD $
2004	162,366,273
2005	79,906,460
2006	153,181,425

DFID's programme in Afghanistan has gradually shifted from humanitarian assistance in the immediate post-conflict environment (£44 million in 2001) to longer-term, sustainable development support to the Government of Afghanistan. We now focus on three key areas; building effective state institutions; improving economic management and the effectiveness with which the Afghan Government uses aid; and improving the livelihoods of rural people.

This year DFID has is providing £1 million for drought mitigation, to fund NGOs working with the Ministry of Rural Rehabilitation and Development (MRRD) on water and sanitation projects in the most affected areas. DFID has also provided £30,000 in food aid and other essential items for Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) in Helmand. The UN has estimated that around 2,800 families have been displaced. UK officials are monitoring the situation and we are currently assured that basic needs are being met.

DFID also supports HALO's de-mining programme in Afghanistan, worth £1.2 million in 2006-07.

Departments: Appeals

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many independent bodies existed to hear appeals on decisions made by his Department and its executive agencies in (a) 1997-98, (b) 2001-02 and (c) 2005-06; and how many there have been in 2006-07 to date. [121689]

Mr. Thomas: No independent bodies hear appeals on decisions made by DFID and its executive agencies.

Departments: Complaints

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many complaints were received by his Department and its executive agencies in (a) 1997-98, (b) 2001-02 and (c) 2005-06; and how many have been received in 2006-07 to date. [121698]

Mr. Thomas: DFID operates five complaints mechanisms, available through its website. The information for each is as follows:

1. The public enquiry point deals with a wide range of enquiries. No data are held on what proportion of these are complaints.

2. Freedom of Information issues: since the Freedom of Information Act came into force in 2005, we received 26 requests for internal reviews in 2005-06 and 12 in 2006-07 to date.

3. Overseas pensions issues: we received no complaints in 2005-06 or 2006-07 to date. Data are unavailable for previous years.

4. Recruitment issues: no data are held on the number of complaints.

5. Procurement issues: no data were held prior to 2005; in 2005-06 there were three complaints and in 2006-07 to date there has been one complaint.

Developing Countries: Children

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent estimate he has made of the number of displaced children in developing countries. [127425]

Hilary Benn: DFID has not made such an assessment. When assessing humanitarian and development needs, we rely on data from organisations which are best placed to collect and collate them. In this case, the closest figure from available data is from UNICEF, who estimate that there are 20 million children currently displaced by armed conflict or human rights violations.

Iraq: Utilities

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent estimate his Department has made of the proportion of the Iraqi population that has access to (a) safe and stable drinking water and (b) a stable electricity supply. [127154]

Hilary Benn: The most recent reliable data available for water supplies in Iraq come from the Iraq living conditions survey carried out in 2004 by the Iraqi Ministry of Planning and Development Cooperation and the United Nations Development Programme.

The 2004 UN survey found that in urban areas, 99 per cent. of households have access to safe drinking water (but for 33 per cent. the supply is unreliable). In rural areas, 6 per cent. of households have access to safe drinking water (but for 22 per cent. the supply is unreliable). Since 2003, donors (including DFID) have worked hard to restore supplies. As a result, the US Iraq Reconstruction Management Office (IRMO) estimates that an additional 5.4 million Iraqis have improved access to drinking water.

IRMO estimate that electricity generation since July 2006 has fluctuated between 3,000 megawatts (MW) and 5,350 MW. The average for 2006 was 4,400 MW, just above the pre-2003 level. During the week of 1-7 March, electricity availability averaged just under six hours per day in Baghdad, 12 hours in Basra and 16 hours in Nasiriyah.

Although 5,000 MW have been added to the national grid since 2003, electricity generation in Iraq is not meeting demand. This is due to several reasons: old and dilapidated infrastructure; a result of years of under-investment and mismanagement; shortage of fuel supplies; and sabotage of key facilities. Furthermore, demand has increased considerably to over 9,000 MW, with the influx of electrical goods such as refrigerators, televisions and air conditioning units.

Mauritania: Food Aid

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of reports from the United Nations World Food Programme on the supply of food to children in Mauritania; and whether the Government plans to contribute food to Mauritania. [126684]

Hilary Benn: In 2006-07, DFID has contributed £250,000 through the World Food Programme (WFP) to support feeding activities for 50,000 malnourished children and vulnerable mothers in the badly affected agro-pastoral zone in the south east of the country.

DFID is continuing to monitor the humanitarian situation in Mauritania and the other countries in the Sahel closely, and will maintain its flexible humanitarian support to short-term emergency, recovery and mitigation needs over the coming year. Simultaneously, DFID is providing support to tackle longer-term nutritional vulnerability in the region, as well as exploring longer-term options for improving food security. We have recently agreed to provide £1.5 million through the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) over the next three years to improve infant feeding practices in six Sahelian countries; Burkina Faso, Chad, Mali, Mauritania, Niger and Benin.

North Korea: Overseas Aid

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the announcement by the North Korean Government of its decision to abandon its nuclear weapons programme has had an effect on the level of UK humanitarian assistance in North Korea. [127338]

Mr. Thomas: There is no change to the UK policy on humanitarian assistance to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK). We have never provided such aid bilaterally. We contribute as normal to the current EU programme of humanitarian assistance. Since 1995, around €118 million has been allocated to assist the most vulnerable groups of the population. Humanitarian assistance was provided to cover the immediate needs of flood-affected populations, to address food/nutritional problems, improve access to water as well as health care. The programme is expected to end in May 2008.

Sudan: Internally Displaced Persons

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent estimate he has made of the number of internally displaced persons in Sudan. [122945]

Hilary Benn: In total, there are approximately four million people displaced in Sudan. Of these, over two million are in Darfur and a further two million who remain displaced as a result of the previous North-South conflict. Around 500,000 of these are expected to return to South Sudan and the Three Areas (former front-line areas) in 2007. They will join an estimated one million people who have already returned to the South since January 2004. There are also around 70,000 people displaced in the East as a result of the now-ended conflict there.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent estimate his Department has made of the numbers of internally-displaced people in Darfur. [127150]

Hilary Benn: The UN estimates that there are currently over two million people displaced in Darfur. However, the exact number of displaced people is difficult to ascertain as many parts of Darfur are highly insecure and inaccessible. This is further compounded as some displaced people have been forced to move for a second or even a third time.

USA: Corruption

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with the government of the United States on tackling corruption. [126930]

Hilary Benn: DFID staff meet regularly with their counterparts from the USA. The key contact is with staff from the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) but there are also frequent meetings with staff from the United States Department of Justice and State Department.

At Head Office level, in addition to one-to-one discussions, DFID staff and American staff work closely on the Anti-Corruption Task Team of the OECD Development Assistance Committee and on the expert groups to advise on the implementation of the UN Convention Against Corruption.

At a country level DFID and USAID work closely together on donor working groups on corruption and governance in countries such as Zambia and Yemen.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces: Housing

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the profit-sharing scheme between HM Treasury and Annington Homes for sales of former Ministry of Defence housing and land includes provisions to take account of increases in the value of land due to (a) planning zone changes and (b) private development. [121133]

Derek Twigg: The Profit Share Agreement with Annington Homes Ltd (AHL) does not define "planning zone changes". However, the position is that even if AHL has not disposed of land by 2011, should planning permission has been granted on land, it will be assumed to have been sold and the market value will be established on that basis at the time.

There are no provisions relating specifically to private development, but any increase in the value of the land (for whatever reason) will be directly passed to the Ministry of Defence.

Armoured Fighting Vehicles

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to change the future rapid effect system programme; and if he will make a statement. [124987]

Mr. Ingram: The Department reviewed the future rapid effect system (FRES) programme in 2006 to take account of our experience on operations in Iraq and Afghanistan and in the light of recent developments in vehicle technology and protection systems. This review aimed to ensure we deliver the best possible vehicles able to meet the operational needs of the British Army through life.

The review also covered aspects of the procurement strategy, highlighting the need for an open systems architecture and the vital importance of UK residence for intellectual property underpinning the FRES systems. This point was praised by the House of Commons Defence Committee in their report entitled 'The Army's requirement for armoured fighting vehicles: the FRES programme' published on 21 February 2007.

This review was completed last year. The procurement strategy has now been announced and we are now making rapid progress on the FRES programme with candidate vehicle designs undergoing proving trials this summer and the winning vehicle(s) selected by November 2007 to proceed to the next stage. It is essential to carry out this detailed assessment of the candidate vehicle designs and to drive out programme risk before the major investment decision is taken. Wednesday 14 March

Ballistic Missile Defence: USA

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he was first informed that (a) the US planned to use its Satellite Based Infra Red System (SBIRS) at Fylingdales to provide critical data for national missile defence systems and (b) SBIRS was key to the US's ability to cue systems that would be used for active missile defence; and if he will make a statement. [126848]

Des Browne: There are no plans to use RAF Fylingdales as part of the Space Based Infra Red System (SBIRS). The role of SBIRS in the US ballistic missile defence system has been well understood by the UK for a number of years.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which sites in the UK are being considered for the possible deployment of US missiles for the US Missile Defense system. [126934]

Mr. Ingram: No sites in the UK are presently under consideration as possible locations for a ground based interceptor site.

Clyde Submarine Base: Ambulance Services

John McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the reasons are for the change in the extent of ambulance cover at HM Naval Base Clyde; [126082]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effects on health and safety of the change in the extent of ambulance cover at HM Naval Base Clyde; and if he will make a statement. [126083]

Mr. Ingram: The Scottish Ambulance Service provides cover at HMNB Clyde, which is currently augmented by full time on-site cover. The provision of ambulance cover at HMNB Clyde was reviewed last year as part of a base initiative to consider how best to reduce costs without affecting outputs. The proposed changes involve a cessation of on-site cover at weekends and Bank holidays. These arrangements are consistent with national and military guidelines, which recommend that an initial response to a serious life threatening incident should be provided within eight minutes.

Courts Martial

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) correspondence and (b) instructions he issued to (i) the army prosecuting authority and (ii) unit commanders following receipt of the Attorney-General's letter on prosecutions of members of the armed forces dated 23 March 2005. [122278]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 22 February 2007]: The Attorney-General and the Secretary of State have corresponded about issues relating to military justice.

The army prosecuting authority is an independent prosecuting authority under the general superintendence of the Attorney-General. It would have been inappropriate for there to have been correspondence between the Secretary of State and the APA concerning its responsibilities relating to particular cases referred to it under the Army Act 1955, and there has been none. Nor have any instructions been issued by or on behalf of the Secretary of State to the APA, to unit commanders, or to anyone else with responsibility for the investigation or prosecution of offences.

Defence: Finance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the change in defence spending in (a) real and (b) actual terms was in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [124594]

Mr. Ingram: This information was published in HM Treasury's Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses, CM6811, in May 2006 a copy of which is in the Library of the House and is available at www.hm-treasury.gov.uk

Departments: Assets

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which fixed assets his Department sold for more than £50,000 in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06; and what the (i) sale value, (ii) purchaser and (iii) date of sale was of each asset. [120693]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on 29 January 2007, Official Report, column 27W and 20 February 2007, Official Report, column 620W for information about non-property assets.

I will place in the Library of the House a list of those sales of over £50,000, including the month of sale. I am unable to provide sale values as we are unable to assess the potential commercial interests of the large number of buyers without incurring disproportionate cost. Details of purchasers are not held centrally and could be provided at disproportionate cost only.

Ex-servicemen

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people (a) are eligible for and (b) have applied for the UK armed forces veterans lapel badge in (i) the UK and (ii) Cheadle constituency. [121027]

Derek Twigg: The Ministry of Defence has insufficient information to make an accurate assessment of the number of people entitled to HM armed forces veterans lapel badge but estimate that the total number is around five million.

Between May 2004 and 17 April 2005 some 82,000 badges were issued but detailed records of applications were not kept. Between 18 April 2005 and 9 February 2007 a further 337,387 applications have been received and 313,099 badges issued.

Information is not held on applicants' addresses by parliamentary constituency and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I can state that 237 badges have been sent to individuals giving Cheadle as their address.

Hyper-sonic Mass Technology

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of hyper-sonic mass technology in the Defence Industrial Strategy. [126141]

Mr. Ingram: Hyper-sonic mass technology is identified briefly in section B11 of the Defence Industrial Strategy, published December 2005, but further clarification is contained within section B7 of the Defence Technology Strategy, published October 2006. Copies of both strategies are available in the Library of the House.

Iraq: Peace Keeping Operations

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the design advantages of (a) a flat bottomed vehicle and (b) positioning the driver over a front wheel when considering the protection of British armed forces on operations in Iraq and Afghanistan. [127020]

Mr. Ingram: I will not comment on specific levels of protection for reasons of operational security.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether British troops will be protected from vertically impacting indirect fire when all are accommodated at Basra air base. [127022]

Mr. Ingram: There is currently a substantial level of protection against mortar and rocket fire afforded to troops at Basra air station, and which has already saved lives. The MOD is continuing to invest in further improvements.

Development of appropriate measures (equipment, vehicles and infrastructure) to best protect our troops is a dynamic and constantly evolving process to keep ahead of the threat. Improved countermeasures, tactics and intelligence are continually being developed and the MOD has invested huge amounts (over half a billion pounds across all theatres) in force protection over recent years.

It would be inappropriate to specify in detail much of this work in the interests of operational security.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many requests from Iraqi authorities have been received by British forces to re-intervene in (a) Muthanna and (b) Dhi Qar since the handover of security responsibility to the Iraqis in each of these provinces. [127157]

Mr. Ingram: British Forces have not received any requests from Iraqi authorities to re-intervene in Muthanna or Dhi Qar since the handover of security responsibility to the Iraqis in these provinces.

Land: Contamination

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what instructions have been given by Defence Estates to his Department's agents Drivers Jonas on the disposal of contaminated sites and interpretation of Treasury advice to obtain best value. [126745]

Derek Twigg: The disposal instructions given by Defence Estates to its agents will vary from case to case, but generally require the property to be sold with the benefit of relevant marketing material, including an information pack, land quality assessment and planning position statement. In accordance with Treasury and departmental guidelines, the property will normally be sold through open competition, either through a formal tender, or informal tender or auction, unless it is required by another Government Department or public body or there are former owner (Crichel Down) considerations.

Nimrod Aircraft

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average age is of Nimrod aircraft in the UK fleet. [126590]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 16 October 2006, Official Report, column 985W to the hon. Member for Wellingborough (Mr. Bone).

Peace Keeping Operations: Democratic Republic of Congo

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the current establishment level is working with UN Mission in the Democratic Republic of Congo; and what the future establishment is likely to be. [126967]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The UK currently has six military officers working in the UN Mission in the Democratic Republic of Congo, including the post of chief of staff in the Eastern division in Kisangani. We have no plans to change our contribution, but would consider any requests to do so, should the UN declare a review of itr commitment at some future point.

Red Arrows

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect on (a) recruitment to and (b) morale of the RAF of maintaining the Red Arrows. [127004]

Des Browne: No specific study has been undertaken to assess the effect on recruitment and morale of maintaining the Royal Air Force Acrobatic Team, popularly known as the Red Arrows. That said, many potential recruits mention that one of the motivating factors for their interest in joining the RAF is the Red Arrows.

Warships: Procurement

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the 28 new ships referred to by the Minister for the armed forces on 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 660, as having joined the fleet since 1997, together with the dates on which each of them (a) was ordered and (b) joined the fleet. [126228]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 12 March 2007]: Details of vessels taken into service since 1997 are as follows:

In-service date	Year ordered	Description
1997	1992	Type 23 Frigate, Sutherland
	1992	Type 23 Frigate, Grafton

	1995	Sandown Class Single Role Mine Hunter, Shoreham
2003	1996	Landing Platform Dock, Albion
	2001	River Class Patrol Vessel, Tyne, Severn, Mersey
	2000	Survey Ship, Echo, Enterprise
	1997	Auxiliary, Wave Knight, Wave Ruler
2004	—	None
2005	1996	Landing Platform Dock, Bulwark
2006	2000	Landing Ship Dock (Auxiliary), Mounts Bay, Largs Bay, Cardigan Bay

The total number of vessels that have entered service since 1997 now stands at 29, following the acceptance into service of RFA Cardigan Bay in December 2006.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza: Halton

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who paid the catchers of the H5N1 infected turkeys at Halton; and what (a) briefing and (b) instructions they were given prior to undertaking that task. [126244]

Mr. Bradshaw: The majority of catchers used at Holton were either employees of, or contracted to, Bernard Matthews. In addition to these individuals, a team of catchers directly contracted to my Department, but working under the supervision of Bernard Matthews were deployed to the site on Sunday 4 February. Their briefing and instructions covered health and safety, biosecurity and animal welfare considerations.

The State Veterinary Service (SVS) supervised the catching and culling operation.

The Health Protection Unit was fully engaged with human health risk assessments for SVS staff, farm workers and those involved in the control operation. As a precautionary measure, those involved in disease control were offered the appropriate preventive treatment with antiviral drugs (oseltamivir), seasonal flu vaccine and avian influenza personnel protective equipment, in line with established protocols.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the timescale is for the development of a new strategy on bovine tuberculosis. [126284]

Mr. Bradshaw: The 'Government strategic framework for the sustainable control of bovine tuberculosis (bTB) in Great Britain' was published in March 2005 with the aim of bringing about a sustainable improvement in the control of bTB over a 10 year timeframe. In accordance with the strategic framework, the Government are working in partnership with interested organisations to reduce bTB by tailoring policies to reflect regional variation in disease risk and emerging evidence.

Bovine Tuberculosis: Disease Control

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what change there has been in the incidence of TB in the badger population in the last 12 months; [126598]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect of change in the incidence of TB in the badger population on the incidence of TB in cattle. [126599]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 7 March 2007, Official Report columns 2005-06W.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment his Department has made of the impact of bovine tuberculosis testing on small scale sales of livestock, including auction marts; [127455]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the cost of tuberculosis testing of farms with small numbers of livestock. [127456]

Mr. Bradshaw: The impact of pre-movement testing on livestock markets and small herd owners was considered in a regulatory impact assessment (RIA), which is available on the DEFRA website at:

www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/pdf/prmt-regulatory.pdf

I have arranged for copies of this document to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Options are available to obviate the need for pre-movement testing. Exempt markets and exempt finishing units provide a route for moving and marketing cattle that normally should be pre-movement tested without being tested. Herd owners can also discuss with their local Animal Health Divisional Office the possibility of utilising their routine surveillance test as pre-movement tests by moving it forward to coincide with the time of year that they make their peak cattle movements.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he has taken to improve the management of private vets in their undertaking of state-funded tuberculosis testing since the DNV Consulting report on veterinary surgeons within the Meat Hygiene Service. [126237]

Mr. Bradshaw: Staff from the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) do not carry out TB testing on live cattle. The DNV consulting report, "Review of TB Testing", considered testing by local veterinary inspectors and staff within the State Veterinary Service (SVS) only.

A CD-rom training package is being prepared for use by all veterinary surgeons undertaking TB testing, which will be rolled out shortly. The instructions for carrying out the test have also been revised. The management of private veterinary surgeons in relation to TB testing is being reviewed as part of the "Official Veterinarian" Reform programme. The aim of this programme is to create a more formal relationship with the practitioner in terms of quality assurance etcetera. A pilot is due to start next month.

EU Emissions Trading Scheme

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of allowances under the UK national allocation plan of the EU Emissions Trading scheme he plans to be (a) auctioned, (b) sold without auction and (c) distributed free to account holders in the Emissions Trading Registry under (i) the first phase of the scheme and (ii) the second phase of the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [125286]

Ian Pearson: The EU Emissions Trading scheme directive requires 95 per cent. of allowances to be allocated for free in Phase I and 90 per cent. of allowances to be allocated for free in Phase II.

The UK's Phase I National Allocation plan (NAP) states that we intend to sell or auction any surplus allowances remaining in the new entrant reserve (NER). The original NER consisted of 6.3 per cent. of the total allocation and most of this has now been allocated, so the UK has been able to quantify the surplus available for auction or sale. On 23 February, DEFRA announced that we would sell some surplus allowances through brokers. The exact number of allowances to be sold is market sensitive information.

The UK's Phase II NAP states that we will auction 7 per cent. of allowances plus any surplus NER and allowances from closures. Should the total which makes up this "auctioning pot" reach more than 10 per cent. we will cancel allowances so that we don't exceed the maximum allowed in Phase II. "Auction" encompasses sale, auction and any other routes to market for charge. The route to market will be dependent on market conditions. We expect to hold the first Phase II auction early on in this phase.

Foot and Mouth Disease: Disease Control

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what controls are imposed on imported food from countries where foot and mouth disease has existed in the last five years. [124983]

Mr. Bradshaw: Before a third country is approved to export to the European Union (EU), the exporting country must have:

(i) an acceptable disease status

(ii) a recognised standard for relevant control authorities

(iii) guarantees with regard to compliance with EU import rules; and

(iv) results of European Commission missions to the country.

All meat imported from third countries must be accompanied by veterinary certification. This must confirm that the meat is derived from animals that have been subjected to a veterinary inspection during the 24 hour period prior to slaughter and showed no signs of foot and mouth disease. The meat must enter the UK at designated border inspection posts, where it is subject to veterinary inspections.

All consignments are subject to documentary and identity checks and at least 20 per cent. of consignments undergo physical checks by an official veterinary surgeon. These measures ensure import conditions are met and that the products remain in a satisfactory condition during transport.

Meat imported from other member states is not checked at the frontier, but is subject to random checks at the point of destination.

If there is an outbreak of disease likely to present a risk to human or animal health, Community legislation allows us to take appropriate safeguard action, which may include a ban on imports of meat from all, or parts, of that country.

National Coastwatch Institute

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department makes use of information gathered by the National Coastwatch Institute as part of its work assessing coastal shores. [126199]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Transport and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency value the contribution the National Coastwatch Institution (NCI) make in informing Her Majesty's Coastguard about any potential or actual incidents relating to safety at sea and on the coast. The Coastguard will take appropriate action in response to reports of people in difficulty received from the NCI.

The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs does not use information gathered by the NCI as part of its work in assessing coastal shores.

Seas and Oceans: Environment Protection

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he is taking to protect the marine environment; and if he will make a statement. [127356]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The Government's vision for the marine environment is for clean healthy, safe, productive and biologically diverse oceans and seas. To help deliver this vision we are acting internationally, at European level and at home.

Internationally we have been instrumental in setting a timetable to end destructive high seas bottom trawling. In Europe we have engaged with new initiatives from the Commission and worked hard to see an acceptable political agreement on the Marine Strategy Directive last December. Domestically we have recently announced the licensing of several offshore windfarms which, while ensuring environmental impacts are properly taken into account, together will make a major contribution to provision of renewable energy.

The forthcoming Offshore Marine Conservation (Natural Habitats, and c.) Regulations 2007 will meet the UK's obligations to transpose the Birds and Habitats Directive in the offshore marine area. We are also preparing a new Marine Bill. This will put in place a better system for delivering sustainable development of our marine environment, addressing both the use and protection of our marine resources.

SCOTLAND

Departments: Equal Opportunities

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department is taking to implement the gender equality duty due to come into force on 6 April 2007. [120639]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office is part of the Department for Constitutional Affairs and I would refer the hon. Member to the replies given by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harman), on 19 February, Official Report, cols. 291 and 292W.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to ensure that it and related bodies are in compliance with the gender equality duty in the Equality Act 2006 by the April 2007 deadline. [120987]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office is part of the Department for Constitutional Affairs and I would refer the hon. Member to the replies given by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harman), on 19 February, Official Report, cols. 291 and 292W.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether his Department has (a) a gender strategy and (b) a gender equality action plan in place. [125503]

David Cairns [holding answer 6 March 2007]: The Scotland Office is part of the Department for Constitutional Affairs and I would refer my hon. Friend to the replies given by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harman), on 19 February, Official Report, cols. 291 and 292W.

Departments: Redundancy

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent on (a) involuntary and (b) voluntary staff exit schemes in (i) his Department and (ii) each agency of the Department in each year since 1997-98; how much is planned to be spent for 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [123868]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999.

The Office does not operate staff exit schemes. All staff in the Scotland Office are on loan from the Department of Constitutional Affairs or from the Scottish Executive and it is these Departments who would have operated any such schemes.

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many work permits were applied for by his Department in each of the last five years. [127714]

David Cairns: None.

Scottish Parliament: Elections

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the use of powers in the draft Scottish Parliament (Elections etc.) Order 2007. [125230]

David Cairns: The Scottish Parliament (Elections etc.) Order 2007 is made under sections 12 (1) and 113 of the Scotland Act 1998. The Order makes provision for the conduct of elections for, and the return of members to, the Scottish Parliament.

Both Houses agreed the provisions of the Order in their debates on the Order on 7 March.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Children: Day Care

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average cost is of child care for (a) school aged and (b) pre-school children in each region, including London. [122957]

Beverley Hughes: The Department does not hold data on the average weekly costs of child care. However the findings of a recent survey by the Daycare Trust can be found on their website;

www.daycaretrust.org.uk

We are doing more than ever before to make good quality child care and early education accessible and affordable. We are providing substantial help (over £2 million a day) through the tax credit system to over 395,000 lower and middle income families. The free, early education entitlement gives 12.5 hours of free provision per week to all 3 and 4-year-olds.

London has higher child care costs than elsewhere and that is why we are contributing £11 million funding to a £33 million joint Greater London Authority, London Development Agency and DfES three year Childcare Affordability Pilot to provide 10,000 affordable child care places for lower income families.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many child care places are provided by (a) children's centres, (b) daycare nurseries, (c) neighbourhood nurseries, (d) wraparound schools, (e) childminders and (f) nannies. [127036]

Beverley Hughes: The available information on the number of registered child care places for children under eight is shown in the table.

Table 1 Number [1,2] of registered child care places for children under eight years of age by type of care England—Position at 31 March 2006

Type of care	Number of places
Full day care	565,700
Sessional day care	217,100
Childminders	322,200
Out of school day care	366,500
Creche day care	46,300

[1] Rounded to the nearest 100 places.
[2] Data Source: Ofsted

These figures include the number of child care places in Neighbourhood Nurseries and Children's Centres which are not available separately.

Information on the number of child care places provider by nannies is not available. However, the Survey of Parents Demand for Childcare and Early Years Services suggests that 1 per cent. of families used nannies in the last week 2004/05.

The latest figures on registered child care provider and places are available on the following website:

www.ofsted.gov.uk/

Departmental Secondment

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills from which private companies staff in his Department have been seconded. [109570]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department currently has a total of 81 secondments, the vast majority of which are from across the wider public sector, for example, from local authorities, education providers and county councils. There are currently two secondments from the private sector, one from the Building Research Establishment and the other from the Diocese of Bath and Wells.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the departmental publications printed since 1997 covering (a) gender, (b) disability and (c) minority personnel issues; how many pages each comprised; how many pages of the document each occupied; and if he will place copies of each in the Library. [107200]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is not held centrally.

Departments: Redundancy

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on (a) involuntary and (b) voluntary staff exit schemes in (i) his Department and (ii) each agency of the Department in each year since 1997-98; how much is planned to be spent for 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [123931]

Mr. Dhanda: There have been no redundancies in the Department since 1997 and we remain committed to minimise recourse to compulsory redundancies. Nonetheless, there have been voluntary early releases. From the 1997-98 financial year to the end of the 2006-07 financial year the total cost to the Department, arising from the provisions of the Civil Service Compensation Scheme, were as follows:

Financial year	Total cost to DfES (£ million)
1997-98	5.13
1998-99	2.73
1999-2000	4.237
2000-01	4.06
2001-02	6.142
2002-03	5.57
2003-04	2.54
2004-05	17.1
2005-06	15.1
2006-07	10.553

For the financial year 2007-08, the Department has committed £2.591 million for voluntary early releases and there is currently nothing further planned.

The Department has had no agencies since 2001 and agency information for the financial years 1997 to 2001 is not held centrally.

Education Maintenance Allowance: West Midlands

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people in (a) Coventry and (b) the West Midlands have received an educational maintenance allowance; and if he will make a statement. [119583]

Phil Hope: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate education maintenance allowances (EMA) for the DfES and hold the information about take-up of the scheme. Mark Haysom, the council's Chief Executive, has written to my hon. Friend with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Rob Wye, dated 2 March 2007:

I write on behalf of Mark Haysom as he is currently out of the office on annual leave. In response to your Parliamentary Question 119583 that asked; "How many people in (a) Coventry and (b) the West Midlands have received a educational maintenance allowance"

By the end of January 2007, 3,579 young people in the Coventry Local Authority area had applied, enrolled and received one or more Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) payments during the 2006/07 academic year.

By the end of January 2007, 60,688 young people in the West Midlands had applied, enrolled and received one or more EMA payments during the 2006/07 academic year.

English Language

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what modifications he plans to make to his announced changes to English for Speakers of Other Languages provision; and if he will make a statement. [127631]

Bill Rammell: I have considered the impact of the proposed changes to ESOL funding as part of the Race Equality Impact Assessment (REIA) and I am minded to consider a range of new measures in addition to those the LSC previously announced on 18 October 2007 to reprioritise funding towards the most vulnerable. These are:

Re-instating eligibility for those asylum seekers who are in the UK legally and whose claims are not resolved within six months;

Re-instating eligibility for those asylum seekers who are unable to return or be returned to their country of origin for circumstances beyond their control and who are eligible for Section 4 support;

Prioritising funding at local level through the Learning and Skills Council's Learner Hardship Support Fund towards support for spouses and individuals who may not have access to their household benefit documentation or their own funds; and

Agreeing with the Learning and Skills Council an approach to evidencing low pay for fee remission purposes which enables flexible use of a raft of evidence, including wider benefits and other evidence.

I have asked officials to work with the Learning and Skills Council and other partners to finalise the detail urgently. I will then make a statement.

Language Training

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which benefits individuals must receive in order to receive English for Speakers of Other Languages courses free of charge. [110928]

Phil Hope: Changes to funding for ESOL include the withdrawal of automatic fee remission from courses, but learners who are in receipt of JobSeekers Allowance and income related benefits, including working tax credit, will still be eligible for full fee remission. This will help us to focus public funding on those learners most in need of public help and support.

Details of the benefits which learners must be receiving to qualify for full fee remission are a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. Mark Haysom, the Chief Executive, has written to my hon. Friend explaining the more detailed arrangements when they have been agreed. A copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Rob Wye dated 2 March 2007:

I write on behalf of Mark Haysom as he is currently out of the office on annual leave, in response to your question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, regarding the benefits individuals must receive in order to receive English for Speakers of Other Languages free of charge eligibility for fee remission is set out in the published LSC booklet 'Funding Guidance for Further Education in 2006-07' paragraph 127. This states benefits that grant fee remission to learners and includes the following:

unemployed people in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance

those in receipt of income-based benefits, formerly known as means-tested benefits, the main income-based benefits are council tax benefit, housing benefit, income support and jobseeker's allowance (income-based)

those in receipt of working tax credit with a household income of less than £15,050

those in receipt of pension credits - guarantee credit

the unwaged dependants (as defined by Jobcentre Plus) of those listed above

Learning Disability

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to improve the detection of learning difficulties in children at an early age. [126623]

Mr. Dhanda: The Special Educational Needs (SEN) Code of Practice gives guidance to early years settings and primary schools on identification, assessment and making provision for all children with SEN, including those with learning difficulties. SEN Coordinators in early years settings and schools facilitate early identification and intervention for children with SEN.

The Government's SEN strategy "Removing Barriers to Achievement" (2004) set out a long-term programme for improving identification of and provision for children with SEN, including early identification and intervention. The Government's response to the Education and Skills Committee's report on SEN renewed this strategy and set out a programme for building capacity in the children's workforce to identify and meet children's SEN.

The Government have introduced a number of measures to increase the take up of child care, meaning that more children will have access to the services and facilities required for effective early identification of a child's needs and intervention. In addition £50 million has been allocated between 2006 and 2008 for the Transformation Fund to improve the quality of the child care workforce. One of the key aims is to provide training to help professionals identify and work with children with additional needs. Early identification and intervention is also central to the new statutory framework for children from birth to five, the Early Years Foundation Stage, which comes into force in September 2008.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the percentage of people in England who have undertaken tests for learning difficulties. [126624]

Mr. Dhanda: This information is not collected centrally.

Parents: Intimidation

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what support is available for families in which there are instances of violence towards parents by children; [126673]

(2) what discussions he has had with (a) ministerial colleagues and (b) family support groups about the needs of families that experience instances of violence towards parents by children. [126674]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department, via the Children, Young People and Families, Strengthening Families and Family Support grant programmes, supports 207 third sector projects that enable an increase in family and relationship support. These projects provide a range of information, advice and guidance which may include support for parents, carers and families experiencing different levels and types of family and relationship difficulties. This support might include, but is not specifically aimed at, families in which there may be instances of violence towards parents by children.

No discussions have been held with ministers or parent support groups on this specific issue.

School Meals

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what advice he received from the Food Standards Agency (FSA) in response to the recommendations of the Turning the Tables report produced by the School Meals Review Panel (SMRP); what the scientific basis was of (a) the recommendations of the SMRP report and (b) the FSA advice; and what differences there are between (i) the SMRP recommendations and (ii) the FSA advice and the final standards set out in the Education (Nutritional Standards for School Lunches) Regulations 2000. [125718]

Mr. Dhanda: The School Meals Review Panel (SMRP) was established by DfES in May 2005 to advise on standards for school lunches. The SMRP's 'Turning the Tables - Transforming School Food' report, published in October 2005, set out their recommendations to Ministers.

The SMRP's report recommended that new combined 'food' and 'nutrient' based standards were needed to bring about effective changes to school lunches and should replace the previous standards introduced in 2001. The report included references to the published scientific studies that were considered during the panel's deliberations. The full report can be viewed at:

http://www.schoolfoodtrust.org.uk/documents.asp?DocCatId=1

The first phase of the changes to school lunches began with the introduction, in September, of the Education (Nutritional Standards for School Lunches) (England) Regulations 2006. Schools will need to adhere to final 'food' and 'nutrient' based lunch standards by September 2008 (primary schools) and September 2009 (secondary schools). These will be set out in later regulations that will be laid before Parliament later this year.

The Food Standards Agency (FSA) is an independent Government Department established to protect the public's health and consumer interests in relation to food. It advises DFES on scientific and technical aspects including food safety, nutrition and diet.

Officials from the FSA acted as observers at SMRP meetings and provided technical advice to DfES on those issues that fell within its remit. This advice was broadly supportive of those aspects of the SMRP's recommendations that were within the FSA's remit and assisted with the formulation of the 2006 Regulations. The FSA's advice was provided in line with its nutrition policy, which is informed by considerations of the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition and formerly the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy.

The Nutritional Standards for School Lunches introduced in September 2006 implemented all of the SMRP's 'food based' recommendations, with a minor amendment to acceptable drinks:

> A reduction to the amount of added sugar in milk based drinks from no more than 10 per cent. to no more than 5 per cent.;
> The addition of soya drinks enriched with calcium as an additional option.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment his Department has made of the potential effects on (a) nutrition and (b) costs which might arise from use of new-generation steam convection ovens in school kitchens; and what advice he has received from the School Food Trust on this subject. [126062]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills has not made an assessment of the potential nutritional benefits and savings which might arise from the use of new-generation steam convention ovens in schools. The School Food Trust has not provided advice to the Department on this subject.

TRANSPORT

Biofuels

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will support a mandatory 10 per cent. minimum target for use of biofuels by 2020 at the EU Spring Summit. [127183]

Dr. Ladyman: At the EU spring summit on 8 and 9 March member states, including the UK, agreed to set a minimum target for biofuels of 10 per cent. share of total petrol and diesel consumption to be introduced in a cost-efficient way in Europe by 2020 subject to a number of conditions. In particular, the target should be binding only if production of the biofuels is sustainable, second-generation biofuels become commercially available and the Fuel Quality Directive is amended to allow for adequate levels of blending.

These conditions are broadly consistent with the conditions the Government have proposed in relation to the future development of the Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation (RTFO) that is due to start in April 2008. A consultation on the long-term future of the RTFO is currently under way. The RTFO will require transport fuel suppliers to ensure that 5 per cent. of their total transport fuel sale comes from biofuels by 2010-11. The Government have made clear that they are committed to increasing the level of the RTFO beyond 5 per cent. provided that similar conditions around sustainability, technical feasibility and costs to consumers are met and that it represents an effective use of our biomass resources.

Motor Vehicles: Registration

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the requirements are for the registration of Class 3 vehicles with the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority (DVLA); what factors were taken into account in deciding those requirements; and what steps have been taken by the DVLA to convey this information to the owners of Class 3 vehicles. [127344]

Dr. Ladyman: All mechanically propelled vehicles, including class 3 invalid carriages, used or kept on public roads are required by law to be registered.

DVLA has been liaising with suppliers of class 3 vehicles to inform them about the registration requirements for these vehicles. Special information packs, which provide guidance on how to complete the first registration application forms, are available to suppliers and members of the public. Information about the registration requirements for class 3 vehicles is published at:

www.direct.gov.uk/motoring.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many and what proportion of Class 3 vehicles have been registered. [127345]

Dr. Ladyman: Official statistics indicate that at the end of September 2006, fewer than 100 class 3 vehicles were registered. Since then, it is estimated that the figure now exceeds 1,500.

The proportion of registered vehicles to unregistered vehicles is unknown.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the annual administration cost to his Department is of registering Class 3 vehicles, including the cost of issuing literature and advice. [127346]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department does not record separate administration costs for registering class 3 vehicles. The unit cost for processing registration applications for vehicles of that type is £33.61.

DVLA issues advice and literature about the registration and licensing procedures for all types of vehicles generally.

Railways: Swindon

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the status is of the proposal to redouble the line between Kemble and Swindon currently with Network Rail; and if he will make a statement. [125555]

Mr. Tom Harris [pursuant to the reply, 6 March 2007, Official Report, c. 1853-54W]: I understand that Network Rail has consulted industry parties on possible changes to the Kemble to Swindon line to improve performance.

Roads: Expenditure

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total cost is of road schemes approved in (a) the Targeted Programme of Improvements, (b) local transport plans and (c) the Community Infrastructure Fund. [122745]

Dr. Ladyman: The total approved cost of road schemes currently in (a) the Targeted Programme of Improvements is £11.897 billion.

The total approved cost of major road schemes in (b) local transport plans is £1.385 billion, of which the Department's agreed contribution is £1.128 billion. These figures exclude PFI credit funding for schemes that are being taken forward through the private finance initiative or those schemes that have already been completed.

The total cost of road schemes agreed under (c), the Community Infrastructure Fund is £82.2 million.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Businesses: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Electricity, Safety, Quality and Continuing (Amendment) Regulation 2006 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126617]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is as follows.

(a) The regulatory impact assessment (RIA) for the Electricity Safety, Quality and Continuity (Amendment) Regulations 2006 has not estimated any one-off costs to businesses or regulators.

(b) The RIA estimates the net cost to electricity companies at £16,800,000 per annum, reducing to £11,500,000 per annum by year 10 and £4,750,000 per annum by year 25. The RIA has identified audit costs to DTI of around £50,000 (every two or four years) to audit the vegetation management work of duty holders.

Combined Heat and Power

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the planned timetable for grants for small community projects with micro-generation was; what the timetable for that programme is now; and what the reasons are for the change. [124711]

Malcolm Wicks: From April 2006 to February 2007, small scale community projects received grant support through the Low Carbon Buildings programme Phase 1. Since February they have been signposted through Phase 2. The change is the result of high demand for grants from householders. In October 2006, we re-allocated funds from within the programme to increase funds available to householders from £6.5 million to £12.7 million. To facilitate that increase in householder funding, we also took the decision to move the majority of small scale community projects to Phase 2 of the Low Carbon Buildings programme from February 2007.

Phase 2, with a £50 million budget announced in Budget 2006, supports projects in the public and not for profit sectors with the specific aim of driving down the cost of microgeneration technologies. Phase 2 has a significant budget, which should continue to provide excellent support to small scale community projects. The plan is to commit the majority of the budget between now and March 2008, however, some projects are likely to complete over the following years.

Small scale community projects can also continue to apply to Phase 1 Stream 2 through to March 2009, although this is a competitive process more geared to larger projects.

Electricity Generation

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of energy was produced by (a) coal fired, (b) gas fired and (c) nuclear power stations in each of the last five years. [126448]

Malcolm Wicks: Fuel used in power stations as a percentage of total primary energy demand on a fuel input basis is as follows:

			Percentage
	Coal	Natural gas	Nuclear stations
2001	12.8	10.9	8.7
2002	12.3	11.7	8.6
2003	13.3	11.4	8.5
2004	12.8	11.9	7.6
2005	13.2	11.6	7.7

Source:
Digest of UK Energy Statistics 2006, tables 1.1-1.3 and table 5.6

Electricity supplied by fuel source as a percentage of total electricity supplied[1] on an output basis is as follows:

	Coal	Natural gas	Percentage Nuclear stations
2001	34.1	37.8	22.6
2002	32.0	40.2	21.9
2003	34.7	38.2	21.6
2004	33.2	40.7	19.5
2005	33.6	39.1	19.6

Electricity: Meters

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps Ofgem are taking to ensure consistent consumer protection is afforded to electricity token meter users; and if he will make a statement. [126891]

Malcolm Wicks: Ofgem, which is responsible for regulating gas and electricity supply, has been in detailed discussion with suppliers about the recalibration of certain prepayment meters. Following these discussions, suppliers gave a series of commitments to improve their performance. Details of these commitments were published in Ofgem's recent statement of good practice on token prepayment meters and debt (available from Ofgem's website www.ofgem.gov.uk.) Ofgem will monitor suppliers' progress and will consider if further consumer protection is required.

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps Ofgem have taken to ensure that the token prepayment meter users of all electricity suppliers receive equivalent protection from the practice of backcharging; and if he will make a statement. [127242]

Malcolm Wicks: Ofgem, which is responsible for regulating gas and electricity supply, has been in detailed discussion with suppliers about the recalibration of certain prepayment meters. Following these discussions, suppliers gave a series of commitments to improve their performance. The commitments vary from each supplier, depending on current practice and performance. Details of these commitments were published in Ofgem's recent statement of good practice on token prepayment meters and debt (available from Ofgem's website www.ofgem.gov.uk). Ofgem will monitor suppliers' progress and will consider whether further consumer protection is required.

Electronic Equipment: Waste Disposal

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the proportion of goods subject to the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Regulations which are labelled as required by the regulations; and what he estimates to be the cost to producers of meeting such requirements. [127186]

Malcolm Wicks: The marking requirements of Regulation 15 and 16 of the WEEE Regulations do not come into force until 1 April 2007. Information on the costs of marking electrical and electronic equipment is contained in the final Regulatory Impact Assessment which accompanied the WEEE Regulations, when they were laid before the House on 12 December 2006.

Energy: Fees and Charges

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with Oftel on the introduction of charges for customers who do not pay their bills by direct debit; and if he will make a statement. [121578]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 19 February 2007]: The matter raised is the responsibility of the independent regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom), which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly, I have asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Member. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Hazardous Substances: EC Law

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many companies manufacturing optoelectronic components responded to the consultation on the exemption of substances from the Restriction of Hazardous Substances Directive; and if he will make a statement. [127084]

Malcolm Wicks: In response to the European Commission's most recent consultation (closed 10 January 2007), I understand that two companies which manufacture opto-electronic components have responded to the request to exempt "Cadmium in opto-electronic components" from the requirements of the Restriction of Hazardous Substances Directive.

The European Commission has not yet put forward proposals to member states as to whether this exemption request will be granted or not.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total value is of optoelectronic equipment containing cadmium manufactured in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [127085]

Malcolm Wicks: This question cannot be answered as the DTI does not hold this information.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consideration he has given to exempting equipment used for live performances from the Restriction of Hazardous Substances Directive; and if he will make a statement. [127086]

Malcolm Wicks: Any manufacturer or producer of electrical and electronic equipment that cannot comply with the requirements of the Restriction of Hazardous Substances (RoHS) Directive due to technical or scientific barriers, or where the benefits of RoHS compliant alternatives are likely to be outweighed by a greater negative impact on the environment, health and/or consumer safety, can submit an application for exemption to the European Commission for consideration.

Under Article 5(1) of the Directive, a Technical Adaptation Committee (comprised of all EU member states and chaired by the European Commission), can approve such exemptions requests if they are found to be justified.

As far as I am aware, the European Commission has not received such a broad request exempting the general use of equipment for live performances.

Natural Gas: Imports

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes in capacity for importing gas he expects to come onstream in 2007. [126820]

Malcolm Wicks: Until this winter Great Britain was able to import gas by pipe-line from Norway and Belgium, and as liquefied natural gas (LNG) through the Isle of Grain LNG import terminal. During the first half of this winter our gas import capacity increased by approximately 131 million cubic metres per day (mcm/d) through a combination of a new interconnector with the Netherlands (Balgzand Bacton Line (BBL)), an expansion of the Belgian interconnector (IUK) and a major new pipeline from Norway (Langeled). The Teesside GasPort LNG import facility, with a capacity of 11 mcm/d, commissioned last month.

Further gas import projects under development include two LNG terminals at Milford Haven. These are expected to commission in late 2007 or early 2008, and will initially have a combined maximum import capacity of 57mcm/d.

Use of gas import facilities will depend on commercial conditions, including the level of wholesale gas prices in Great Britain compared with prices in alternative markets.

Post Office Card Account

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what meetings he and his Department's officials have had with the banking sector on a successor to the Post Office Card Account. [127233]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Ministers have not met with the banking sector to discuss the replacement card account. The tendering and contractual process for the replacement product are matters for DWP.

Renewable Energy

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) proportion and (b) wattage of total electricity production in the UK was produced from (i) hydropower, (ii) wind, (iii) biomass, (iv) solar and (v) geothermal in (A) 1996, (B) 2001 and (C) 2006; and what his estimate is of the likely production from each of those sources in 2011. [124639]

Malcolm Wicks: The latest available information is shown in the following table. Data for 2006 will not be available until the summer of 2007. There is no significant generation using geothermal sources. The contribution of the individual technologies to the projected total generation from renewables is for the market to determine.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Criminal Proceedings

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the benefits of allowing relatives of victims to make statements at criminal trials following the recent pilot schemes. [127191]

Ms Harman: The Victims' Advocates is being piloted in five crown courts and provides bereaved families in murder and manslaughter cases with the choice to tell the court about the impact of the crime on them. The pilot is being independently evaluated with the final report due in the autumn.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect of relatives of victims making statements at criminal trials on juries and their ability to determine the facts of cases. [127192]

Ms Harman: The Victims' Advocates pilot scheme provides bereaved relatives of murder and manslaughter victims with the choice to make a statement about the effect of the crime on their family. The statement is delivered to the court after conviction but before sentence and therefore does not impact on the role and decisions of the jury.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she will reply to the letter of 25 January from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Miss V. Howell. [127280]

Ms Harman: My Right hon. Friend the Lord Chancellor responded to the right hon. Member's letter on 12 March. I apologise for the delay.

Powers of Attorney

Susan Kramer: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs on how many occasions the Court of Protection intervened to suspend an individual's power of attorney over another in the most recent year for which figures are available. [127312]

Ms Harman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 23 February 2007, Official Report, column 969W.

Voting Rights

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs under what circumstances a Commonwealth citizen is eligible to vote in the UK. [127032]

Bridget Prentice: Under the Representation of the People Act 1983, qualifying Commonwealth citizens are eligible to vote in UK elections. This means that Commonwealth citizens who have the right of abode or leave to enter or remain in the UK, and are otherwise eligible to vote, may register to vote.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Training: Treasury

Mr. Heben: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which training courses her Department or its agencies have offered to Treasury Ministers in the last 12 months; and how many such training courses were attended by Treasury Ministers. [127213]

Hilary Armstrong: The Government take the issue of ministerial training very seriously. I and other ministerial colleagues are working closely with the National School of Government (NSG) to further develop ministerial training. The NSG is a non-ministerial department and is the centre of excellence for learning and development in support of the strategic business priorities of government. I have asked the National School's Principal and Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member giving further details on this issue. A copy of his reply will be placed in the Library for the reference of Members.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Police: Community Support

6. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in ensuring that people from all communities in Northern Ireland support the police. [126340]

Mr. Hain: Unprecedented progress has been made following Sinn Fein's historic decision to support policing, the courts, the rule of law and their subsequent steps to deliver this.

Police Community Support Officers

7. Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the vetting procedures for the new police community support officers. [126341]

Paul Goggins: The same stringent vetting standards will apply to PCSOs as to regular officers. The regulations will cover both criminal convictions and business interests identical to those which apply to police officers.

Devolution

8. Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made towards the restoration of the devolved Assembly in Northern Ireland. [126342]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Belfast, North (Mr. Dodds).

Autism Legislation

9. Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration has been given to introducing autism legislation applying to Northern Ireland. [126343]

Paul Goggins: There are no immediate plans to introduce legislation specifically in respect of autism. The Bamford team's review of legislation, which will cover learning disabilities such as autism, is due to report this summer.

Policing

10. Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether it is the Government's policy to distinguish between civic and political policing in Northern Ireland. [126344]

Paul Goggins: The Government's policy is to deliver effective, impartial and accountable policing, supported by the entire community in Northern Ireland.

Bain Review

11. Mr. David Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Bain Review of education. [126345]

Maria Eagle: The Bain Review represents an important step in improving education in Northern Ireland. The report includes recommendations for making better use of resources, improved planning of schools, and improved sharing and collaboration across schools, and highlights the educational, economic and social benefits which changes will bring. The Government have accepted all the report's recommendations.

Historical Enquiries Team

12. Mr. Jeffrey M. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will increase the funding and other resources available to the Historical Enquiries Team. [126346]

Paul Goggins: The Historic Enquires Team project has been allocated £34 million over six years, this is a significant sum. Estimated expenditure to 31 March 2007 is £10.5 million. This project involves the PSNI, Police Ombudsman, Forensic Science Agency and PPS. Government are committed to ensuring that this work is adequately resourced.

Political Parties: Rule of Law

13. Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in securing commitments from all political parties in Northern Ireland to supporting (a) the police, (b) the courts and (c) the rule of law. [126347]

Mr. Hanson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given earlier to the right hon. Member for Bracknell (Mr. Mackay).

Police Ombudsman

14. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what response he has made to the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland's recent report. [126348]

Paul Goggins: The Government acknowledge that the Police Ombudsman's investigation has succeeded in bringing to light serious failings of duty by a small number of police officers over the period 1991 to 2003. The Chief Constable has accepted the report's recommendations and work on reinvestigating the cases has already begun. Where sufficient evidence can be obtained, prosecutions will be brought.

Legal Firearms

15. Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many legal firearms there were in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [126349]

Paul Goggins: The Chief Constable has provided the following table showing the number of legal firearms in Northern Ireland at 31 March in each of the years requested.

Number of firearms held on firearm certificates

	Total
31 March 2003	142,757
31 March 2004	144,647
31 March 2005	144,554
31 March 2006	138,302
7 March 2007	136,896

Computers: Theft

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 6 February 2007, Official Report, columns 556-57W, on departmental computers, whether any of the computers and laptops stolen contained information (a) which could have compromised the safety of individuals or the general public and (b) about the names, addresses and other personal data relating to individuals; and if he will make a statement. [125460]

Mr. Hanson: Of the 55 laptops lost or stolen from Northern Ireland Departments in the nine-year period ending in February 2007, it is possible that one owned by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety may have contained documents which included names and addresses relating to dental referral cases.

None of the laptops in question contained information which could have compromised the safety of individuals or the general public.

English Language

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent by the Department for Education on the teaching of English as an additional language in each of the last five years. [127189]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education has provided earmarked funding for the provision of teaching and teaching support for English as an additional language (EAL), through the Education and Library Boards in each financial year as follows:

2002-03	200,000
2003-04	400,000
2004-05	410,000
2005-06	570,000
2006-07	834,000

Since 2005-06 funding, additional to that provided through the boards, has been given direct to schools through the common funding formula, for those schools that have identified EAL pupils who require extra support. Funding for the schools by financial year was:

2006-07	2,537,000

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the Department for Education's most recent estimate is of the number of (a) primary and (b) post-primary pupils in schools in Northern Ireland who are learning English as an additional language. [127190]

Maria Eagle: In 2006-07 there are 2,425 children in primary schools (Year one-seven classes) and 1,148 children in post-primary schools who are recorded as having English as an additional language. The numbers refer to children who have significant difficulties with the English language and require additional support.

Ethnic Groups

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his Department's most recent estimate is of (a) the number of people from minority ethnic communities who live in Northern Ireland and (b) the proportion of the total population of Northern Ireland represented by people from those communities. [127185]

Mr. Hanson: A total of 14,279 people (0.85 per cent. of all people usually resident in Northern Ireland) indicated through the 2001 Census that they belonged to a minority ethnic group.

Nurses

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many nursing vacancies there were in each health trust area in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years; and what the average length of time taken was to fill nursing vacancies in each health trust area in Northern Ireland over the same period. [127108]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of current nursing vacancies in each Health Trust area in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years is presented in the following tables.

Information on the average length of time taken to fill nursing vacancies in each Health Trust area is not available; however the number of long-term vacancies for nursing staff (i.e. vacancies which remain vacant after three months) is given as an indication of those that were particularly difficult to fill.

The number of current qualified nursing staff vacancies has decreased from a headcount of 746 (678.45 WTE) in June 2004 to 583 (523.80 WTE) in September 2006 (although the September 2006 figure shows an increase from September 2005). The number of long-term qualified nursing staff vacancies also decreased from a headcount of 252 (232.41 WTE) in June 2004 to 203 (171.45 WTE) in September 2006.

The number of current nurse support staff vacancies has increased from a headcount of 105 (94.77 WTE) in June 2004 to 139 (119.67 WTE) in September 2006. The number of long-term nurse support staff vacancies also increased from a headcount of 22 (19.05 WTE) in June 2004 to 70 (60.41 WTE) in September 2006.

In order to determine over or under-subscription, the total number of year 1 or year 8 applications to each school has been compared with the approved admissions number.

Pupils: Per Capita Costs

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what average funding per pupil was allocated to each education and library board area in each of the last six years. [127112]

Maria Eagle: The following table sets out the average funding per pupil delegated to schools in each education and library board area under local management of schools arrangements in each of the last six years. Further funding is allocated directly to education and library boards for a wide range of services, some which benefit all pupils while others are more specifically targeted. Accordingly it is not possible to present that funding accurately on a per-pupil basis.

[1] Funding in 2005-06 and 2006-07 was distributed using the common funding formula. Prior to then, each funding authority used its own formula to determine allocations to schools.

Pupils: Racial Harassment

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress made by the Government since the publication of its Race Equality Strategy for Northern Ireland in determining the scale and nature of racist bullying in schools in Northern Ireland. [127184]

Maria Eagle: In 1999 the Department commissioned research into the nature and scale of bullying in Northern Ireland schools. The report was published in October 2002. The report recommended that managers and teachers should monitor the incidences of ethnic and religion-based bullying and this area should explicitly be included within school policies. The research is available on the Department's website at www.deni.gov.uk/rb8_2002.pdf I have also arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Following on from this research, in 2005 the Department commissioned the university of Ulster to undertake a further study into the extent and nature of bullying, including racist bullying, in Northern Ireland schools. The report will be published later this year. That will allow for a comparison with the report published in 2002 and the identification of any change.

Schools: Arson

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fires occurred in schools in each education and library board area in Northern Ireland in each of the last six years; how many were started deliberately; and what the cost of repairs for fire damage to these schools over the same period. [126888]

Maria Eagle: Information on fires in schools by education and library board area is available for the years 2002-03 to date:

Board area	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006 February 2007
Belfast	13	14	10	8	6
North Eastern	6	3	5	5	11
South Eastern	13	5	12	3	3
Western	6	8	4	5	4
Southern	8	5	8	10	4
Total	46	35	39	31	28
Of which:
Started deliberately	32	22	20	22	21

Information on the costs of the damage is not readily available. This information has been requested from the education and library boards and I will provide this to the hon. Lady in writing as soon as possible.

Schools: Fire Prevention

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many schools in each education and library board area in Northern Ireland are equipped with sprinkler systems. [127121]

Maria Eagle: All schools in Northern Ireland must comply with the fire regulations. There is no requirement to provide sprinkler systems. I understand that at the current time, there are no schools that have sprinkler systems installed.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Businesses: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Occupational Pensions Schemes (Winding Up , Deficiency on Winding Up and Transfer Values) (Amendment) Regulations 2005 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126652]

James Purnell: The Occupational Pension Schemes (Winding Up, Deficiency on Winding Up and Transfer Values) (Amendment) Regulations 2005 were accompanied by a regulatory impact assessment (RIA), a copy of which is available in the Library. The RIA included an assessment of the impact of the regulations on business. The cost to the relevant pensions regulatory authority of implementing the regulations, if any, is not separately identifiable.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Occupational Pensions Schemes (Winding Up and Deficiency on Winding Up etc) (Amendment) Regulations 2004 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126657]

James Purnell: The Occupational Pension Schemes (Winding Up and Deficiency on Winding Up etc) (Amendment) Regulations 2004 were accompanied by a regulatory impact assessment (RIA), copies of which are available in the Library. The RIA included an assessment of the impact of the regulations on business. The cost to the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (OPRA) of implementing the regulations, if any, is not separately identifiable.

Carbon Monoxide: Poisoning

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will take steps to make carbon monoxide alarms available free of charge to pensioners. [123421]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 26 February 2007]: There are no proposals to make carbon monoxide (CO) alarms free of charge to pensioners.

However, all Fire and Rescue Services in England have discretion to extend their Home Fire Risk Checks for vulnerable households to provide a free CO alarm, in addition to installation of a free smoke alarm. Similar arrangements are being considered in Wales.

There are also other Government initiatives aimed at helping pensioners with gas and heating expenses. These include schemes such as WarmFront, Home Energy Efficiency and WarmDeal, which provide grants for the replacement or repair of heating systems to eligible people receiving certain benefits. In addition, the Priority Services Register enables pensioners to have a free annual gas safety check by their gas supplier.

Child Support Agency: Personnel

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many days training on average were provided to each member of staff at the Child Support Agency in each of the last five years. [120241]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty dated 14 March 2007:

In reply to your recent parliamentary question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of state promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many days training on average have been provided to each member of staff at the Child Support Agency in each of the last five years.

The information requested is provided in the attached table.

	Average days training
2001-02	9.3
2002-03	10.7
2003-04	6.5
2004-05	6.8
2005-06	5.3
2006-07	[1]7.9

[1] Final figures will be available after 31 March 2007. Notes:

1. This information has been calculated by dividing the total number of days training provided by the Agency by the average number of people employed by the Agency over the relevant year, this includes those people who received no training in the relevant year.
2. The figures shown for the year 2006-07 are the result of a 12-month projection of training undertaken, based on the training undertaken between March 2006 and January 2007.
3. The decreases in recorded training days since 2003-04 is caused by a number of factors including a move towards blended learning and the use of e-learning with less emphasis on classroom training.

Children: Poverty

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department has taken to tackle child poverty in (a) Eltham, (b) the London borough of Greenwich and (c) London. [126700]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Our child poverty strategy has achieved success nationally through making work pay and tax credits. Between 1998-99 and 2004-05, the number of children in relative low income fell by 700,000.

We have introduced the city strategy, which should play a significant role in increasing local employment rates, ensuring those most disadvantaged in the labour market can receive the help and guidance they need, delivered flexibly on a joined up, local basis. Two of the initial 15 city strategy pathfinder areas are in London. The East and South East London pathfinder, covering the five host boroughs (including Greenwich) for the 2012 Olympics and Paralympics, has highlighted the level of child poverty in the area as one of its key challenges.

The New Deal Plus for Lone Parents pilots started in April 2005 in five Jobcentre Plus districts, one of which includes Greenwich. We are testing a comprehensive package of measures based on New Deal for Lone Parents and an existing core set of pilots.

Departments: Energy

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what strategy he has put in place for (a) the use of renewable energy and (b) meeting energy targets in his Department's buildings; and if he will make a statement. [125398]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department works very closely with its Estate Partner, Land Securities Trillium to meet the targets for sustainable operations on the Government estate, which were published on 12 June 2006. A package of measures is in place to address the energy targets, including 'spend-to-save' investment in energy efficient equipment, new monitoring arrangements (which allow the identification, and subsequent rectification of anomalies in energy use) and an ongoing commitment to purchase off-site renewable energy. Regular meetings are held with sustainable development representatives from individual DWP businesses to identify potential efficiency measures and monitor progress. The Department is now assessing also the potential for on-site generation of renewable energy.

The latest available figures for 2005-06 show the Department consumed 327,460,763 kWhs of electricity. Of this 175,174,178 kWhs were acquired from renewable sources—this accounts for 53.5 per cent. of the total electricity consumption.

Information on the Department's performance on all sustainability targets can be found in the Department's annual sustainable development report and the sustainable development in Government report produced by the Sustainable Development Commission.

Departments: ICT

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much expenditure on information technology systems, hardware and software was written off by his Department in each of the last five years. [120457]

James Purnell: No expenditure on information technology systems hardware or software assets has been written off by the Department for Work and Pensions in the last five years.

Housing Benefit: Council Tax Benefits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were in receipt of (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit in each year since 1990-91. [121841]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the following table.

Industrial Health and Safety: Aviation

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether UK airlines are required to abide by the Control of Substance Hazardous to Health Regulations when their aircraft are in flight. [127373]

Mrs. McGuire: The Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 2002 (as amended) apply to aircraft in flight in airspace above Great Britain.

Industrial Injuries Benefits

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claims were made for industrial injury benefit in each of the last 10 years; and of these how many were (a) paid with another benefit and (b) subject to clawback by the Compensation Recovery Unit. [126417]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 9 March 2007]: Information on how many claims for industrial injury benefit in each of the last 10 years were paid with another benefit is not available.

The available information is in the following tables.

New[1] industrial injury benefit claims[2]

Information Technology Projects

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information technology projects have been (a) cancelled and (b) placed under review by his Department in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [118805]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department undertakes a large number of projects which deliver business change and policy initiatives. IT changes are an enabling component of many projects. The number of projects in train at any one time will vary and the duration of the project lifecycle is often more than one calendar year. The following table includes only those projects that have been formally closed where the IT element is such that non-delivery of the IT would significantly damage the project's ability to deliver its intended results and the investment in the project has exceeded £1 million.

Project name	Contractors involved	Investment expenditure (£ million)
Document management (closed 2006-07)	None appointed at time of cancellation	1.4
Retirement planner (closed 2004-05)	Accenture as Solution Provider EDS as Solution Operator	11.2
E-enabled retirement pension (closed 2006-07)	EDS	1.8
Benefits processing replacement programme (BPRP) (closed 2006-07)	IBM: solution design services. PA Consulting: client side programme management and implementation support.	[1]35

[1] Including future commitments

The figure for BPRP is some £8 million less than that provided in the answer given on 6 February 2007, Official Report, column 863W. An external audit is now expected to confirm total cost and forward commitments on BPRP of around £135 million.

A significant amount of the investment in BPRP is of future value to the Department. We estimate that at least half of the sum invested (around £73 million) is of future value to the Department.

The Department has a comprehensive monitoring system in place to ensure that projects and programmes continue to deliver value for money, make effective use of departmental resources and continue to meet departmental objectives throughout their development. As such all projects and programmes are subject to periodic comprehensive reviews.

Jobcentre Plus

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which Jobcentre Plus offices have had their hours of opening to the public reduced in (a) the last (i) six months and (ii) 12 months and (b) the last two years. [102423]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 23 November 2007]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 14 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about how many Jobcentre Plus offices have had their hours of opening to the public reduced in the last (a) (i) six months and (ii) 12 months, and (b) the last two years. This is something, which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

A total of 96 Jobcentre Plus sites have had a reduction in opening hours in the two years to February 2007. This information is gathered at a Jobcentre Plus district level, and is set out in the attached table, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

I hope this is helpful.

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether national insurance numbers will be issued to (a) non-working and (b) self-employed migrants to the UK from (i) Bulgaria and (ii) Romania after their accession to the EU. [102122]

Mr. Plaskitt: The allocation of a national insurance number (NINO) is dependent upon satisfying certain employment and benefit-related criteria. Individuals who are employed, self-employed, in receipt of benefit, or the partner of a benefit claimant can be eligible for a NINO.

A non-working Bulgarian or Romanian national would be allocated with a NINO in order to apply for a benefit subject to satisfying the relevant benefit entitlement criteria and identity requirements. There are limited circumstances in which benefit entitlement would arise. For example a highly skilled migrant who holds an EEA registration certificate annotated to say that they have unrestricted access to the UK labour market and who meets the normal conditions of entitlement for income-based jobseeker's allowance would have benefit entitlement.

A "right to work" condition was introduced into the NINO allocation and decision making process for employment-related applications. This was implemented in July 2006. Bulgarian and Romanian nationals who apply for a NINO for the purposes of self-employment will need to provide proof of their right to work in the UK, their self-employment status, and their identity before a NINO would be allocated.

Pathways Contractors

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether he has plans to require private and voluntary sector Pathways contractors to reach targets in relation to certain disability groups; [110582]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that private and voluntary sector Pathways contractors are rewarded for outcomes in the form of claimants moving into (a) part-time work, (b) voluntary work and (c) training. [110583]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Any successful bid for a Pathways to Work contract will need to address the needs of all customers, taking into account the range of different health conditions and disabilities, on a tailored and flexible basis. We have no plans to set Pathways to Work contractors targets for particular disability groups. The Pathways approach to employment support is designed to treat each customer as an individual rather than as a member of a particular group or sub-group. Targets based on condition would frustrate this approach and ignore the fact that customers often have multiple health problems and barriers to work.

Pathways contracts are heavily outcome focused and will pay providers for job entries and for sustained employment. A job entry payment will be paid when a customer enters employment of at least eight hours a week. A sustained payment will be paid if, at the 26 week point, the customer is in employment of at least 16 hours a week and has been off benefit for at least 13 of the preceding 26 weeks.

We accept that full-time employment may not be achievable in the short term for many of our customers, and that for some the move towards employment will be a long-term goal.

Pathways to Work

Mr. Raffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have been subject to mandatory work-focused interviews as part of the Pathways to Work pilots since their inception; and in how many cases such an interview has been waived in the case of people with (a) certain infectious and parasitic diseases, (b) neoplasms, (c) diseases of the blood and blood forming organs and certain diseases involving the immune mechanism, (d) endocrine, nutritional and metabolic diseases, (e) mental and behavioural disorders, (f) diseases of the nervous system, (g) diseases of the eye and adnexa, (h) diseases of the ear and mastoid process, (i) diseases of the circulatory system, (j) diseases of the respiratory system, (k) factors influencing health status and contact with health services, (l) diseases of the digestive system, (m) diseases of the skin and subcutaneous system, (n) diseases of the musculoskeletal system and connective tissue, (o) diseases of the genitourinary system, (p) pregnancy, childbirth and the puerperium, (q) certain conditions originating in the perinatal period, (r) congenital malformations, deformations and chromosomal abnormalities, (s) symptoms, signs and abnormal clinical and laboratory findings, not elsewhere classified and (t) injury, poisoning and certain other consequences of external causes. [101745]

Mr. Jim Murphy: 114,430 new incapacity benefit customers have been subject to mandatory work focused interviews as part of Pathways to Work. Of these, 9,050 had their initial work focused interviews waived.

26,580 incapacity benefit customers who are part of the extension of Pathways to existing customers have been subject to mandatory work focused interviews. Of these, 7,580 have had their work focused interviews waived.

The breakdown of waivers by condition type is in the following table:

Pathways to Work Evaluation Database (data to the end of June 2006)

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what improvement in employment outcomes has taken place in the Pathways to Work pilot areas for (a) all participants, (b) participants over 50 years, (c) participants whose first reason for claiming incapacity is mental ill-health and (d) all participants with mental ill-health. [106414]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 30 November 2006]: Information is not available in the format requested. However, early findings from the independent research conducted by the Institute for Fiscal Studies (Early quantitative evidence on the impact of the Pathways to Work pilots, DWP Research Report No. 354), shows for all participants a 9.5 per cent. increase in the proportion of people who are employed 10 and a half months after claiming incapacity benefit. For participants over the age of 45, the increase in the proportion of people who are employed 10 and a half months after claiming incapacity benefit was 12 per cent.

For participants whose health problem is a mental health condition, there has been no significant impact on the proportion of people who are employed 10 and a half months after claiming incapacity benefit.

Our internal analysis has found that in terms of the net impact of Pathways to Work, those with a mental health or behavioural disorder have fared as well as other customers in terms of off-flows from benefit. One-to-one research with personal advisers and practitioners has found many examples of incapacity benefit customers helped by our Condition Management Pathways in Pathways areas.

Pensions: Overseas Residence

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the policy reasons are for the different rules which apply to providing index-linked pensions to British pensioners living in Canada and the United States. [126543]

James Purnell: The UK has a full reciprocal social security agreement with the United States covering a range of contributory social security benefits for people moving between the countries, including provision allowing annual UK state pension uprating increases to be paid.

The arrangement with Canada is very limited in scope and does not allow annual UK state pension uprating increases. The arrangement, which was first entered into in 1959, helps only persons coming to the UK from Canada. For retirement pension purposes, it allows former residents of Canada to qualify for an enhanced amount of UK basic state pension by treating periods of residence in Canada as periods when UK national insurance contributions had been paid, provided the person has resided in the UK for 10 years following arrival or return here. There is no corresponding arrangement that would help a person going from the UK to Canada to qualify for either UK or Canadian benefits on taking up residence there.

An agreement between the UK and the USA, which was concluded in 1969, allowed future annual uprating increases that became payable after its coming into force to be paid to UK pensioners living in the USA. Talks were subsequently held with Canada about a possible similar agreement. However, Canadian legislation prevented payment of Canadian old age security pension (COASP) under reciprocal agreements with other countries, ruling out the scope for reciprocity in the export of pensions. Although this legislation was amended in 1977 to allow COASP to be paid outside Canada, UK Ministers at that time decided, in line with the UK's general policy on frozen pensions, that insufficient resources were available for increasing the rates of UK pension payable in Canada. The arrangement between the UK and Canada was updated at the time, to reflect the developments in Canadian legislation, but the changes to it were limited to ensuring that there was no double concurrent provision of both countries' pensions for former Canadian residents living in the UK.

Pensions: Retail Sector

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact on the pension fund of an individual on median earnings saving in the proposed personal accounts aged (a) 25, (b) 35 and (c) 45 in full-time employment contributing to an exempt employer scheme of a waiting period of (i) three months, (ii) six months, (iii) nine months and (iv) 12 months where the individual changes employer in line with the average frequency in (A) the retail sector and (B) the hospitality sector. [123164]

James Purnell: The information is not available in the form requested because the samples are too small to provide statistically reliable turnover rates for the two industries separately.

The calculations in the following table are therefore based upon a turnover rate for the retail and hospitality sectors combined.

Fall in fund values for different waiting periods

	Reduction in expected value of fund for different waiting periods (%)
Age in 2012	3 months	6 months	9 months	12 months
25	7	13	21	27
35	7	13	20	26
45	7	13	20	27

Notes:
1. The calculations assume that the individual has a series of jobs, each 44 months long, until state pension age. Small variations in the percentage by age depend upon the length of their last job, which affects the total percentage of their career spent waiting to enter a scheme.
2. Based on a turnover rate of 27 per cent. of individuals for the retail and hospitality sectors combined (Labour Force Survey 2005).

Roads: Safety

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions he has had with the Audit Commission on the Commission's recent report, Changing Lanes, targeting employers in order to deliver road safety messages to those who drive at work. [126677]

Mrs. McGuire: I have not discussed 'Changing Lanes' with the Audit Commission. However, the Chair of the Health and Safety Commission has written to the chief executive of the Audit Commission to endorse the report's emphasis on education, training and publicity, and also to describe how the Health and Safety Executive has been working with the Department for Transport to raise awareness of employers' responsibility for work-related road safety.

Social Fund

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he plans to establish an online portal through which applications to the social fund could be made. [124905]

Mr. Plaskitt: Although the Department for Work and Pensions is looking at ways of using the internet more in conducting its business, there are currently no plans in place to establish an online portal through which applications to the social fund could be made.

Social Security Benefits: Disabled People

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will take steps to improve access to existing benefits for disabled people by increasing the number of face-to-face assessments and home visits for initial applications; and if he will make a statement. [124716]

Mrs. McGuire: The Disability and Carers Service with Job Centre plus and the Pension Service is developing proposals to extend our provision for visiting disabled customers in their own homes and other places convenient for them. This will include among other things face to face assessments and help to complete application forms. We are conducting pilots to test the capacity of Pension Service staff to carry out all of the visits needed for attendance allowance and disability living allowance purposes. The Pension Service is also developing new and efficient methods of delivering face to face contact by working with its external partners.

State Retirement Pensions: Females

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate, for each financial year since 1978-79, the number of women who were born in 1945 and who in the year in question were recorded (a) with a qualifying year for retirement pension on the basis of National Insurance contributions or credits and (b) without a qualifying year, showing separately in each case (i) the number receiving Home Responsibility Protection and (ii) the number with a Class 1 reduced rate election. [123886]

James Purnell [holding answer 27 February 2007]: The information available is set out in the following table. The second column of the table shows the number of women born in 1945-46 who qualified for basic state pension through contributions and/or credits for each financial year from 1978-79 to 2003-04 (a). The third column shows the number of women born in 1945-46 who did not qualify for basic state pension through contributions and/or credits for each financial year from 1978-79 to 2003-04 (b). The fourth and fifth columns show the number of these women with Home Responsibilities Protection (b)(i) and the number with a class 1 reduced rate election (b)(ii), respectively, for each financial year.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many women reaching age 60 in 2005 are recorded as having at least one year of Home Responsibilities Protection which (a) did not coincide with a year which qualified for a retirement pension on the basis of contributions or credits, (b) did coincide with such a year and (c) coincided with a year in which there was a Class 1 reduced rate National Insurance election. [123887]

James Purnell [holding answer 27 February 2007]: Of those women reaching age 60 in 2005-06:

Around 180,000 are recorded as having at least one year of Home Responsibilities Protection which did not coincide with a year which qualified for basic state pension on the basis of contributions and/or credits.

Around 430,000 women are recorded as having at least one year of Home Responsibilities Protection which did coincide with a year which qualified for basic state pension on the basis of contributions and/or credits.

Finally, around 60,000 are recorded as having at least one year of Home Responsibilities Protection which coincided with a year in which there was a class 1 reduced rate national insurance election.

As a result of these issues, the information used to answer this PQ only includes data up to and including the 2003-04 tax year.

Additionally, the figures in the response are based on information available for women aged 58 in 2003-04, since these women are aged 60 in 2005-06. No allowance has been made for deaths between 2003-04 and 2005-06.

Figures refer to women living in the UK as well as women living overseas.

Widowed Parents Allowance

Mr. David Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are in receipt of widowed parents allowance. [125958]

Mr. Plaskitt: As at August 2006, the most recent year for which there is an available figure, there were 37,060 people in receipt of widowed parents allowance in Great Britain.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Belarus: Human Rights

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking at the United Nations to encourage action against Belarus on human rights. [126985]

Mr. Hoon: The UK and the EU take every opportunity in the UN Human Rights Council and the Third Committee of the UN General Assembly, to express our continuing concerns about Belarus's human rights record. The UN Special Rapporteur on Belarus presented a report to the Human Rights Council in September 2006. The EU spoke in the council's dialogue with the Rapporteur, expressing concern about the further weakening of the independence of the judiciary, intimidation of civil society activists, detention of political prisoners, and the situation of minority groups in Belarus. We will continue to use dialogues with the Special Rapporteur on Belarus, and other relevant UN Special Rapporteurs, to register our concerns and press for improvements.

In November 2006, EU members co-sponsored a resolution on Belarus in the Third Committee of the UN General Assembly. It was duly adopted there and subsequently in the plenary session of the General Assembly. The resolution expressed deep concern at the deteriorating human rights situation in Belarus, including Belarus's failure to co-operate with the UN human rights mechanisms; its failure to conduct free and fair elections, including the detention and arrest of political and civil society activists; and persistent reports of harassment and closure of non-governmental organisations, national minority groups, independent media outlets, religious groups, opposition political parties and independent trade unions.

British Food

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of food served in buildings occupied by her Department was of British origin in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [111126]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) plays an active part in the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs' public sector food procurement initiative, and seeks to improve the sustainability of food supplied to the Department.

In 2006, the following proportion of food served within the FCO was of British Origin:

	Percentage
Meat	49
Fruit and vegetables	40
Cheese	40
Eggs	100
Fish	60
Milk	100
Bread	100

The contract for the supply of catering to the FCO changed hands in mid 2005 and as a result figures for that year could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Embassies: Closures

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans she has to close British embassies in 2007. [126997]

Mr. Hoon: No British embassies or British high commissions have been closed to date in 2007 and there are currently no plans to close any such missions this year.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office continuously reviews the deployment of its resources and aligns them flexibly in line with UK interests to the benefit of the British taxpayer.

European Tender Information System

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost has been of the European Tenders Information System. [126919]

Mr. Hoon: The total project budget of the European Tender Information System (ETIS) was approximately £1.47 million between January 2005 and October 2006. Half of this was funded by the European Union's eContent programme. The remainder was funded by the fourteen ETIS partners in the nine countries (including the UK) involved, who provide services in the field of public procurement in their regions.

European Union: Constitutions

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the UK has been invited to attend the meeting organised by the German EU presidency on 27 February for those states yet to ratify the EU Constitution. [127339]

Mr. Hoon: To the Government's knowledge, the Germany presidency did not organise a meeting on 27 February for those states yet to ratify the EU constitution.

Iran: Nuclear Power

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the authorities in Saudi Arabia on Iran's nuclear programme. [126995]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised Iran with Saudi Arabian Foreign Minister Prince Saud in the margins of the Paris III Conference on Lebanon on 25 January. Officials discuss Iran's nuclear programme with the Saudi Arabian authorities on a regular basis, most recently on 12 March.

Iran: Sanctions

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what she expects the effects to be of the latest set of European Union sanctions on Iran; and if she will make a statement. [127336]

Dr. Howells: UN Security Council Resolution 1737 introduced sanctions targeted at the most sensitive elements of Iran's nuclear and ballistic missile programmes. European Union Foreign Ministers decided in January to implement the measures broadly. We hope that these sanctions, and any further measures introduced as a result of discussions currently under way in the Security Council, will persuade Iran to suspend its enrichment-related, reprocessing and heavy water related activities which will permit a resumption of negotiations. There are signs that UN sanctions are beginning to influence the internal debate within Iran.

Iraq: Opinion Polls

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to her statement in the debate on 24 January 2007, Official Report, column 1428, on Iraq and the wider Middle East, if she will place in the Library the results of the opinion poll of the people of Basra; who (a) commissioned and (b) paid for the poll; which organisation conducted it; and what its (i) methodology and (ii) sample size was. [126000]

Dr. Howells: The information requested cannot be provided, in order to protect the personal security of individuals involved. The methodology and sample size used for the opinion poll were appropriate in order to gain statistically valid results.

Iraq: Security Guards

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will estimate (a) how many private military and security companies are operating in Iraq and (b) how many individuals are employed by such companies in that country. [127018]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not keep a record of private military and security companies operating in Iraq. The Private Security Company Association of Iraq (PSCAI) (www.pscai.org) has fifty companies listed as members and estimates that the total private security company workforce is approximately 30,000 employees, broken down as follows:

	Number
Citizens of United States/United Kingdom/Australia;	5,000
Third country nationals such as Fijians, South Americans, Georgians, Ghurkas etc	10,000
Iraqis	15,000

Figures are difficult to accurately assess as the labour force is very mobile and membership of PSCAI is not compulsory.

Lebanon: Overseas Aid

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the Government pledged at the Lebanon donors conference. [127234]

Dr. Howells: The UK provided a significant package of economic assistance to Lebanon at the Paris III conference, where my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary announced £58 million for Lebanon for the coming years and an additional £24 million for Palestinian refugees, in addition to the £23 million the UK gave last year in humanitarian assistance for Lebanon.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether her Department will act as the sponsor department for the money donated to Lebanon. [127235]

Dr. Howells: The UK provided a significant package of economic assistance to Lebanon at the Paris III Conference. The majority of the funding will come from the Department for International Development (DFID), although a small proportion will come from the tri-departmental (Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Ministry of Defence and DFID) Global Conflict Prevention Pool.

Paraguay: Embassies

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons the British Embassy in Paraguay was closed. [126996]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) regrets having to close posts in any part of its overseas network. Such decisions are always difficult. The decision to close our embassy in Asuncion was part of a global reorganisation of our overseas network in response to changing demands and challenges, aimed at ensuring that the UK has a cost-effective and flexible network of overseas representation.

The decision was in no way a reflection on the quality of our bilateral relations. As we made clear to the Paraguayan Government, we value the excellent relations we have with Paraguay.

Since the closure of our embassy in Asuncion, coverage has been maintained from our embassy in Buenos Aires where our ambassador to Paraguay resides. In addition, the FCO has appointed an honorary consul based in Asuncion to provide emergency consular assistance. Contact details for both can be found on our website at:

www.fco.gov.uk/paraguay

Project Al Yamamah

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations were received by her Department about the Al Yamamah military contract prior to the announcement that the Serious Fraud Office would end its investigation into the contract. [126928]

Dr. Howells: I regret to inform the hon. Member that to answer this question would result in disproportionate cost.

The original Al-Yamamah military contract was signed between the Government and the Government of Saudi Arabia in 1985. Defence sales are handled by the Ministry of Defence.

UN Security Council

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the outcome of the Security Council discussions held in London on 26 February 2007 on Iran. [126011]

Dr. Howells: United Nations Security Council Resolution 1737, adopted unanimously on 23 December 2006, requires Iran to take certain steps to help build confidence that it is not seeking to develop nuclear weapons. The Security Council asked the Director-General of the International Atomic Energy Agency, Dr Mohammed El-Baradei, to report in 60 days and said that it would adopt further sanctions if Iran did not meet its obligations.

Dr El-Baradei's report, published on 22 February, showed that Iran has failed to take the steps required, including full suspension of all uranium enrichment related, reprocessing and heavy water related activities. Following its publication, senior officials from the 'E3+3' (France, Germany, UK plus China, Russia, US) met in London on 26 February to discuss next steps. They confirmed the E3+3's support for additional sanctions, designed to secure Iran's full compliance with its obligations and return to negotiations. They have since spoken by telephone several times and E3+3 representatives in New York have started to consider possible elements for a new Security Council Resolution, which we expect to discuss soon with other members of the Council.

We remain committed to finding a negotiated solution. The E3+3's proposals for a long-term agreement, presented to Iran by EU High Representative Javier Solana in June 2006, remain on the table. We hope that Iran will take the positive course open to it. The Security Council has said that it will suspend the implementation of sanctions if Iran meets its obligations.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Age: Discrimination

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on discrimination in the provision of basic goods and services to older people because of their age. [126247]

Mr. Woolas: The Discrimination Law Review has evaluated a wide range of evidence and research on this issue. Examples include the report of the 'Research on Age Discrimination Project' carried out by the Open University and Help the Aged and a survey carried out by the University of Kent and Age Concern entitled 'Ageism—A benchmark of public attitudes in Britain'.

Best Practice

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to issue further guidance to local authorities on best practice in drawing up statements of community involvement. [126401]

Mr. Woolas: The Local Government White Paper (LGWP), published in October 2006, highlighted the multiplicity of community consultation and engagement strategies in local authorities, including the Statement of Community Involvement for Local Development Frameworks. It concluded that in order to secure co-ordinated consultation and engagement across local authority activity we want the local authority and its partners to have the flexibility to draw up more comprehensive engagement strategies. We plan to issue guidance on these comprehensive strategies in autumn 2007 for consultation, to be published in spring 2008.

Gender: Equality

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will direct the Women and Equality Unit to form an advisory group on men's health issues to support the implementation of the Equality Act 2006's gender equality duties. [126724]

Meg Munn: The Women and Equality Unit (WEU) and the Department of Health have been working together with the Men's Health Forum to address health issues specific to men. They have provided funding for a number of events and will be supporting the Men's Health Forum's Conference later this month.

In addition, the Department of Health recently established a Gender Equality Advisory Group. The aim of the Group is to advise the Department on current health inequality trends and to provide a consultative forum on Department of Health policy initiatives that impact on the NHS. Key stakeholders represented on the Advisory Group include the Men's Health Forum, the Equal Opportunities Commission and a number of other gender related advisory bodies across government as well as the Women and Equality Unit and the voluntary and community sector. The Group has already met and will be taking forward a number of gender specific actions including ones that affect men more generally such as prostate cancer.

Homelessness: Cumbria

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her most recent estimate is of the number of people sleeping rough in (a) Penrith and (b) Cumbria. [126861]

Mr. Woolas: The Government have published an estimate of the number of rough sleepers in England each year since 1998. At that time the Prime Minister introduced a target to achieve a two thirds reduction in the numbers of those sleeping rough by 2002 from 1,850. The target was achieved in 2001 and is being sustained.

The National Estimate publishes figures on a local authority basis. Penrith is covered by Eden district council who recorded 0 rough sleepers in 2006. Cumbria recorded four rough sleepers.

Housing: Disabled

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Disability Discrimination (Providers of Services) (Adjustments of Premises) Regulations 2001 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125603]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply.

Any costs to businesses arising from these Regulations were taken into account in the assessment of the overall costs of implementing the new duty for service providers that came into force on 1 October 2004. This duty requires service providers to make reasonable adjustments to physical features of their premises in order to improve access for disabled people to their services.

The only costs that are likely to occur are where a service provider in leased premises is required to seek consent for an alteration to the premises. These are expected to be minimal. Other provisions in the Regulations set out circumstances in which a service provider is not required to make, or therefore incur the cost of, reasonable adjustments to a physical feature.

There will be no costs to regulators, since there is no regulator responsible for enforcing the reasonable adjustment duties of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. Enforcement is by the individual disabled person who considers that he or she has been discriminated against by a service provider who fails to make a reasonable adjustment.

Housing: Flood Control

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the proportion of new (a) housing and (b) commercial developments which are able to withstand the effects of flooding. [126020]

Yvette Cooper: No data are available on the proportion of new residential or commercial developments able to withstand the effects of flooding.

The consideration of flood risk in new development by the planning process is covered by Planning Policy Statement 25 "Development and Flood Risk". This advises that where flood risk cannot be removed by seeking a lower-risk location for the proposed development, or by taking other mitigating measures, but where it is still desirable for that development to proceed, the measures to manage the remaining risk should include the use of flood resistant and resilient construction.

We have carried out research into improving the flood resistance and resilience of new building and expect to publish a guide on these matters shortly.

Planning control only applies to applications for new development. Flood resistance and resilience is also of importance to existing development, broadly 10 per cent. of which in England is in the higher flood-risk areas as mapped by the Environment Agency. We published guidance for existing buildings in "Preparing for Floods" in 2002, and revised it in 2003.

Housing: Greater London

Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much housing-related Supporting People funding was made available in each local authority in London in each year since its inception. [126842]

Mr. Woolas: The Supporting People programme grant payable to London boroughs since the commencement of the Supporting People programme is shown in the following table:

Housing: Standards

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) how many arm's length management organisations have signed up to the Respect Standard for Housing Management; [126471]

(2) how many (a) homes and (b) residents in arm's length management organisation managed areas are covered by the Respect Standard for Housing Management. [126475]

Yvette Cooper: 36 arm's length management organisations (ALMO) who together manage over 500,000 units have signed up to the Respect Standard for Housing Management as of 1 March 2007. We estimate that over 1 million residents in arm's length management organisations are covered by the standard.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many arm's length management organisation (ALMO) managed residential properties have received a complete new set of windows since the start of the ALMO programme in April 2002; and how many received a complete new set in the most recent 12 month period for which figures are available. [126473]

Yvette Cooper: The following table, based on returns from local authorities, shows the number of dwellings managed by ALMOs on which capital works on windows (installation, replacement or major repairs) were undertaken in each year since 2002-03 and the total expenditure on such works. We do not collect separate data on the number of dwellings where complete new sets of windows are installed.

Travelling People: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the number of Travellers residing in Lancashire in each of the past five years. [127095]

Meg Munn: Communities and Local Government do not collect information on the number of Gypsies and Travellers in each local authority area. However, it does publish a count of Gypsy and Traveller caravans in local authorities in England twice yearly. Copies of the latest publication "Count of Gypsy caravans on 19 July: last five counts" have been distributed to the Libraries of the House. An electronic version is available on the Department's website at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1153575

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what area of land in Lancashire is set aside for Travellers to reside on. [127096]

Meg Munn: Communities and Local Government publish a list of Gypsy and Traveller sites provided by local authorities and RSLs in England twice yearly. Copies of the latest publication, "Gypsy and Traveller sites provided by local authorities and RSLs in England—19 July 2006", have been distributed to the Libraries of the House. An electronic version is available on the Department's website at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1153575

This does not include private sites.

Local authorities will need to allocate land for Gypsy and Traveller sites in their Development Plan Documents to meet the pitch requirements set out in Regional Spatial Strategies.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Administration of Justice: Females

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to respond to the recommendations in the Corston report on vulnerable women in the criminal justice system. [127570]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government very much welcome this report and have given an undertaking that we will look carefully at the issues it raises and the recommendations it makes for change.

The 43 recommendations made are wide-ranging and propose action by a number of different Government departments and other organisations to address together the complex and multiple needs of women both in the criminal justice system and at risk of offending. These recommendations will be carefully explored with all the departments and agencies concerned and the Government will develop a detailed response and set out an agreed way forward; we aim to respond in detail to this report in around three months.

Asylum

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers were being required to report to a reporting centre in December 2006. [125655]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested regarding how many asylum seekers were being required to report to a reporting centre in December 2006 is not readily available.

This information could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Asylum: Children

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unaccompanied children claimed asylum in the UK in each year between 1997 and 2006. [126079]

Mr. Byrne: The following table shows the total numbers of asylum applications received from unaccompanied asylum seeking children for each year between 1997 and 2006.

Further information on unaccompanied asylum seeking children is published quarterly and annually. Copies of these publications and others relating to immigration to the UK are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Asylum: Iraq

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Iraqi refugees there were in the UK in each year since 2000. [117886]

Mr. Byrne: The number of Iraqi refugees in the country at any time could not be determined as refugees may leave the country without advising the Home Office.

Departments: Databases

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what databases are controlled by his Department and its agencies; and what percentage of the data in each database he estimates is inaccurate or out of date. [124032]

John Reid: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Energy

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what strategy he has put in place for (a) the use of renewable energy and (b) meeting energy targets in his Department's buildings; and if he will make a statement. [125411]

Mr. Byrne: In 2004-05, the latest year for which figures have been published, 17 per cent. of the electricity consumed by the Home Office was acquired from renewable sources.

This exceeds the new sustainable operations targets (SOGE) announced by the Prime Minister in June this year, which requires Departments to source at least 10 per cent. of electricity from renewable sources by 31 March 2008.

The Home Office continues to explore opportunities to further increase the amount of renewable electricity acquired from renewable sources both with suppliers and through self generation.

The Department has recently agreed a strategy that will enable us to address the remaining SOGE energy targets which require improvements in energy efficiency, reduction in carbon emissions and offsetting those emissions that cannot be reduced. Our central sustainable development policy team will shortly begin work on action plans to meet the following:

- increased Combined Heat and Power (CHP) uptake via central energy procurement initiatives and within new builds and major refurbishment projects
- introducing pilot schemes as a first step towards a fully fledged carbon neutrality strategy for the office estate
- participation in the OGC benchmarking scheme for the office estate which, among other aspects, looks at energy performance and will inform the setting of improvement targets.

These initiatives will be supported by more reliable data systems that will be realised through our new shared service operations, as well as by procurement initiatives and funding for energy efficiency programmes to reduce emissions and for carbon offset projects.

Departments: Internet

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether he has considered the merits of merging the Respect, Together and Crime Reduction websites in order to improve the clarity of information provided to the public; [126421]

(2) what the annual running costs were of the (a) Respect, (b) Together and (c) Crime Reduction websites in the most recent year for which figures are available. [126422]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The Crime Reduction website promotes positive crime reduction messages from a broad range of organisations—governmental and non-governmental—both from within the UK and overseas and is aimed at practitioners working to reduce criminal activity. The Respect website, which replaced the Together website in October 2006, aims to inform a broader range of practitioners about dealing with antisocial behaviour by tackling the underlying causes, how to intervene early where problems occur and how to work closely with local communities to effect sustainable improvements. Both websites have been designed to meet the different information needs of these two audiences and are not aimed at providing information for the public generally. We have no plans to merge these sites.

The annual cost for the technical support of the Crime Reduction site for 2006 is £113, 307. The accumulated costs for the Respect website for 2006-07 are £73,000. There are no associated running costs with the Together website as it is hosted by the Home Office and is no longer updated. Visitors to the site are signposted to the Respect website.

Departments: Logos

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which organisations have been employed to provide external consultancy advice on departmental rebranding since December 2006; and what the cost was of such advice. [125725]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office has not re-branded or undertaken a re-branding exercise. Our logo and strapline has not changed since it was created in 1999 and no external consultancy advice has been procured with regards to re-branding since December 2006.

Domestic Violence: Victim Support Schemes

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) financial and (b) practical assistance his Department gives to groups providing support to families affected by instances of violence towards a parent by a child. [126675]

Mr. Dhanda: I have been asked to reply.

The Department, via the children, young people and families, strengthening families and family support grant programmes is supporting 207 3rd sector projects with over £20 million. These projects enable an increase in family and relationship support. The projects provide a range of information, advice and guidance which may include support for parents, carers and families experiencing different levels and types of family and relationship difficulties. This support might include, but is not specifically aimed at, families in which there may be instances of violence towards parents by children.

Downview Prison: Catering

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Aramark took over responsibility for provision of canteen services at HMP Downview; when the prison management was supplied with a draft service level agreement between Aramark and the Home Office; when he expects this agreement to be finalised; and when Aramark's contract expires. [126263]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Aramark took over the canteen service in May 2006. The draft Service Level Agreement was provided to the prison in December 2006. This is currently the subject of a review which is expected to be completed in April 2007. Aramark's contract with the prison expires in May 2009.

Holloway Prison

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 108W, on Holloway Prison, if he will list the other further facilities referred to. [126118]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The further activities referred to are Bible Studies and one off events.

Immigration Controls: Fishguard

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many suspected illegal immigrants have been stopped by (a) Immigration and Nationality Directorate officials and (b) the police at the ports of (i) Fishguard and (ii) Pembroke Dock since 2005. [125265]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 5 March 2007]: Passenger ferries at Fishguard and Pembroke Dock arrive from Rosslaire in the Republic of Ireland which is part of the common travel area (CTA). The Immigration (Control of Entry through Ireland) Order 1972 sets out the laws under which foreign nationals are deemed to be given leave to enter when travelling within the CTA. There are police controls in place at Fishguard and Pembroke Dock.

The following table sets out the number of suspected illegal immigrants stopped by police at these ports.

Notes:
1. The figures shown relate to those individuals spoken to by police officers on suspicion of illegal immigration.
2. The data provided are based on locally collated management information which may be subject to change and are not representative of national statistics.

Immigration: Detainees

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of those required to report to an immigration detention centre while their applications were being processed missed at least one appointment in (a) December 2005 and (b) December 2006. [125656]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Offenders: Deportation

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign prisoners were deported in (a) October, (b) November and (c) December 2006. [118113]

Mr. Byrne: The Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Lin Homer, wrote to the Home Affairs Committee on 12 December 2006 and 19 February 2007 setting out deportation consideration and deportation action taken since April this year. A copy of these letters have been placed in the Library.

Prison Service: Pay

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the new Contract Supplementary Hours Scheme payment represents as a percentage of basic pay for (a) prison officers on each pay scale point, (b) senior officers and (c) both payscale points for principal officers; and if he will make a statement. [126489]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The rate for additional hours worked by operational prison staff under the Contract Supplementary Hours scheme is set annually by the Prison Service Pay Review Body. The rate is currently £15.38 per hour. The following table shows the hourly rate of pay for normal contracted hours for prison officers, senior officers and principal officers at each spine point, compared to the hourly rate for additional Contract Supplementary Hours.

Prison Service: Recruitment

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Prison Service has plans in place to recruit sufficient prison officers to meet its current or projected operating staffing requirement. [126323]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I refer to the answer that I gave to the right hon. Member for Haltemprice and Howden (David Davis) on 8 March 2007, Official Report column 2171W.

Prison Service: Working Hours

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the new Contract Supplementary Hours Scheme was introduced to the Prison Service; what the reasons were for its introduction; when the use of the scheme was extended; and what the reasons were for the extension. [126329]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Contract Supplementary Hours scheme was first introduced in April 2001 to overcome staff recruitment and retention difficulties in the South East which were affecting the Prison Service's ability to deliver decent prisoner regimes. The scheme was extended across the Prison Service from 30 April 2002 to provide operational flexibility and arrangements were formalised through Prison Service Instruction 26/2003 in June 2003. The scheme can be activated locally by individual Governors when staff vacancies occur in order to maintain regime delivery. Participation on the scheme is entirely voluntary.

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures the Prison Service has put in place to address the local recruitment and retention difficulties that caused the introduction of, and the extension to, the new Contract Supplementary Hours scheme. [126332]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Since 2001, the Prison Service has had in place a system of local pay allowance specifically targeting areas where recruitment and retention difficulties have been identified. In addition the "headstart" scheme allows Governors in areas where retention and recruitment is particularly demanding to appoint new staff on an enhanced level of basic pay at a point above the standard entry level. These measures, together with changes to recruitment procedures, have enabled the public sector Prison Service to increase prison officer recruitment from under 500 new staff in 2001 to over 1,700 new staff in 2006.

Prisoners: Foreigners

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals were held in UK prisons on 30 December 2006, broken down by (a) nationality and (b) offence. [124804]

John Reid [holding answer 2 March 2007]: Information on the numbers of foreign national prisoners detained in prison establishments in England and Wales on 31 December 2006 by (a) nationality (all detained prisoners) and (b) offence group by nationality (prisoners under immediate custodial sentence) can be found in the following tables.

These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system.

Serious Organised Crime Agency

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Serious and Organised Crime Agency's annual report for 2006-07 will be published. [122906]

John Reid: The Serious Organised Crime Agency are planning to publish their annual report in the summer.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal prosecutions have been brought by the Serious Organised Crime Agency since 1 April 2006. [124771]

John Reid: 316 people have been prosecuted as a result of SOCA operations over this period.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of staff employed by the Serious Organised Crime Agency are undertaking work to prevent (a) drugs trafficking and (b) fraud. [124773]

John Reid: The SOCA Board has determined that SOCA should aim to apportion broadly 40 per cent. of its operational effort to drugs trafficking and 10 per cent. to individual and private sector fraud.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action the Serious Organised Crime Agency is taking to disrupt the smuggling of guns into the UK. [124774]

John Reid: As part of the UK Control Strategy to respond to serious and organised crime, SOCA has developed a number of programmes of work, one of which is led by ACPO and relates to the response required to address illicit activity with respect to firearms. The programme seeks to build knowledge and understanding of firearms related criminality and, where appropriate, SOCA resources are deployed in support of operations to target organised crime enterprises believed to be involved in firearms crime.

Sexual Offences

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the effects of incidence of sexual violence or abuse committed against offenders whether as adults or as children in the context of repeat offending or crimes of violence. [126300]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Home Office has not commissioned or evaluated research into the effects of incidence of sexual violence or abuse committed against offenders whether as adults or children in the context of repeat offending or crimes of violence.

Links between the experience of sexual abuse and subsequent offending behaviour, i.e. the victim-offender cycle, are complex and a history of sexual abuse is generally associated with a range of adverse childhood experiences which are difficult to disentangle (Falshaw, 2005; Grubin, 1998 Falshaw, L. 2005).

The link between a history of maltreatment and subsequent offending behaviour: Probation Journal, 52(4), 423-434. Grubin, D. (1998). Sex offending against children: Understanding the risk. Police Research Series. Paper 99. London: Home Office.

Special Advisers

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any of his special advisers have given notice of any other external employment they have undertaken in the past 12 months. [102800]

Mr. Byrne: None of the Home Secretary's special advisers has given notice of any other external employment they have undertaken since being appointed to their positions at the Home Office.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of his Department's civil servants work full-time to support departmental special advisers; and what the salary is of each such civil servant. [106515]

Mr. Byrne: The full-time equivalent of 2.5 of the Home Office's civil servants are employed in direct support of special advisers in the Department. The salary details of these civil servants may not be disclosed in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre: Health Services

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reimburse to Bedford Primary Care Trust the costs of treating detainees at the Yarl's Wood asylum detention centre; and if he will make a statement. [127091]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 12 March 2007]: Primary Care Trusts (PCTs) have an existing obligation for commissioning secondary and tertiary healthcare services for detainees who reside in removal centres within their geographical area. Like other immigration removal centres, Yarl's Wood has primary healthcare provision on site that is funded through the contract with the centre operator. Detainees receive any necessary secondary healthcare services from the NHS. NHS services are, however, only used in situations where detainees cannot be treated through the on-site primary care provision and are referred to secondary services or in an emergency situation.

Young Offenders: Drugs

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offenders were screened positively for substance misuse in each year since 2002; how many accessed early intervention and treatment services in each such year; and if he will make a statement. [126057]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data on the number of young people identified as requiring substance misuse assessment and accessing early intervention and treatment services are collected by the Youth Justice Board from youth offending teams and are set out in the tables.

The Youth Justice Board did not collect these data prior to 2004. The 2004-05 data were collected on young people accessing treatment within 10 days. In 2005-06 data were also collected on those receiving services within 20 days.

Young people receiving services later than these timescales were not reported to the Youth Justice Board.

These are not Home Office statistics and although care is taken in collating and analysing the returns used to compile the figures, the data are of necessity subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large-scale recording system.

TREASURY

Agriculture: Subsidies

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the Answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1675W, on agriculture: subsidies, if he will break down the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs' £305 million claim on the revenue. [126234]

John Healey: The additional cover of £305 million on DEFRA's spring supplementary estimate is based on a prudent assessment at that time of issues raised in relation to progress in making payments and regulatory compliance for potential disallowances at the end of the financial year. Detailed discussions will take place with the Commission over a number of years before a final figure is reached.

Average Earnings

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the pay gap between (a) women working full-time, (b) women working part-time, (c) women with dependent children, (d) ethnic minorities, (f) workers aged 50 years or over, (g) workers with disabilities and (h) those with the lowest qualifications and the hourly median earnings for men in each year since 1997. [126513]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding the pay gap between (a) women working full-time, (b) women working part-time, (c) women with dependent children, (d) ethnic minorities, (f) workers aged 50 years or over, (g) workers with disabilities and (h) those with the lowest qualifications and the hourly median earnings for men in each year since 1997. (126513)

Average levels of earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for employees on adult rates of pay whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect information on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

Analyses for women with dependent children, ethnic minorities, workers with disabilities, and by qualification are not available from ASHE. The Labour Force Survey (LFS) does collect this information, but in the form requested it is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

The attached table shows median gross hourly earnings excluding overtime and the pay gap, for full-time females, part-time females and all employees aged over 50, compared to the median gross hourly earnings excluding overtime for full-time men.

The ASHE, carried out in April each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

Guide to quality:
The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of a figure, the smaller the CV value, the higher the quality.
The true value is likely to lie within +/- twice the CV—for example, for an average of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent., we would expect the population average to be within the range 180 to 220.
All of the figures on this table have a CV of less than 5 per cent.
The median is the value below which 50 per cent. of employees fall. It is preferred over the mean for earnings data as it is influenced less by extreme values and because of the skewed distribution of earnings data.

Business: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Money Laundering Regulations 2003 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126672]

Ed Balls: The Full Regulatory Impact Assessment for the Money Laundering Regulations 2003 lists the following costs for sectors:

Legal and accountancy: £80-£100 million per annum;

Estate agents: £10-£15 million for the first year. £5-£7.5 million thereafter;

High Value Dealers: £350 per firm per year.

HM Treasury's simplification plan 'Delivering Better Regulation', published in December 2006, identified a net administrative burden of £921,617 (per annum). This relates to the supervisory arrangements for Money Service Businesses and High Value Dealers, as set out in Part 3 of the Regulations.

The Regulations have brought benefits in detecting, deterring and disrupting money laundering and terrorist financing.

HM Treasury is committed to reducing regulatory burdens where possible. Work on identifying simplification measures to reduce the burden for industry of applying anti-money laundering controls is ongoing.

Departments: Africa

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many officials accompanied him on each visit he made to an African country in January 2005; what the cost of hotels was for (a) him and (b) his officials on each visit; and whether (i) he and (ii) his officials stayed in accommodation provided by the UK's high commission or embassy in each country. [126921]

John Healey: In respect of overseas travel by Cabinet Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of the lists are available in the Library for the reference of Members. All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers", copies of which are available in the Library for the reference of Members. For information on subsistence costs for HM Treasury I refer to the answer I gave on 16 October 2006, Official Report, column 1060W to the hon. Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Grant Shapps). All official travel is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the "Civil Service Management Code", a copy of which is also available in the Library for the reference of Members.

Departments: Conferences

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 483W, on Members: correspondence, whether his Department will assist in the organisation of the conference. [126604]

John Healey: The organisation of this conference is not a matter for the Treasury.

Departments: Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any members of the Council of Economic Advisers were involved in the formulation of his announcement on Citizenship and Immigration of 27 February 2007. [126576]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 13 March 2007, Official Report, column 280W.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has received representations on the number of special advisers he employs. [126574]

John Healey: All advisers are employed in line with the Ministerial Code.

Departments: Standards

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the characteristics are of a Red RAG (Red, Amber and Green) score for a departmental programme. [126879]

Mr. Timms: RAG assessment is a common tool used in a number of contexts across the public and private sector. The description of what constitutes a rating in any given RAG system will differ. HMT does not maintain a standard definition.

Disposable Income

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much and what proportion of disposable income was paid on average in (a) direct taxes, (b) indirect taxes by (i) working age households with dependent children, (ii) working age households without dependent children and (iii) pensioner households in each of the last three years, broken down by income decile. [126508]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how much and what proportion of disposable income was paid on average in (a) direct taxes, (b) indirect taxes by (i) working age households with dependent children, (ii) working age households without dependent children and (iii) pensioner households, broken down by income decile in each of the last three years. (126508)

Estimates of the proportion of income paid in both direct and indirect taxes appear in the ONS analysis 'The effects of taxes and benefits on household income'. The latest analysis for 2004/05 was published on the National Statistics website on 12th May 2006 at http://www.statistics.gov.uk/taxesbenefits. The analysis is based on data from the Expenditure and Food Survey (EFS), which is a sample survey covering approximately 7,000 households in the UK. The analysis for 2005/06 will be published on the National Statistics website on 17 May 2007.

The tables below show the amount of direct and indirect taxes paid by each of the three different types of household. They also show the average payment of direct and indirect taxes as a proportion of income. However, since disposable income is that received after the payment of direct taxes, the proportion of disposable income paid in direct taxes is zero by definition. So only indirect taxes are shown as a proportion of disposable income. To enable a comparison, both direct and indirect taxes have been shown as a proportion of gross income.

Figures have been provided for the last three years, and they have been taken from (or calculated from) figures appearing in the three most recent 'effects of taxes and benefits' articles, those for 2002/03, 2003/04, and 2004/05. The figures for non-retired households with children have been taken from Table 21, the figures for non-retired households without children from Table 20, and the figures for retired households from Table 18. Retired households are those where the income of retired household members accounts for more than half of the household gross income.

Direct taxes include income tax, national insurance contributions and council tax. The indirect taxes include VAT, duties, intermediate taxes (see background notes), and a number of smaller items such as television licences.

When comparing estimates over these three years, it should be remembered that the estimates are based on a sample, and that there is some uncertainty around the estimates. While there will have been some changes in the taxes paid by households over this period, the underlying changes are difficult to distinguish from the movements arising from sampling error, especially in the figures for decile groups. Given this, these figures are best interpreted as indicating the average level of tax payments over this three year period, rather than interpreting them as measuring how the tax burden has changed over these three years.

There was a change to the way that tax credits were treated from 2003/04 onwards. Up until 2002/03 tax credits were treated as cash benefits. From 2003/04, they are classified as negative income tax, but only to the extent that income tax less tax credits, remains greater than or equal to zero for each family. So for households paying relatively little or no income tax, tax credit payments were still regarded either partially or wholly, as cash benefits. Based on figures for 2003/04, the effect of this change was to reduce the overall estimate of direct taxes as a proportion of gross income for all households, by 0.3%.

Indirect taxes, when expressed as a proportion of either gross or disposable income appears particularly high for the bottom income decile, although this result needs to be interpreted carefully. Estimates of indirect taxes are estimated based on household expenditure. It should be remembered that measured expenditure will not necessarily balance with measured income for the year. This is especially true for the bottom income decile where average measured income is significantly lower than average expenditure. For these households, indirect taxes (which reflect expenditure) are not being met solely from current income, and so indirect taxes are very high when expressed as a proportion of either gross or disposable income.

There are a number of plausible reasons why for some households, expenditure might exceed income. Households with low incomes may draw on their savings or borrow in order to finance their expenditure. In addition, the lower decile in particular includes some groups, who have, or report, very little income (for example, self-employed people starting a business or someone who has just been made redundant). In these cases, expenditure is not being met from current income. Some types of receipts are not included as income in the EFS e.g. inheritance and severance payments. In some cases, the information given on expenditure is not consistent with that on income received because of timing differences.

EC Grants and Loans

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress his Department has made towards setting up a European growth fund. [126578]

John Healey: The European Action for Growth initiative, to which I assume the hon. Member's question relates, was endorsed by the European Council in December 2003. Under this initiative, the European Investment Bank (EIB) Group and the EU fund investment in trans-European infrastructure networks (TENs), innovation and R & D, identifying priority projects and research areas, and improving the regulatory, administrative and financial environment so as to mobilise private financing and to optimise public funding. The EIB, of which the Chancellor of the Exchequer is a Governor, has established a dedicated unit taking forward the initiative. Already, a number of instruments have been advanced including, for example, the Risk-Sharing Finance Facility (RSFF) and an increased contribution to the TENs Investment Facility. A mid-term evaluation of the Action for Growth Initiative is expected by the end of 2007.

Environment Protection

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer further to his announcement of 25 September 2006, when his Department expects to bring forward proposals on environmental technologies. [126577]

John Healey: The Commission on Environmental Markets and Economic Performance was announced by the Government in November 2006, and will report before the summer on how the UK can make the most of the opportunities provided by growing environmental markets.

Excise Duties: Alcoholic Drinks

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the potential additional revenue to his Department if the duty was payable on alcohol bought in other EU member states and imported to the UK. [126409]

John Healey: No estimates have been produced of the potential additional revenue if the duty was payable on alcohol bought in other EU member states and imported to the UK.

Population: Health Authorities

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what proportion of each strategic health authority's resident population is aged (a) over state pension age, (b) 65 or over, (c) 75 or over, (d) 85 or over, (e) 95 or over and (f) 100 or over; [126551]

(2) what estimate he has made of the population size of each strategic health authority in (a) 2010, (b) 2020 and (c) 2030; how many and what proportion of the projected population he estimates will be aged (i) over state pension age, (ii) 65 or over, (iii) 75 or over, (iv) 85 or over, (v) 95 or over and (vi) 100 or over in each year. [126609]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 March 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary questions about asking (1) the current proportion of each strategic health authority's resident population; and (2) the projected population size, and proportion of the population, of each strategic health authority in 2010, 2020 and 2030, aged (a) over state pension age (b) 65 or over, (c) 75 or over, (d) 85 or over, (e) 95 or over, (f) 100 or over. (126551 and 126609)

Table 1 shows the proportion of each strategic health authority's resident population aged over state pension age, 65 or over, 75 or over, 85 or over and 90 or over. These data are calculated from the estimates of the population at mid-2005 and are the latest available. They are not available for the age groups 95 or over and 100 or over.

Tables 2a, 2b and 2c show the projected population size of each strategic health authority, as well as the projected population size and the projected proportion of the population that are aged over state pension age, 65 or over, 75 or over and 85 or over, for the years 2010, 2020 and 2029 respectively. These data are from the sub-national population projections based on the mid-2004 population estimates. These projections only run for 25 years and are therefore only available to 2029. They are not available for the age groups 95 or over and 100 or over.

All data are shown for the strategic health authorities on the 2006 boundaries.

Revenue and Customs: Standards

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors led to HM Revenue and Customs being awarded a Red RAG score by the Office of Government Commerce in 2006. [126854]

Mr. Timms: The OGC have not published any RAG scores for HM Revenue and Customs in 2006.

Small Businesses: EC Countries

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many small and medium-sized UK enterprises have used the STIMUTRAN-SME project. [126907]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The STIMUTRAN-SME project aims to boost innovation and knowledge transfer between small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) of North West Europe through "Transnational Matching Centres" (TMCs). These will help SMEs develop transnational business activities and help them find compatible business partners in the North West Europe region. Small and medium-sized enterprises from the UK have not yet had the opportunity to benefit from the STIMUTRAN-SME project as the TMCs have not yet commenced operations, but will do so shortly.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost has been to the public purse of the STIMUTRAN-SME project; and how much has been provided by the European Commission to the project. [126908]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The total budget for STIMUTRAN-SME, a North West Europe INTERREG project, is £171,227.47, which is made up of European Regional Development Funding (ERDF) of £373,069.18 and £404,158.28 match funding provided by the 10 project partners themselves.

The four UK partners (Southern Area Euro Info Centre; Highland Opportunity Limited; Birmingham Chamber of Commerce and Industry; Business Link Kent) between them have a total budget for the life span of the project (2006-08) of £235,340.92. 48 per cent. of this is funded by ERDF (£112,963.32). The remainder, £122,377.60, has been provided by the four partners themselves. It is not possible to determine precisely how much of the match funding provided by partners may have originated from the public purse.

Statistics: Constituencies

Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department has issued guidance to other Government departments on the production of statistics for new parliamentary constituencies. [126442]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 March 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question to any guidance has been issued to other government departments on the production of statistics for new parliamentary constituencies. (126442)

Firstly please can I refer you to the answer that Colin Mowl gave on my behalf to a closely related question from Roger Gosniff MP (119197) last month (Hansard ref: 19 February 2007, column 233W).

Furthermore there is a draft National Statistics Geography Policy that wherever possible stable geographies should be used as the building blocks for National Statistics. Wherever possible 'exact' outputs should be produced and published first for these core geographies. Outputs for other areas, including parliamentary constituencies, will continue to be released as long as they are required. These will be created either from the source data or via best fitting or estimation from the core units. Hence in principle it should be possible to provide the range of statistics that are currently available for existing parliamentary constituencies.

A boundary commission report detailing the proposed new parliamentary constituencies was laid before parliament on 26 February 2007. There has not yet been a date set for the debates in the House of Commons and House of Lords to discuss and vote on these proposals.

When we know the details of the new constituencies the ONS and other government departments will start producing data for them as resources and work programmes allow.

Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide the key statistics for the proposed parliamentary constituencies of (a) Ealing Central and Acton and (b) Hammersmith Borough from the 2001 census data. [126443]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 March 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if we will provide key statistics for the proposed parliamentary constituencies of (a) Baling Central and Acton and (b) Hammersmith Borough from the 2001 Census data. (126443)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) is currently reviewing the most appropriate manner in which 2001 Census data could be provided for revised constituencies for the UK Parliament in both England and Wales once the boundaries for England are finalised.

The amount of data produced from the 2001 Census for the revised constituencies, and the timing of its release, will depend on available resources and the priority of other Census outputs.

Tax Evasion

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the differences between the tax and duties which should have been paid and those which were paid in 2005-06. [126236]

John Healey: There are no reliable estimates for the difference between the total tax and duties that should have been paid and the amount actually paid in 2005-06.

However, estimates of revenue losses in indirect taxes are available and are reported in "Measuring Indirect Tax Losses—2006", which is published alongside the PBR and can be found in the House of Commons Library.

Taxation: Aviation

Natascha Engel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the merits of exempting charities from the requirement to pay air passenger duty. [126544]

John Healey: Air passenger duty increased on 1 February in recognition of the environmental costs of air travel. This will deliver carbon savings of around 0.3MtC a year by 2010-11, or around 0.75MtC per year by 2010-11 when the effect of non-carbon dioxide emissions at high altitude is taken into account.

The Government are committed to supporting charities and the third sector through a range of tax reliefs and other measures. In 2005-06, tax reliefs for the charitable sector were worth in excess of £2.5 billion.

Given the level of support already extended to charities through the tax system and the administrative structure of air passenger duty the Government does not currently believe that an air passenger duty exemption would be appropriate.

The Chancellor keeps all taxation policy under review, and considers all relevant economic, social and environmental factors in deciding future policy.

Tobacco: Smuggling

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of lost revenue to his Department due to tobacco smuggling from other EU states. [126240]

John Healey: It is not possible to estimate the level of tobacco smuggling solely from other EU states. Estimates are only produced on the revenue loss from smuggling originating from within and outside of the EU combined.

The estimated revenue loss to the Exchequer (duty plus VAT) on cigarettes and hand rolling tobacco due to fraud, smuggling and counterfeiting for 2000-01 to 2004-05 is reported in "Measuring Indirect Tax Losses—2006" published by HMRC in December 2006 and is available in the House of Commons Library.

HEALTH

Breast Feeding

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of women who breastfed their babies for the first six months in each year since 1995. [126156]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The national infant feeding survey conducted every five years provides information on the percentage of women breastfeeding their babies for the first six months. Both the 1995 and 2000 survey showed that 22 per cent. of the women breastfed their babies for the first six months in England and Wales as compared to 21 per cent. in the United Kingdom. Figures for the prevalence of breastfeeding each year are not available.

The results of the national infant feeding survey 2005 are expected to be published in summer 2007.

Cancer: Drugs

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ask the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to undertake an appraisal of the kidney cancer drugs (a) Sutent and (b) Nexavar; what responsibilities primary care trusts have to make these drugs available to patients; and if she will make a statement. [125213]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 5 March 2007]: The Department has asked the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) to consult on the remit and scope for an appraisal of Nexavar for the treatment of renal cell carcinoma. A final decision on referral of this topic to NICE will be made in April 2007. The Department is currently considering referring Sutent to NICE for appraisal.

In December 2006, the Department issued good practice guidance to the national health service on the managed introduction of new technologies. The guidance updates and clarifies the messages in an earlier Health Service Circular 1999/176 and makes clear to NHS organisations that they should not refuse to fund a treatment simply because NICE guidance does not yet exist. Until NICE has issued final guidance on a treatment, NHS bodies should continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies, taking account of the available evidence.

Cancer: Medical Treatments

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the financial impact on the NHS of positive National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) appraisals for medicines for (a) lung cancer, (b) breast cancer, (c) prostate cancer, (d) bowel cancer and (e) less common cancers in each year since NICE was established. [123646]

Caroline Flint: Each technology appraisal published by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) contains an estimate of the cost to the national health service of its implementation. The table sets out NICE's published cost impact estimates for appraisals in the relevant topic areas, up to February 2007.

Cancer: Northern Region

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding (a) Cumbria primary care trust and (b) each other primary care trust in the north of England has been allocated for cancer treatment in 2006-07. [123257]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We do not hold information centrally on levels of local funding allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs) for cancer treatment. However around £3.4 billion was spent on cancer services in 2003-04 and this increased by 12 per cent. each year to around £3.8 billion in 2004-05, and £4.3 billion in 2005-06.

National health service funding is allocated to PCTs to meet the health needs of their local population, who in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders, determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for cancer services.

The following table shows the allocations to PCTs in the north of England for 2006-07.

Care Homes: Expenditure

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expenditure was of each London borough on (a) residential care homes and (b) nursing homes for the elderly in each of the last five years. [125620]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on the gross current expenditure for residential care by type of care for people aged 65 and over by each London borough for the years 2001-02 to 2005-06 has been placed in the Library.

Care Homes: Finance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of care home residents have their care (a) partially and (b) fully funded by (i) local authorities and (ii) primary care trusts. [126546]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As at 31 March 2006, there were 259,000 supported care home residents funded fully or in part by councils with social services responsibilities (CSSRs)[1]. Information on the total numbers of care and nursing home residents, including those funding the entire cost of their care, is not collected centrally.

Information on the number of residents whose care is funded fully or in part by primary care trusts (PCTs) is not collected centrally. However, at 31 March 2006, 117,939 people[2] in England were in receipt of national health service funded nursing care, which is funded by PCTs.

At 31 March 2006, 25,008 people were in receipt of NHS funded continuing care and therefore have their care costs met in full by the NHS.

[1] Source—Information Centre on health and social care.

[2] Some of this number will be included in the 259,000 whose care is partly or fully funded by CSSRs.

Cervical Cancer: Screening

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women in (a) England, (b) each strategic health authority and (c) each primary care trust (i) were called for and (ii) attended cervical screening in each of the last five years, broken down by age. [124396]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The uptake of national health service cervical screening programme invitations is not collected nationally and comparing the number of women invited with the number of women screened would not give an accurate account of uptake of invitations, as the figures for the number of women screened also include self and general practitioner referral (for example, those not invited by the screening programme). Because of this we have provided five-year coverage figures, which has been placed in the Library.

Coverage is the standard calculation used to compare primary care trusts (PCTs) and strategic health authorities (SHAs). The coverage of the screening programme is the proportion of women resident and eligible who have had a test with a recorded result at least once in the previous five years.

2001-02 data are not available for PCTs and SHAs due to their formation in 2002. For this reason 2001-02 data are at England level.

Cervical Cancer: Vaccination

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will direct the Joint Committee on Vaccinations to meet to consider recommendations from its sub-group on Gardasil to ensure that the vaccine is rolled out during 2007-08. [124397]

Caroline Flint: The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) human papilloma virus (HPV) subgroup met on 28 February to review the available information on the protective effect of the vaccine against cervical cancer, and the safety of HPV vaccines. Further work is ongoing to evaluate whether the vaccine is considered to be a cost-effective prevention of cervical cancer; and the impact that HPV vaccine may have on genital warts.

The sub group's advice will be reported to the main JCVI committee for further discussion. No decisions will be taken on introducing these vaccines into the immunisation programme until the main JCVI present their advice to Ministers for their consideration.

Childbirth: Durham

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) underweight and (b) premature babies were born in (i) County Durham and (ii) the City of Durham in the last year for which figures are available; and how many in each category were born in 1997. [126174]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not held centrally.

Community Nurses: Shropshire

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) district and (b) community nurses have been employed by Shropshire primary care trust in each year since 1997. [123052]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available in the format requested. The table shows qualified community nursing staff by level in the Shropshire primary care trust as at 30 September for each specified year.

Contraceptives

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department expects to publish the findings of the Contraceptive Services Audit; and if she will make a statement on the findings of the audit. [124454]

Caroline Flint: The findings of the Baseline Review of Contraceptive Services 2005 (Contraceptive Services Audit) will be published shortly and we are developing best practice guidance on reproductive healthcare which will address the key issues arising from the review.

Dementia: Medical Treatments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department recommends anti-cholinisterease inhibitors for the treatment of people with dementia displaying challenging behaviour symptoms. [126452]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence clinical guideline states that anti-cholinesterase inhibitors are recommended as options in the management of people with Alzheimer's disease of moderate severity only.

It also recommends that people with dementia who develop non-cognitive symptoms or behaviour that challenges should be offered a pharmacological intervention in the first instance only if they are severely distressed or there is an immediate risk of harm to the person or others.

Dental Services

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients accessed primary care dental services in each quarter since the quarter ending June 2004 (a) in England and (b) broken down by primary care trust area. [123140]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on patients accessing national health service dental services is not held centrally for each quarter and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Information on patients seen in the last 24 months is published quarterly and has been placed in the Library, at England, strategic health authority and primary care trust level. This statistic has been published since March 2006.

Data for the new primary care trusts will be published on 23 March 2007.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what total patient charge revenue income her Department expects each primary care trust to receive in 2006-07 through the delivery of primary dental services. [124938]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A table listing the primary dental service resource allocations for 2006-07 for all primary care trusts (PCTs) in England as at 31 July 2006 is available in the Library. This sets out the net allocations awarded to PCTs and the assumed gross budgets based on illustrative assumptions about levels of patient charge income for each PCT. Strategic health authorities agreed with their PCTs locally how these allocations would be redistributed within the new PCT areas that took effect from 1 October 2006.

A number of factors may affect the actual levels of patient charge income in a financial year, including the annual number of units of dental activity commissioned by PCTs, the time needed for new dental services to be commissioned and to come into operation, the timeliness of the reports submitted by dentists on completed courses of treatment, changes in the mix of charge-paying and charge-exempt patients treated, and the incidence of certain charge-free courses of treatment for patients who would normally pay charges.

Departments: Missing Persons

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions and on what dates her Department has been represented at a meeting of the Missing Persons Strategic Oversight Group since May 2004. [124096]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 28 February 2007]: The establishment of the Missing Persons Strategic Oversight Group (SOG) was recommended by the 2005 Perry Nove Review on the Police National Missing Persons Bureau. This review proposed the establishment of a permanent oversight group drawn from statutory bodies and the voluntary sector. The SOG has met twice: firstly, on 22 March 2006 and, secondly on 6 November 2006.

The Department and the Department for Education and Skills attended the second of these meetings. The Home Office has been represented at both meetings. In addition to SOG meetings, all three Departments have ongoing bilateral contact with other stakeholders represented on the SOG.

Departments: Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for which future projects her Department is considering a private finance initiative deal; what the estimated lifetime value of each potential contract is; and what period each will cover. [125185]

Andy Burnham: The following private finance initiative schemes are awaiting a formal review by the Department as part of the reappraisal process.

PFI scheme	Pre-review estimated capital value (£ million)
Hillingdon Hospital	338
Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital	144
North West London Hospitals—Northwick Park	305
Southend Hospital	100
Taunton and Somerset	79
Papworth Hospitals	148
Sandwell and West Birmingham Hospitals—2010	500
West Hertfordshire Hospitals	330
East and North Hertfordshire	350
Southampton University Hospitals	69
Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen University Hospitals	500
Royal Liverpool Children's Hospital	300
Leeds Teaching Hospitals—Children's	260
Heatherwood and Wexham Park Hospitals	200
United Bristol Healthcare	104
Mersey Care	170
Royal Wolverhampton Hospitals	317

As the schemes yet to be reviewed are at a very early stage in the procurement process, it is not yet possible to estimate the likely annual payment and therefore total sum payable of the lifetime of the contract. Under the national health service standard form contract (introduced in 1999) the standard contract length exclusive of build period is 30 years, although this can be varied on a case-by-case basis subject to the agreement of the Department.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of her Department's budget was taken up by private finance initiative commitments in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; and if she will make a statement; [125196]

(2) what percentage of her Department's budget will be taken up by public finance initiative commitments in each of the next 10 years, assuming that the budget grows in line with the Treasury's estimates for gross domestic product over the period; and if she will make a statement. [125197]

Andy Burnham: The first private finance initiative (PFI) scheme become operational in 2000. There are therefore no payments prior to this date.

Revenue figures are not available beyond 2007-08 as the Department has not yet entered into its Comprehensive Spending Review with HM Treasury. It is therefore not possible to forecast annual payments under PFI as a percentage of overall revenue expenditure.

The information is detailed in the following table.

		Net NHS revenue expenditure (£ million)	Aggregated payments under PFI (£ million)	PFI payments as a percentage of overall NHS revenue expenditure
2000-01	Outturn	42,686	59	0.14

Departments: Royal Visits

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will place in the Library copies of the (a) agenda and (b) minutes of the meeting on 24 February 2003 between HRH the Prince of Wales and the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department of Health; [126663]

(2) what the (a) purpose and (b) outcomes were of the meeting on 24 February 2003 between HRH the Prince of Wales and the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department of Health. [126664]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 9 March 2007]: A meeting was held on 24 February 2003 between HRH the Prince of Wales and the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, for Health (Lord Hunt of Kings Heath).

Departments: Smith Institute

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money from the public purse (a) her Department and (b) its agencies gave to (i) the Smith Institute and (ii) its subsidiary SI Events Limited in each year since 1997; and for what purpose each payment was made. [123091]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has not paid either the Smith institute or SI Events Limited since 2002. Financial data for the years prior to this have been archived and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department's agencies have not made any payments to either organisation.

Emergent BioSolutions

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what payments from the public purse were made to Emergent BioSolutions in each of the last three years. [125938]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has made no payments to Emergent BioSolutions in the last three years.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was spent by each of her Department's executive agencies in each Government Office region in the most recent year for which figures are available; [116669]

(2) which of the executive agencies of her Department have regional offices outside London. [116724]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has two executive agencies. These are:

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA). The MHRA does not hold records of spend in each of the government regions. The MHRA have no regional offices outside London; and

The NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency (PASA). PASA does not hold records of spend in each of the government regions. PASA has three offices in Chester, Reading and Sheffield. The office in Reading is also the agency's head office. They are not regional offices as such but from where business is undertaken.

Folic Acid

John Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she has received from the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition regarding the compulsory fortification of flour with folic acid; and if she will make a statement. [124143]

Caroline Flint: in December 2006, the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition (SACN) recommended mandatory fortification of folic acid as the most effective way to reduce the risk of pregnancies affected by neural tube defects (NTD), providing voluntary fortification of food with folic acid is controlled and guidance is provided on the use of supplements containing folic acid.

The Food Standards Agency (FSA) is currently consulting on different options to improve the folate status of young women in order to reduce the number of NTD-affected pregnancies.

The FSA Board will consider SACN's recommendation and the responses from the public consultation in May 2007. It will then provide advice to Health Ministers regarding mandatory fortification of flour with folic acid.

General Practitioners: Finance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the effects of devolving budget responsibilities to GPs on the quality of patient care. [126736]

Andy Burnham: General practices have been devolved indicative budgets under practice-based commissioning (PBC). By December 2006, all primary care trusts had arrangements in place to support PBC, including providing indicative practice budgets. No full assessment has yet been made of the effects of PBC, but the Department has in place support to drive forward the practical implementation of PBC and a monitoring framework to assess the impact of PBC on patient care and service development.

Health Education: Carbon Monoxide

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to raise awareness of carbon monoxide poisoning; and if she will make a statement. [125858]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave my hon. Friend, the Member for Dudley, North (Mr. Austin) on 30 November 2006, Official Report, columns 911-12W.

The Department is committed to help prevent deaths caused by carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning and raise awareness of the dangers of CO poisoning. Specific recent actions to achieve this include publications to increase awareness of medical staff and the public.

In his January 2006 update, which is sent to all doctors registered with the General Medical Council in England, including hospital and A & E doctors, and copied to the devolved Administrations for information, the chief medical officer (CMO) provides advice to doctors on CO poisoning, which is available in the Library. CMO updates are also available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/LettersAndCirculars/CMOUpdate/CMOUpdateArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4126235&chk=y6qnQn

The Department has produced a public information leaflet "Indoor air pollution—Carbon monoxide. Risks to health and how to avoid them," distributed early in 2006 to all general practitioners surgeries in England, which provides information on the symptoms of CO poisoning, ways in which to prevent poisoning and the contact details of organisations and other Government Departments involved with the prevention of CO poisoning. This leaflet has been endorsed by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE), the Heating Equipment Testing and Approval Scheme, the Council for Registered Gas Installers (CORGI), the national voluntary organisation CO-Gas Safety, the Solid Fuel Association, and the national health service, and includes the CORGI emergency helpline. The leaflet, which is available in the Library, is also available free, from the Department's publication stores and on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidanceArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4123787&chk=sAoYSp

The Department has produced a booklet "Keep Warm Keep Well, a winter guide 2006-07", which among many subjects, contains useful advice on the maintenance of heating appliances and protection from CO poisoning, which is available in the Library. This has been widely distributed and is also available from the Department's publication stores and on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PolicyAndGuidance/HealthAndSocialCareTopics/HealthAndSocialCareArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4076849&chk=N3IuFO

The Department is also funding a national voluntary organisation, CO-Gas Safety, through the section 64 General Scheme of Grants, in its work in raising awareness about the dangers of carbon monoxide.

As part of the HSE's "Review of Domestic Gas Safety", a cross-Government group, which includes officials from my Department, has been set up to consolidate the valuable work that is being done, and to help further raise awareness, particularly through encouraging greater co-ordinated industry actions.

Health Services: Detention Centres

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what allowance is made in formula funding for the treatment of detainees in asylum detention centres. [127089]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 12 March 2007]: The weighted-capitation formula, used to inform revenue allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs), does not take specific account of detainees in Immigration Service removal centres. However, migration is taken account of within the population base used for revenue allocations. The population base is a combination of Office for National Statistics (ONS) populations and general practitioners lists. ONS add asylum seekers to their population estimates using data provided by the Home Office. All removal centres have primary healthcare provision on site. National health service services are only used, therefore, when detainees cannot be treated within the on-site Home Office funded primary care services.

Hearing Aids: Waiting Lists

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the waiting times for digital hearing aid (a) assessment and (b) fitting are in London, broken down by primary care trust. [123588]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The following table shows data on the waiting times for audiology assessments as at end of December 2006. The Department does not collect data on fitting of aids.

Department, DM01

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what target her Department has set for the length of time a patient should wait for a digital hearing aid to be fitted. [124648]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The national audiology framework "Improving Access to Audiology Services" in England, was published on 6 March 2007 and is available in the Library. It sets out clear guidance to the national health service on how to reduce waiting times and how to provide the additional 300,000 pathways that are needed in the run-up to December 2008 to make a maximum wait of 18 weeks from referral to treatment possible for all audiology referrals. It aims to mitigate the risk to 18-week delivery and create a sustainable service model for audiology for the long term.

The most complex audiology cases will be covered by the target of treatment within 18 weeks of referral by December 2008. And the remaining routine adult hearing loss cases should be assessed within six weeks by March 2008, in line with the diagnostic waiting time milestone on which local commissioning plans are based. It is also good practice for the subsequent hearing aid fitting to be carried out soon after or at the same time as assessment.

Home Births

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what targets the Government have set for home deliveries in (a) rural and (b) urban settings over the next five years; [126163]

(2) what plans she has to provide further support for those mothers who wish their babies to be delivered at home. [126164]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We cannot set targets for home births. It is for local primary care trusts and national health service trusts to determine the appropriate pattern of service provision locally, taking into account the choice and needs of local people.

The Government are committed to offering, by 2009, all women the choice of how and where they give birth, for example a birth at home, a birth supported by a midwife or a birth supported by a team of clinicians including a midwife and an obstetrician. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence is preparing guidelines on intrapartum care, due to be published in June 2007, which will include guidance on home births.

We will shortly be publishing a document on the delivery of the maternity commitments made in the manifesto and in "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say", which, when published, will focus on providing continuing support and safe maternity services for all women.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the maximum period of time is for which her Department permits primary care trusts to close beds on a temporary basis. [122537]

Andy Burnham: Decisions on whether to close beds permanently or otherwise are made locally.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health after what period of time her Department deems the temporary closure and removal of beds a permanent closure. [122558]

Andy Burnham: Decisions on whether to close beds permanently or otherwise are made locally.

Hospitals: Acute Beds

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute hospitals there are in England; how many beds there are in each; and which are (a) tertiary care centres, (b) specialist units and (c) district general hospitals. [125581]

Andy Burnham: The Department maintains no official definition of acute hospital and is aware of no body with the responsibility to define it.

Data on hospital beds are collected at trust, rather than hospital level. Further, the Department does not centrally collect whether beds are located in tertiary care centres, specialist units or district general hospitals.

A table which shows the average daily number of available hospital beds in 2005-06 (the latest year's data) for national health service organisations that provided acute beds has been placed in the Library.

Hospitals: Admissions

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary care trusts carried out public and patient consultation in accordance with section 11 of the Health and Social Care Act prior to introducing referral management schemes. [121924]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally. The use of referral management schemes is for local determination.

Hospitals: Construction

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what major hospital building projects were approved in each of the last five years, broken down by parliamentary constituency; and if she will make a statement. [124187]

Andy Burnham: The tables give details of hospital building projects with a capital value of over £58.7 million (the threshold conventionally used to denote a 'major' scheme at 2006-07 prices) which have had full business case approval or have been approved to proceed to the next stage following the private finance review.

Hospitals: Waiting Lists

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the waiting times milestones agreed with strategic health authorities referred to in the answer of 9 March 2006, Official Report, column 1777W, on waiting lists/times, remain in place; what percentage of those waiting for (a) out-patient appointments waiting longer than 11 weeks, (b) diagnostic tests waited longer than 13 weeks and (c) in-patient appointments waited longer than 20 weeks in the most recent period for which figures are available. [125034]

Andy Burnham: The data requested are shown in the table. The majority of those patients that are waiting over 13 weeks for a diagnostic test are waiting for audiology assessments, on which we published a framework for action on 6 March.

By December 2008, patients can expect a maximum wait of 18 weeks from general practitioner referral to the start of consultant-led treatment, with most patients treated much more quickly. The referral-to-treatment (RTT) milestones are: by March 2008, 85 per cent. within 18 weeks for admitted patients (whose treatment requires a stay in hospital) and 90 per cent. for non-admitted patients (whose treatment is completed without a hospital stay).

The framework of milestones for individual stages of treatment, agreed with strategic health authorities, remains in place and is central to the current planning round for 2007-08. Performance against the RTT milestones will take precedence over the individual stages of treatment.

Month end	Stage of treatment	Relevant milestone (weeks)	Total number waiting	Number waiting over milestone	Percentage waiting over milestone
December 2006	Diagnostic test	13	814,360	191,385	23.5
January 2007	Out-patient appointment	11	957,929	21,840	2.3
January 2007	In-patient admission	20	754,992	44,622	5.9

Injuries: Children

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she plans to take in response to the Audit Commission report on preventing unintentional injury to children; and if she will make a statement; [127297]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the potential contribution of a national roll-out of the injury minimisation programme pioneered at the John Radcliffe hospital in Oxford to the reduction of unintentional injury to children. [127299]

Caroline Flint: Preventing unintentional injury to children is a cross-Government and cross-disciplinary matter. The Department will consider the recommendations of the Audit Commission's report in partnership with other Government Departments. Specific injury minimisation programmes should be considered by local authorities and health care organisations when commissioning services.

London PCTs: Outstanding Loans

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many London primary care trusts (PCTs) have outstanding loans from her Department; and how much each such PCT has repaid to her Department in (a) principal and (b) interest payments in each year since 1997. [114174]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Primary care trusts (PCTs) do not have the legal powers to borrow from the Department or elsewhere.

Lung Cancer

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cancer centres in England participated in the recent national lung cancer audit; and what percentage of centres this represents. [122540]

Ms Rosie Winterton: 154 out of 200 eligible hospitals recently participated in the national lung cancer audit. It covered 77 per cent. of hospitals providing lung cancer services in England.

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration she has given to (a) mandating and (b) building into the commissioning process a requirement on NHS trusts to submit data to the national lung cancer audit. [122542]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Clinical Audit Support Programme (NCASP) is commissioned by the Healthcare Commission to manage national clinical audits including the national lung cancer audit (LUCADA). The Healthcare Commission is not currently planning to make participation in audits mandatory. However, the Healthcare Commission conducts an annual health check of national health service organisations and since 2005-06 has been using participation in national clinical audits as part of the health check for NHS trusts. The Healthcare Commission is currently considering whether to include measurement not only of participation in audits, but also of data completeness and quality in its annual health check.

The Department is currently developing a cancer reform strategy. In developing the strategy, the Department is specifically looking at how to strengthen commissioning of cancer services and how to improve the information available on clinical outcomes. Discussions are under way on improving clinical outcomes data including the use of comparative information such as that provided through the NCASP audits. We expect to publish the cancer reform strategy by the end of the year.

Maternity Services

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has taken steps to support the midwifery model being developed by the Independent Midwives Association. [122716]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine which models best suit the local needs of women and the midwifery work force. This process provides the means for addressing local needs within the health community including the provision of maternity services.

Ministers and officials have met with the Independent Midwives Association (IMA) over the past three years to discuss their proposal of a national health service community midwifery model. Following on from these discussions, the IMA has identified a group of midwives and PCTs who are willing to test the model and help to create an outline contract. That process is continuing.

Medical Records

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how patients will opt out of having (a) their detailed patient record and (b) their summary patient record uploaded to the spine. [121951]

Caroline Flint: The spine is the colloquial name given to the national database of key information about patients' health and care which forms the core of the NHS care records service, and which, from later this year, will begin to hold summary care records. Detailed patient records are created, and can be held electronically, in a variety of national health service organisations, depending on where patients have received treatment. They are accessed locally, and will not, unlike summary records, be uploaded on to the spine.

It will be open to individuals to choose not to have a summary care record through discussion with their general practitioner (GP). General practices will be responsible for entering care records on the system, and by the time the summary care record is introduced in local areas general practitioners will have been provided with guidance on what they need to do to respond to requests. GPs will be advised to record and act on patient preferences.

We believe that holding summary care records on the spine will deliver very significant benefits for safety and the efficient management of NHS services, improving healthcare outcomes for millions whilst preventing thousands of unnecessary deaths. Inevitably patients whose record was not held on the spine, and who might need to be treated in the absence of knowledge of the information they contain, would not receive the same quality of care as others.

Midwives: Manpower

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the numbers of midwives needed by the NHS (a) now and (b) over the next five years. [126165]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for local planners with support from the workforce review team to determine their future requirement for midwives to meet local service needs.

The NHS operating framework for 2007-08, requires all national health service organisations to undertake a comprehensive review of their maternity services, including the workforce capacity, as preparation for the delivery of maternity commitments outlined in 'Our Health, Our Care, Our Say' by 2009.

Ministerial Visits

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which countries she visited on official business in 2006. [113424]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State visited the United States of America on official business on 1-3 November 2006. My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Health Services covers international and European business within her portfolio, and has undertaken several official visits throughout 2006.

Motor Neurone Disease

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she has consulted the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence on the evaluation of non-invasive ventilation treatment for motor neurone disease; [123522]

(2) if she will make a statement on the timetable for the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's investigation into non-invasive ventilation; and when she expects to publish the findings. [123523]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 26 February 2007]: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) considered non-invasive ventilation as part of its interventional procedures programme but concluded that this procedure fell outside the institute's remit on interventional procedures. Decisions on the use of non-invasive ventilation in motor neurone disease are most appropriately taken by individual patients and their clinicians.

National Media Evaluations

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library copies of her Department's national media coverage evaluations in each month since January 2006. [114999]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Since August 2005, the Department has published its media evaluation reports as part of the Department's wider commitment to freedom of information on its website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/FreedomOfInformation/ClassesOfInformation/CommunicationsResearch/fs/en

These reports are released every six months. Publication of the next set of national media evaluation reports covering January to June 2006 is scheduled for May and when this happens we will arrange for hard copies to be placed in the Library.

NHS Direct

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost was per call for dealing with calls to NHS Direct in the most recent period for which figures are available. [123152]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not held centrally.

NHS Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 16 January 2007, Official Report, columns 1086-7W, on NHS Finance, whether the full budget for commissioning specialised services transferred from her Department to the NHS will be ring-fenced. [112561]

Andy Burnham: The budget for nationally commissioned healthcare services transferring from the Department to the national health service in 2007-08 will not be ring-fenced. NHS London will host the services on the principle that it will bear no financial risk or benefit. The budget will be transferred from the Department to primary care trusts (PCTs) pro rata to weighted capitation targets and then transferred immediately on the same basis to NHS London. Any variation from budget will be managed through in-year transfers between NHS London and PCTs.

NHS Foundation Trusts

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 20 February 2007, Official Report, columns 672-73W, on NHS foundation trusts, what proportion of residents in foundation trust catchment areas are members of foundation trusts. [124536]

Andy Burnham: Information relating to the proportion of residents who are members of foundation trusts is not held by Monitor (the statutory name of which is the independent regulator of NHS foundation trusts) or the Department.

I am advised by the chairman of Monitor that as part of their annual plan submissions to Monitor, national health service foundation trusts are required to report on their plans for securing representative membership. The plans for the 2006-07 financial year are available on Monitor's website at www.monitor-nhsft.gov.uk

As part of their 2007-08 annual plan submissions to Monitor, NHS foundation trusts will be required to include a more in-depth report on their membership, including an analysis of current membership of the public constituency and a comparison with eligible membership by age, ethnicity and socio-economic groupings. The 2007-08 annual plans are due to be considered by Monitor's board in July 2007, following which they will be published on Monitor's website.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS hospital trusts are applying for foundation trust status. [126119]

Andy Burnham: The Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 provides that an national health service trust may make an application to Monitor (the statutory name of which is the independent regulator of NHS foundation trusts) for consideration for authorisation as an NHS foundation trust (NHSFT), if the application is supported by the Secretary of State.

I am advised by the chairman of Monitor that it is currently considering 27 applications from NHS trusts for NHSFT status. Of the 27, nine applications have been deferred from earlier waves, either at the request of the trusts themselves, or by Monitor's board. Applications cannot normally be deferred for a period of more than one year. The remaining 18 trusts received Secretary of State support in December 2006 to go forward to Monitor for potential authorisation from spring 2007 onwards.

A further 12 trusts are preparing to submit an application for NHSFT status to Monitor in 2007. Subject to receiving Secretary of State's support, these trusts will apply to Monitor to be considered for authorisation from summer 2007. Further waves are set to follow.

A list is provided in the following table:

NHS: ICT

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations her Department has received on the choose and book system; and if she will make a statement. [122823]

Andy Burnham: No recent formal representations on the choose and book system have been received.

With the benefit of choose and book, general practitioners and other care staff are able to book initial hospital appointments at a time, date and place which is convenient for their patients. By giving patients choice and placing them in control of their booking, choose and book has been shown to halve the number of did not attends, saving millions of pounds in nursing and clinical time.

97 per cent. of general practices are now able to make electronic bookings. Most bookings are made in under a minute. Currently, over 16,000 bookings are being made every day, and in excess of 2.5 million bookings have been made in total to date.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much has been spent on the choose and book IT system in Bedfordshire; and if she will make a statement; [122824]

(2) how much IT consultants and contractors have received for work undertaken to implement the choose and book IT system in Bedfordshire; and if she will make a statement. [122826]

Andy Burnham: The choose and book computer system is a core component of the national programme for information technology being delivered by the Department's NHS Connecting for Health agency. Expenditure on system development, along with ongoing service payments and volume charges, is incurred centrally under a national contract.

Information is not held centrally on payments made by national health service organisations locally to information technology consultants and contractors.

NHS: Religion

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the guidance being developed by NHS Employers on dress codes and religion or belief. [125422]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 5 March 2007]: After discussion with the Department and national health service trusts, NHS Employers has decided that given that each trust comprises a work force unique to it, reflecting its local communities, national guidance is inappropriate and the way forward is to share best practice where like trusts can learn from each other.

NHS Trusts have indicated to NHS Employers that they would like access to evidence and best practice from other parts of the NHS so that they can learn from others when developing their own local dress code policies. NHS Employers is currently pulling together a number of good practice examples, which it will make available on its website.

Organs: Donors

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have registered to donate their organs in each year since figures were first available. [125577]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of individuals on the NHS Organ Donor Register is shown in the following table:

Number on the NHS Organ Donor Register each year

	Added in year	Million Total at end
1994	0.14	0.14
1995	2.21	2.35
1996	1.39	3.74
1997	0.92	4.66
1998	0.87	5.53
1999	1.51	7.04
2000	1.23	8.27
2001	0.74	9.01
2002	1.08	10.09
2003	0.87	10.96
2004	0.96	11.92
2005	1.01	12.93
2006	1.04	13.97

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was for people on the organ transplant list to receive a donation in each year since 1997. [125578]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Median time waited (in days) on the active list to transplant in the United Kingdom, by year of transplant and transplant type, is shown in the following table:

	Kidney[1]	Heart[2]	Lung(s)	Liver[2]
1997	278	77	152	46
1998	339	78	242	42
1999	370	104	146	64
2000	390	128	165	36
2001	426	43	203	47
2002	425	40	311	66
2003	433	51	226	52
2004	464	33	145	69
2005	468	41	186	87
2006	809	66	200	108

[1] Living donor transplant cases excluded
[2] Urgent cases excluded

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are waiting for organ transplants; and how many people are registered to donate organs. [125579]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number listed actively for an organ transplant in the United Kingdom as at 4 March 2007 is shown in the table.

Organ	Active list
Kidney	6,271
Pancreas	64
Kidney/pancreas	155
Heart	95
Lung(s)	264
Heart/lungs	29
Liver	316
Total	7,194

• At 4 March 2007 there were 14.13 million people registered on the NHS Organ Donor Register.

Osteoporosis

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what provision has been made for the allocation of Government funding towards osteoporosis treatment to remain ring-fenced; [127468]

(2) how much her Department allocated for expenditure on the treatment of osteoporosis in 2005-06; and how much was spent. [127469]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not hold data which link treatment to disease. Because of the number of different diagnostic and treatment episodes a patient with osteoporosis and any concurrent condition may undergo, the Department cannot record spending on an individual illness or condition.

The capital provision of £17 million to improve national health service capacity in dual X-ray absorptiometer (DXA) scanning provision in the diagnosis of osteoporosis has been included in strategic health authorities' (SHA) strategic capital allocation and is not ring-fenced. Whilst the Department does not monitor how SHA strategic capital is spent, it has been clear in its expectations that this funding is spent exclusively on DXA provision. In May 2006, the national director for older people, Professor Ian Philp, wrote to SHAs to highlight the importance of DXA scanning in delivering the relevant elements of the national service framework for older people.

Palliative Care: Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress she has made towards meeting the commitment contained within the Labour party 2005 election manifesto to double spending on palliative care services. [123064]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Ministers have charged Professor Mike Richards, the national cancer director, with support from all other national clinical directors, to develop an end of life care strategy for adults. The strategy will deliver increased choice to all adult patients regardless of their condition about where they live and die, and, within available resources, provide them with support to make this possible. The strategy will help deliver the Government's manifesto commitment and the commitments in the White Paper "Our health, our care, our say".

Pregnant Women: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pregnant women in Lancashire were diagnosed with a mental illness (a) during pregnancy and (b) in the year after their pregnancy in each of the last 10 years. [125672]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally. The Department does not collect information about diagnoses in primary care, so information about the number of people with a mental illness, and who are treated in primary care, is not available at primary care trust, county or national levels.

However, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence issued clinical guidance note CG45 on 28 February 2007 about treating antenatal and postnatal mental health and is available on its website at www.nice.org.uk. This estimates that one in seven women experience a mental health problem in the antenatal (during pregnancy) and postnatal (first year after giving birth) periods.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary care trusts there were as at 1 January 2007. [126735]

Andy Burnham: On 1 January 2007 there were 152 primary care trusts.

Ritalin

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings she has had with Novartis to discuss the use of the drug Ritalin. [112649]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State has not met with representatives of Novartis to discuss the use of the drug Ritalin.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases: Vaccination

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ensure that the recommendations of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation on a human papilloma virus national immunisation programme are implemented within the school year 2007-08. [124115]

Caroline Flint: The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) human papilloma virus (HPV) subgroup met on 28 February to review the available information on the protective effect of the vaccine against cervical cancer, and the safety of HPV vaccines. Further work is ongoing to evaluate whether the vaccine is considered to be a cost-effective prevention of cervical cancer; and the impact that HPV vaccine may have on genital warts.

The subgroup's advice will be reported to the main JCVI committee for further discussion. No decisions will be taken on introducing these vaccines into the immunisation programme until the main JCVI present their advice to Ministers for their consideration.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the potential impact on NHS spending of a national human papilloma virus types 6, 11, 16 and 18 immunisation programme for (a) 12-year-old girls, (b) 12 to 16-year-old girls and (c) 12 to 16-year-old girls and boys. [124121]

Caroline Flint: This work is currently being undertaken for the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation's consideration.

Smoking: Television

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent assessment her Department has made of the impact of people smoking on television and in films on young people's decision on whether or not to start smoking; and if she will make a statement; [125008]

(2) what steps her Department is taking to ensure that smoking is not encouraged by its depiction in television programmes and films; and if she will make a statement. [125009]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not made a recent assessment of the impact of people smoking on television and in films on young people's decision on whether or not to start smoking.

The Government have taken steps to reduce the impact of smoking on young people. The glamorising of tobacco products through advertising, promotion and sponsorship as well as through their depiction in the media has been shown to be linked to increased smoking rates. The Tobacco Advertising and Promotion Act 2002 provides a comprehensive ban on advertising promotion and sponsorship of tobacco products.

The Office of Communications code covers the portrayal of smoking in television programmes. This code specifically requires that the portrayal of smoking should not be featured in children's programmes, and included only when there is a strong editorial case for inclusion. In other programmes likely to be widely seen by young people, smoking should be included only where context or dramatic veracity requires it. In such programmes, smoking should not be prominently featured as a normal and attractive activity.

In films, the independent British Board of Film Classification (BBFC) undertook a public consultation exercise to update its guidelines on granting classifications for films which can be seen by children. The public expressed some concern at the depiction of smoking in films. The BBFC issued updated guidelines in 2005, which included the following:

> No work taken as a whole may promote or encourage the use of illegal drugs. Any detailed portrayal of drug use likely to promote or glamorise the activity may be cut. Works which promote or glamorise smoking, alcohol abuse or substance misuse may also be a concern, particularly at the junior categories.

The BBFC apply these guidelines to cinema films, as well as videos and computer games.

Waiting Lists: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting times in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex for treatment in (i) ear, nose and throat, (ii) general surgery, (iii) gynaecology, (iv) orthopaedics, (v) rheumatology, (vi) urology and (vii) pain relief specialities were in the last period for which figures are available. [125490]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is only available at primary care trust (PCT) level. The following tables detail the latest figures for average waiting times for the specialities requested for PCTs in East Sussex, based on the wait between consultant decision to admit and in-patient admission.

Commissioner based in-patient median waiting times for East Sussex Downs and Weald PCT and Hastings and Rother PCT, end of December 2006

	East Sussex Downs and Weald PCT		Hastings and Rother PCT
Specialty	Total number waiting	Median waiting time (weeks)	Total number waiting	Median waiting time (weeks)
General surgery	667	8.2	236	7.3
Urology	296	8.1	61	n/a
Ear, nose and throat	575	10.0	173	9.5
Anaesthetics	50	n/a	12	n/a
Rheumatology	2	n/a	0	n/a
Gynaecology	311	8.5	164	11.6

Commissioner based in-patient median waiting times for East Sussex Downs and Weald PCT and Hastings and Rother PCT, end of January 2007

Specialty—trauma and orthopaedics	Total number waiting	Median waiting time (weeks)
East Sussex Downs and Weald PCT	1,540	10.7
Hastings and Rother PCT	1,000	12.3

Notes:
1. East Sussex, Downs and Weald PCT is a merger between Eastbourne Downs PCT and Sussex Downs and Weald PCT (due to the recent PCT restructuring that took place in October 2006). In addition, Hastings and Rother PCT is a merger between Bexhill and Rother PCT and Hastings and St. Leonards PCT.
2. Medians are not provided for specialties with a total waiting list of less than 100 because this population is too small for a statistically meaningful median to be calculated.
3. Pain management data are collected as part of the anaesthetic specialty, and Orthopaedics is part of trauma and orthopaedics. It is not possible to break these down into constituent parts.
4. Data by specialty are collected on a quarterly basis apart from trauma and orthopaedics, which are collected monthly.

Welfare Foods

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that those administering the welfare food scheme healthy start take the necessary steps to confirm the registration of the Wick Family Centre, formerly the Amherst Playgroup, account number 1845674. [127457]

Caroline Flint: Both the Amhurst Family Centre and Wick Family Centre are registered for the welfare food scheme. Amhurst Family Centre was registered in 2004 as supplier number 1845674. Wick Family Centre was registered in April 2006 as supplier number 1972054.

Responsibility for registering and paying day care providers for provision of free milk through the welfare food scheme moved to a new contractor on 1 December 2006. Any day care provider wishing to discuss issues relating to their registration can contact the new Welfare Food Reimbursement Unit helpline on 08707 20 30 63.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Trafficked Women

23. Mr. Bone: To ask the Solicitor-General what guidance he has issued to the Crown Prosecution Service on the provision of witness protection for women trafficked into the UK for the purpose of sexual exploitation. [127494]

The Solicitor-General: Guidance issued to Crown prosecutors on how to support and protect trafficked victims at court includes applications for special measures, applying for reporting restrictions to protect victims' identities and applying for the use of live evidence to be given from abroad.

Out of court process, where there are concerns over safety, a police risk assessment for protection can include mechanisms such as panic alarms, telephone links to the police station or re-location.

Law Officers

24. David Taylor: To ask the Solicitor-General what measures are in place to assess the Law Officers' maintenance of the public interest in dispensing legal advice to the Government. [127496]

The Solicitor-General: In fulfilling their role as the Government's chief legal advisers, the Law Officers give frank, impartial advice based on their own professional judgment. The Law Officers are answerable to Parliament and the courts for their advice. It is clearly in the public interest for the Government to receive such advice in order to ensure that their actions are legally sound and in accordance with the rule of law.

Soldier Prosecutions

25. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Solicitor-General on which occasions since 1997 he received correspondence from the Secretary of State for Defence on prosecution of soldiers for war crimes or serious offences while on operations. [127497]

The Solicitor-General: Correspondence from the Secretary of State for Defence to this office on prosecution of soldiers for war crimes or serious offences while on operations is not centrally recorded and to retrieve this information would incur disproportionate cost.

Fraud

Ms Butler: To ask the Solicitor-General what proposals he has for the prevention and prosecution of fraud. [127495]

The Solicitor-General: The Government have today published a response to the public consultation on the Fraud Review. The review identified that in many cases fraud is a preventable offence. The National Fraud Strategic Authority will have as one of its aims to raise awareness among the public and to promote best practice in fraud detection and prevention.

The Fraud Review also made a number of recommendations designed to facilitate the prosecution of fraud offences. These included: the establishment of a financial court jurisdiction; specialist training for judges; extended sentencing powers for the Crown court; and the introduction of a framework for a plea negotiations. We will be establishing a study to consider the detailed costs and benefits of introducing a financial court jurisdiction. We are also establishing a working party to look at the issue of plea bargaining.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Departments: Databases

Mr. Clegg: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what databases are controlled by the House authorities; and what percentage of the data in each database is estimated to be inaccurate or out of date. [124042]

Nick Harvey: The Parliamentary ICT service (PICT) supports around 146 live databases across both Houses of Parliament. This includes corporate applications (in areas such as finance, HR, procurement, catering and facilities management), procedural applications (covering the legislative, scrutiny and debate functions of Parliament) and knowledge applications (covering the research and public information functions).

The number given does not include locally-based databases, simple Access databases or test, back-up and development databases. Individual Departments and offices are responsible for data quality and they put appropriate measures in place to manage the quality of data and their being kept up to date.

Portcullis House

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what progress has been made on improving signage in Portcullis House. [126936]

Nick Harvey: The Parliamentary Estates Directorate is in the process of appointing the consultant architect to carry out the next phase of work and to liaise with the architects of Portcullis House, Hopkins and Partners.

The existing signage on the 1st floor of Portcullis House has been surveyed to assess its problems and a brief has been formulated for the consultant architects to work to.

The programme of works to install new signage is scheduled to be undertaken during the 2007-08 financial year.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Members' Constituency Work

Mr. Gale: To ask the Leader of the House if he will bring forward proposals to bring hon. Members' correspondence relating to constituency case work under the ambit of Parliamentary proceedings for the purposes of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [127687]

Mr. Straw: The Government recognise the need for hon. Members' constituency work to be able to be conducted with appropriate confidentiality. The Government are considering the case for further guidance to public authorities as to how the exemptions should be applied in the case of hon. Members' constituency correspondence. As the hon. Member will be aware, the right hon. Member for Penrith and the Border (David Maclean) has brought forward a private Member's bill which would amend the Freedom of Information Act 2000 to create a single exemption to cover hon. Members' correspondence.

The Government will continue to listen to the views of hon. Members on the best way forward to ensure that constituency correspondence is given the necessary protection.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Cultural Heritage: Protection

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate her Department has made of the number of likely appeals resulting from changes in the heritage designation system. [127645]

Mr. Lammy: The proposed new designation system set out in the White Paper, "Heritage Protection for the 21st Century", will be more efficient, understandable and accessible, with improved information sharing, greater public involvement and new opportunities for consultation. We cannot give a firm estimate of the number of appeals as part of a system that has not yet been implemented. However, improved information sharing and consultation should reduce the need for appeal.

English Heritage: Finance

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate her Department has made of the resources required by English Heritage to carry out its responsibilities as proposed in the "Heritage Protection for the 21st Century" White Paper; and what resources will be provided by her Department to enable those responsibilities to be met. [127644]

Mr. Lammy: English Heritage has supplied DCMS with a detailed analysis of their likely costs to undertake their responsibilities as proposed in the White Paper "Heritage Protection for the 21st Century". Their analysis of these costs has been factored in to the DCMS submission as part of the current Spending Review process.

Historic Buildings: Official Visits

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many properties represented by the Historic Houses Association (a) she, (b) the Minister for Sport, (c) the Minister for Culture and (d) the Minister for Media and Tourism visited in an official capacity in each of the last five years. [127432]

Mr. Lammy: As Minister for Culture I have visited two properties represented by the Historic Houses Association (HHA) in an official capacity since I was appointed—Holkham Hall, Norfolk and Burghley House, Lincolnshire. I also attended the launch of the HHA's education service in 2006 and spoke at the 2006 annual general meeting. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Minister for Sport and my hon. Friend the Minister for Creative Industries and Tourism have not yet had the opportunity to visit any HHA properties in an official capacity. We do not have data for previous Ministers for visits to these properties in the last five years.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many properties (a) owned and (b) managed by the National Trust (i) she, (ii) the Minister for Sport, (iii) the Minister for Culture and (iv) the Minister for Media and Tourism visited in an official capacity in each of the last five years. [127433]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has visited the Stonehenge historic landscape, which is owned by the National Trust, in an official capacity. As Minister for Culture I have visited Tyntesfield, near Bristol, Woodchester Mansion, Stroud, where the park is owned by the Trust, and the new National Trust offices at Swindon. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Sport and my hon. Friend the Minister for Creative Industries and Tourism have not yet had the opportunity to make official visits to properties owned or managed by the Trust. We do not have data for previous Ministers for visits to these properties in the last five years.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many properties (a) owned and (b) managed by English Heritage (i) she, (ii) the Minister for Sport, (iii) the Minister for Culture and (iv) the Minister for Media and Tourism visited in an official capacity in each of the last five years. [127434]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Bath (Mr. Foster) on 1 February 2007, Official Report, column 418W.

Osborne House

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will make a statement on the future of Osborne House on the Isle of Wight; [127467]

(2) what steps she is taking to seek to repeal part of the Osborne Estate Act 1902 on the convalescent wing. [127560]

Mr. Lammy: We are exploring the options for repealing part of the Osborne Estate Act 1902, which will enable English Heritage to bring into use the wing previously used as a convalescent home.

Any proposals English Heritage develop will be subject to consultation with the local community, and will go through the usual planning procedures.

Sportsmatch

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what level of funding will be available to Sportsmatch over the next three years. [127696]

Mr. Caborn: Sport England provided £3.675 million in funding to Sportsmatch in 2006-07, and the same amount has been allocated for 2007-08.

Subsequent years' funding, as with all other funding allocations for my Department, are subject to the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many of the staff employed by Sportsmatch will continue to be employed under the new structure. [127697]

Mr. Caborn: Under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006 Sport England and the Institute for Sports Sponsorship are consulting with the seven Sportsmatch staff members with the working assumption that those seven members of staff will transfer over to Sport England on 1 April 2007.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the future of Sportsmatch. [127698]

Mr. Caborn: As announced on 13 February by Sport England, the Sportsmatch scheme will be managed by Sport England from 1 April 2007. The intention is to build on its past success, with a strengthened regional focus.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 30 January 2007, Official Report, column 1070-1W, on Afghanistan, how many undelivered urgent operational requirements since January 2006 related to helicopters; and if he will make a statement. [124602]

Mr. Ingram: Since the start of planning for deployment into southern Afghanistan 23 UORs related to theatre entry modifications to current helicopters in Afghanistan have been approved but not fully delivered to theatre. An initial operating capability has been delivered to theatre for eight of the 23. An additional 10 UORs have been approved and fully delivered. These figures are correct as at 1 March 2007.

Afghanistan: Army

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent estimate he has made of retention rates among the Afghan national army. [127156]

Mr. Ingram: Since 2001, the Afghan national army (ANA) training programme under a US lead has trained approximately 32,000 soldiers. Members of the ANA are required to re-enlist after an initial three-year contract and to date approximately 42 per cent. of personnel have re-enlisted at the three-year point. The US-led training mission has already identified measures designed to improve the level of re-enlistment, including asking NATO to deliver more mentoring teams to partner the ANA, and is establishing plans to implement a more sustainable force generation cycle.

Armed Forces: Children

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2007, Official Report, column 1161W, on armed forces: children, which internal welfare agencies are available to give support and assistance to children of service personnel killed or injured while on operations; and what funding they have received from his Department in the last five years. [126197]

Derek Twigg: Each of the services is responsible for the co-ordination of its own welfare organisations such as the Navy Personnel and Families Organisations, Army Welfare Organisation and the Royal Air Force Community Support. The support offered covers a wide remit and is provided by the chain of command as well as a host of dedicated welfare providers including contracted organisations such as the SSAFA (Forces Help), WRVS and Defence Medical Welfare Services.

Over the past five years approximately £123 million of funding has been provided to fund dedicated welfare support to the three services as a whole, which of course extends well beyond the support of children of personnel killed or injured on operations.

BAE Systems

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason a security pass was issued to BAE Systems executive Julian Scopes by his Department; when the security pass was originally issued; and to which premises Mr. Scopes is given access with this security pass. [126500]

Derek Twigg: Ministry of Defence security policy allows for establishment passes to be issued to contractors who make frequent visits to specific MOD sites to meet business requirements. In accordance with this policy, Mr. Scopes was issued with a contractor pass in December 2005. This pass, which expired on 31 December 2006, allowed him access to Main Building, the Old War Office and St. George's Court.

Bombs

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cluster bombs have been stockpiled by the UK, broken down by type. [127193]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to my answer on 10 October 2006, Official Report, column 656W, to the hon. Member for North Devon (Nick Harvey).

Bowman Combat Radio System

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what increments are planned for the Bowman communications system once initial conversion is completed. [126184]

Mr. Ingram: Following completion, currently expected in 2008, of the Bowman conversion and fielding programme, we envisage a periodic capability release programme providing both capability enhancements and maintenance. This programme will be informed by current validation work on the delivery of deferred capabilities.

Correspondence: Members

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Minister of State for the armed forces to reply to the letter of 31 January from the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan on his constituent, Mr. N. Thom of Mintlaw. [125587]

Derek Twigg: I wrote to the hon. Member on 6 March 2007.

Defence Export Services Organisation: Freedom of Information

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 23 February 2007, Official Report, column 960W, on the Defence Export Services Organisation: freedom of information, what the (a) brief fees and (b) refresher rates are for (i) Jonathan Crow QC and (ii) Kate Gallafent. [126499]

Mr. Ingram: Counsel are paid an hourly rate for all their work as follows:

Jonathan Crow: £220 per hour

Kate Gallafent: £100 per hour

Housing

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many formal complaints on the condition of military housing were made by residents in each of the last 10 years. [118943]

Derek Twigg: The figures given in the table represent all housing complaints received for the years from 2002 to 2006.

	Number
2002	409
2003	327
2004	485
2005	369
2006	740

Records of complaints for years prior to 2002 have been routinely destroyed.

The increase in complaints in 2006 is thought to reflect the introduction of the Housing Prime Contract and the initial problems with the service being delivered.

Iraq: Peace Keeping Operations

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all Mastiffs delivered to the Iraqi theatre of operations will be fitted with slatted armour. [127023]

Mr. Ingram: I will not comment on specific protection measures for reasons of operational security.

Lynx Helicopters

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Mark 3 and (b) Mark 8 Lynx helicopters are (i) in service, (ii) under repair and (iii) being cannibalised for parts; and if he will make a statement. [124597]

Mr. Ingram: On 1 March 2007, the details for the Royal Navy's Lynx helicopter fleet were as follows:

Helicopter type	Departmental fleet	In service	Under repair	Other
Lynx Mk 3	37	25	6	6
Lynx Mk 8	36	27	5	4

"In Service" aircraft are those in the Forward Fleet and available to the Front Line and training units. Aircraft "Under Repair" are those in the Depth Fleet which are undergoing planned routine depth maintenance. "Other" aircraft are those accident damaged and undergoing investigation with the Flight Safety Accident Investigation Centre, undergoing trials, awaiting disposal, or in storage.

One Lynx Mk 3 in storage is currently subject to controlled cannibalisation to support depth maintenance. Carefully managed and controlled cannibalisation is also carried out in the Forward Fleet as part of normal business to ensure the required number of aircraft are available to squadrons. These cannibalised aircraft are routinely returned to service when the necessary spare parts become available.

Navy: Deployment

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many warships are fully operational in the Royal Navy; and if he will make a statement. [126534]

Mr. Ingram: The Royal Navy has 74 surface warships in the operating cycle, though those undergoing maintenance or refit are held at lower readiness for operations. In my letter of 6 March to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis), I set out the readiness policy for Royal naval ships, and listed those ships that are at lower readiness. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Nimrod Aircraft

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the safety of Nimrod aircraft. [126482]

Mr. Ingram: RAF Nimrod aircraft are designed and certified to strict airworthiness and safety standards. The structural integrity of the aircraft is maintained by adherence to the procedures detailed within military airworthiness regulations. The review of airworthiness and safety of the Nimrod fleet is a routine and continual activity that is undertaken by both the Defence Logistics Organisation and the Front Line Command. It includes a comprehensive maintenance and repair process that covers routine flight servicing before and after each flight.

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times the Nimrod fleet has been grounded since September 2006. [126483]

Mr. Ingram: On 21 February 2007, after the discovery of dents in fuel lines, Nimrod MR2 flying was suspended as a precautionary measure. Aircraft were cleared to fly again after checks of the fuel lines proved satisfactory with the first serviceable aircraft operating on 24 February 2007.

Red Arrows

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at which air shows and other events the Red Arrows appeared in each of the last five years. [127005]

Satellites

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment his Department has made of the potential cost of UK armed forces taking part in the Blue Force Tracker programme; [126182]

(2) what funding he plans to allocate to the Blue Force Tracker programme being developed by the United States military. [126183]

Mr. Ingram: Free standing Blue Force tracking systems are available largely off the shelf using US based technology and are deployed on operations in Iraq and Afghanistan to supplement the initial capability provided by Bowman ComBAT (Common Battlefield Application Toolset), Infrastructure and Platform Battlefield Information System Application (CIP). In the longer term we are looking mainly to more advanced versions of Bowman CIP and to Tactical Data Links to provide positional information. The joint US-UK Coalition Blue Force Situational Awareness demonstrator is helping to develop ways of exchanging data between Bowman CIP and US Blue Force tracking systems. It is too early to say what the resource implications would be.

Aircraft: Air Conditioning

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received evidence of aircraft engine testing which has confirmed the presence of organophosphates in the engine bleed air. [127360]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 14 March 2007]: No. The Department for Transport (DFT) has asked the Department of Health (DH) to undertake an independent scientific review of data submitted by the British Airline Pilots Association (BALPA). BALPA submitted data relating to organophosphates, the cabin air environment, ill-health in aircraft crews and the possible relationship to smoke/fume events in aircraft. Consideration continues in the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT). The next meeting of the COT is on 20 March 2007. The relevant papers can be found on the internet at:

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by what procedures pilots should report any contaminated air events on a UK registered commercial aircraft. [127361]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 14 March 2007]: Pilots are required to report contaminated air events to the Civil Aviation Authority, where they meet the criteria for a Mandatory Occurrence Report. The definition of a reportable occurrence is contained in Article 142 of the Air Navigation Order.

In addition, airlines have their own reporting systems for non-mandatory occurrences for their pilots to follow.

Aviation: Air Pollution

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the carbon emissions produced by international air traffic movements using UK airspace without landing in the UK. [127530]

Gillian Merron: None. The information requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

East Coast Railway Line: Standards

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what performance targets he has set for GNER for the East Coast Main Line franchise; and what assessment he has made of performance against those targets since December 2006. [126216]

Mr. Tom Harris: Improving performance on the route is a key output in the current franchise, and continues to be so under the Management Agreement in place since December 2006. The key performance indicators to improving performance are reviewed and discussed at monthly Franchise Performance Meetings. GNER remains committed to improving both its reliability and punctuality on the route and is working with Network Rail to identify improvements. Other performance enhancements which are ongoing are:

re-engineering the diesel high speed train fleet

Implementation of a range of reliability improvements to its electric fleet

Motor Vehicles: Excise Duties

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport at what point after entering the UK vehicles being driven in the UK but registered abroad are required to have vehicle excise duty paid on their behalf. [125970]

Dr. Ladyman: Vehicles from a European Union member state may be used or kept in the UK for up to six months in any 12-month period without vehicle excise duty (VED) being due.

In accord with international rules in place since 1975, vehicles from outside the European Union may be used or kept in the UK for up to 12 months without VED being due. In order for vehicles to qualify for this exemption from paying VED, the vehicle must be properly registered and taxed in its home country.

Railways: Pennines

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what work has been undertaken to enhance capacity on Trans-Pennine rail routes since 1997. [125983]

Mr. Tom Harris: The First Transpennine Express (TPE) franchise commenced on 1 February 2004. Since that time, the franchise has delivered capacity improvements in excess of 18 per cent. Much of this was due to an increase from three trains/hour to four trains/hour over the core Leeds—Manchester section in December 2004, but the introduction of new Class 185 trains to the route, completed in January 2007, has brought further capacity benefits.

Roads: Accidents

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accident blackspots he has identified in (a) Taunton constituency and (b) Somerset; and what steps his Department has undertaken to reduce the number of accidents in those locations. [127464]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has made no assessment of accident cluster sites in either Taunton or Somerset. As the local highway authority, the duty to investigate accident cluster sites lies with Somerset county council.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road traffic accidents occurred in Taunton constituency in each year since 1996, broken down by the day of the week on which the accident occurred. [127465]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of reported personal injury road accidents in the parliamentary constituency of Taunton by day of the week in each year since 1996 is given in the following table:

Number of reported personal injury road accidents by day of the week : Constituency[1] of Taunton 1995-2005

	Day of week
	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday	Sunday	Total

Roads: Cambridge

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) total number of accidents, (b) average daily traffic flow and (c) accident rate per million vehicle kilometres was for the stretch of (i) the A14 between Girton and Cambridge, (ii) the A10 between Cambridge and Ely and (iii) the A1307 between Haverhill and Cambridge in 2006; and what each has been in 2007 to date. [127395]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested for 2006 will be available in summer 2007. Data for 2007 will be available in summer 2008.

Roads: Construction

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many kilometres of HGV lanes have been built or designated since 1997. [125992]

Dr. Ladyman: None.

Tolls: Greater London

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was paid by the Government Car and Despatch Agency in London congestion charges in each year since the scheme's inception; and if he will make a statement. [126914]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government Car and Despatch Agency paid the following in London congestion charges since the scheme's inception:

	Congestion charge (£)
2002-03	22,202.00
2003-04	179,465.50
2004-05	158,508.00
2005-06	146,846.20

The continuing reduction in the congestion charge paid in 2004-05 and 2005-06 reflects the Agency's decision to diversify its Government fleet to include Toyota Prius vehicles, which are currently exempt from the London congestion charge.

Wheelchairs: Pedestrian Areas

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies have been carried out on the risks associated with (a) motorised wheelchairs and (b) other pavement vehicles; what results were shown for Class 3 vehicles; and what representations have been made to his Department on this issue. [127700]

Gillian Merron: The Department has published a review of these vehicles, including research into the number of related incidents categorised by severity. The findings are available on the Department's website. We are currently reviewing this evidence in conjunction with the representations received on general use of such vehicles, which have included some on safe usage.

Wrexham-Bidston Railway Line

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research has been carried out into the extent of the potential for modal shift away from cars of the electrification of the Wrexham-Bidston railway line. [124327]

Mr. Tom Harris: I am aware that the Borderlands Rail Study commissioned by the Taith Consortium of North Wales local authorities, the Welsh Development Agency, Merseytravel and Cheshire county council assessed the economic case for investment in the Wrexham-Bidston line, including electrifying all or parts of it.

The benefits of reduced road congestion would be taken into account formally in the assessment which would be required from the promoters of any rail proposal seeking Government funding.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EC Energy Policy: Canada

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has made to ongoing energy discussions between the European Union and Canada; what matters of energy policy the Government plans to bring up at next month's EU-Canada summit; and if he will make a statement. [127341]

Malcolm Wicks: We are in regular contact with Canadian and EU colleagues about energy and climate security in the run up to the G8 Summit in Germany in June 2007, including the prospects for a post-2012 agreement on climate change.

The EU-Canada summit will take place on 4 June. An agenda for this meeting has not yet been set. We will, however, contribute fully to the dialogue at the appropriate time.

Financial Services: Advisory Services

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many independent financial advice practices went into administration in each year since 1997. [127524]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The official insolvency statistics published by the Insolvency Service include total numbers of company administrations in England and Wales sourced from Companies House. However, these are not available broken down by industry sector, so it is not possible to provide the figures for independent financial advice practices.

Post Office: Magazine Press

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost to the Post Office was of producing the Keeping You Posted magazine in the latest period for which figures are available; and what assessment he has made of the impact of the magazine. [127638]

Jim Fitzpatrick: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. Alan Cook the Managing Director has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Project Al Yamamah

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations have been received by his Department about the Al Yamamah military contract following the announcement that the Serious Fraud Office would end its investigation into the contract. [126927]

Malcolm Wicks: As with other Government Departments, including those with a more central role in this matter, the Department of Trade and Industry has received a number of communications about the decision of the Serious Fraud Office to discontinue its investigation in relation to the Al Yamamah programme.

Thames Water: Billing

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received regarding Thames Water's policies in respect of non-paying customers. [127238]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

DEFRA Ministers and officials regularly meet with key water industry stakeholders and have received representations on a range of water industry issues, including Thames Water's policy on customers in debt and non-payment of bills.

TREASURY

Arms Trade: Balkans

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) assault rifles and (b) machine guns were imported from (i) Bosnia and Herzegovina, (ii) Croatia and (iii) Serbia and Montenegro in each year since 2000; and if he will make a statement. [126385]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The information is not available in the format required.

Child Trust Fund

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what activities were recently undertaken as part of Child Trust Fund week; and what the cost was of each. [118713]

Ed Balls: As part of Child Trust Fund week, a number of activities were undertaken to help promote parents' engagement with the Child Trust Fund accounts set up in their children's names, and to encourage new parents to open the accounts themselves. These included a nationwide radio and parenting media advertising campaign at a cost of £234,000, the preparation and distribution of packs designed to help MPs promote the Child Trust Fund in their local regions at a cost of £30,000, and a campaign to promote editorial coverage in the national media at a cost of £31,000. All such expenditure is subject to the normal rules concerning Government communications expenditure, and is designed to ensure properly targeted communications and full value-for-money. All aforementioned costs are exclusive of VAT.

Departments: Knowledge Management

Justine Greening: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many knowledge managers are employed by his Department; what their total remuneration is; how many vacancies for knowledge manager positions there are in his Department; what the salary range is of posts which are vacant; and if he will make a statement; [127458]

(2) how much his Department spent on knowledge management in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; what the planned expenditure is in 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [127459]

John Healey: Knowledge management involves the improvement of organisational record-keeping, filing systems and processes, and is especially important in efficiently meeting the demands of the Freedom of Information Act and managing the transition to full electronic data storage and management. The Treasury currently employs three individuals on this type of work, one on a part-time basis, and is seeking to recruit a further two individuals. As advertised, the salary ranges for these posts are £40,039 to £48,589.

Departments: Ministerial Policy Advisors

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 1907W, on special advisers, to which film and television company his answer referred. [126595]

John Healey: The DVDs of film and television series were received from Warner Bros. Entertainment and subsequently donated to charity.

Departments: Pay

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the percentage wage increase will be for each grade of civil servant in his Department in the 2007-08 pay round. [126840]

John Healey: Pay Awards for the Senior Civil Service grades will be in line with the Review Body on Senior Salaries Report No. 63.

The pay award process for the delegated grades has not yet commenced.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Francois: To ask (1) the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost to date has been of maintaining the Treasury Euro Resource website, www.euro.gov.uk; [126746]

(2) what the cost to the public purse was of the Treasury Euro Resource, Euro Information, in each year since its inception. [126747]

Ed Balls: Information on the costs of starting up and maintaining the Treasury's euro website has been given in the answer of 25 July 2006 to the hon. Member for Wealden (Charles Hendry), Official Report, column 1351W, the answer of 24 June 2004 to the hon. Member for North-East Hertfordshire (Mr. Heald), Official Report, column 1471W, the answer of 8 March 2004 to the hon. Member for Truro and St. Austell (Matthew Taylor), Official Report, column 1275W, and the answer of 22 October 2002 to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable), Official Report, column 220W. The direct cost of maintaining the euro website in 2006-07 was £12,000.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost has been of the euro information centres in (a) Southampton, (b) Inverness, (c) Kent and (d) Birmingham since their establishment. [126909]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

An overall figure for the operating budgets of Euro Information Centres (EICs) since their establishment is not readily available, as they receive funding from a variety of sources, including charging for some of their services, and have been in operation for more than twenty years. To provide this information for the EICs in Southampton, Inverness, Kent and Birmingham could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Energy: Conservation

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which projects on energy efficiency in the public sector and increased access to the arts and culture have received funding under the Invest to Save-Inclusive Communities Budget since 4 April 2005; and how much each project received. [126869]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by the former Chief Secretary to the Treasury, my right hon. Friend the Member for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Des Browne) on 22 March 2006, Official Report, column 23WS.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce fiscal incentives to encourage households to introduce renewable energy and energy efficiency methods in their homes. [127142]

John Healey: All taxes are kept under review and any changes are announced by the Chancellor as part of the Budget process.

The Government recognise the importance of household energy efficiency and renewable energy technology and since 1997 has introduced a number of measures in support of these. These include reduced VAT rates for the installation of energy saving materials such as insulation, draught-proofing, heating controls and also for micro-generation-technologies powered by renewable and sustainable energy sources. In addition, the Landlords Energy Saving Allowance (LESA) was introduced in 2004 to improve energy efficiency in the private rented sector. Pre-Budget report 2006 announced extensions to the scope of LESA as well as a stamp duty exemption for the majority of new zero-carbon homes. The pre-Budget report also announced that Finance Bill 2007 would include legislation to ensure that individual householders installing micro-generation are not subject to income tax on any payment for surplus electricity exported back to the grid.

The Government remain committed to meeting environmental challenges and continue to look for ways to promote household energy efficiency and renewable technologies through a range of tax and other policy measures.

Financial Services: EC Law

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he expects the markets in financial instruments directive to be implemented in full in the United Kingdom by the deadline of November 2007. [127333]

Ed Balls: The UK was the only major member state to transpose the markets in financial instruments directive by 31 January 2007. This provides the maximum time available for industry and the FSA to prepare for implementation.

HM Revenue and Customs: Consultants

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what expenditure on external advice and consultancy was incurred by HM Revenue and Customs in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06; how much has been incurred in 2006-07; which consultants were engaged; and on what projects. [123358]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 27 February 2007]: The spend from HMRC consultancy budgets for the periods requested was published by the National Audit Office in their report on Central Government's Use of Consultants in December 2006 (HC 128). Figures for 2006-07 will be published in HMRC's departmental report this spring.

Information on which consultants were engaged is not readily available and we would incur disproportionate costs in carrying out this analysis. However, we can make available the results of earlier analysis which we have on file, showing the top 20 (top 10 for 2004-05) spend by consultancy firm. The information is as follows:

HM Revenue and Customs: Flights

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what total expenditure on flights by HM Revenue and Customs managers was with (a) British Airways and (b) BMI in each of the last two years. [112009]

Dawn Primarolo: Information relating to flights by HMRC managers cannot be disaggregated from the overall cost of flights booked through HMRC's official travel contractors.

International Monetary Fund

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the Public Information Notice produced following the International Monetary Fund's Article IV consultation with the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [127306]

Ed Balls: The UK Government strongly supports the IMF surveillance programme, and welcomes scrutiny of UK economic and financial policy.

The Public Information Notice, published alongside the Article IV Report, concluded that "macro-economic performance in the UK remains impressive". The Treasury will publish an updated assessment of economic and fiscal developments in the 2007 Budget on 21 March.

Leeds Castle Group

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cost has been since 2006 of attendance at the meetings of the Leeds Castle Group. [126818]

Dawn Primarolo: The combined cost to Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs of hosting the inaugural meeting of the Leeds Castle Group in January 2006 and attending the meeting hosted by Canada in January 2007 was £37,038.

Marginal Tax Rates

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table on the lines of Table 4.2 of the Pre-Budget Report showing the number of households facing Marginal Deduction Rates of (a) 68 per cent. and over, (b) 70 per cent. and over, (c) 80 per cent. and over, (d) 90 per cent. and over and (e) 100 per cent. and over using the same assumptions as in Table 4.2. [126834]

John Healey: Estimates of the numbers of families facing different marginal deduction rates will continue to be published in pre-Budget and Budget reports.

Michael Ellam

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what role Michael Ellam plays on the Treasury Board; and what day-to-day responsibilities he has. [126872]

John Healey: The role of the Treasury board is set out on the Treasury website at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/about/about_treasury_board.cfm.

On day-to-day responsibilities, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 18 October 2006, Official Report, column 1253W.

National Trust

Robert Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Director-General of the National Trust; and what was discussed. [119123]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers and officials have meetings with a wide variety of organisations in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings.

Personal Equity Plans

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he intends to undertake a regulatory impact assessment prior to the merger of Personal Equity Plans (PEPs) and Individual Savings Accounts (ISAs) in April 2008; and whether he has estimated likely changes to tax revenues resulting from the taxation of un-invested cash in PEPs after their conversion into ISAs. [127462]

Ed Balls: A partial regulatory impact assessment of a package of reforms to the ISA regime, including the proposal to bring PEPs within the ISA wrapper, was published in December 2006. The Government intend to publish a full regulatory impact assessment of this package of reforms when the implementing legislation is laid in the summer. It is estimated that the application of the ISA treatment to interest earned on all un-invested cash held in former PEPs will have only a negligible effect on revenues.

Smuggling: Tobacco

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets his Department has set in relation to tobacco smuggling. [127682]

John Healey [holding answer 14 March 2007]: The Department's targets in relation to tobacco smuggling are set out in the HMRC Annual Report 2005-06.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much (a) smuggled tobacco produce and (b) counterfeit tobacco produce was seized in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [127683]

John Healey: The amount of seized tobacco produce can be found in HMRC's Annual Reports http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/reports.htm.

Taxation: Overpayments

Mr. Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of Schedule E tax which was overpaid in each financial year since April 2000. [127437]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs does not hold this information

Unpaid Taxes

Mr. Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of unpaid (a) Schedule D tax and (b) Capital Gains tax in each year since April 2000. [127438]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no reliable estimates for the amount of unpaid (a) Schedule D tax and (b) Capital Gains tax in each year since April 2000.

Welfare Tax Credits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have moved into work from each New Deal programme and claimed tax credit; and what the average annual tax credit payment is to a person in each group. [127529]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated number of in-work families benefiting from the 50+ element of the working tax credit, in 2004-05, is published in table 2.1 of the HMRC publication "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. Finalised Annual Awards, 2004-05", which is available on the HMRC website at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-quarterly-stats.htm. The average annual tax credit entitlement for each family in this group is around £4,000.

Information regarding other new deal programmes is not available.

Written Questions

Robert Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to answer question 119123, on the National Trust, tabled by the hon. Member for Salisbury on 1 February 2007. [126894]

John Healey: I have done so.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Africa: Sexual Offences

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent representations he has received on sexual abuse of child refugees in the Great Lakes region of Africa; and if he will make a statement. [127681]

Hilary Benn: World Vision published on 27 February 2007 a detailed report on the sexual abuse of children in refugee and internally displaced persons camps in the Great Lakes region, which DFID is studying carefully. We have also had representations on the vulnerability of children in war zones in the Great Lakes, most recently from War Child and through the All Party Parliamentary Group on the Great Lakes.

We recognise this is a very serious issue and welcome the focus these organisations bring to it. We continue to work closely with civil society groups, established churches and Governments in the region to address the issue as a matter of urgency.

European Development Fund

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what conditions the European Development Fund places on donor recipients; and what conditions his Department places on the same recipients through bilateral agreements with those countries. [126838]

Mr. Thomas: The European Development Fund (EDF) is subject to conditions at different levels, including those of a political and technical nature. At the political level, the EU-ACP Cotonou Agreement identifies a number of "essential" (human rights, democracy and the rule of law) and "fundamental" (governance) elements. A breach of the principles underpinning these elements can lead to consultations between the EU and the ACP state concerned and the imposition of measures aimed at remedying the breach. These measures must be proportional but may, as a last resort, evoke a suspension of community aid.

DFID's bilateral relationships with partner countries, including those funded by the EDF, are covered by the UK policy paper "Partnerships for poverty reduction: rethinking conditionally". This was published jointly by DFID, Foreign and Commonwealth Office and HM Treasury in March 2005. The UK believes that an effective aid partnership is based on a shared commitment to poverty reduction, human rights and strong financial management. These are similar to those essential and fundamental elements outlined in the aforementioned paragraph. We may interrupt or stop aid if a partner Government breaches these commitments. Any conditions we use will relate to these three commitments and be drawn from our partner's own policies and plans, wherever possible.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he expects the UK to ratify the 10th European Development Fund; and by when he expects all member states to have ratified the Fund. [126839]

Mr. Thomas: The Government will lay the necessary documentation before Parliament within the next few weeks. We hope it will be possible to complete ratification before the summer recess.

Other member states have indicated that they expect to conclude ratification within the agreed deadline of the end of 2007.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Abandoned Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate the Department has made of the number of abandoned vehicles in each month of the last five years, broken down by (a) region and (b) local authority area. [121008]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data on the number of abandoned vehicles removed and destroyed by local authorities are collected from each authority on an annual basis only; a breakdown by month is not available.

The data requested, by region, is set out in the table:

Number of abandoned vehicles reported

Thousand

	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
North East	3.2	6.7	6.8	4.0	3.8
North West	10.6	13.8	13.3	10.4	9.1

West Midlands	13.1	16.1	13.4	8.9	8.6
East	42.2	44.9	35.3	19.6	16.3
London	104.5	94.5	59.6	49.5	43.6
South East	57.5	53.4	42.3	24.4	19.8
South West	23.7	27.7	21.0	13.2	9.8
England	284.4	291.7	221.1	150.2	126.1

Note:
Totals may not add due to rounding

The table containing data broken down by each local authority area is lengthy so I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Biofuels

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to promote the development of (a) synthetic diesel and (b) other biofuel production from waste plant material. [125929]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The Government supports the development and use of biofuels primarily through fuel duty incentives. We also fund research into advanced biofuel production processes, including a recent DTI-funded study into biofuel production from plant biomass (details at http://www.dti.gov.uk/files/file35818.pdf)

and a national non-food crops centre project to determine the opportunities for producing synthetic diesel and other materials from biomass to liquids technology (further details at http://www.nnfcc.co.uk/funding/calls.cfm).

At EU level, the UK Government have been active in developing and defining the Seventh Framework programme for research and development, which includes significant support for research into improved and new types of biofuels for transport.

In the longer term, the Government are keen to use the renewable transport fuel obligation (RTFO) to promote the development and use of those biofuels which offer the greatest environmental benefits. The use of wastes, including plant wastes, has the potential to offer significant climate change and sustainability benefits. We are seeking views on the ways in which we might incentivise the environmental benefits of biofuels as part of our consultation on the RTFO, copies of which are available in the House Libraries.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will have regard to the growing of bio-fuel crops that (a) require deforestation and (b) inhibit sustainable food policies when developing his policy on bio-fuels. [127133]

Ian Pearson: Sustainability of production is one of the Government's key priorities for biofuel development. That is why the Government are developing environmental reporting as an integral part of the renewable transport fuel obligation (RTFO). This will require all obligated companies to report on the carbon savings and wider environmental impacts of their biofuels. The reports will include details of the previous use of the land on which the biofuel feedstocks were grown, and the impacts on biodiversity of growing those feedstocks. This will encourage companies to supply biofuels which deliver the maximum carbon savings with the minimum environmental impact. It will also ensure that we can monitor the impact of both imported and domestically-sourced biofuels.

In the longer-term, the Government will be looking to move to a system that allows only biofuels which meet certain minimum sustainability standards to benefit from the RTFO. However, developing a verifiable and robust system that is compatible with World Trade Organisation requirements on preventing barriers to trade will take time.

We anticipate that biofuels in the UK will come from a mixture of home-grown and imported crops, recycled waste vegetable oils and tallow. While some biofuel crops are likely to replace UK food crops, there are significant quantities of oilseed rape and wheat that are currently exported which could be retained for domestic biofuel use, with no loss to food production. Biofuel crops can also be grown on set-aside land, that is, land which cannot be used for food crops. In the longer term, as technology improves, straw and wood could be used for biofuel production.

Birds: Conservation

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department plans to implement the recommendation of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee that, before any species of bird is removed from Schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, there should be random testing of a proportion of the captive-bred population to verify claims of captive breeding. [127145]

Barry Gardiner: As part of the public consultation exercise for the review of the Bird Registration Scheme, my officials asked the Forensic Working Group (FWG) of the Partnership for Action Against Wildlife Crime (PAW) specifically to consider the DNA forensic issues relating to registration, including those associated with hybrids. The exercise closed on 16 February 2007, and over the coming weeks we will be considering the Forensic Working Group's contribution alongside all the other responses received. A summary of responses received will be published shortly on the DEFRA website.

Dairy Farming

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average (a) dairy and (b) beef herd size is in (i) Great Britain, (ii) England, (iii) Wales and (iv) each county. [126161]

Barry Gardiner: The average size of dairy and beef herds in England at June 2006 is shown in table 1. County data can be found in table 2. Figures for the other UK countries fall under the jurisdiction of the individual devolved authorities.

Table 1—England

1. Dairy/beef cows are any cows or heifers that have calved including cull cows. Dairy and beef herd replacements are not included nor are cattle intended for slaughter.
2. Some holdings may have both dairy and beef cows and will therefore be included in the holding counts of both categories

Departments: Equal Opportunities

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department has taken to implement the Race Equality Duty since 2000. [120633]

Barry Gardiner: Following the introduction of the race duties we produced a Race Equality Scheme in draft format for public consultation in May 2002. We revised and updated our Race Equality Scheme in July 2003.

Our revised scheme, which took account of comments received during the consultation, lays out in detail how we implemented the Race Equality Duty. This includes information on how we:

assess, and consult on, the likely impact proposed policies will have on promoting race equality;

monitor policies for any adverse impact on promoting race equality; publish the results of assessments, consultation and monitoring; make sure the public have access to information and services; and train staff to carry out the general duty and the specific duties.

A copy of our Race Equality Scheme is enclosed/ available at www.defra.gov.uk

Key achievements include:

Race Relations Act training for staff;

launch of an Equality Impact Assessment toolkit; and the extension of DEFRA's successful Elevator Partnership Scheme to specifically address under-representation of minority ethnic and disabled staff at senior management levels.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many civil servants are working on policy on anaerobic digestion, broken down by grade; and if he will make a statement. [126176]

Barry Gardiner: A cross-cutting project team is co-ordinating work across DEFRA to develop policy on anaerobic digestion. This regularly involves 14 individuals across five DEFRA divisions as well as a number of others. The total level of staff resources dedicated to the work on anaerobic digestion is equivalent to just under two full-time staff, broken down by grade as follows:

	Number
Grade 5	0.15
Grade 7	0.35
Senior Executive Officer	0.8
Higher Executive Officer	0.05
Executive Officer	0.2
Administrative Officer	0.25

Anaerobic digestion has the potential to make a significant contribution to a number of key Government objectives. Most notably, this includes reducing greenhouse emissions from waste management and agriculture, and improving air quality, as well as providing a source of renewable energy.

We will shortly be publishing the UK Biomass Strategy, which will include details of how we propose to work with interested parties to drive faster growth in the use of this technology. We are also currently assessing the level of staff resources that will be required to deliver the UK Biomass Strategy.

In parallel, the national Waste Strategy, which is also to be published this spring, will set out the important contribution which anaerobic digestion can make to achieving our waste management goals.

Departments: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Animal By-Products Regulations 2003 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126666]

Barry Gardiner: The total administrative burden cost of the Animal By-Products Regulations 2003 to business was calculated as £7.58 million. One-off/ contingent costs were estimated at £41,000, and recurring costs were £7,539,000. Costs to the Department can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

A full regulatory impact assessment was published alongside the Animal By-Products Regulations 2003. Copies were made available in the Library of the House. It is also available from the DEFRA website at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/regulat/ria/2003/animal-byproducts.pdf

The successful application of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) feed controls has brought about a year on year reduction in the incidence of BSE. This, along with the Government's other BSE controls, has enabled the Over Thirty Month scheme to be replaced, at an annual saving to the taxpayer of £300 million, and paved the way for the beef export ban to be lifted.

Departments: Paper

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what plans he has to increase the amount of recycled paper used in his Department; [122429]

(2) what percentage of the paper used by his office comes from recycled sources. [122430]

Barry Gardiner: During the last financial year the core Department purchased 874 tonnes of recycled paper for printed publications (96 per cent.) and 235.8 tonnes of recycled paper for internal office use (100 per cent.).

DEFRA's procurement policy requires use of recycled paper that meets the Quick Wins targets set by the Government in October 2003. These require all Departments to buy paper for printed publications using coated paper that meets or exceeds a 60 per cent. recycled target of which a minimum is 75 per cent. post consumer waste. DEFRA currently buys 75 per cent. recycled paper in this category. For office paper and publications using uncoated paper there is a 100 per cent. recycled target of which 75 per cent. should be post consumer waste.

The only exceptions to these standards are where recycled paper is not available for a specific process, e.g. security paper.

Energy: Housing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans his Department has to encourage local planning authorities to enforce higher standards for the energy efficiency of homes. [126734]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 14 March 2007]: Enforcement of higher standards for the energy efficiency of homes is the responsibility of Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG). DEFRA has been working closely with DCLG to secure greater energy efficiency of new and existing homes through amendments to Part L of the Building Regulations. DEFRA supports the recent amendment to Part L, which will lead to an increase in the energy efficiency of new homes by approximately 20 per cent. compared with those built to the 2002 Regulations. DEFRA also supports the commitment that all new homes will be zero carbon by 2016, introduced through a timetable of phased improvements.

Environment Protection: EC Law

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the timetable is for the introduction of the environmental liability directive; and what is required for it to have regulatory effect. [127134]

Barry Gardiner: Member states are required to transpose the Environmental Liability Directive (ELD) by 30 April 2007. The Government completed the first of two public consultations (on policy options for transposing) at the end of February. Following analysis of consultation responses, the way forward is currently being considered. The second consultation (on draft legislation) is planned to take place later in the year. The 30 April implementation deadline will therefore not be met. Taking account of all the required processes, implementation is expected during spring 2008. While the Government wish to implement the Directive as expeditiously as possible, it also wants to ensure optimum stakeholder engagement. We will apply section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972, using the appropriate Designation Orders, as the legal base for transposing the ELD.

Executive Agencies

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 24 October 2006, Official Report, column 1723W, on executive agencies, what the net change was in the (a) value and (b) percentage of (i) resource and (ii) capital budget levels for each of his Department's executive agencies from 2005-06 to 2006-07 in (1) cash terms and (2) real terms; and if he will make a statement. [122625]

Barry Gardiner: Of the Department's nine executive agencies, five (Centre for Environment Fisheries and Aquaculture Science, Central Science Laboratory, Pesticides Safety Directorate, Veterinary Laboratories Agency and Veterinary Medicines Directorate) are net controlled agencies and recover their full economic costs through charges to their customers which include both DEFRA and non-DEFRA clients.

Details of the net changes to budgets of the four gross controlled agencies are given in the following table.

Falcons: Conservation

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what actions his Department (a) has taken and (b) plans to take on the status of the saker falcon following the meeting of the CITES Consultative Committee on Trade in Falcons in May 2004. [126757]

Barry Gardiner: There was no recommendation from the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) meeting in May 2004 to change the listing status of the saker falcon. The UK has a policy of only putting forward species for listing or amendment of their listed status where we or one of our overseas territories are a range state. This is not the case with the saker falcon and any action therefore to change its listing status would be for one of the range states. Although the saker falcon is listed by CITES as Appendix II, it is listed by the EU as Annex A (the most endangered category).

Floods: North Yorkshire

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who decides on the allocation of funding to flood defence projects in North Yorkshire. [126405]

Ian Pearson: DEFRA provides the Environment Agency (EA) with a budget each year for flood risk management projects. The north east region of the EA produces an annual needs-based programme of works which is approved by the Yorkshire Regional Flood Defence Committee. This programme is then considered with the other regional programmes produced by the EA and funding is allocated according to priority.

Hunting

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Hunting Act 2004 in achieving its objectives. [127037]

Barry Gardiner: The Government are satisfied with the effectiveness of the Hunting Act 2004, which bans all hunting of wild mammals with dogs, apart from the tightly-drawn exemptions set out in the Act. These exemptions are recognised as effective ways of dealing with specific pest control issues.

Inland Waterways

Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what recent discussions he has had on the Quinquennial Review of British Waterways of 2004; [126846]

(2) what progress has been made in implementing the recommendations of the Quinquennial Review of British Waterways in 2004; and if he will make a statement. [126847]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA has agreed with British Waterways and the Shareholder Executive how the recommendations of the Quinquennial Review should be taken forward. I have met the Chairman and Chief Executive of British Waterways on a number of occasions to discuss a wide range of issues in the context of British Waterways' revised governance framework, as recommended by the Review.

Single Farm Payments

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on progress in making single farm payments. [126101]

Barry Gardiner: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made a statement to the House on 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 60WS, about progress on payments under the Single Payments Scheme. The total paid at that time represented about 59 per cent. of the estimated total fund of £1.54 billion. Further payments have been made since that date. The Rural Payments Agency publishes regular updates on payments under the Single Payments Scheme on its website.

Smith Institute

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much money from the public purse (a) his Department and (b) its agencies gave to (i) the Smith Institute and (ii) its subsidiary SI Events Ltd in each year since 1997; and for what purpose each payment was made. [123089]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA came into being in June 2001. From information held centrally, the Department believes no money from the public purse has been given to the Smith Institute and its subsidiary, SI Events Ltd.

Water Supply

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to change the amount of water abstraction for the purposes of public water supply. [126326]

Ian Pearson: The Government's approach to the management of sustainable water resources is the "twin track" approach involving the consideration of demand management alongside sustainable resource development. Each water company's Water Resources Management Plan will identify the need for any additional abstraction for the public water supply in line with this approach. These plans will also identify the scope for additional demand management activity, to obviate or minimise the need for new abstraction.

Where additional abstraction is identified, then any applications for new abstraction licences will be made to the Environment Agency. The licensing system aims to achieve a balance between the requirements of abstractors and adequate protection of the environment against the impacts of abstraction.

Water: Consumption

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of UK water use is by (a) agriculture, (b) business excluding agriculture, (c) domestic consumers and (d) public bodies and agencies. [126922]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 14 March 2007]: Ofwat collects data from water companies each year on water usage. These data are provided for household and non-household customers. The following table provides the most recent figures for 2005-06.

	2005-06
Water use household (megalitres per day)	7,760
Water use non-household (megalitres per day)	3,683
Total	11,443

The non-household figure includes agricultural use where it is drawn from the public water supply. Many farmers tend to have their own sources of water supply (such as private boreholes) that are not part of the public supply.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Youth Opportunities Fund

8. Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the administration of the Youth Opportunities Fund by local authorities. [127478]

Mr. Dhanda: The Youth Opportunity and Youth Capital Funds have been running since April 2006 and are worth £115 million over two years. Local authorities are required to report to Government offices on delivery of the funds on a six monthly basis. The first six monthly reports were received at the end of October 2006. The second reports are due at the end of April 2007. The reporting system is supported by independent evaluation which is being undertaken by the National Foundation for Educational Research.

Adult Education

9. Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) places and (b) courses there are in the adult education sector; how many there were on 15 March 2006; and if he will make a statement. [127479]

Bill Rammell: In my previous response I was able to confirm that we have realigned funding to support our priorities, which has allowed us to achieve our interim adult Level 2 target with a million more adults in the work force with essential employability skills and more than 1.6 million learners achieving Skills for Life qualifications. Overall in the 2005/06 academic year there were nearly 4 million publicly funded adult learner places. We do not hold information on the number of adult education courses.

Skills Development

11. Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how he plans to develop skills to make the UK a more competitive economy; and if he will make a statement. [127481]

Bill Rammell: Skills are one of the five key drivers of productivity. 1.6 million adults have gained literacy and numeracy qualifications since 2001 and since 2002 1 million more have gained essential Level 2 qualifications. Lord Leitch's report "Prosperity for all in the global economy—world class skills" sets an ambition for the UK to be a world leader in skills by 2020, which we accept. We will create a demand-led system of skills supply, ensuring that economically valuable skills are delivered at all levels to enhance productivity, employability and social mobility.

Leitch Review

12. Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the progress to date in implementing conclusions and recommendations of the report of the Leitch review of skills. [127482]

Bill Rammell: We welcomed the ambitions and recommendations of Lord Leitch's report. It set a vital challenge to raise the UK's skills to world class levels by 2020, which we cannot afford not to meet as a nation. Its key proposals include a demand-led system of skills supply, and the creation of an Employment and Skills Commission to scrutinise progress and make recommendations on further action, including legislation. We will publish an implementation plan to take forward this agenda in the context of the Comprehensive Spending Review settlement.

Sure Start

13. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the impact of the Sure Start programme on the early education, childcare, health and family support of disadvantaged children and their families. [127483]

Beverley Hughes: In 2005 the Department published the key emerging findings from our rigorous National Sure Start Evaluation. The report highlighted that even at this early stage in the programmes' lives there were some promising overall positive effects on parenting, and some small positive effects on child outcomes for most families. It also identified where we need to work harder to support our most disadvantaged families, and we have taken steps to address this.

Pupil Exclusions

14. Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proposals he has to strengthen support for children and young people who are excluded from school. [127484]

Jim Knight: From September 2007, schools and local authorities will be required to arrange suitable, full-time education for all excluded pupils from the sixth day of exclusion. This is a considerable improvement on the current expectation that local authorities do this from the 16th day of a permanent exclusion. And, by requiring schools to provide education for pupils who are excluded for a fixed period, these changes will ensure that no child misses out on their education when excluded.

Children's Centres

15. Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on what basis funding for children's centres has been allocated for 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [127486]

Beverley Hughes: Children's centres revenue and capital funding for 2006-08 was allocated to 150 local authorities, based on a unit cost per child that took account of the numbers of children under the age of five that must be reached by 2008 and levels of disadvantage. Further amounts were added in recognition of the higher costs of delivering services to children in rural areas and London boroughs.

Denominational Schools

16. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost of transport for pupils attending denominational schools was in (a) Leicestershire, (b) the East Midlands and (c) England in 2005-06. [127487]

Jim Knight: The Department for Education and Skills does not collect this information.

Mature Students

17. Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of applications for university places were from mature students in the last 12 months. [127488]

Bill Rammell: The latest figures published by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) last month show that 42,700 or 15 per cent. of students who had applied for full-time undergraduate courses by mid-January for entry in autumn 2007 were mature students.

Creative Partnership Programme

18. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the impact of the creative partnership programme on children's learning; and if he will make a statement. [127489]

Jim Knight: There have been four recent independent evaluations of the Creative Partnerships programme. They have been positive about the programme's impact and it has reached over 300,000 young people and 1,600 schools. We are currently considering options for the future of the programme beyond 2008.

Apprentices

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of apprenticeship frameworks do not require a technical certificate. [127428]

Jim Knight: [holding answer 14 March 2007]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 27 February 2007, Official Report, column 1250W.

Pupils: Intimidation

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what consideration was given to the issue of bullying when the policy of extended hours for schools was developed. [127370]

Jim Knight [holding answer 13 March 2007]: Extended services are being developed in and around schools as a key part of the every child matters agenda in order to deliver outcomes for children which include being safe, healthy, and enjoying and achieving. The core offer of services which all schools have been asked to develop by 2010 includes a varied menu of activities, childcare, parenting support, swift and easy referral to more specialist services such as health, social care and education welfare specialists as well as opening up facilities to the wider community.

In doing so the offer can help tackle both the causes and the impact of bullying by giving children and young people safe places in which to achieve and build their confidence, helping to address their social and emotional needs through effective relationships between children's professionals, and by supporting parents in building strong and constructive relationships with their children and dealing with issues such as bullying.

Schools: Biometrics

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to ensure that schools are aware of the proposed new guidelines on the collection of biometric data in schools. [127377]

Jim Knight [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The guidance will be available on both the Becta and the Department's teachernet websites and sent as a link to all primary and secondary schools in England as part of the Department's fortnightly e-mail communications with schools.

Schools: Finance

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many local authorities have a control mechanism for surplus school balances; and how much was recycled using these mechanisms in the last year for which figures were available. [127079]

Jim Knight: In October 2006, the Secretary of State directed a revision of all local authority financial schemes, requiring the introduction of a claw back mechanism to be in place by 1 April 2007, in time for the new 2007-08 financial year.

Some authorities have already introduced a claw back mechanism in their local schemes prior to 2007-08. The precise operation of a claw back mechanism is a matter for local authorities to devise, in consultation with their schools and the local schools forum following the Department's statutory scheme guidance. The Department does not collect information on the level of funding recycled through claw back.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which local authorities have reported a contribution from their centrally retained schools budget to a combined services budget. [127081]

Jim Knight: The following table provides the information recorded by those authorities who have reported a contribution from their centrally retained schools budget to a combined services budget for 2006-07:

Schools: Overseas Students

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children from outside the UK are registered in schools in England, broken down by their country of origin. [126821]

Jim Knight [holding answer 12 March 2007]: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Schools: Sports

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library copies of guidance in place on charging to use sports facilities at private finance initiative schools. [127415]

Jim Knight: Guidance is contained in the section 'Use of Schools' which forms Clause 29 of the Schools Standard Form PFI Agreement issued in May 2005. The agreement has been placed in the House Library.

Students: Fees and Charges

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment his Department has made of the potential impact of lifting the cap on top up fees in 2009 on application rates to university. [127769]

Bill Rammell: We have made no such assessment, which would be premature at this time. We have made clear our intention to establish an independent review of the introduction of variable tuition fees and the improvements to the student support system, which came into effect in autumn 2006. The review will be conducted by a commission, which will work on the basis of evidence from the first three years of operation of the variable fee arrangements. It will report to Parliament.

Teenage Pregnancy

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress has been made in delivering the Government's strategy to combat teenage pregnancy; and if he will make a statement. [127485]

Mr. Dhanda: We are making steady progress in reducing England's historically high teenage pregnancy rate. The latest data show that between the 1998 baseline year and 2005 the under-18 conception rate fell by 11.8 per cent. to its lowest levels for over 20 years. The under-16 rate fell by 12.1 per cent. over the same period.

Translation Services

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what documents his Department and its agencies translate for people in the UK who do not speak English; into which languages such documents are translated; and what the cost was of producing such translations in each of the last five years, broken down by language of translation. [113885]

Bill Rammell: The information requested is as follows:

1. What documents are translated

The Department produces a large number of documents, each with a specific target audience. We recognise that some publications will have target audiences which include communities or individuals for whom English will not be the primary language. Decisions based on whether documents are translated, and if so into which languages, are made on a case by case basis, taking into account guidance provided by the Inclusivity Unit of COI Communications (Central Office of Information) on the specific communications needs of minority ethnic communities and the content and target audience of the particular publication. In general terms translations are undertaken for those communities who face high levels of social exclusion and are least likely to be fluent and literate in English.

HEALTH

Bedford Hospital NHS Trust: Finance

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she had to write off the historic debt of Bedford hospital NHS trust. [127655]

Andy Burnham: All national health service bodies must live within their means and there can be no question of us simply writing off deficits when particular trusts have failed to operate within their budgets.

We recognise that it may be challenging for NHS trusts to pay back a large deficit that has built up over a number of years. However, the Department, and, consequently, the NHS, have to live within an agreed level of resources in each financial year. This level is set by HM Treasury and voted by Parliament. In order for the system as a whole to balance, a deficit in one organisation has to be matched by a surplus elsewhere.

In circumstances where a surplus cannot be generated in the following year, for example in the case of the small number of organisations with particularly large deficits, strategic health authorities can agree to a recovery plan which phases the recovery of those deficits over a number of years. This would require other NHS organisations within the health economy to underspend over the same period. Any such arrangements would have to be subject to the agreement of local providers, commissioners and the managing SHA.

Complaints

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is made available to (a) patients and (b) patient groups on their rights to complain to strategic health authorities about the performance of primary care trusts; and if she will make a statement. [111749]

Andy Burnham: No information is made available to patients or patient groups specifically about complaining to strategic health authorities about the performance of primary care trusts (PCTs). Where a patient or patient group wishes to complain about a primary care trust, they should address their complaint directly to the PCT in question.

Responsibility for dissemination of information about complaints at local level rests with the local national health service organisation. Under Regulation 20 of the national health service (Complaints) Regulations 2004, each NHS body must ensure that there is effective publicity for its complaints arrangements. These regulations require NHS bodies to establish and operate complaints procedures with a view to securing a speedy resolution at local level. Where complainants are not satisfied with the result of an investigation at local level, they may request the Healthcare Commission to consider their complaint.

The Independent Complaints Advocacy Service (ICAS) was established to support patients and the public wishing to make a complaint about their NHS care or treatment. ICAS aims to ensure complainants have access to the support they need to articulate their concerns and navigate the complaints system, maximising the chances of their complaint being resolved quickly and effectively.

Efficiency Review

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will break down the efficiency savings in each workstream referred to in the answer of 26 October 2006, Official Report, column 2087W, on the Efficiency Review, by area of savings. [123038]

Andy Burnham: The breakdown of savings within each workstream was as follows:

	£ million
Procurement
Pharmaceuticals procurement	974
Supply chain efficiency programme	169
Purchasing and Supply Agency procurement	100
Independent Treatment Centre procurement	54
	1,297
Productive time
Process improvement	1,024
Input costs	94
Time releasing	92
	1,210
Social care
Cost efficiency programmes	121
Non cashable gains	58
	179
Corporate services
Microsoft contract	30
Shared services	1
Electronic staff records	1
Electronic recruitment	6
	38
Public Funding and Regulation (PFR)
Departmental operating costs	20
Arms length bodies	55
	75
Total	2,799

This breakdown correlates to the total efficiency gain calculated in July 2006 for the period to year ending March 2006. The gain for process improvement was subsequently revised to £777 million following identification of a calculation error. Procurement and PFR savings were revised by a net positive £22 million following receipt and validation of full year end data. The revised total reported saving up to March 2006 is £2,576 million.

Savings for social care are provided by local authorities in their annual efficiency statement. These statements provide a split of cashable and non cashable savings but are not required to provide a more detailed breakdown by project. This level of information is retained locally.

General Practitioners

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on training for general practitioners to become GPs with a specialist interest in each year since 1997, broken down by primary care trust; and if she will make a statement. [122816]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

General Practitioners: Greater London

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GPs there are in the (a) Greater London area and (b) London borough of Havering. [122502]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There are currently 4,896 general practitioners (GPs) in London, of which 122 are in the borough of Havering.

Note:

All practitioners (excluding retainers and registrars) includes contracted GPs, general medical services others and personal medical services others.

Health Services: Regulation

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will commission research into public participation in healthcare regulation, including (a) selection and recruitment processes, (b) the framework for training, mentoring and supporting members, (c) organisation structures and processes designed to facilitate dialogue with the public and (d) closer working across and between regulatory bodies. [122127]

Andy Burnham: The Government has recently published a White Paper entitled "Trust, Assurance and Safety, The Regulation of Health Professionals in the 21st Century" which outlines the way forward on health professional regulation. This White Paper follows an extensive public consultation exercise involving over 2,700 responses, including petitions, on the findings of the reviews of medical and non-medical regulation of health care in the United Kingdom.

These reviews also involved consultation with both advisory groups and a call for ideas which resulted in over 250 responses. In addition, three pieces of research were commissioned for these reviews that focused on improving the impact on professionals and improving public safety. Research conducted for us by MORI considered public attitudes to medical regulation and revalidation.

Hospital Emergency Readmissions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many emergency readmissions there have been to hospitals for those aged (a) 50 to 64, (b) 65 to 74 and (c) 75 years and over in each quarter of each of the last three years, broken down by primary care trust; and if she will make a statement. [116245]

Andy Burnham: Currently the best computations of readmission rates are those released by the National Centre for Health Outcomes Development. They publish their data on their website at:

www.nchod.nhs.uk

Presently there are three years' data from 2001-02 to 2003-04 at primary care trust (PCT) level, for the age groups 0-15, 16-74 and 75 and over. There are plans to produce by March 2007 an eight-year series up to 2005-06 at PCT and trust level.

Other analyses from this source could only be produced at disproportionate cost.

Midwives

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her policy is on the Birthrate Plus work force planning tool. [122636]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Birthrate Plus is one of a number of useful work force planning tools that are available to local planners in the national health service.

Midwives: Manpower

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwives there were in the NHS in England in each year since 1997, expressed in terms of (a) headcount and (b) whole-time equivalent, broken down by region. [122643]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information has been placed in the Library.

Midwives: Students

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many student midwife training places were commissioned in each academic year since 1997; how many student midwives (a) entered training, (b) were in training and (c) qualified as midwives in each of those years; what the total cost to the public purse was of (i) all aspects of that training and (ii) the financial support paid to individual student midwives (1) in total and (2) on average per student midwife for each year; and what the attrition rate for student midwives was in each year. [122639]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Table 1 shows the number of midwife training places which were commissioned and the number of student midwives in training in each academic year since 1997.

The Department does not collect centrally the number of students who qualified as midwives in each of these years.

The total cost of training student midwives for each year since 1997 is set out in table 2.

The financial support paid to individual student midwives in total and on average per student midwife for each year since 1997 has been placed in the Library.

Information for England on the percentage of pre-registration midwifery students who have left their university course is given in table 3. Each year represents an intake year. A complete measure of attrition for a cohort of students will include withdrawal figures for each year of their programme. No data are available for 2001-02. The attrition data for the 2002-03 academic year onwards administered by the higher education statistics agency are in the process of being analysed by the health services information centre.

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Based on the information in our quarter 3 2006-07 national health service finance report, we expect the NHS as a whole to achieve net financial balance by the end of March 2007.

The following table shows NHS trusts in London strategic health authority forecasting a year end deficit at quarter 3 2006-07. There were no care trusts in London forecasting a deficit at quarter 3. The Department does not collect financial information from hospitals.

NHS: Maternity Leave

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what her Department's policy is on primary care trusts planning for maternity leave staffing cover; [122521]

(2) if she will place in the Library her Department's policy on primary care trusts providing staffing cover for front-line staff on maternity leave. [122536]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There is no specific policy governing maternity leave staffing cover. This is a matter for local employers. For those staff on Agenda for Change terms and conditions of service it is possible to move staff into a higher pay band to fill a position on a temporary basis as per paragraph 6.30 of the Agenda for Change Terms and Conditions of Service Handbook. The hand book published by NHS Employers, can be found on their website at:

www.nhsemployers.org/pay-conditions/agenda-for-change.cfm

The "NHS Agenda for Change Terms and Conditions of Service Handbook" is available in the Library.

NHS: Vacancies

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department offers guidance to primary care trusts on maximum acceptable staff vacancy rates (a) across a trust as a whole and (b) for non-acute in-patient services. [122535]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not offer guidance to primary care trusts about the maximum rate of vacancies they should be carrying. Workforce planning is a matter for local determination.

Tomography

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to include diagnostic ultrasound as a listed service for the purposes of regulation and inspection by the Healthcare Commission; and what discussions she has had with the Healthcare Commission to explore how obstetric diagnosis ultrasound services could be regulated and inspected under existing legislation. [122771]

Andy Burnham: Independent hospitals, clinics and medical agencies providing any of the listed services set out in section 2(7) of the Care Standards Act 2000 are subject to regulation by the Healthcare Commission, unless exempted by any regulation made under that Act.

Diagnostic ultrasound techniques are not separately included as a listed service in section 2(7) of the 2000 Act. However the provision of obstetric services and, in connection with childbirth, medical services are among the listed services. Such services may include the use of some diagnostic ultrasound techniques.

The Department has no plans to include separately diagnostic ultrasound techniques as a listed service in the future.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what targets the Child Support Agency has for processing and reducing the volume of cases processed clerically; and if he will make a statement. [122884]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what targets the Child Support Agency has for processing and reducing the volume of cases processed clerically; and if he will make a statement. [122884]

The Child Support Agency has been set six targets by the Secretary of State for 2006/07, which were published in the Agency's Business Plan, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library, or on the internet via the following link: www.csa.gov.uk/pdf/English/reports/plan0607.pdf

Two of these targets relate to the processing and clearing of applications received since the new scheme was introduced in March 2003 and include the Agency's clerical cases. The first concerns the volume of applications being cleared and states that: by 31 March 2007, the Agency will have reduced the volume of uncleared new scheme applications by 25 per cent of the amount outstanding by the end of March 2006.

The second concerns the speed with which new applications should be processed and states that by 31 March 2007, the Agency will clear 55 per cent of new applications within 12 weeks of receipt and 80 per cent within 26 weeks.

Reducing the number of clerical cases is dependent on rectifying the existing defects on the Agency's computer system – work will continue over 2007 to resolve these defects. To date the Agency has reduced the amount of new cases that need to be processed clerically by introducing a number of fixes to the computer system. The Agency aims to restore its clerical cases onto the computer system when the system is working effectively.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many additional new scheme Child Support Agency cases were being processed clerically in each month since January 2005; and if he will make a statement; [122885]

(2) what proportion of clerical Child Support Agency cases involved parents with care in receipt of benefits in each month since January 2005; and if he will make a statement. [122893]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 15 March 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions two related questions:

how many additional new scheme Child Support Agency cases were being processed clerically in each month since January 2005; and if he will make a statement;

what proportion of clerical Child Support Agency cases involved parents with care in receipt of benefits in each month since January 2005; and if he will make a statement.

Information regarding the number of cases being processed clerically is available from March 2005 onwards and is published in table 20 of the December 2006 Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary Statistics, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library, or on the internet via the following link:

www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd1/child_support/csa_quarterly_dec06.asp.

However, the information you have requested about the proportion of those cases that involved parents with care in receipt of benefits is not currently available.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many days training were provided to Child Support Agency staff in the last 12 months. [122896]

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many days training were provided to Child Support Agency staff in the last 12 months. [122896]

As a result of a capability review under the Operational Improvement Plan, almost 2000 Executive Officers were placed in Team Leader or Complex Caseworker roles.

The Team Leader training includes sessions on Standards of Client Service and the importance of Quality Assurance in preventing complaints. Management skills training is included providing people with the skills to enable them to deal with attendance management, capability and conduct.

People identified as Complex Caseworker are receiving up to 16 weeks of training. This training provides Complex Caseworks with technical knowledge, time management skills, case practice, communication skills (to clients and colleagues) and peer assurance in order to maintain accuracy, and enables them to secure client outcomes on high risk and non-compliant clients.

The information requested is provided in the attached table:

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) total and (b) full-time equivalent Child Support Agency staff were engaged in processing (i) old scheme and (ii) new scheme maintenance claims in each month of the last two years for which figures are available. [122921]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 23 February 2007]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 15 March 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child support agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many (a) total and (b) full-time equivalent Child support Agency staff were engaged in processing (i) old scheme and (ii) new scheme maintenance claims in each month of the last two years for which figures are available. [122921]

The attached table details the people working on processing new applications for each scheme in full-time equivalents for each month of the last two years. I regret that the information is not available on the number of individual people employed in these areas in each month.

The clearance process includes all work undertaken on applications for child maintenance until one of the following conditions is met: a parent with care has been identified as claiming Good Cause or is subject to a Reduced Benefit Decision; the application is identified as being change of circumstances on an existing case; the application is identified as being a change of circumstances on an existing case; the application has been closed; or for old scheme cases a maintenance assessment has been carried out and for new scheme cases, a payment arrangement between the parent with care and the non-resident parent is in place.

The Agency holds only a negligible number of completely unprocessed applications. The amount of work required to achieve clearance, and the length of time involved, varies considerable depending on, amongst other things, the circumstances of the parents and how readily they cooperate with Agency. The work undertaken by the Agency's New Client Teams extends far beyond simply clearing new applications through the computer system. A significant proportion of the work undertaken by the Agency's New Client Teams consists of setting up the first maintenance payments to the parent with care, and retaining responsibility for the growing caseload until the first fully complaint, on time payment is made by the non-resident parent.

Notes:

1. The table includes all Agency people working on child maintenance applications for either the old or new schemes. These people continue working on applications beyond the point at which the application is recorded as cleared until the first full on-time payment has been made.
2. The information is derived from a clerical count provided monthly by each area within the Agency.
3. This count is made in whole time equivalents—there is no comparable count of people involved.
4. The numbers include people in Great Britain and Northern Ireland working for the Agency on cases from Great Britain.
5. People working on old scheme cases on CS2 are included in old scheme totals.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff are employed in each of the six Child Support Agency call centres. [123159]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many staff are employed in each of the six Child Support Agency call centres. [123159]

The Agency does not operate a classic call centre model but seeks to route calls to relevant caseworkers. We do however, have a 'Helpline' for general enquiries and for where it is not possible to route calls to caseworkers. This 'Helpline' is operated from six regional centres supporting new scheme clients and one national centre in Liverpool supporting old scheme clients and general enquiries. The number of full time equivalent staff in each centre is shown in the table below.

Call centres	System	Full-time equivalent staff
Dudley	CS2	64.84
Hastings	CS2	46.82
Falkirk	CS2	67.69
Plymouth	CS2	66.60
Birkenhead	CS2	74.69
Belfast	CS2	85.95
Liverpool	CSCS	128.90
Total call centre staff		535.49

The Agency has significantly improved its telephony service, and in the nine months to December 2006 answered 97% of calls, compared to 91% in the year ending March 2006, with an average waiting time of 25 seconds, down from 59 seconds in the year ending March 2006.

I hope you find this response helpful.

Departmental Websites

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many users registered their details to receive e-mail updates from the Pensions Reform website in each of the last six months; and how many people are registered to receive such updates. [118768]

James Purnell: At end of January there were 3,665 subscribers to the Pensions Forum website. Figures for last six months are contained in the following table:

Period	Total subscriptions
August 2006	2,292
September 2006	2,935
October 2006	3,355
November 2006	3,476
December 2006	3,640
January 2007	3,665

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much the Pensions Reform blog has cost to administer since it was established. [118769]

James Purnell: The Pension Reform blog was launched on the DWP site in July 2006.

Ongoing maintenance and administration of the blog equates to half the time of a member of staff.

Employment Schemes: Costs

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average cost per unsubsidised job sustained for at least six months was of the (a) new deal for young people, (b) new deal 25 plus, (c) new deal 50 plus and (d) new deal for disabled people in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [120458]

Ms. Jim Murphy: The information is not available.

Housing Benefit: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the average deduction made per household from which a non-dependent deduction was made from their housing benefit entitlement was in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex in the last period for which figures are available; [125453]

(2) how many households in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex were subject to non-dependent deductions from housing benefit in the last year for which figures are available. [125454]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information is not available below regional level.

National Insurance Numbers

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases have been reported of (a) an individual using more than one national insurance number and (b) a national insurance number being used by more than one individual in each year since 1997. [100473]

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases have been reported of (a) an individual using more than one national insurance number and (b) a national insurance number being used by more than one individual in each year since 1997. [102163]

Mr. Plaskitt: Cases of national insurance numbers being used by more than one individual may derive from fraud, customer error or official error; it is not possible to provide a breakdown of numbers from each cause.

Any fraud-related cases are rigorously pursed by our Fraud Investigation Service.

Information is only available from 2001 and is shown in the following tables.

New Deal

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will break down the number of repeat participants by the number of times each repeated for each New Deal programme in each year since the programme started. [102115]

Mr. Jim Murphy: More than two thirds of the people who start new deal are new to the programme and, of those who have been on new deal so far this year, less than 10 per cent. have participated more than twice. Some people will move in and out of employment after leaving new deal, but this is inevitable in a dynamic labour market.

People who suffer long periods of unemployment can find it particularly difficult getting back to work. The longer they are unemployed, the greater the barriers are to getting work. Getting people who face such barriers into work is a considerable achievement and we are working to ensure that every new deal entrant benefits from the adviser support and advice they receive to help them find and remain in employment.

The available information is in the following tables.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been spent on the New Deal since 2 May 1997; and how many jobs have been created by the scheme. [106387]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Up to March 2006, £4.815 billion had been spent on the new deal programme since the programme started in January 1998.

Up until May 2006, 1,673,030 people had been helped into work through new deal.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total expenditure on providing for participants to attend a certified vocational training course when taking part in the Employment Option of the New Deal for Young People was in each year since 1998. [124054]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 28 February2007]: The information is not available.

Pensions: Insolvency

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate his Department has made of the cost of meeting the judgment of the Ombudsman's report on the matter of the employee pensions failure (a) over the next 60 years and (b) on an annual basis. [126334]

James Purnell: The High Court directed the Secretary of State to reconsider the first recommendation in the ombudsman's report "Trusting in the Pension's Promise". The court did not require the Department to make any payment. An estimate of the cost of implementing all of the ombudsman's proposals is given in the annex to the Government's Response to the Report by the Parliamentary Ombudsman published in June 2006.

Pensions: Uprating

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people received someone else's personal details with their recent pensions uprating notification; and if he will make a statement. [125542]

James Purnell: In all, approximately 26,000 customers received uprating notifications intended for someone else. Of that number, approximately 24,500 were state pension customers and the remaining 1,500 were Jobcentre Plus customers in receipt of either bereavement benefit or widows benefit.

The process involved in distributing uprating notifications, including quality control processes, have been examined and enhanced to prevent this happening again. The volume of existing checks has also been increased to help provide further assurance.

Procurement Projects

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the 20 largest procurement projects initiated by his Department since May 1997 were; what the (a) original budget, (b) cost to date and (c) consultancy fees were; and what the final cost was of each project which has been completed. [106581]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions conducts most of its procurements under competitively let framework agreements for common goods and services. Information on the few cases where procurements were conducted as projects since the Department was formed in 2001 is provided as follows. The Department has conducted a large number of other projects to achieve business change and modernise our systems. Many of these included procurement exercises that were not conducted as projects in their own right and it is not possible to isolate the related costs of these without incurring disproportionate cost.

[1] This Office Service contract expired in 2007 and the new contract begins on 1 March 2007.

Stakeholder Pensions

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Stakeholder Pension Schemes Regulations 2000 and 2005 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125612]

James Purnell: The Stakeholder Pensions Regulations 2000, and the Stakeholder Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 2005 were accompanied by regulatory impact assessments (RIAs), copies of which are available in the Library. These included an assessment of the impact of the regulations on business.

The cost to the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (Opra) of implementing the regulations, if any, is not separately identifiable.

State Retirement Pensions

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what proportion of retired persons reaching retirement age in the relevant year with a deficiency in National Insurance contributions qualifying for a full Category A state pension and being entitled to a Category B state pension by virtue of the National Insurance contributions of a spouse were women, in each year since 1979; [125507]

(2) what proportion of divorced retired persons reaching retirement age in the relevant year with a deficiency in National Insurance contributions qualifying for a full Category A state pension and needing to rely upon the National Insurance contributions of a former spouse under section 48 of the Social Security (Contributions and Benefits) Act 1992 or its precursor were women, in each year since 1979. [125506]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Children: Maintenance

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what progress she has made in helping Jane-Louise Green, a constituent of the hon. Member for Stafford, to secure child support through the courts for her daughter from the estate of the deceased father. [127364]

Ms Harman: My Department have pressed the Trinidadian authorities for an update as to the progress of Ms Green's case. The Reciprocal Enforcement of Maintenance Orders Section (REMO) has discharged all its responsibilities in lodging the application and in pressing the Trinidadian authorities for updates in this matter. On 21 February 2007 officials sent a letter to the Permanent Secretary for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Trinidad lodging a formal complaint concerning the lack of response to the previous correspondence and to the discourtesy shown to Ms Green regarding her case. A request was also made for the outcome of the appeal process. To date no response has been forthcoming from Trinidad but officials will continue to press until the information sought is forthcoming and are now in contact with the High Commission in Trinidad to ascertain what assistance they can provide.

Divorce

Julie Morgan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many decrees of judicial separation were granted in England and Wales in each year since 1979. [125505]

Ms Harman: Decrees of judicial separation granted in England and Wales since 1979 are tabled as follows. Figures for 2006 are not yet available.

Freedom of Information: Members' Constituency Work

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will bring forward measures to prevent correspondence between hon. Members and (a) health authorities and (b) hospital trusts relating to constituents' case work from being released under Freedom of Information requests. [127688]

Bridget Prentice: The Freedom of Information Act already contains a number of exemptions that protect information held by public authorities where appropriate. This may include information contained in hon. Members' correspondence. The hon. Gentleman may be aware that the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border has tabled a Private Member's Bill which would amend the Freedom of Information Act to create a single exemption to cover hon. Members' correspondence.

Lords Lieutenant

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which Deputy Lords Lieutenant have been appointed since 1997; and how many of those are (a) female, (b) black and (c) Asian; [127239]

Ms Harman: I refer my right hon. Friend to my answer of 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2042W. This list of Deputy Lieutenants will also include up-to-date ethnic and gender monitoring statistics. The information will be sent to my right hon. Friend and copies of these documents will be placed in the Library of the House.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Departments: Silverfish Productions

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what contracts her Department awarded to Silverfish Productions Limited in each of the last three years; and at what cost. [127820]

Angela E. Smith: The Department has not awarded any contracts to Silverfish Productions Ltd. in the last three years.

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many work permits were applied for by (a) her Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [126795]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Communities and Local Government was created on 5 May 2006.

In each of the last five years no work permits have been applied for; this response includes the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. Figures for the Department's agencies are not held centrally.

Fire Service: Pensions

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance has been issued by her Department on the eligibility of multi-tier entrants for future membership of the firefighters' pension scheme; what assessment she has made of the impact of such guidance on the multi-tier entry schemes, with particular reference to the pilot graduate entry scheme operated by the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority and other fire services; what representations she has received from the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority on such issues; and if she will make a statement. [R] [127684]

Angela E. Smith: Eligibility for membership of the New Firefighters' Pension Scheme is restricted to firefighters whose role on taking up employment with a fire and rescue authority includes resolving operational incidents, or leading and supervising others in the resolution of such incidents. In consequence those who join the Fire and Rescue Service at station manager, or above, are excluded from the scheme. Guidance to this effect has been issued to the Service.

The justification for a separate pension scheme with a normal pension age of 60 is that the duties of an operational firefighter are physically onerous and require high standards of physical fitness. These particular standards do not apply for senior management posts and therefore membership of the Local Government Pension Scheme, with a normal pension age of 65, is considered more appropriate.

The issue was fully discussed by the highly representative Firefighters' Pension Committee during consultation on the new pension arrangements. The provision reflects the outcome of that discussion.

Correspondence has been received from the Commissioner, London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority, and a response is being given setting out our position.

Housing: Air Pollution

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the percentage of private homes in the borough of (a) Richmond-upon-Thames and (b) Kingston-upon-Thames which have carbon monoxide levels higher than those deemed safe by the World Health Organisation. [126022]

Angela E. Smith [holding answer 8 March 2007]: No specific data on carbon monoxide levels are available at local authority levels.

Combustion safety in buildings is covered by Part J, Combustion appliances and fuel storage systems, of the Building Regulations. Gas installation is further covered by the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations. These set out the standards and precautions that should be taken when installing combustion appliances.

General accident statistics have shown that there has been an upward trend in low level (non fatal) carbon monoxide poisoning but it is not clear whether this is due to better diagnosis or other issues. The Department of Health issues regular guidance to general practitioners on the symptoms and effects of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Local Government: EC Action

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what the timetable is for ratifying the European Charter of Local Self-Government; [127368]

(2) what discussions she has had with (a) the Local Government Association, (b) London councils and (c) other representative local government bodies on the European Charter of Local Self-Government. [127347]

Mr. Woolas: The Government ratified the European Charter of Local Self-Government on 24 April 1998.

Ratification was widely welcomed by local government as being a symbol of the Government's commitment to a new and constructive partnership with local government, a commitment that we are continuing to develop not least through the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill currently before the House.

Lyons Inquiry

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects to publish the Lyons Report. [127466]

Mr. Woolas: The final report of the Lyons Inquiry will be published around the time of the Budget 2007.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she will answer the letter of 8 May 2006 from the hon. Member for Chichester on behalf of his constituent Stephen Crossley. [123256]

Angela E. Smith: My noble Friend Baroness Andrews has now replied to the hon. Gentleman's letter. I apologise for the unacceptably long delay in replying which was unfortunately due to an administrative error.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Bank Services: Fees and Charges

Tom Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what discussions she has had with representatives of the banking industry on the effect of bank charges on levels of social exclusion. [127029]

Ed Balls: I have been asked to reply.

Government Ministers and officials hold discussions with the banking industry on a wide range of issues as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such discussions.

Business: EC Action

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the Prime Minister's response to the hon. Member for North Essex following the statement on the European Council of 12 March 2007, Official Report, columns 35-36, if she will produce an assessment of the cost to UK business of EU administrative burdens; and if she will produce quarterly figures to show how it changes in future years. [127699]

Hilary Armstrong: 19 Government Departments and regulators undertook an exercise, supported by industry, to measure the administrative burdens that impact businesses and the third sector as a result of both domestic and international regulations (including those from the EU).

Upon the completion of these exercises, the Government set net targets to reduce administrative burdens by 2010. These were followed by publication of Simplification plans to deliver the savings. The estimated administrative burdens for each Department are available in each Department's simplification plan.

Copies of these plans are available online at:

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/regulation/reform/simplifying/plans.asp

Copies are also available in the Library for the reference of Members.

These plans will be updated annually to outline progress.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Departments: Redundancy

Justine Greening: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how much has been spent on (a) involuntary and (b) voluntary staff exit schemes in his Department since its formation; how much is planned to be spent in 2007-08; and if he will make a statement; [123933]

(2) how much his Department spent on (a) involuntary and (b) voluntary staff exit schemes in each year since its formation; how much is planned to be spent in 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [125097]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Staff in my Department are seconded from the Department for Communities and Local Government. My Office has not spent anything on these schemes.

Ministerial Duties

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his diary arrangements were during each period for which he has assumed the Prime Minister's responsibilities in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [121390]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the right hon. Member for Witney (Mr. Cameron) on 12 July 2006, Official Report, columns 1384-85.

Primary Care Trusts

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how often the (a) Prime Minister's Decision Unit and (b) Cabinet Office Impact Review Team visit each primary care trust; and whether the reports resulting from their visits are made public. [119821]

Hilary Armstrong: I have been asked to reply.

The Prime Minister's Delivery Unit visits a sample of PCTs to gain a deeper understanding of the delivery of Government policy. The Unit has visited some PCTs more than once to track delivery issues over time. The reports resulting from these visits constitute confidential advice to Ministers and are not published. The Cabinet Office does not have an Impact Review Team.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Darfur

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contingency plans the Government have drawn up to implement possible international intervention in Darfur. [125697]

Margaret Beckett: There is already substantial international intervention in Darfur. The African Union (AU) has deployed a peacekeeping force and the UN continues to mount its largest humanitarian operation in the world there. The international community is seeking to reinforce the AU force with UN elements, culminating in the creation of a much larger hybrid UN/AU force. And, the AU and UN are working for the resumption of the political process in Darfur.

The Government have been at the forefront of international action on Darfur. We have contributed £190 million to the humanitarian relief effort since April 2004 and £67 million to the AU force. We are pressing the AU and the UN for rapid movement on the political process and on the UN's military support package.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what timetable the Government have set for progress on the implementation of phase 3 of the international force in Darfur; what further steps she expects to take if deadlines are not met; and if she will make a statement. [125701]

Margaret Beckett: We are pressing the UN and the African Union (AU) to agree as rapidly as possible on the details of phase 3 of the UN's support package to the AU Mission in Sudan (ie the creation of the hybrid UN/AU force), and to implement it as soon as possible thereafter. If the Government of Sudan fail to co-operate with implementation, the international community will need to consider what measures to take against them in consequence.

Darfur: Military Aircraft

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects on the (a) humanitarian and (b) security situation in Darfur of the implementation of a no-fly-zone in Darfur. [125698]

Margaret Beckett: The situation in Darfur is totally unacceptable, the overall security situation is poor, and humanitarian access is precarious. We would need to take careful account of the effects on the humanitarian and security situation in Darfur of any measure such as sanctions or a no-fly-zone that we sought to impose with respect to that territory.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what preparations the Government are making with NATO allies for the implementation of a no-fly-zone in Darfur. [125696]

Margaret Beckett: The Government of Sudan have consistently failed to protect their citizens in Darfur. The time has come to apply tough measures against them. We are working on the extension of the UN arms embargo on Darfur to the whole of Sudan and the imposition of further sanctions against individuals in accordance with UN Security Council Resolution 1591 (2005). We would consider further measures, such as a no-fly-zone, if the Government of Sudan continued to defy the will of the international community. We are discussing with close allies what we would do in this eventuality.

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many work permits were applied for by (a) her Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [126802]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has not applied for any work permits in the past five years. FCO Services applied for two work permits in 2003.

IPPR

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funding her Department has provided to (a) the IPPR and (b) IPPR Trading Ltd in each year since May 1997; and for what purpose. [125713]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has made 10 payments to the Institute for Public Policy and Research (IPPR), and no payments to IPPR Trading Ltd since May 1997. The payments range in value from £9.49 to £40,000. It is not possible to establish the precise details relating to earlier payments without incurring disproportionate cost, but from the information available all payments were for goods or services received from the IPPR, rather than funding to this organisation.

Lebanon: Overseas Companies

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what visits the British Ambassador in Beirut has made to British-owned companies in Lebanon. [127236]

Dr. Howells: Since her arrival in Beirut in early October 2006, the British ambassador has met with representatives of a number of British-owned companies actively involved in Lebanon. The ambassador has also met with members of two outward trade missions to Beirut—these were the Middle East Association and British Expertise. In addition, the UK Trade and Investment representatives in Beirut are continuously engaged in promoting British business interests in Lebanon.

Nepal: Elections

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries will send international observers to the forthcoming elections to the Constituent Assembly in Nepal. [127500]

Dr. Howells: Although dates for elections to a Constituent Assembly in Nepal have yet to be confirmed, a number of countries have already approached the UN team in Kathmandu to offer support. In particular, Japan has recently indicated that it is prepared to send election monitors. South Korea has also agreed to provide computer equipment to the Election Commission.

The European Commission sent an election exploratory mission to Nepal in February and is now considering the possibility of sending a team of election monitors together with other forms of assistance to ensure that the elections are free and fair.

Until Prime Minister Koirala formally announces dates for the elections, it is difficult for countries to commit to providing international observers. In advance of this decision, we are working, through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Ministry of Defence and Department for International Development Global Conflict Prevention Pool, with the Carter Centre and the Asia Foundation to ensure a wide deployment of both independent national observers and international monitors to the elections.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to ensure that the elections to the Constituent Assembly in Nepal are free and fair. [127501]

Dr. Howells: In advance of the elections, we are working hard to help the Government of Nepal to provide conditions in which political parties are able to campaign and voters cast their votes free from threats, intimidation and violence. We are working in partnership with the Election Commission, the UN and a number of Government and non-governmental organisations (NGOs) to ensure that elections to the Constituent Assembly are free and fair. Our support to the election process ranges widely from co-funding the work of the UN Mission in Nepal in the weapons monitoring process to a contribution directly to the Peace Fund, which aims to address voter education. In addition, we have contributed funds to the Election Commission and also to the Carter Centre who will provide long-term observers to the elections as well as to the Asia Foundation to bring together local NGOs to monitor the elections.

The forthcoming elections to a Constituent Assembly in Nepal will be key to sustaining the momentum of the current peace process. However, it is vital that they are credible, free and fair and that they allow a voice to marginalised groups. We will continue to work with the Government of Nepal, our international partners and NGOs to ensure free and fair elections take place.

Sri Lanka: Politics and Government

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of recent conflict between the Sri Lankan Government and terrorists in the Batticaloa district; and what estimate she has made of the number of internally displaced persons who have been affected by the conflict. [127506]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the written answer that I gave to him on 13 March 2007, Official Report, columns 246-247W.

We understand that hostilities between the Sri Lankan armed forces and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in Batticaloa have resulted in the displacement of over 100,000 people. This number is likely to rise. The Department for International Development is considering a UN request for donor contributions to the Common Humanitarian Action Plan for Sri Lanka.

Sudan: Sanctions

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what measures are part of the Plan B package of sanctions against the Government of Sudan; and if she will make a statement; [125699]

(2) what discussions she has had with her (a) US, (b) EU and (c) African Union counterpart on the Plan B sanctions against the Government of Sudan; what the outcome was of these discussions; and if she will make a statement. [125700]

Margaret Beckett: The situation in Darfur is totally unacceptable. The Government of Sudan and rebel groups are regularly violating the ceasefire, as well as various UN Security Council Resolutions.

The UK has consistently made clear that tougher measures should follow if the Government of Sudan and rebel groups fail to abide by their commitments. We believe the time has now come to act. We want to see the UN's arms embargo on Darfur extended to the whole of Sudan and sanctions imposed on a further set of individuals in accordance with UN Security Council Resolution 1591 (2005). We are pressing other members of the Security Council to agree these measures and have already made the case for them with our EU partners. Following our lobbying, the EU's General Affairs and External Relations Council meeting on 5 March agreed strong conclusions supporting the need for further action from the UN Security Council.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Anabolic Steroids: Misuse

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to tackle the (a) use and (b) sale on the internet of anabolic steroids. [127276]

Mr. Coaker: The Government recognise the harms associated with the misuse of anabolic steroids and have controlled their availability under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. This is only one part of the effort to reduce misuse. Education and prevention are key measures. The FRANK campaign makes it clear that the misuse of steroids is dangerous and can lead to some potentially fatal medical problems. The harmful short and long-term effects of anabolic steroid use are also described in the most recent version of the Department of Health publication "Dangerousness of drugs" (2003). Needles and syringe exchange services are also available to provide harm reduction paraphernalia to those who are at risk of blood borne virus infection (HIV, hepatitis B and C) by sharing injecting equipment.

The Government and the law enforcement agencies take very seriously the use of the internet for the advertising, and in some cases the sale, of controlled drugs. Where a website is hosted by a UK Internet Service Provider (ISP) and contains material which is illegal, the agencies can issue the ISP concerned with a notice and take down order to remove the offending material. UK ISPs have a very good record of removing such sites following notification.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps police forces are taking to tackle the availability of anabolic steroids. [127400]

Mr. Coaker: It is an offence under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 Act to produce, supply or possess/import/export with intent to supply without a licence. Police forces have operational discretion when enforcing the law.

Angel Lodge, Wakefield

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make an announcement on whether the bid to site initial accommodation facilities at Angel Lodge in Wakefield has been successful. [116231]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 17 January 2007]: We have decided to use Angel Lodge to offer initial accommodation for asylum seekers in Wakefield. This facility will be used to complement similar facilities already operating in Leeds and Barnsley. We expect first entrants to the property in the week beginning 19 March and will operate the site at a reduced capacity in the first instance.

Animal Welfare: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of animal abuse occurred in Lancashire in each of the last five years. [126148]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the number of antisocial behaviour co-ordinators in England and Wales. [126419]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The Home Office currently provides each Crime and Disorder Reduction partnership with £25,000 via the Safer Stronger Communities Fund to assist local areas tackle antisocial behaviour through the appointment of ASB co-ordinators. Ultimately, however, the number of co-ordinators appointed is a matter for each local area to determine.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has held on introducing new measures to combat antisocial behaviour in England and Wales. [126420]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 9 March 2007]: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary launched the consultation paper "Strengthening powers to tackle antisocial behaviour" on 14 November 2006 seeking views on proposals for strengthening powers to tackle antisocial behaviour.

The proposals included: the case for new front-line powers to tackle antisocial behaviour; a deferred Penalty Notice for Disorder (PND); and a new Premises Closure Order.

The consultation closed on 6 February 2007 and a summary of responses will be published in due course.

Antisocial Behaviour: Fixed Penalties

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate he has made of the number of offenders receiving multiple penalty notices for disorder. [126297]

Mr. Coaker: Data on the number of people issued with more than one Penalty Notice for Disorder (PND) in England and Wales are not held centrally and no estimate has been made. However, police forces do keep records of PND recipients on local databases which help inform local operational decisions. Forces are also required to enter details of PNDs issued for recordable offences onto the Police National Computer, but not all PND offences are recordable.

Asylum: Russia

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals were granted asylum in the UK, based upon a well founded fear of persecution by (a) the Russian Federation and (b) other territories included in Part II of the Extradition Act 2003 in each year since 2000; and how many grants of asylum from the Russian Federation in each year were related to events in Chechnya. [126282]

Mr. Byrne: The requested information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case records.

Information on asylum decisions is published in quarterly web pages and in the annual statistical bulletin "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom". Copies of these publications and others relating to general immigration to the UK are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigratibn1.html.

CCTV: Eastbourne

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many publicly-funded CCTV cameras were in operation in Eastbourne in each of the last five years. [125447]

Mr. McNulty: No data on the number of publicly-funded CCTV cameras operating on a local or on a national level are centrally held by the Home Office.

Community Support Officers: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police community support officers there were in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex in each of the last five years. [125450]

Mr. McNulty: Police community support officers (PCSOs) were introduced as part of the Police Reform Act 2002; therefore data for PCSO strength are available from 2002-03 onwards.

PCSO strength data are not centrally collected at the borough level; therefore figures for Eastbourne are not available. PCSO strength data are not centrally collected at the county level, so figures for East Sussex are not available. PCSO strength data are collected at the force level, so data for Sussex police force for the requested time periods are given in the table.

PCSO strength data will be centrally collected at the force basic command unit level from 2006-07 onwards.

Police community support officer strength[1] (FTE)[2] for Sussex police as at 31 March 2003 to 31 March 2006[3]

At 31 March each year	Police force: Sussex Number
2003	22
2004	83
2005[4]	228
2006[4]	257

[1] This table contains full-time equivalent figures that have been rounded to the nearest whole number. Because of rounding, there may be an apparent discrepancy between totals and the sums of the constituent items.
[2] Full-time equivalent includes those on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave.
[3] Police community support officers were introduced in statute in 2002, therefore data are not available prior to 2002-03.
[4] Strength figures as at 31 March 2005 onwards include those staff on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave. Therefore these figures are not comparable with those provided for other years in the table.

Crime: Bus Services

Stephen Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many reported crimes committed on bus services in the Greater London area there were in (a) 2006, (b) 2005 and (c) 2004; [126741]

(2) how many robberies of personal property were reported as having been committed on public buses in the Greater London area in (a) 2006, (b) 2005 and (c) 2004; [126849]

(3) how many physical assaults on public buses in the Greater London area were reported in (a) 2006, (b) 2005 and (c) 2004; and how many of these assaults were on (i) drivers and (ii) passengers. [126850]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not available centrally. Offences committed in relation to bus services cannot be separately identified in the recorded crime series.

Crime: Hospitals

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were committed in each hospital in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by type of crime. [126570]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The information requested is not available from the recorded crime statistics. Crimes specifically occurring in hospitals cannot be separately identified in this data series.

Crimes of Violence

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many cases of (a) violent crime and (b) serious violent crime were reported in (i) Jarrow constituency, (ii) South Tyneside, (iii) the North East and (iv) England and Wales in each year since 1997; [126302]

(2) how many domestic burglaries were reported in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) England and Wales in each year since 1997; [126313]

(3) how many drug offences were reported in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) England and Wales in each year since 1997. [126314]

Departments: Equal Opportunities

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has a gender (a) strategy and (b) equality action plan in place. [125104]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 5 March 2007]: The Home Office and its agencies have a five year Race and Diversity programme which drives their commitment to mainstreaming gender equality into their people priorities, policies and functions. This includes equality impact assessment of policies and functions with particular reference to gender equality.

The Home Office is working towards publication of a gender equality scheme by 30 April 2007. It is identifying key stakeholders with whom policy officials will work to produce the necessary measures to (a) eliminate unlawful discrimination and harassment and (b) promote equality of opportunity between women and men.

All steps, both current and planned, will conform with those set out in the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 (Public Authorities)(Statutory Duties) Order 2006 (No. 2930) which comes into force on 6 April 2007.

Departments: PFI

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for which future projects his Department is considering a private finance initiative deal; what the estimated lifetime value of each potential contract is; and what period each will cover. [125189]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Secretary announced when he visited HMP Kennett on 16 February that new prisons would be procured under the private finance initiative, the first two will be at Maghull and Belmarsh West. Following that announcement we will shortly be publishing an advertisement in the Official Journal of the European Union (OJEU) commencing the competition for the first prison. Lifetime costs will be estimated for each prison so that we can compare these estimates against those put forward by bidders. It is estimated that the contracts will last for 25 years from the commencement of operations.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the incidence of violence in the home inflicted on a parent by a dependent child. [126676]

Mr. McNulty: The British Crime Survey (BCS) routinely provides information on the number of incidents of domestic violence in England and Wales, but this is not broken down by the relationship between the offender and the victim.

The 2004-05 and 2005-06 British Crime Surveys also included a self-completion module on intimate violence (partner abuse, family abuse, sexual assaults and stalking). This contained more detailed questions about experiences of intimate violence. Results from the 2005-06 BCS self-completion module were published in Home Office Statistical Bulletin 02/07, which included information about the prevalence of family abuse but not by children specifically.

According to the 2005-06 BCS, 12 per cent. of women and 9 per cent. of men had experienced family abuse (non-physical abuse, threats and/or violence by a parent, step-parent or other family member) since the age of 16. 3 per cent. of women and 2 per cent. of men reported having experienced family abuse in the 12 months prior to their interview.

The Offending Crime and Justice Survey (OCJS) provides information about the prevalence of offending among the general population. In the survey, if someone reports that they have committed an assault in the last 12 months, they are then asked about their relationship to the victim. According to the latest OCJS figures, taken from the 2005 survey, in 3 per cent. of incidents of assaults by 10 to 25-year-olds, the victims are the parents of the offender. Details for dependent children are not available.

Drugs: Crime

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment has been made of the effect of (a) drug misuse and (b) alcohol abuse on criminal behaviour; and if he will make a statement. [119116]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 8 February 2007]: The Home Office has commissioned research on the association of drug and alcohol use with specific aspects of offending, and routinely collates information on the proportion of alcohol related violent crime based on an assessment by the victim.

Published Home Office research estimates that 15 per cent. of all persons arrested for any offence reported that they had committed a crime in order to obtain drugs in the last four weeks. The proportion increased to 46 per cent. among those persons who reported taking heroin, crack or cocaine in the same four-week period. This estimate is published in the Arrestee Survey Annual Report: October 2003-September 2004.

Information which is routinely published from the British Crime Survey (BCS) provides an assessment of alcohol related violent crime. In 2005-06 it is estimated that victims believed the offenders to be under the influence of alcohol in 44 per cent. of all violent incidents. This information is contained in the statistical publication Crime in England and Wales 2005-06.

Additional research findings from the Offending Crime and Justice Survey (OCJS) suggest that being drunk once a month or more in the last year is associated with offending among 10 to 25-year-olds. This information is contained in the report "Young People and Crime: Findings from the 2005 Offending Crime and Justice Survey" and was published in December 2006.

Entry Clearances

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) Iraqi, (b) Afghan and (c) Somali nationals have been waiting for determination of their application for indefinite leave to remain in the UK for more than (i) six, (ii) 12 and (iii) 24 months; and if he will make a statement. [123359]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 27 February 2007]: The requested information is listed in the following table.

On the whole these are cases which are not straightforward and require additional consideration.

Non-asylum, indefinite leave to remain applications made in the UK awaiting consideration over each of the listed periods from end of January 2007[1]

Nationality	Cases from 6 up to but not including 12 months old	Cases from 12 up to but not including 24 months old	Cases 24 months old and over
Afghanistan	275	725	50
Iraq	775	450	25
Somalia	50	100	75
Total	1,100	1,275	150

The above data are not provided under the National Statistics protocols. They have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Human Trafficking

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the Government's action plan against trafficking; and if he will make a statement. [126531]

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2006, Official Report, column 1958W, on human trafficking, in which month he plans to publish the UK Action Plan against human trafficking. [126758]

Mr. Coaker: The Action Plan on Tackling Human Trafficking is currently being developed and we are aiming to publish it in March.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to question 124361, on human trafficking, tabled by the hon. Member for Totnes on 26 February 2007. [126759]

Mr. Coaker: A reply to question 124361 tabled on the 26 February 2007 by the hon. Gentleman on the Council of Europe Convention on Human Trafficking was answered on 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 2048W.

Identity Cards

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the likely rate of error of identity cards. [126594]

Joan Ryan: An estimate for the likely number of errors on identity cards produced cannot be finalised until further design and testing of technologies underpinning the issuing process is completed.

There will be a number of steps taken to ensure the accuracy of information to be recorded on identity cards and held on the National Identity Register. These include the following:

Checks to verify information provided by applicants against other sources (e.g. identity information held by other Government Departments) in order to confirm its veracity.

Physical examination of relevant supporting documentation to ensure that it is valid and corresponds with information provided on the application form and the results from the electronic checks mentioned above.

Attendance in person, allowing information to be clarified and checked with the applicant if necessary.

The production of effective enrolment procedures and materials. These will be designed on the basis of existing experience gained from the award winning customer service processes in place at the Identity and Passport Service for issuing passports to ensure they are clear and citizen friendly in order to reduce the potential for errors caused by innocent mistakes by applicants.

The implementation of robust anti-fraud procedures. Security policies and appropriate working procedures are being designed to prevent and detect fraud originating from either applicants or staff members.

The introduction of the recording of biometric information such as fingerprints. Biometric recording provides the ability to make a much stronger link between the information recorded on the register and the individual associated with it, thus providing a more powerful means to detect attempts by individuals to register multiple identities.

Identity Cards: Fees and Charges

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate he has made of the likely fee for an individual to obtain a stand-alone identity card without a passport element. [125644]

Joan Ryan: My right hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, South (Mr. Clarke) announced on 13 October 2005:

"It will be affordable to set a charge of £30 at current prices for a standalone ID card which is valid for 10 years. This will be affordable within current Home Office spending plans."

Legislation

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will subject the (a) Identity Cards Act 2006 and (b) Terrorism Act 2006 to post-legislative scrutiny. [126951]

Joan Ryan: We have no plans for formal post-legislative scrutiny of this legislation. However, the National Identity Scheme Commissioner, to be appointed under section 22 of the Identity Cards Act 2006, will prepare annual reports which will be published and laid before Parliament on the operation of the National Identity Scheme under the Identity Cards Act. In addition Lord Carlile of Berriew QC, the independent reviewer of terrorist legislation, provides an annual report on the operation of the Terrorism Act 2000. The Terrorism Act 2006 largely amends the 2000 Act and will therefore also be covered by his annual reports.

Licensing Laws

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were convicted of (a) allowing disorderly conduct on licensed premises and (b) selling alcohol to people who are drunk in each year since the implementation of the Licensing Act 2003. [126432]

John Reid: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform show that there were no convictions at all courts under the Licensing Act 2003 for either (a) allowing disorderly conduct on licensed premises or (b) selling alcohol to people who are drunk in England and Wales in 2005.

Court proceedings data for 2006 will be available in the autumn of 2006.

National Identity Register

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what biometric information will be required for an EEA national to acquire a registration certificate under the plans for a national identity register. [122004]

John Reid: There are no immediate plans to record biometric information on registration certificates, although we will keep this under review in the light of developments elsewhere in Europe as well as plans for the National Identity Scheme, which include the issue of biometric immigration documents to foreign (non EEA) nationals from 2008 and biometric identity cards to British citizens from 2009.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is being made for the National Identity Register to be used as a population register. [127212]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The National Identity Register is intended eventually to contain up-to-date identity information for all United Kingdom residents aged 16 and over. This will include name, age, address, nationality and biometric information, such as photograph and fingerprints. The National Identity Register will then be able to serve as a United Kingdom adult population register.

National Policing Improvement Agency

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) the chairman designate and (b) the chief executive designate of the National Policing Improvement Agency on its budget. [127291]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The designate NPIA chair and chief executive have met my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and I on a regular basis over the last six months and the NPIA budget for 2007-08 has been an item for discussion on several of those occasions.

The NPIA chief executive designate and director of resources have been fully consulted during the financial planning round and the provisional budget delegated to the NPIA on 28 February reflected those discussions with the NPIA.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the budget of the National Policing Improvement Agency to be agreed. [127292]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The Home Office issued the NPIA with a provisional 2007-08 budget delegation on 28 February and a formal delegation to the NPIA will take place once a number of residual issues around overhead costs transferring from the Home Office have been resolved.

The NPIA shadow board discussed the provisional budget at their meeting on 2 March and agreed savings initiatives required by the NPIA to enable the agency to deliver its programme of work within the budget available and subject to resolution of the residual issues mentioned above. The Home Office is satisfied that the budget delegated will meet the agency's requirements for its first year of operation.

Offenders: Deportation

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much compensation was paid to foreign prisoners detained beyond the expiry of their sentence in 2006; [125645]

(2) how many foreign prisoners received compensation for being detained beyond the expiry of their sentence in 2006. [125646]

Mr. Byrne: The director general of the immigration and nationality directorate, wrote to the Home Affairs Committee on 19 February 2007 and provided the most accurate and robust information available on compensation payments to foreign national prisoners. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign prisoners had been detained for more than three months after the expiry of their sentence on 31 December 2006. [125647]

Mr. Byrne: The director general of the immigration and nationality directorate wrote to the Home Affairs Committee on 19 February 2007, providing the most accurate information currently available on the detention of time-served foreign national prisoners. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Parenting Orders

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many parenting orders arising from criminal conduct or anti-social behaviour were issued in each of the last five years, broken down by local authority area; how many were breached; how many prosecutions were mounted against those breaching such orders; how many such prosecutions were successful; and if he will make a statement. [126145]

Mr. McNulty: A table showing parenting orders arising from criminal conduct or antisocial behaviour as reported by the Youth Justice Board using figures recorded by youth offending teams since parenting orders were commenced across England and Wales, follows. These figures are by youth offending team area; they are not recorded by local authority area.

Youth offending teams do not record numbers breached, prosecutions or convictions for breach. The figures reported to the Home Office on breaches of parenting orders have not been given because their accuracy cannot be guaranteed. Quality checks have shown that breach data are unsuitable for publication.

The Home Office has started a programme of work looking at the quality of existing data on court sentencing and how it might be improved.

Parliament Square: Demonstrations

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with police about demonstrations associated with Comic Relief and Red Nose Day within the exclusion zone around Parliament designated by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005. [126516]

John Reid: The Metropolitan police are aware of one planned charity event within the designated area on 10 March.

Police

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what definition of frontline duties he uses in reference to police work. [121760]

Mr. McNulty: Frontline policing is measured using the Frontline Policing Measure, which is based on the proportion of police officers engaged in frontline activities. It is calculated using a combination of role codes and activity analysis.

The Frontline Policing Measure is not a measure of visibility. It measures time spent carrying out core policing duties. Examples of roles considered as front line include: Burglary, CID, Firearms, Community Safety, Dogs, Drugs, Foot/Car/Beat Patrol, Hate Crime, Mounted Police, Special Branch, Marine, Air, Underwater, and Vice.

CID, Foot/Car/Beat Patrol and Traffic are also subject to activity analysis to determine more accurately the proportion of officer time spent on frontline activities within those roles. Examples of frontline activity include dealing with incidents, visible patrol, searches, dealing with informants, interviewing suspects and special operations.

Full details of the formula used to calculated the measure and complete lists of frontline roles and activities are contained in the "Guidance on Statutory Performance Indicators for Policing 2006/07", published by the Police Standards Unit and available at:

http://police.homeoffice.gov.uk/news-and-publications/publication/performance-and-measurement/SPI_Technical_Guidelines_204.pdf?view=Binary

Copies of this guidance will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the likely change in service provision resulting from the recent changes in the level of resources made available to some police forces. [126304]

Mr. McNulty: We have delivered a fair funding settlement for the police service in England and Wales in 2007-08. Each police authority will receive an increase in general grant of 3.6 per cent., higher than the 3.1 per cent. increase this year and above inflation. On top of general grant, each police authority will receive a range of other Government funding, including specific grants and capital provision.

Additionally, we have responded to the police service's call for greater funding flexibility to enable them to get the workforce mix right locally. We will expect the police to continue to make substantial and sustained efficiency savings.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces have acting chief constables; and if he will make a statement. [127423]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 12 March 2007]: There are currently acting chief constables in Thames Valley, Lancashire, Durham, North Yorkshire, Staffordshire and Sussex.

The acting chief constable of Thames Valley has been appointed substantively and will take up the post on 1 April. The respective police authorities will hold interviews later this month to fill the posts in Lancashire and Durham, and interviews for the North Yorkshire post will be held in mid-April. The posts in Staffordshire and Sussex will be filled substantively later this year.

Police: Biometrics

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the Police Information Technology Organisation biometrics technology roadmap. [126430]

John Reid: Copies of the paper titled "Identification Roadmap 2005-20", subtitled "Biometrics Technology Roadmap for Person Identification within the Police Service" prepared by the Police Information Technology Organisation were placed in the Library in 2005. The Commons Library references are as follows: DEP-05/1184 and MGP05/1884.

Police: Compensation

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid in compensation to (a) convicted criminals and (b) unconvicted police suspects by (i) each police constabulary, (ii) the Prison Service for England and Wales and (iii) the Scottish Prison Service in each year between 1997 and 2006. [122383]

Mr. McNulty: Information is not held centrally on compensation payments by each police constabulary to convicted criminals or unconvicted police suspects in England and Wales and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Compensation payments made to prisoners in England and Wales are not broken down by the convicted or unconvicted status of the prisoner. Such a breakdown could again be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Scottish Prison Service is the responsibility of the Scottish Executive.

Police: Disciplinary Proceedings

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were (a) suspended from duty and (b) fired in the last year for which figures are available. [121912]

Mr. McNulty: The collection and publication of the police complaints and discipline figures is the statutory responsibility of the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC).

Police: East Sussex

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there are in (a) Eastbourne and (b) East Sussex. [125451]

Mr. McNulty: Police officer strength data are not centrally collected at the borough level therefore figures for Eastbourne are not available. Police officer strength data are not centrally collected at the county level, therefore figures for East Sussex are not available. Police officer strength data are collected at the force Basic Command Unit (BCU) level, therefore data for Sussex Police BCUs are given in the following table.

Mr. McNulty: The number of police officers who worked part-time is shown in the following table. The Home Office does not collect information on the number of police officers who have secondary employment outside of the police force. The decision to grant officers permission to have secondary employment is determined by the chief officer.

[127302]

Mr. McNulty: I have deposited a copy in the Library of the House.

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The latest available data for 31 March 2006 are given in the following table.

Police: Retirement

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether police forces conduct exit interviews for police officers leaving the force (a) at retirement and (b) before retirement. [122014]

John Reid: In November 2005, the Home Office issued guidance to police forces in England and Wales on National Exit Interview procedures. The guidance advises police forces to conduct exit interviews with police officers and police staff who have given notice of voluntary resignation or transfer to another force. Forces may also use the same procedure for officers retiring from the service. Police forces are asked to provide data to the Home Office as part of the Annual Data Requirement. The first set of national data will be available for analysis later this year.

Police: Terrorism

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces in England and Wales do not have their own anti-terrorist unit. [125791]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 6 March 2007]: Each police force maintains its own special branch. Special branches play a key role in protecting the public and maintaining order. They acquire and develop intelligence to help protect the public from national security threats, especially terrorism and other extremist activity, and through this they also play a valuable role in promoting community safety and cohesion.

Prison Sentences

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners aged (a) 60 to 64 and (b) over 65 years are serving sentences of (i) one to five, (ii) six to 10 and (iii) over 10 years. [126416]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The numbers of prisoners detained in prison establishments in England and Wales as referred to in the question are as in this table:

	Aged
Years	60-64	65 and over
1-5	259	282
6-10	267	284

These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system.

Prisoner Escapes

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate he has made of the percentage of inmates who, having absconded from custody, commit offences while they remain at large; and if he will make a statement. [126814]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The information requested is not held centrally.

Prisoners Release

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of (a) sex and (b) other offenders who were released from prison before the end of the sentence handed down by the courts in the last 12 months who were considered a (i) high, (ii) medium and (iii) low risk by the (A) Police, (B) Probation and (C) Prison Service were. [123763]

Mr. Sutcliffe: This question cannot be answered without incurring disproportionate cost.

Prisoners: Foreigners

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign national prisoners were held at HMP Peterborough as at 31 January 2007; and if he will make a statement. [126213]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There were 128 foreign national prisoners detained in Peterborough prison at the end of January 2007.

These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large-scale recording system.

Prisoners: Wales

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women prisoners in the prison estate have home addresses in Wales, broken down by (a) category of offence and (b) length of sentence; and how many of these are on remand. [126937]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information for January 2007 is provided in the following table. Where no home address is listed for a prisoner the committal court is used as a proxy address.

The table shows the number of sentenced women in prison with a home address in Wales broken down by category of offence:

Sentence length (months)	Total
<6	20
6 to 12	17
12	6
12 to 48	53
= 48	40

There are a further 42 women prisoners with a home address in Wales who are convicted but unsentenced or on remand.

Prisons: Drugs

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his predecessor's statement of 28 September 2004 on extra funding for drug treatment, what additional funding has been spent on extra facilities and counselling for prisoners with drug problems; and how many and what proportion of the prisoners requiring drug treatment received such treatment. [127240]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Further to the statement of 28 September 2004, the funding currently allocated for 2006-07 for delivery of the collaborative Integrated Drug Treatment System (IDTS) is £12 million from the Department of Health and £5 million from NOMS.

The following table shows details of funding allocated for the totality of prison drug treatment for the years 2004-05 to 2006-07:

£ million

Intervention	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07
Clinical Services (maintenance-prescribing, detoxification)	11.3	11.3	23.3
CARATs (Counselling, Assessment, Referral, Advice & Through-care services)	23.2	26.7	31.7
Drug Rehabilitation Programmes	13.8	19.4	19.4
YPSMS (Young Persons Substance-Misuse Service)	2.3	2.9	2.9
Total Drug Treatment	50.6	60.3	77.3

Data on the number of prisoners requiring drug treatment are not recorded in the way requested. Instead, prisons rely on epidemiological data which show that, on average, approximately 55 per cent. of prisoners report a serious drug problem prior to prison, with 80 per cent. reporting some prior misuse.

The following table shows the number of prisoners who engaged in drug treatment over the past two years (individual prisoners may engage in more than one form of treatment):

Intervention	2004-05	2005-06
Clinical Services	53,903	53,323
CARATs	59,025	[1]76,588
Drug Rehabilitation Programmes	7,621	10,743

Respect Task Force

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the total annual staffing costs are of his Department's Respect Task Force; [125792]

(2) what the cost was of setting up his Department's Respect Task Force. [125793]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 6 March 2007]: The Respect Task Force was formed from existing staff and utilised existing Home Office accommodation. The only significant set up cost incurred was an external recruitment exercise to boost the staff complement costing £32,000.

During 2006-07 a total of £1.9 million is projected to have been spent on staffing costs for £36.5 full time equivalents. This includes specialist staff to work directly with frontline practitioners to support and advise them on the implementation of the Respect programme.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to centralise data collected by CCTV at the national Auto Number Plate Recognition Data Centre; and how much he has allocated to facilitate the integration of this data. [125643]

Mr. McNulty: The Government have provided £32.5 million of capital investment between the years 2005 and 2007 to enhance Automatic Number Plate Recognition (ANPR) infrastructure at a national, regional and local level. The Home Office is working with colleagues in the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) to use approximately £7 million of this funding to progress the development of a national infrastructure, specifically the National ANPR Data Centre (NADC—due to become fully operational during the 2007-08 financial year), and a Back Office Facility (BOF) system. The NADC will hold data collected by police-operated ANPR-linked to closed circuit television (CCTV) systems. The BOF will provide data storage and analysis tools for all police forces in England and Wales, enabling them to use ANPR in a more effective manner to tackle all levels of criminality.

Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many participants in the Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme there were in each of the last five years, broken down by country of origin. [117401]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 22 January 2007]: The following table shows the number of work cards issued to foreign nationals under the Seasonal Agricultural Worker Scheme in calendar years 2004, 2005 and 2006. Some of those individuals may not have travelled to the UK to take up their posts.

Staffordshire Police

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the performance of Staffordshire police and its ability to tackle crime in Staffordshire. [122234]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office has published formal reports relating to the assessment of performance of police forces in England and Wales and of Staffordshire police specifically. The most recent Police Performance Assessments were published in October 2006 covering annual data to March 2006. These assessments combine the robust evaluation of data collected by the force and through the British Crime Survey with the results from Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary's (HMIC) evidence-based qualitative inspections. Forces are assessed across seven policing areas to provide a thorough, balanced and realistic assessment of its ability to tackle crime and disorder.

In these assessments Staffordshire gained a 'good' or 'excellent' grading in each of the seven policing performance areas, as demonstrated in the following table

Performance area delivery direction

	Assessment
Reducing Crime	Good Stable
Investigating Crime	Excellent Stable
Promoting Safety	Good Stable
Providing Assistance	Excellent Stable
Citizen Focus	Excellent Improved
Resource Use	Excellent Stable
Local Policing	Good Stable

The overall delivery grading highlights the force's position in relation to the policing in other forces with similar socio-demographic conditions and indicates that Staffordshire is performing above its peer group. Further detail on these assessments can be found at:

http://police.homeoffice.gov.uk/performance-andmeasurement/performance-assessment/

Further details on HMIC's assessment of Staffordshire police's ability to tackle crime can be found at:

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 28 February 2007]: Information on stops and searches under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000 for 2004-05 (latest available) is given in the table.

2005-06 data will be available later this year.

[1] Searches may be conducted on vehicles only, occupants only or both may be searched. Where a vehicle and driver occupier are searched simultaneously the search is recorded against the driver (occupant). Any other passengers searched are recorded as occupants.

Note:

Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when these data are used.

Terrorism: Compensation

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people claimed compensation for injuries arising from the terrorist attack in London of 7 July 2005; how many such claims have now been concluded by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority (CICA); how many interim payments have been made; in how many cases no compensation has yet been paid; and what the highest sum is so far awarded to an individual by the CICA. [127295]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority (CICA) advise that, as at 9 March, they had received 573 applications in respect of the London bombings of 7 July 2005. 415 of these applications have been resolved (settled). Of the 158 cases outstanding, 31 have gone to review (the first tier in the two-tier appeals process) or to appeal (the second tier). Of the remaining 127 cases, 90 have had an interim payment, and three cases have been suspended because CICA are unable to contact the claimant. The highest sum awarded so far, in final settlement, was £152,050. Several interim awards have exceeded £100,000 and, once the final medical prognosis has become more certain and the final position regarding special expenses and loss of future earning capacity can be assessed, CICA expect that several final awards will exceed the highest award paid to date.

Tolls: Greater London

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the London congestion charge cameras are connected to the National Automated Number Plate Recognition database. [125640]

Mr. McNulty: Transport for London congestion charge cameras are not connected to the National Automatic Number Plate Recognition (ANPR) Data Centre.

War Crimes

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to the answer of 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1374W, on war crimes, what issues his Department is reviewing in connection with arrest warrants applications; [127389]

(2) what external advice his Department has sought in connection with the review of arrest warrant applications; [127404]

(3) whether his Department's review of arrest warrants will involve public consultation. [127405]

Joan Ryan: We have been considering the legal and practical issues relating to the issue of arrest warrants in international cases and in particular those relating to applications by private individuals. We have not yet completed our consideration of these issues. The Government do not have plans for a public consultation and have not sought external advice on the issues under consideration, but we will take full account of all representations received on this matter. Any proposals to change the legislation would be laid before Parliament in the normal way.

Written Questions

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply substantively to questions (a) 109531, (b) 109533, (c) 109534 and (d) 109535, tabled on 12 December 2006 by the hon. Member for New Forest East, on the investigation into the murder of Georgi Markov. [122368]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 22 February 2007]: I replied to the hon. Gentleman on 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2163W.

Young Offender Institutions: Mental Health

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number and percentage of prisoners (a) in the young offender institution (YOI) estate and (b) in Feltham YOI in 2006 who had been diagnosed with a (i) mental illness and (ii) personality disorder. [126886]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is not held centrally.

In the study "Mental Health Needs and Effectiveness of Provision for Young Offenders in Custody and in the Community" (Prof. Richard Harrington and Prof. Sue Bailey, Youth Justice Board for England and Wales 2005), 31 per cent. of young offenders were identified as having a mental health problem.

Young Offenders

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the number of young offenders in young offender institutions who are held more than 50 miles from their home; and if he will make a statement. [126091]

Mr. Sutcliffe: As of January 2007, there were 2,647 young offenders in young offender institutions who were held more than 50 miles from their home.

Where no home address is listed for a young offender the committal court is used as a proxy address.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were working for youth offending teams at each June year-end since June 2001 in each youth offending team area; and if he will make a statement. [126108]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested for 2004-05 onwards is set out in the following table. Data on YOT staff numbers are collected by the Youth Justice Board. Prior to 2004-05 YOT staff numbers were collected on a full-time equivalent basis and the data are not therefore directly comparable.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Alcoholic Drinks: Crime

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been convicted of crimes in which alcohol has been a contributory factor in each of the last three years. [119340]

Mr. Hanson: Background information in relation to the commission of an offence is not included in court prosecution and conviction data. Conviction statistics relating to crimes in which alcohol has been a contributory factor are thus not available.

Domestic Violence

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been convicted of assault in which the victim was (a) a female partner, (b) a male partner and (c) a child of the convicted person in each of the last three years. [119347]

Mr. Hanson: Northern Ireland court proceedings and sentencing data do not currently record the relationship between those who have been convicted of assault and their victims. I anticipate that this information will become available with the development of the Causeway information system.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were rendered homeless in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years as a result of domestic violence. [128117]

Mr. Hanson: The number of applicants who specified domestic violence as a reason for presenting as homeless and the number accepted for this reason is shown in the following table.

Speed Limits: Cameras

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what revenue was generated by police speed camera operations in each Police Service of Northern Ireland district command unit area in each of the last six years. [125015]

Paul Goggins: The following table outlines the revenue generated each year by the Safety Camera Scheme since its introduction in July 2003. The figures have been broken down by district command unit as requested. Revenue from all fixed penalty notices and conditional offers is paid to the Court Service. However, there is a mechanism to 'Cost Recover' funds generated by the scheme to cover its running costs. Any surplus funds then go to Treasury along with all the other fines received from penalty notices issued outside of the scheme.

WALES

Departments: Advertising

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128065]

Mr. Hain: None.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Roof Terrace

Anne Main: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission when he expects the roof terrace to re-open for use of hon. Members' staff; and if he will make a statement. [127523]

Chris Ruane: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how long the roof terrace has been closed to hon. Members; what work has been carried out; and when the roof terrace will be re-opened. [128087]

Nick Harvey: The roof terrace was closed, along with other roof areas in the parliamentary estate, on 28 September 2006 when a detailed health and safety audit indicated that there were significant risks when assessed under modern regulations. Since then priority has been given to providing safe access to those areas of the roofs where access is required to maintain the structure of the buildings. Work on the roof terrace has been limited to providing temporary fencing to prevent access to areas where people can and have put themselves at risk.

This matter is under active consideration by the Speaker.

TRANSPORT

A5

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the reasons are for (a) the delay to 2015-16 from 2010 of the completion of the A5 to M1 link and (b) the change in the expected cost of the link between September 2005 and February 2007. [127914]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is as follows:

(a) The East of England Regional Assembly's advice accepted by the Secretary of State on the regional funding allocation was for the start of construction of the A5-M1 link to be delayed from 2008-09 to 2013-14. However, I have asked the Highways Agency to continue to progress the orders on a timetable that would keep open the possibilities of building M1 J11a early and accelerating the whole of the link road, should the necessary resources become available at an earlier stage.

(b) The principal reasons for the change in the expected cost of the link between September 2005, based on the outline design, and February 2007, based on the preferred route are additional inflation as a result of the later proposed construction date, and changes resulting from the choice of the northern route as the preferred route. Also, the current estimate has taken into account further work by the contractor on survey, design and buildability.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial contribution his Department made to the report by Oxford Economic Forecasting on the Economic Contribution of the Aviation Industry in the UK. [127439]

Gillian Merron: The Department's contribution was £23,500 (inclusive of VAT). The majority of the project was funded by aviation and other industry representatives.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in relation to the survey undertaken by Oxford Economic Forecasting report quoted at paragraphs 4.14 and 4.15 of his Future of Air Transport Progress report, how many questionnaires were sent out; and what proportion were returned. [127440]

Gillian Merron: Questionnaires were sent out to around 6,000 companies and 165 replies were received. Further detail can be obtained from the Oxford Economic Forecasting report, Annexe A.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to publish details of the air traffic forecasts on which his Future of Air Transport Progress Report was based; and if he will make a statement. [127449]

Gillian Merron: The Future of Air Transport Progress Report states that a technical note on the air traffic forecasting methods and results outlined in the Progress Report will be published in 2007.

Aircraft: Air Conditioning

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the results have been of the Buildings Research Establishment's testing for tricresyl phosphate and other organophosphates in air sampling research carried out on UK commercial aircraft; and what plans he has for further air sampling research. [127945]

Gillian Merron: The Buildings Research Establishment report referred to was prepared in October 2003 for the Department of Health as part of the Aviation Health Working Group. It described a study to monitor cabin air quality aboard older aircraft types utilised in high volume short haul operations, as recommended by the House of Lords report on Air Travel and Health. The report found no obvious difference in the cabin environment between older types of aircraft and newer types and that overall, levels of measured air pollutants were always below any recommended health limits.

The report can be found on the Department for Transport website at:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/aviation/hci/hacc/bre/.

The Aviation Health Working Group will be commissioning a separate study of cabin air later in the year.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the safety implications of the recent instructions by DHL Air Ltd (instruction No. INFO 010/07) advising pilots that low concentrations of fumes (a) after engine start, (b) during taxi and (c) after take-off are normal, do not need to be reported and do not warrant use of emergency oxygen; and if he will make a statement. [127960]

Gillian Merron: The DHL instruction referred to has been assessed by a CAA flight operations inspector as part of the full range of company instructions relating to smoke, fumes and air contamination. The instruction was promulgated as follow up information additional to the relevant normal, abnormal and emergency procedures. These include company guidance for the use of oxygen and masks. The inspector found the instruction acceptable in that context and the operator has taken steps to ensure in training sessions that it must not be interpreted as a dilution of the company's safety policy with regard to the reporting of incidents of this type.

Airports

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many international destinations were served by (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick and (c) Stansted airports in the last year for which figures are available. [127268]

Gillian Merron: The data requested can be found in Annex A of the "Air Transport White Paper Progress Report 2006" on the Department for Transport's website: www.dft.gov.uk.

Airports: Passengers

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers on international flights went through (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick and (c) Stansted airports in the most recent year for which figures are available. [127269]

Gillian Merron: Total passengers at an airport can be defined as all terminal and transit passengers. Terminal passengers include all terminating and transferring (interlining/connecting) passengers.

The number of terminal passengers on international flights is published in table 3 of "CAA Passenger Survey Report 2005".

The number of transit passengers is not available for international flights. Total transit passengers, both domestic and international, are published in table 9 of "CAA Airport Statistics 2005", CAA website: www.caa.co.uk.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of passengers on international flights transferred or transited at (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick and (c) Stansted airports in the most recent year for which figures are available. [127270]

Gillian Merron: The number of transfer passengers on international flights is published as "connect" passengers in table 3 of "CAA Passenger Survey Report 2005".

The number of transit passengers is not available for international flights. CAA website: www.caa.co.uk .

Airports: Security

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has carried out any survey of the public's understanding of the new security regulations regarding the transport of liquids on aircraft. [123627]

Gillian Merron: It is not currently DfT policy to conduct passenger surveys in relation to any security functions deployed at airports. However, after the events of the 10 August 2006, information informing passengers of the restrictions pertaining to liquids being taken through security control posts was disseminated through the national press and media, the Department for Transport website, and the aviation and travel industry.

Aviation: Air Pollution

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will call for an emissions trading scheme to be included in the EU-US aviation negotiations currently taking place. [127203]

Gillian Merron: The Government are taking forward their objective to include aviation in the European emissions trading scheme through negotiations on a draft directive recently produced by the European Commission.

Aviation: Safety

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether UK airline pilots are required to report all cases of smoke or fumes in the aircraft technical log. [127366]

Gillian Merron: The European Aviation Safety Agency requirements concerning the aircraft technical log include the recording of information about each flight necessary to ensure continued flight safety. For commercial air transport flights, defects and malfunctions that affect the safe operation of the aircraft or the safety of its occupants, that are known to the commander of the aircraft, are required to be recorded in the technical log, or an alternative cabin defect log that is regarded as part of the technical log. Any occurrence of smoke or fumes in the cabin or flight deck that was considered to threaten the safety of aircraft or occupants would be required to be reported in the Technical log or cabin defect log.

Aviation: USA

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what scope there is for (a) reciprocity and (b) access to cabotage in the current aviation negotiations with the US air authorities. [126333]

Gillian Merron: Discussions have been taking place between the EU and the United States since 2003 on a comprehensive aviation treaty. Following the latest round of negotiations, a revised draft of a possible first stage agreement will be discussed at the EU Council of Transport Ministers on 22 March. The draft agreement as it stands provides a range of traffic and other rights to the airlines of both sides. A number of these would be granted on a reciprocal basis, though some limited rights would be granted to EU carriers only during the first stage. It does not include cabotage rights for the airlines of either side during the first stage.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect on the cost of flights between the UK and the US likely to arise from the draft Open Skies aviation agreement reached between the EU and the US; and if he will make a statement. [126897]

Gillian Merron: The level of air fares is a commercial matter for the airlines concerned. However, certain air fares from London Heathrow to the US are currently higher than those from equivalent hubs in other European countries which already have an open skies relationship with the US.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential effect on the level of (a) flights, (b) passengers, (c) noise pollution, (d) carbon emissions and (e) global warming of the draft Open Skies aviation agreement reached between the EU and the US; and if he will make a statement. [126898]

Gillian Merron: The Government considers that the best way to tackle the environmental impacts of aviation is through the programme of measures it is pursuing including the addition of aviation in the EU emissions trading scheme, promoting technological developments and working closely with operators to make improvements through operational changes.

This is a strategic environmental approach which is not dependent on negotiations on individual bilateral air service agreements.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect of the draft Open Skies aviation agreement reached between the EU and the US on the ability of the UK and EU to develop legislation on (a) air pollution, (b) greenhouse gas emissions and (c) noise pollution; and if he will make a statement. [126900]

Gillian Merron: The proposed agreement does not affect the existing ability of the UK or the EU to take additional legislative measures to deal with the impact of aviation on the environment.

Blue Badge Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps his Department has taken to promote the Blue Badge map website; [118772]

(2) whether he plans to expand the geographical coverage of the Blue Badge map website; [118773]

(3) how much was spent administering the Blue Badge map website in the last five months. [118774]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply.

DWP is responsible for the Disabled People and Carers information within the Directory website.

A range of marketing activity has been conducted to promote the new service. For example, several disability-related media outlets were approached to highlight the mapping facility and articles have appeared in leading disability publications and on a number of websites that are visited by disabled people. The facility has also been promoted at events and exhibitions, as well as through promotional leaflets and online marketing activities.

In addition, the Disabled People and Carers franchise of the Directgov website, which is hosted by the Office for Disability Issues, a unit within DWP set up to co-ordinate work on disability across Government. It contacted over 500 organisations and individuals, including local authorities, charities and organisations with an interest in disability, to draw their attention to the facility. They were encouraged to place links to the mapping facility on their own websites and to promote the service to other interested parties.

The mapping facility has been purchased under licence initially for one year and currently covers 64 towns and cities across the UK. We are currently considering whether to renew the contract which would potentially expand its geographical coverage.

The cost of administering the service cannot be disaggregated from the overall costs of maintaining and promoting the Disabled People and Carers section of the Directgov website.

Departments: Air Pollution

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent estimate has been made of the carbon footprint of his Department. [124520]

Gillian Merron: The 2005-06 estimated carbon footprint for the Department is 50,116,258 kg/CO_2. This figure includes all building emissions and travel for the Department, other than the amounts for air and rail travel for the seven DfT agencies, which are not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

There is a cross-Government target for the central Government office estate to be carbon neutral by 2012, which will require Departments to offset emissions every year from 2012 in order to achieve a balance of zero net carbon emissions.

All central Government official and ministerial air travel has been captured under offsetting schemes since April 2006, and to provide the figures for what the levels of emissions were last year from departmental air travel, and the anticipated cost of offsetting those emissions through the Government Carbon Offsetting Fund (GCOF).

Departments: Regeneration

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of his Department's spending was devoted to (a) urban and (b) rural regeneration and redevelopment in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05 and (iii) 2005-06. [125891]

Gillian Merron: The proportion of the Department's spending on urban and rural regeneration and redevelopment is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Travel

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles were travelled by his Department's (a) Ministers and (b) officials on Government business by (i) air, (ii) rail and (iii) road in 2006. [124519]

Gillian Merron: It is not currently possible to separate ministerial mileage from that incurred by officials. The figures for Ministers and officials for the financial year 2005-06 are as follows: air travel 5,641,508 miles, rail travel 3,328,585 miles, road travel 3,786,021 miles. This excludes DSA, DVLA, GCDA, HA, VGA and VOSA, who do not hold the information in the format requested.

All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Ministerial Code, Travel by Ministers and the Civil Service Management Code.

Heathrow Airport: Night Flying

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect of night flights to and from Heathrow airport on the London economy; and if he will make a statement. [126296]

Gillian Merron: In making its decision about the restrictions to apply to night flying at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports from October 2006 to October 2012, the Government took account of the combined effects on the national economy of night flights at these airports. There has been no separate specific consideration of the impact of night flying at Heathrow on the London economy.

A regulatory impact assessment was published on 6 June 2006, when the Secretary of State announced the restrictions on night flying to apply at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports from October 2006. It makes a broad statement on the economic importance of night flying at the designated airports and discusses the economic evidence presented by consultees in response to the stage two consultation on the proposed restrictions. This document is on the internet at the following address:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/aviation/environmentalissues/nighthgs/

Heathrow Airport: Passengers

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of the international routes served by Heathrow airport depend for their commercial viability on transfer or transit passengers; and for which routes this is the case. [127271]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport does not hold this information.

London Underground

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total capital expenditure on London Underground (LU) was in each year since 1990 during which his Department had responsibility for LU, broken down by line. [124237]

Gillian Merron: Responsibility for London Underground passed to Transport for London and the Mayor of London on 15 July 2003. Performance since then has been an operational matter for London Underground who are best placed to answer direct. London Underground does not record investment broken down by lines. However the total figures to 2002-03 are shown in the following table. In April 2000, London Underground adopted new accounting treatment for its investment expenditure which removed the category 'investment renewals': the majority of this expenditure was reclassified as capital, although some (£90 million) became resource expenditure. Therefore the figures before and after April 2000 are not directly comparable and are presented in two separate tables with the years 1990-91 to 1999-2000 on one consistent basis and those for a restated 1999-2000 to 2005-06 are on another. It is normal accounting practice when a change in accounting treatment occurs to restate the previous year's figures on the same basis in the accounts, so that a true comparison can be made

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) track and (b) signal failures there were on the London Underground (LU) in each year since 1990 during which his Department had responsibility for LU, broken down by line. [124244]

Gillian Merron: Responsibility for London Underground passed to Transport for London and the Mayor of London on 15 July 2003. Performance since then has been an operational matter for London Underground who are best placed to answer direct. Information on the years prior to 1996 could be provided only at disproportionate time and cost. M6: Repairs and Maintenance

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 9 March 2007, Official Report, column 2261W, on the M6: Repairs and Maintenance, if he will place a copy of the internal review document of safety options in the Library. [128509]

Dr. Ladyman: I have arranged for copies of the internal review document to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Motor Vehicles: Testing

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicles were tested at the Salisbury Vehicle Testing Station in each month of 2006, broken down by class of vehicle; and how many vehicles (a) passed and (b) failed. [127548]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Parking

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many workplace parking schemes were established in each of the last 10 years. [125975]

Gillian Merron: We do not collect or hold information centrally on the number and location of workplace parking schemes or workplace travel plans in the UK. Any information that is available would be held by local authorities. Examples of good practice can be found in the Department's publications 'Making Travel Plans Work' and 'A Travel Plan Resource Pack for Employers'.

Parking: Regulation

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what restrictions apply to the parking of (a) large vans and (b) caravans (i) in residential streets and (ii) on private driveways. [125560]

Gillian Merron: The only national restrictions that apply to the parking of large vans or caravans in residential streets are that caravan lamps must be fully lit and not obscured when caravans are parked at night.

Parking control is generally a local issue and local authorities may make a Traffic Regulation Order regulating, restricting or prohibiting the on-street parking of different classes of vehicle, including caravans.

Operators of goods vehicles weighing over 3.5 tonnes are required to have an operator's license, the conditions of which may require vehicles to be kept off the road when not in use.

There are no national restrictions that apply to the parking of large vans or caravans on private driveways.

Public Service Vehicles: Regulation

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Public Service Vehicles (Conditions of Fitness, Equipment, Use and Certification) (Amendment) Regulations 2002 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125619]

Gillian Merron: There were two sets of amendments to the Public Service Vehicles (Conditions of Fitness, Equipment, Use and Certification) Regulations in 2002. The first, SI 2002 No. 335, was to bring the regulations into alignment with the Public Service Vehicles Accessibility Regulations SI 2000 No. 1970, and the second, SI 2002 No. 489 changed the fees for inspections. There were no costs associated with the former, as the amendments did not introduce new requirements in addition to SI 2000 No. 1970. A Regulatory Impact Assessment for SI 2000 No. 1970 was placed in the House Library when these regulations were made.

The fees for inspections of large passenger vehicles are normally reviewed annually, and the costs to business arising from SI 2002 No. 489 coming into force until the next fee increase (August 2003) amounted to £39,496.

The Department for Transport is committed to better regulation. We aim to introduce new regulation only where absolutely necessary, and to simplify existing regulation to reduce burdens.

Public Transport: Contracts

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) quality contracts and (b) quality partnerships were established in each of the last five years. [125974]

Gillian Merron: Since the coming into force of the Transport Act 2000, quality contracts provisions have not been used. No statutory partnership schemes are currently in force, however in January 2007 a statutory quality partnership scheme for north Sheffield was formally signed by Sheffield city council and the South Yorkshire Passenger Transport Authority and Executive. This will come into effect in July 2007.

Voluntary partnerships already exist widely across the country.

The Government's proposals, set out in 'Putting Passengers First' in December 2006, aim to make quality contracts a more realistic option and to increase the scope of quality partnership schemes.

Railways: Airports

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new (a) rail and (b) light rail links to airports have been built since 1997. [125976]

Gillian Merron: Heathrow Express, a direct rail service from London Paddington to Heathrow airport, was opened in 1998. The Docklands Light Railway was extended in 2005 to provide access to London City airport. Also in 2005, the Welsh Assembly Government funded the reopening of the Vale of Glamorgan line for passenger trains in order to serve Cardiff International airport (previously the line had been suitable for freight transport only).

Railways: Finance

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding is available to assist communities in opening and running branch railways. [126181]

Mr. Tom Harris: There is no specific fund for reopening branch lines, but such reopenings are eligible for funding through the Local Transport Plan process, the Transport Innovation Fund and the Communities Fund. The Government's community rail development strategy encourages local stakeholders to work together to support existing lines and services and the same principles can apply to reopenings.

Railways: Franchises

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 9 March 2007, Official Report, column 2262W, on railways: franchises, what the timetable is for the decision to be made on extending c2c's franchise beyond 2011. [128189]

Mr. Tom Harris: We would expect to complete this review within the next two years.

Shipping

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the availability of (a) British merchant seafarers and (b) British flagged merchant vessels to meet foreseeable strategic defence needs. [127929]

Dr. Ladyman: In 2004 the Department for Transport, jointly with Ministry of Defence, commissioned the London Metropolitan University to produce a quarterly assessment of the number of UK seafarers up to and including 2006. The Department for Transport also collate an assessment of militarily useful UK registered merchant shipping on a regular basis using an evaluation criterion provided by the MOD.

Travel: Business

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will promote the use of internet conferencing to businesses as an alternative to travel. [126629]

Gillian Merron: The Department encourages employers to develop workplace travel plans, which may include teleconferencing and teleworking, to reduce car use for the commute and during the course of work. We recognise the benefits of these and also the potential of internet conferencing in reducing the need to travel.

On 22 February 2007, we launched the National Business Travel Network to promote and support increased take-up of travel plans, particularly by the business community. Part of the work of this network is to encourage greater use of teleconferencing and teleworking. The network has so far been joined by 30 national companies as well as business groups and trade associations.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of (a) internal and (b) international same-day return flights made by businesses in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [126630]

Gillian Merron: The number of international day visits by UK residents for business purposes in each of the last five years is shown in the following table.

The information requested is not available for internal visits. Information is available from the CAA Passenger Survey on domestic air travel but this survey is only carried out at a selected number of UK airports each year. Day visits abroad by UK residents for business purposes, 2001-05

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Solicitor-General pursuant to the answer of 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 1944W, on the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill, when the Attorney-General last met the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to discuss the subject of On the Runs. [128082]

The Solicitor-General: The answer referred to is at 22 February 2007, Official Report, column 884W.

The Attorney-General last spoke with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to discuss "On the Runs" in October 2006.

Trooper Williams

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Solicitor-General what the cost was of the (a) prosecution and (b) defence of Trooper Williams in the High Court in April 2005. [128081]

The Solicitor-General: Although there were no criminal hearings before the High Court in this case, I assume the reference to the High Court is to the abuse of process argument by the defence which was heard at the Royal Courts of Justice before Mrs. Justice Hallett on 21 to 23 February 2005. That defence application was dismissed. The CPS then considered the matter and at a hearing in April 2005 before the Crown court offered no evidence.

The total CPS costs in this case were £28,195.24. This breaks down as follows:

Leading Counsel, total fees (VAT inclusive)—£13,218.75;

Junior Counsel, total fees (VAT inclusive)—£12,613.62; and a transcript of the application to dismiss abuse of process (VAT inclusive)—£2,362.87.

No witnesses were called and so no witness costs were incurred. The aforementioned figure does not include staff or running costs, which are attributable to the operation of the CPS as a whole and cannot be assessed on an individual case basis.

The costs incurred by the defence are not recorded by my Department.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agricultural Wages Board

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to review the future of the Agricultural Wages Board. [125966]

Barry Gardiner: The Agricultural Wages Board for England and Wales was reviewed in 1999-2000. As a non-departmental public body it is now subject to the new, light touch periodic business reviews. There are no plans for a review at present.

Agricultural Wages Board: Equal Opportunities

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs why the Agricultural Wages Board did not receive an exemption from the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations. [126718]

Barry Gardiner: The Government did consider a specific exemption from the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations for the agricultural minimum wage. However, we did not consider that the case made by the Agricultural Wages Board provided the necessary evidence to objectively justify such an exemption, in the context of a national social policy objective. If the Agricultural Wages Board presents further evidence to support and justify an exemption, the Government will reconsider its position.

Agriculture: Air Pollution

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations he has received on the cost of implementing the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations for individual farms. [127375]

Mr. Bradshaw: Various representations have been received by the Department on the costs to farmers of implementing the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations. These have been in the form of parliamentary questions, public correspondence and letters from Members of both Houses.

Air Pollution: Business

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many FTSE 100 companies meet the minimum reporting guidelines on greenhouse gas emissions; [126456]

(2) if he will estimate the annual carbon dioxide emissions in each of the last five years from companies which are not meeting the minimum reporting guidelines on greenhouse gas emissions. [126457]

Ian Pearson: DEFRA's guidelines on environmental reporting, published in January 2006, recommend that companies report their 'direct' and 'indirect' emissions in line with the Greenhouse Gas (GHG) protocol, an initiative set up by the World Resources Institute and World Business Council for Sustainable Development. This protocol is also used by the Carbon Disclosure Project (CDP), which acts on behalf of 225 global investors with total assets of $31 trillion. On an annual basis, the CDP asks global companies to disclose information on greenhouse gas emissions.

83 per cent. of FTSE100 companies responded to CDP's 2006 information request, of which 55 per cent. provided quantified emissions data and 24 per cent. provided emissions data that met the protocol's reporting requirement on 'direct' GHG emissions.

In the absence of a globally accepted framework for corporate GHG emissions reporting, DEFRA is currently in discussions with CDP about the opportunities provided by its role as the Secretariat to the new Climate Disclosure Standards Board. The board was launched at the recent World Economic Forum in Davos to develop and advocate a globally accepted corporate climate reporting standard.

DEFRA does not collect its own estimates of the GHG emissions of individual companies.

Biofuels

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much land is used for (a) biomass, (b) road use biofuel and (c) other energy crops; and what estimate he has made of the amount needed to grow enough biofuel to meet the five per cent. biofuel target for road fuel. [126410]

Ian Pearson: In 2005, the latest year for which comprehensive data are currently available, a total of around 209,000 hectares was estimated to be used in England for crops purpose-grown for use as industrial materials and bio-energy. Of this total, oilseed rape for biofuel use accounted for nearly 93,000 hectares. This figure relates only to plantings under the Energy Aid Scheme as the end-use for crops not receiving this aid is not known. Energy crops for use in the generation of heat and electricity accounted for around 600 hectares. Plantings of energy crops have increased significantly since 2005, with over 4,500 hectares now in the ground. Biomass also comes from non purpose-grown sources such as straw and woodfuel from forestry operations.

To meet the 5 per cent. transport biofuel target entirely from UK sources would require between 1 to 1.5 million hectares of crops. However, we anticipate that biofuels in the UK will come from a mixture of home-grown and imported crops, recycled vegetable oils and tallow. In the longer term, as technology improves, straw and wood could be used for bioethanol production, so reducing pressure on land.

Biofuels: Cumbria

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the area of land in Cumbria which is suitable for growing biofuel crops. [127352]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 13 March 2007]: The main crops which can be grown in England to produce biofuels are oilseed rape, wheat and sugar beet, however we have not carried out research into the availability or suitability of land for growing these crops at county level.

In Cumbria, based on the June 2005 Agriculture and Horticulture Census for England, the Region, Counties/Unitary Authorities, approximately 471 hectares of oilseed rape and 5,855 hectares of wheat were grown. Some sugar beet was also grown, however, in order to protect the identity of individual holdings, detailed figures are not included. The survey does not provide information on end use, so it is not possible to determine what proportion of these crops may have been grown for biofuel production.

Birds: Registration

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the public consultation on the proposed changes to the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, Schedule 4, and the registration of rare birds kept in captivity. [127976]

Barry Gardiner: The public consultation closed on 16 February 2007 and we are currently considering the responses. A summary of responses received will be published shortly on the DEFRA website.

Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Programme

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) with which sectors of industry he is working on the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Programme; [126429]

(2) what update there has been by industry of funding under the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Programme; [126440]

(3) what progress has been made by the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Programme; and if he will make a statement. [126470]

Mr. Bradshaw: [holding answer 14 March 2007]: The Business Resource Efficiency and Waste (BREW) Programme is returning £284 million raised from the landfill tax escalator back to business between 2005 and 2008 to improve their resource efficiency and to minimise the levels of waste that are unnecessarily sent to landfill. A Steering Group, consisting of various interested organisations including businesses, advises on the development of the programme.

The Programme provides assistance to all business sectors in England. Funding must provide a potential benefit to those sectors paying landfill tax and, where possible, address those sectors most affected by landfill tax increases. However, information on the sectoral uptake of assistance by English businesses is not stored centrally.

Evaluation results for 2005-06, which are conservative, indicate that BREW saved businesses nearly £88 million and increased their sales by over £14 million. There were also reductions in water use, waste sent to landfill and the amounts of raw materials used by businesses. Many of the benefits will be seen beyond 2005-06. Work is currently under way to assess the impact of Programme spending in the current year, 2006-07.

Carbon Dioxide: Pollution Control

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the proportion of voluntary carbon offsetting in the UK complying with (a) the CDM Gold Standard, (b) certified emissions reductions generated by the Clean Development Mechanism, (c) emissions reductions units generated by joint implementation projects, (d) EU allowances under the EU Emissions Trading Scheme, (e) his Department's proposed voluntary code of best practice for carbon offsetting and (f) uncertified voluntary emissions reductions. [125284]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 14 March 2007]: DEFRA does not collect information on the voluntary carbon offsetting market and has not made any estimate.

The Department has published a consultation paper aimed at establishing a voluntary Code of Best Practice for the provision of carbon offsetting to UK customers. The consultation will finish on 13 April 2007 and the intention is to have the code operating by autumn 2007.

We will report on the code's uptake once it has come into operation.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) supported into the effect of introducing iron sulphate into the ocean to increase phytoplankton activity and absorb quantities of carbon dioxide. [126283]

Ian Pearson: The Department has not commissioned, nor supported any research on the effect of introducing iron sulphate in the ocean to increase phytoplankton activity and absorb quantities of carbon dioxide.

The Department recognises that, although there may be value in investigating some engineering solutions to combat climate change, there are concerns about their ancillary effects on the environment, the practicalities and the costs of such solutions. The Department's key priority remains finding ways to reduce carbon dioxide emissions to a level that will prevent dangerous climate change, as well as the need for national and international action.

Carbon Emissions

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the carbon savings in (a) households, (b) the business sector, (c) central Government and (d) local government in (i) million tonnes of carbon and (ii) million tonnes of carbon dioxide per annum in each year since 2004; and what projections he has made for the years up to 2010. [124641]

Ian Pearson: Figures published by the Department show that total greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions fell by 3.1 million tonnes of carbon dioxide (CO_2) equivalents between 2004-05. CO_2 emissions fell by 0.4 million tonnes during this period, that is, 0.1 million tonnes Carbon (MtC). Savings by individual end-use sectors are not yet available but DEFRA hopes to publish details later this month.

2005 was the first year of the European Union Emissions Trading Scheme (EU ETS). Under the EU ETS, UK companies are able to buy emissions allowances from other EU countries. Purchase of these allowances is to be taken into account when determining whether the Kyoto target and 2010 domestic goal have been met.

UK installations covered by the scheme emitted 242 million tonnes of CO_2 in 2005, which was 27 million tonnes more than their allocations for that year. The electricity supply industry emitted 36.5 million tonnes more than its allocation; other sectors emitted 9.5 million tonnes less. Adjusted for emissions trading, UK CO_2 emissions in 2005 were about 527 million tonnes—approximately 11 per cent. lower than 1990 levels.

Projections of emissions, and hence savings, are not provided on a year by year basis, but at five-yearly intervals. Furthermore, projections are made only for the whole of the public sector, not for individual parts. Using the latest published figures (UK climate change programme 2006) for actual 2004 emissions and for projected emissions for 2010 (The Energy Challenge, Annex H—which updated those used in the above climate change programme), projected savings in 2010 relative to 1990 for these sectors are:

Households—22.0 MtCO2 (6.0 MtC)

Business—37.9 MtCO2 (10.35 MtC)

Public sector—7.5 MtCO2 (2.05 MtC)

DEFRA will publish an updated appraisal of the impact of policies and measures included in the 2006 climate change programme later this year. This report will look at the progress of individual policies and measures, and provide a revised projection, if necessary, of the projected saving each policy and measure will deliver in 2010, based on latest available information.

Departments: Furniture

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many items of furniture were (a) lost and (b) stolen from his Department in each year since 1997; and what the value was of those items in each year. [120710]

Barry Gardiner: In 2006 a small sofa was stolen, approximate cost £350. No other items have been lost or stolen since 1997.

Departments: Official Cars

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many vehicles belonging to his Department were (a) lost and (b) stolen in each year since 1997; and what the (i) make and model and (ii) value was of each vehicle. [121371]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA came into being in June 2001. Since that time, and from information held centrally, no vehicles have been reported lost or stolen.

Departments: Official Engagements

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list his official engagements from 1 January to 28 February 2007. [125952]

Departments: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Detergents Regulations 2005 (SI 2005/2469) to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126644]

Ian Pearson: A Regulatory Impact Assessment carried out before the introduction of the Detergents Regulations 2005 estimated that the total one-off compliance costs would be between £8.4 million and £14 million based on compliance testing of 2,800 surfactants. Given the long lead in for these regulations, the costs of additional labelling requirements fell within normal business running costs which were assisted by a six month transition period after the regulations came into force.

As there is relatively little industry development of new surfactants for use in the detergents industry, recurring compliance testing costs are nominal. There are no one-off or recurring administrative costs and no costs to the regulators. These regulations ensure that detergents degrade quickly ensuring high standards of environmental protection.

DEFRA is committed to regulating better and has a target of a 25 per cent. reduction in administrative burdens. The implementation of a more risk based approach to regulation, in conjunction with tougher penalties combined with improved effectiveness via focus on outcomes, and simplification where possible, is fully consistent with this.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off cost and (b) ongoing costs of implementing the Genetically Modified Organisms (Traceability and Labelling) (England) Regulations 2004 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126659]

Ian Pearson: A full Regulatory Impact Assessment was published alongside the Genetically Modified Organisms (Traceability and Labelling) (England) Regulations 2004. Copies were made available in the Library of the House. It is also available from the DEFRA website at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/regulat/ria/2004/gmolabelling.pdf

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Water

Environment (Water Framework Directive) (England and Wales) Regulations 2003 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126665]

Ian Pearson: The most recent estimate of the costs of implementing the Water Framework Directive (WFD) were published in the Final Regulatory Impact Assessment (2004). The cost of compliance that could be quantified at that stage amounted to be between £450 million and £630 million per annum. The RIA also assessed the cost of implementation for the Environment Agency to be £7 million per annum Benefits that could be quantified and valued appeared to be in the region of £560 million per annum. Given the range of benefits which have not been quantified this is considered to be an underestimate and represents a relatively small proportion of the estimated damages that may be avoided.

A revision of the overall RIA for WFD implementation is planned for 2007.

DEFRA is committed to regulating better and has a target of a 25 per cent. reduction in administrative burdens. The implementation of a more risk based approach to regulation, in conjunction with tougher penalties combined with improved effectiveness via focus on outcomes, and simplification where possible, is fully consistent with this.

Departments: Travel

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many miles were travelled by his Department's (a) Ministers and (b) officials on Government business by (i) air, (ii) rail and (iii) road in 2006. [124522]

Barry Gardiner: Information held centrally on miles travelled by Ministers and officials on Government business by air, rail and road in 2006 is as follows:

Mileage by travel mode

	Ministers	Officials
Car	[1]—	[1]—
Rail	[2]16,263	[2]2,015,668
Air	[2]135,557	[2]2,639,751

[1] Not held centrally.
[2] Mileage available from 1 April to 31 December 2006, where travel is booked on departmental contracts. Data for the first quarter of the year is not available

All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Ministerial Code, Travel by Ministers and the Civil Service Management Code.

Vehicle mileage is reported by financial year. DEFRA officials drove 8,930,363 miles on Government business in financial year 2005-06. Mileage collation for financial year 2006-07 will be available in June 2007.

Diesel Fuel: Agriculture

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many people were charged with using illegal red diesel in (a) England and (b) Lancashire in each of the last 10 years; [124907]

(2) how many farmers were charged with the illegal use of red diesel for non-agricultural use in (a) England and (b) Lancashire in each of the last 10 years. [124908]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The number of people convicted in relation to hydrocarbon oils fraud in mainland Great Britain is available in the HMRC annual report, and is shown in the following table. The 2006-07 figure will be reported in annual report later this year. The occupation of the people convicted is not reported.

	Number of people convicted in Great Britain
2001-02	9
2002-03	8
2003-04	17
2004-05	12
2005-06	14

Electronic Tagging: Sheep

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the generic animal number format for electronic identification for sheep; [127262]

(2) how many unique animal numbers for sheep will be available for the UK under plans to introduce electronic identification for sheep. [127263]

Mr. Bradshaw: EU Council Regulation 21/2004 requires the code structure of electronic identification (EID) transponders to be compliant with International Standards Organisation (ISO) standard 11784. This provides for a 12 digit binary number (the highest number being 274,877,906,043) to be used to identify each animal. However, this range of numbers is not available for sheep alone. The ISO code structure applies to all animals which may be electronically identified so we therefore need to build a way to identify each species into the numbering sequence.

We have yet to decide on what numbering system we will adopt should EID be introduced. Discussions with the devolved Governments and interested organisations in England are ongoing.

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects the European Commission to publish their implementation report on electronic identification for sheep. [127266]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Commission's implementation report on electronic identification for sheep is expected to be available this spring.

Energy: Business

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the take-up is of the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Management Programme in each region. [127204]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Business Resource Efficiency and Waste (BREW) Programme is returning £284 million raised from the landfill tax escalator back to business between 2005 and 2008 to improve their resource efficiency and to minimise the levels of waste that are unnecessarily sent to landfill.

A portion of the funding is delivered through the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs), in order to co-ordinate delivery of the BREW Programme measures at the regional level, and to carry out regionally specific projects. In 2005-06, £5 million was awarded to the RDAs for the first purpose only, with £11.71 million provided for both purposes in 2006-07.

The majority of BREW funding is awarded to a series of national delivery bodies, including Envirowise, the Waste and Resources Action Programme, the Environment Agency, the National Industrial Symbiosis Programme and the Carbon Trust. DEFRA does not hold a breakdown of how this funding is spent at a regional level.

Exhaust Emissions: Aviation

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the carbon emissions were of international flights to and from the UK in each of the last five years; [126454]

(2) what the levels of carbon dioxide emissions were from internal domestic flights in the UK in each of the last five years; [126455]

(3) what the level of carbon emissions was from the aviation industry in each of the last five years. [126458]

Ian Pearson: The following table shows emissions of carbon dioxide from domestic UK flights, international flights leaving UK airports and total emissions from all UK aviation, in million tonnes of carbon dioxide ($MtCO_2$) in each year from 2000 to 2005. Emissions from flights arriving in the UK are not estimated.

	Emissions from domestic aviation	Emissions from international aviation from UK[1]	Total emissions from domestic and international aviation
2000	1.96	30.25	32.21
2001	2.06	29.49	31.55
2002	2.07	28.94	31.01
2003	2.11	29.64	31.76
2004	2.30	33.13	35.43
2005	2.46	35.01	37.47

[1] Definition of the UK excludes UK overseas territories.

International aviation is reported as an information item in the UK greenhouse gas inventory but does not, by international agreement, count towards national totals under the Kyoto Protocol.

The impact of aviation on climate change is not limited to CO_2 emissions. Although there is need for further research, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change has estimated that the total climate change impact of aviation is between two and four times greater than that of its CO_2 emissions alone.

Exhaust Emissions: Shipping

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the carbon emissions were of the naval shipping industry in each of the last five years. [126453]

Ian Pearson: The emissions of a particular industry can be explained only on an end user basis, not a source basis. To calculate emissions from the Naval shipping industry one would have to look at such things as the steel and other materials used, the electricity used etc. and work out what the carbon cost of those are. The UK Greenhouse Gas Emissions Inventory, which is required by the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, does not collect emissions data on this basis.

Farms: Lancashire

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much his Department plans to allocate to farmers in Lancashire to improve the environmental sustainability of farms. [126600]

Barry Gardiner: Environmental Stewardship (ES) is the current main funding mechanism by which land managers are encouraged to deliver effective environmental management on their land. Budgets for the schemes operating under ES (Entry Level Stewardship, Organic Entry Level Stewardship and Higher Level Stewardship) are allocated by region, rather than by county. However, in Lancashire there is already a commitment to pay £2,392,757 annually to agreement holders under these schemes. The hon. Member may also wish to note that under the predecessor scheme to ES, Countryside Stewardship, the annual commitment for 2007 in Lancashire is £2,359,098.

We are unable to confirm the regional budgets for ES until we receive approval of the new Rural Development Programme for England (2007 -13) from the European Commission. Negotiations over the final funding package, including the question of voluntary modulation, are continuing. However, in advance of formal approval we are keeping ES open to new applications. Agreements entered into since 1 January 2007 are provisional and are being funded from existing indicative budgets agreed when the scheme was launched.

Flood Control

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many homes were assessed to be at significant risk of flooding, defined as >1.3 per cent. probability, in (a) 2003, (b) 2004, (c) 2005 and (d) 2006. [123651]

Ian Pearson: The figures for properties in England identified as being at significant risk of flooding (defined as a probability of flooding in any one year greater than 1.3 per cent. or one in 75) from the Environment Agency's national flood risk assessments are:

2003: no assessment undertaken;

2004: 315,000 properties, with subsequent analysis indicating that approximately 285,000 were residential;

2005: 517,000 properties, but the assessment did not differentiate between residential and commercial;

2006: 469,000 properties of which approximately 393,000 are residential.

I would like to take this opportunity to clarify my answer of 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1328W, in which the figure for the 2004 assessment of properties at significant risk related to residential properties only, while all other figures related to residential and commercial properties.

It should also be noted that the differences between assessments are almost entirely due to changes in data and analysis techniques as opposed to the actual flood risk, for example the number of properties within the floodplain for which no result is available has fallen dramatically from 265,000 in 2004 to 28,000 in 2006. This represents an improvement in the analysis but leads to a commensurate increase in the number of properties in each risk band

Flood Control: Finance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1824-5W, on flood control: finance, who decided that only certain development studies and coastal monitoring projects would receive new funding. [126406]

Ian Pearson: My letters of 20 December to the Environment Agency, Local Government Association and Association of Drainage Authorities explained that funding for new capital improvement projects and related studies in 2007-08 was severely constrained by the high level of funding commitment to ongoing projects but that I had decided to allocate £2.1 million to fund a review of Shoreline Management Plans, development of strategy plans, and coastal monitoring and other essential studies to allow strategic planning for the investment programme to be strengthened. Total funding from DEFRA to the operating authorities for flood risk management in 2007-08 will be £457 million, excluding spend on coast protection. The letters are published on the DEFRA website and copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Institute for Public Policy Research

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding (a) his Department and (b) its predecessor provided to (i) the IPPR and (ii) IPPR Trading Ltd. in each year since May 1997; and for what purpose funding was provided. [124212]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA came into being in June 2001. From information held centrally, payments to the IPPR are as follows; we do not have a breakdown of funding between IPPR and IPPR Trading Ltd.:

Financial year	Total (£)
2002-03	352.50
2003-04	1,515.75
2004-05	58.75
2005-06	[1]61,375.14
2006-07[2]	[3]18,458.29

[1] Includes £51,896 to meet the costs of a secondee from IPPR to Defra. [2] April to December. [3] Includes £11,408 to meet the costs of a secondee from IPPR to Defra.

Payments have been for advice on energy, climate and environmental strategy, including environmental pollution; business and strategy; business and transport; business and consumers together with a joint public seminar with DEFRA on India's sustainability challenge.

Land Drainage

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) strategy and (b) funding the Government have put in place for integrated drainage plans in urban areas (i) to address the risks of sewer flooding and (ii) to increase the storm capacity of drainage systems; and if he will make a statement. [125624]

Ian Pearson: In January 2007, as part of DEFRA's new strategy on flood management (known as "Making space for water"), I announced the start of 15 integrated urban drainage pilot studies around the country. Further details can be found at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environ/fcd/policy/strategy/ha2.htm . The projects, made possible by £1.7 million of funding from DEFRA, will test new approaches to reduce the risk of urban drainage flooding, both from sewers and stormwater.

While the pilot projects will not directly fund capital improvements, they should bring greater clarity on responsibilities for funding urban drainage management between water companies, local authorities, the Environment Agency, Internal Drainage Boards and the Highways Agency. Following completion of the pilot projects in spring 2008, DEFRA will produce new guidance on effective partnership working to deliver integrated drainage solutions in high risk urban catchments and prepare a regulatory impact assessment for any proposed legislative changes.

For 2005-10, Ofwat has allowed water and sewerage companies a programme of nearly £1 billion to safeguard homes against the risk of sewer flooding. This would resolve or mitigate every known high risk problem of internal flooding from overloaded sewers where companies' plans said action is needed by 2010.

Livestock: Transport

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when Article 36 of the Treaty of Rome was last invoked for the export of live animals. [127624]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 15 March 2007]: I assume that the question refers to Article 30 of the Treaty of Rome, which was Article 36 prior to the current Treaty.

I am aware of two rulings by the European Court of Justice in cases relating to the export of live animals in which Article 30 (then Article 36) was invoked. Case C-5/1994, ruled on 23 May 1996, relates to a UK ban on exporting sheep to Spain because of concerns over welfare conditions in Spanish abattoirs. Case C-1/1996, ruled on 15 July 1997, was a case brought by Compassion in World Farming on banning the export of calves destined for veal crates. In both cases, the European Court of Justice made clear that a European Union member state may not ban or limit a trade if it is subject to harmonised rules that must be complied with equally by all member states.

Veterinary Medicine

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what veterinary uses are permitted for (a) kanamycin and (b) neomycin; and how much of each medicine was used in the UK in each of the last five years. [128107]

Mr. Bradshaw: There have been no veterinary pharmaceutical products authorised for sale on the UK market in the last five years that include kanamycin.

Neomycin is present as an active substance with antimicrobial activity in a number of veterinary medicinal products with several routes of administration including topical, oral and injectable. It is a broad spectrum antibiotic active against a number of gram-positive and gram-negative bacteria.

The following table details how much neomycin was sold for veterinary use on an annual basis in the UK, for the last five years for which data are available.

	Tonnes of Neomycin active ingredient sold	Number of products included
2001	5.18	17
2002	5.22	20
2003	3.45	18
2004	4.51	15

Wastes: Nuisance

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent estimate he has made of the annual clean-up and repair costs imposed on (a) local authorities and (b) businesses in respect of (i) litter, (ii) dog fouling, (iii) graffiti, (iv) fly-posting, (v) noise and (vi) fly-tipping in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [126899]

Mr. Bradshaw: Local authorities do not have a duty to clear fly-posting or graffiti. We do not therefore collect data on clear-up costs to local authorities or to businesses for these or for noise. Street cleansing costs (which include both litter and dog fouling) have been maintained for the last five years, and are shown in the following table[1].

[1] It should be noted that comparisons across years may not be valid due to changes in the method of reporting the information.

Total England net current data for street cleansing (not chargeable to highways)

	Amount (£000)
2001-02	434,366
2002-03	476,592
2003-04	538,542
2004-05	594,643
2005-06	629,930

Source: Communities and Local Government Revenue Outturn (RO) returns.

Flycapture, the national database of fly-tipping incidents, was set up in 2004 by DEFRA, the Environment Agency and the Local Government Association, to record fly-tipping incidents dealt with by the Environment Agency and local authorities. Data on fly-tipping levels and estimated clean-up costs are therefore only available from April 2004 onwards.

The cost of clearing illegally dumped waste reported by local authorities between April 2004 and March 2005 was over £44 million. For the period between April 2005 and March 2006, the cost was almost £50 million.

DEFRA does not hold data on the clear-up costs of fly-tipping to businesses. However, when the costs of clearance on private land are included, the 2005-06 clearance costs are estimated to rise to over £100 million.

Water Treatment: Reed Beds

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) Water UK, (b) water companies and (c) the Environment Agency on the use of reed-based technology. [127200]

Ian Pearson: DEFRA recognises that reed beds can usefully form part of Sustainable Drainage Systems (SUDS) and part of the process for treating foul sewage.

DEFRA is working closely with Communities and Local Government (CLG) in the development of surface water management planning as part of revised Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 25. The production of surface water management plans is being trialled by some of the partnerships within DEFRA's Integrated Urban Drainage Pilot Projects. The 15 pilots across England, made possible by £1.7 million of funding from DEFRA, will test new approaches to reduce the risk of urban drainage flooding.

DEFRA is a key member of the National SUDS Working Group (NSWG), of which representatives of water companies, Water UK, the Local Government Association, the Environment Agency, developers and other organisations such as CABE are also members. DEFRA has a current work stream to examine options for resolving the combined issue of SUDS adoption, maintenance and funding and has recently consulted with the NSWG on this matter. We expect to carry out wider consultation in this regard later this year.

In respect of foul sewage treatment, the owner/operator of a sewage treatment plant is required to comply with the relevant discharge consent. The appropriate process and techniques for achieving compliance vary from location to location and are essentially decided by the owner/operator of the treatment works. Reed beds are acknowledged to be a suitable technology and are used in many situations, including at works managed by water companies (instead of, or in addition to other processes). As we look at making development more sustainable, by reducing carbon inputs, reed beds may be one of the techniques that facilitate this.

Whales: Conservation

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's policy is on fish imports from (a)

Norway and (b) Iceland; and what account was taken of those countries' policies on whaling in formulating this policy. [127038]

Mr. Bradshaw: Fisheries agreements with third countries, including those on imports, are negotiated by the European Commission on behalf of all member sates. Neither the Council of Ministers nor the Commission exercises Community competence over whaling issues and there is no common EU line on whaling matters. Not all EU member states are even members of the International Whaling Commission. As such, negotiations with third countries on fisheries and trade matters are unaffected by those countries' stance on whaling. While the European Commission joined the recent demarche against Iceland over its resumption of commercial whaling, it did so on its own behalf, rather than on behalf of member states.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will write to EU member states asking them to join the International Whaling Commission (IWC) in sufficient time to enable them to be eligible for voting rights at this year's IWC meeting in May. [127039]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right, hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Foreign Secretary have recently jointly written to a dozen EU and Accession States encouraging them to join the International Whaling Commission. A new publication, 'Protecting Whales —A Global Responsibility', endorsed by the Prime Minister and Sir David Attenborough has also been sent to these countries encouraging them to join the effort to protect all cetacean species. UK embassies and Ministers across Government will continue to lobby on this issue in the run-up to the next annual meeting of the IWC in Alaska in May. However, not all of those who are willing to join the IWC will be able to complete the necessary parliamentary processes in time to secure voting rights at the 2007 meeting.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan: Drugs

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support is being given to revitalise the Afghan economy as part of the UK's counter-narcotics strategy in Afghanistan. [127070]

Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply.

The UK is spending £270 million over three years to support the Government of Afghanistan's (GoA) National Drug Control Strategy. We have helped the GoA create a Counter Narcotics Trust Fund to mobilise international donor support and develop Afghan counter narcotics planning and capacity. DFID plays a key role by promoting alternative, legal livelihoods to help revitalise the Afghan economy. Legal livelihoods can be regulated and taxed by the government, and form the basis for long-term, sustainable economic growth. DFID's Livelihoods Programme, worth nearly £150 million between 2006-09, is supporting GoA National Priority Programmes to develop legal livelihood opportunities as alternatives to poppy farming. Examples include our £18 million support for the National Rural Access Programme (NRAP) and our £20 million contribution over three years to the Micro-finance Investment Support Facility of Afghanistan (MISFA). NRAP has built essential infrastructure such as roads, bridges and irrigation schemes, and has generated over 15 million days of labour for Afghans. MISFA has so far provided small loans to over 230,000 Afghan families. This has enabled poor people who would otherwise not have access to credit to successfully invest in income-generating activities.

DFID is also contributing £9 million to the GoA to help boost legal private sector activity by reducing red tape and improving the business environment, and supporting the mining sector and encouraging foreign investment. Of this, £1 million has been channelled through a World Bank-managed Trust Fund which provides risk guarantees to attract foreign investors. In the past year, this Trust Fund has supported three projects which are expected to trigger over $26 million of investment, stimulate the cotton and pharmaceutical sector, and expand access to credit. This will help to further enhance private sector opportunities and revitalise the legal Afghan economy.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many alternative livelihoods projects have been established in Helmand Province; and if she will make a statement. [127167]

Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply.

DFID has helped to establish a range of alternative livelihoods projects in Helmand. We are providing £30 million over three years to the Helmand Agriculture and Rural Development Programme (HARDP), from 2006 to 2009. This programme is increasing alternative livelihood opportunities for the rural poor of Helmand by supporting the Government of Afghanistan's implementation of its National Priority Programmes. These include the National Solidarity Programme, National Rural Access Programme, Micro-Finance Investment and Support Facility in Afghanistan, and Water and Sanitation Programme. They are providing longer-term improvements in water and sanitation, essential small-scale rural infrastructure, and access to small loans, as well as improved roads, access to markets, agricultural inputs and training.

DFID is also funding the £3 million Research into Alternative Livelihoods Fund (RALF). This supports work on alternative livelihoods in Helmand, for example through the Restorative Agriculture and Rural Economy Research Project, which explores the export feasibility of numerous crops including grapes, tomatoes, mushrooms, eggplants and okra. The project is evaluating different small-scale agri-processing industries, and producing case studies of value-added alternative livelihood options, for example tomato paste.

We are funding 114 Quick Impact Projects (QIPs) in Helmand. These are not all alternative livelihoods projects, but they do support a range of income-generating activities for poor people. These include furniture-making, construction, carpet-weaving and the provision of tractors for farming.

Project Al Yamamah

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been received by her Department on the Al Yamamah military contract since the announcement that the Serious Fraud Office was ending its investigation into the contract.

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to my right hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz) on 26 February, Official Report, column 1138W.

Turkmenistan

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with representatives of the Government of Turkmenistan following the election of Kurbanguly Berdymukhamedov. [127611]

Mr. Hoon: Our ambassador, and other EU ambassadors resident in Ashgabat, met the Foreign Minister of Turkmenistan, Rashid Meredov, on 15 February.

Also on 15 February, the EU special representative for Central Asia, Pierre Morel, met President Berdymukhamedov. The talks focussed on possible future co-operation between the EU and Turkmenistan on the areas of reform announced by President Berdymukhamedov during his inauguration speech, including healthcare, education and agriculture.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with independent observers of the presidential election in Turkmenistan held on 11 February 2007. [127612]

Mr. Hoon: The Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe's Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights sent a technical assistance team to Turkmenistan for the presidential election. The UN also visited Turkmenistan in the period of the presidential election and discussed possible electoral reform with the Turkmen authorities. However, neither sent an observation mission to the presidential election in Turkmenistan on 11 February.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) she and (b) her Ministerial colleagues have had with (i) EU counterparts and (ii) other governments in the region of Turkmenistan, following the election of Kurbanguly Berdymukhamedov. [127613]

Mr. Hoon: We are working closely with our EU partners on how the EU can best support and assist the Government of Turkmenistan to implement democratic and human rights reforms following the presidential election on 11 February.

The EU Special Representative for Central Asia, Pierre Morel, met President Berdymukhamedov on 15 February and later that day saw the Foreign Minister, Rashid Meredov, with EU Ambassadors. The EU stands ready to co-operate with the Government of Turkmenistan to help support the implementation of the government's reform programme, particularly in the areas of rule of law and social development, agriculture, economy, education and the environment. An EU-Turkmenistan Seminar on Social and Human Development will take place in April. This will also involve other international organisations and UN agencies.

Our Ambassadors in the region discuss regional and country specific issues with their host foreign ministries on a regular basis.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) she and (b) her Ministerial colleagues have had with the UN Human Rights Council on proposed visits to Turkmenistan following the election of Kurbanguly Berdymukhamedov. [127614]

Mr. Hoon: We very much welcome the suggestion that the UN Commissioner for Human Rights and the Rapporteur on Religious Freedom visit Turkmenistan. However, to date, we have had no direct discussions in the UN Human Rights Council on this issue. The timing and agenda for such visits depends on the Government of Turkmenistan.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions (a) she and (b) her Ministerial colleagues have had with representatives of the government of Turkmenistan on travel restrictions and the imprisonment of dissidents. [127615]

Mr. Hoon: There have been no recent discussions with the Government of Turkmenistan specifically on travel restrictions or the imprisonment of dissidents. However, during his latest visit to Turkmenistan, the EU Special Representative for Central Asia, Pierre Morel, raised the issue of human rights. Our Ambassador in Ashgabat also raises the issue of human rights at every appropriate opportunity and the Embassy continues to follow developments in this area, supporting individual cases.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the implications of the election of Kurbanguly Berdymukhamedov for relations between the UK and Turkmenistan. [127689]

Mr. Hoon: Following the election of President Berdymukhamedov, there have been welcome signs of a new commitment to reform in Turkmenistan. The UK stands ready to work closely with our EU and international partners to support and encourage this reform, particularly in the areas of rule of law and social development, agriculture, economy, education and the environment. An EU-Turkmenistan seminar on social and human development is planned to take place in April. With possible forthcoming visits from the UN Commissioner on Human Rights and the Rapporteur on Religious Freedom, there is potential for closer relations in a number of areas than in the past.

Uzbekistan

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with representatives of the Uzbek government on the imprisonment of Umida Niyazova, Mutabar Tadjibaeva and Gulbakhor Turaeva; and if she will make a statement. [127616]

Mr. Hoon: We remain concerned by the arrests of Umida Niyazova and Gulbakhor Turaeva. Our Embassy in Tashkent is following their situation closely, remaining in touch with human rights groups and Niyazova's lawyer. Our Ambassador raised both cases with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on 2 February. The German Embassy, as EU Presidency, has registered with the Uzbek authorities the EU's concern at the detention of both women, in Note Verbales on 13 and 20 February.

We have followed the case of Mutabar Tadjibaeva closely since her arrest in 2005. Our Embassy was present at her trial. We are working closely with human rights groups in touch with her family. We are concerned at reports that her relatives have been refused access to her. We regularly raise Tadjibaeva's case with the Uzbek authorities, bilaterally and through the EU.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) she and (b) her ministerial colleagues have had with representatives of the German government on Uzbekistan. [127617]

Mr. Hoon: We discuss Uzbekistan with the German Government regularly. Most recently, the EU General Affairs and External Relations Council discussed Uzbekistan on 5 March.

Our ambassador in Tashkent is also in regular contact with his German and other EU colleagues. Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials also maintain a regular dialogue with German officials on Uzbekistan, in London, Berlin and Brussels.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) she and (b) her ministerial colleagues have had with representatives of other Governments in Central Asia on Uzbekistan. [127618]

Mr. Hoon: I discussed Uzbekistan with the Kazakh Foreign Minister during my visit to Kazakhstan in September 2006. Our ambassadors in Central Asia discuss regional and country specific issues with their host foreign ministries on a regular basis.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the human rights situation in Uzbekistan. [127619]

Mr. Hoon: The human rights situation remains a cause for concern. The situation has deteriorated further since November 2006. There have been more arrests of respected human rights defenders, including Umida Niyazova, who worked as an interpreter for Human Rights Watch in Tashkent. The International Committee of the Red Cross have not yet been able to visit prisons, despite apparently reaching agreement with the Uzbeks in November 2006. The Uzbek authorities continue to deny access to, and information on, the whereabouts of individuals of concern to the EU, for example Zainabiddinov and Tadjibaeva. More foreign non-governmental organizations in Tashkent, such as World Vision, are facing threats of eviction from the country.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her counterpart in South Africa on the arrest and detention of Morgan Tsvangirai by security forces in Zimbabwe on 11 March 2007; and if she will make a statement. [128635]

Mr. McCartney: I raised in strong terms our concerns at the UN Human Rights Council on 13 March. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary spoke on 15 March to her South African counterpart about the worsening situation in Zimbabwe. We will continue to press South Africa and other African states to put pressure on Mugabe to allow peaceful protests to occur and to engage with the democratic opposition and civil society to bring about a resolution to Zimbabwe's problems.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has already made a statement publicly recording her condemnation of the shooting, arrest and beatings of protestors in Harare on 11 March.

Zimbabwe: Human Rights

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans she has to discuss recent human rights abuses in Zimbabwe with EU member governments; and if she will make a statement. [128504]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed Zimbabwe with the Swedish Minister for Foreign Affairs, Carl Bildt, on 15 March and it will be a subject for discussion with the Spanish Foreign Minister on 19 March. I raised in strong terms our concerns at the UN Human Rights Council on 13 March. We believe that the EU should show its abhorrence of state-sponsored violence on 11 March by adding key perpetrators to the EU's visa ban list. The EU will also engage southern African governments on the issue, following the visit by President Kikwete of Tanzania to Zimbabwe on 15 March.

Zimbabwe: Politics and Government

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received of the treatment in detention of Morgan Tsvangirai, Arthur Mutambara and other democracy activists in Zimbabwe. [128158]

Mr. McCartney: From their injuries, it is clear to all that Morgan Tsvangirai and others who were detained on 11 March were subjected to treatment of the most barbaric kind. This demonstrates Mugabe and his government's total disregard for international law and the depths to which they are prepared to sink to silence their democratic opponents.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her counterparts in (a) the United States, (b) China, (c) the Russian Federation and (d) France on the Zimbabwean Government's recent treatment of democracy activists at a prayer meeting in Harare. [128159]

Mr. McCartney: We remain in close contact with all permanent members of the UN Security Council and encourage the UN to remain focussed on all aspects of the worsening situation in Zimbabwe. We welcomed the clear statements from the UN Secretary-General and the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights condemning the recent arrests and beatings.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received of violence toward democracy activists detained by the Government of Zimbabwe following a prayer meeting in Harare; and what representations she has made to (a) her counterparts in the European Union, (b) the EU External Affairs Commissioner and (c) her counterparts in South Africa on the issue. [128160]

Mr. McCartney: Our embassy in Harare is keeping us informed of events in Zimbabwe. Both my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, have made statements expressing our deep condemnation of what has happened there in recent days. I raised in strong terms our concerns at the UN Human Rights Council on 13 March. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed Zimbabwe with Nksozana Dlamini-Zuma and Carl Bildt on 15 March. We are in close contact with other EU countries and continue to discuss what needs to happen to relieve the terrible economic and humanitarian crisis facing its people.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate she has made of the number killed or seriously wounded in the recent incident at the prayer meeting at Highfield in Harare. [128161]

Mr. McCartney: Reports indicate that one movement for democratic change activist named Gift Tandare was shot and killed at the save Zimbabwe campaign prayer meeting on 11 March. Many others were wounded, some very seriously. 12 of those arrested and most seriously beaten both on and after arrest, including Morgan Tsvangirai, are still recovering in hospital. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has condemned the shooting, arrest and beatings of those who were protesting peacefully.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has held with the British Ambassador to Harare on violence and intimidation towards democracy activists detained in Zimbabwe. [128172]

Mr. McCartney: Our ambassador in Harare and officials from the embassy are closely following events on the ground, talking to those who were involved and reporting back on developments. At this critical time in Zimbabwe, their accurate and timely reporting is absolutely crucial.

Zimbabwe: Judiciary

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the impartiality of the judiciary in Zimbabwe. [128109]

Mr. McCartney: Against the background of Zimbabwe's deepening economic and humanitarian crisis, we are increasingly concerned at the capacity of the Zimbabwean judiciary to maintain its quality of service and to resist increasing, overt political pressure. Only last month, a senior judge in Zimbabwe voiced her concerns in this regard and there are already strains beginning to show in the magistrates courts.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he intends to deploy Challenger tanks in Afghanistan. [127026]

Des Browne: There are no plans to send Challenger tanks to Afghanistan at present.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) suicide and (b) improvised explosive device attacks against NATO forces in Afghanistan were recorded in (i) 2005 and (ii) 2006. [127155]

Mr. Ingram: The number of attacks in Afghanistan has increased significantly from 2005 to 2006. It is estimated that, in 2005, there were approximately 500 improvised explosive device (IED) attacks, of which approximately 25 were suicide IED attacks. In 2006, it is assessed that there were approximately 1,525 IED attacks, of which approximately 150 were suicide IED attacks. These figures do not necessarily represent the complete statistics but are an estimate. The majority of attacks are against International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) troops or Afghan National Security Forces (ANSF); however, it is not always possible to define the specific target in any given incident.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the total numbers of troops available to the International Security Assistance Force from (a) the United States, (b) Germany, (c) France and (d) the UK are serving in Afghanistan. [126690]

Des Browne: Of the total international security assistance force of around 35,500 troops, provided by the United States, Germany, France and the UK, the approximate percentages are as follows:

	Percentage
US	39
Germany	8
France	3
UK	15

The UK contribution will increase to approximately 21 per cent. once the force enhancements announced on 26 February have deployed fully.

Armed Forces: Prosecutions

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Army legal service are investigating legal cases related to operations in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan. [128079]

Mr. Ingram: The Army legal services branch of the Adjutant General's Corps (ALS) does not investigate cases, this is the role of the Royal Military Police (RMP). The role of ALS is threefold: the provision of advice to the chain of command on, inter alia, disciplinary matters; the provision of a prosecuting authority for the Army; and the provision of a legal advice service for servicemen and their families stationed overseas.

At this time ALS has two officers serving in Iraq providing advice to the chain of command on disciplinary matters and one officer in Afghanistan providing legal assistance to soldiers deployed in theatre. Four officers from the Army Prosecuting Authority (APA) have cases in their current caseload related to operations in Afghanistan and Iraq: one case is related to operations in Afghanistan and three are related to operations in Iraq.

Armed Forces: Training

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the long-term effects of physical training on the joints of servicemen are better understood; and if he will make a statement. [123254]

Derek Twigg: UK service personnel will characteristically take part in a wide range of physical activities during the course of their service. These will include not only supervised activities related to their training, but also many unsupervised physical activities, physical training and sport undertaken at their own volition. For this reason, it is often not possible to attribute with confidence a specific chronic overuse injury to any single, supervised, physical training activity.

However, the nature and occurrence of the most common lower limb injuries (LLI) have formed the focus for many research papers, and LLI have been shown to be common to military populations throughout NATO. When all factors have been considered, the single most commonly-cited physical activity during which the majority of overuse lower limb injuries have been reported is running.

MOD undertakes research to understand the underlying factors which may explain the relatively high incidence (compared with age and gender-matched, non-military populations) of LLIs among service personnel. Research has been conducted (both by the UK and throughout NATO) on a regular basis since the 1970s. Recent research funded by MOD's Human Capability scientific research programme has included studies of the pathogenesis of stress fractures; bone health; musculoskeletal injuries; and a Physical Training shoe project.

Ballistic Missile Defence: USA

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether a decision on the deployment in the UK of US missiles for the US Missile Defense system will require the approval of Parliament. [126933]

Des Browne: There has been no request from the United States Government to base interceptor missiles anywhere in the United Kingdom. It has not been the practice of successive administrations to seek parliamentary approval for decisions of this type. The Government would in any case seek to ensure that Parliament had adequate opportunity for debate on issues relating to missile defence

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has held with (a) ministerial colleagues and (b) the United States on the UK hosting US interceptor missiles for the US missile defense system; and what the date was of the (i) first such discussion and (ii) most recent such discussion. [126956]

Des Browne: The UK regularly discusses with the US our contribution to their missile defense system. Discussions on possible additional support are at a early stage. There has been no request from the US Government to base missile interceptors anywhere in the UK. It is not the practice of the Government to make public details of all discussions with foreign Governments as this would, or would be likely to, prejudice international relations.

Diego Garcia: USA

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the use of Diego Garcia by the US for offensive purposes. [127994]

Des Browne: The UK's policy on the use of Diego Garcia by the US is based on the 1966 exchange of notes (updated in 1976 and with subsequent amendments and additions). The notes allow the US to use the base as a forward operating location for aircraft and ships and require the US to seek prior approval for any operations that they wish to undertake from Diego Garcia.

Iraq: Peacekeeping Operations

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the use by hostile forces of surface to air missiles in Iraq. [126480]

Des Browne: All threats to UK forces in Iraq are kept under constant review. This includes the threat posed by surface to air missiles. I am withholding further details as it would, or would be likely to, prejudice the capability, effectiveness and security of our armed forces.

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his US counterpart on the Iranian (a) personnel, (b) explosives and (c) expertise being used in Iraq. [126603]

Des Browne: I hold regular discussions with the US Defense Secretary on issues of mutual interest, including the situation in Iraq.

Iran is an influential neighbour in the region and its behaviour continues to be a cause for concern. We and the US continually assess the nature of insurgency in Iraq including the influence of outside groups.

Support from within Iran, including the Quds Force, goes to groups who are attacking our forces and fuels the sectarian violence in Iraq. In our assessment some of the improvised explosive devices that are being used against our forces use technology that originates from Iran.

Iranian links to illegal armed groups either through supply of weapons, training or funding, are completely unacceptable. We have said so and so have the Iraqi Government.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was of the (a) defence teams, (b) prosecution teams and (c) other costs related to the court martial in (i) the prosecution of the seven paratroopers for alleged crimes in Iraq in November 2005 and (ii) the prosecution of the four guardsmen for alleged crimes in Iraq in June 2006. [128083]

Mr. Ingram: The costs requested were:

	3 Para Trial	IG Trial
Defence costs	£3.04m	£1.283m
Prosecution costs	£0.254m	£0.193m
Other costs	£0.511m	£0.210m
Total	£3.813m	£1.686m

Mail Services

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will authorise the continuation of the free mail and parcel service to troops in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan. [115462]

Des Browne: A free packet scheme was first introduced on 17 April 2003, as a temporary measure unique to Iraq, at a time when service personnel did not have access to the welfare facilities that are now available in both Iraq and Afghanistan. A decision was taken to end the scheme on 8 April 2004 when the provision of goods and services in Iraq reached the required standard. These include welfare telephones (30 minutes free calls per person per week to anywhere in the world); unlimited free letter mail and electronic letters (where available); free e-mail and internet access; newspapers, magazines, books and board games; fitness equipment; and shopping facilities provided by the Expeditionary Forces Institute. The Department recognises that relatives will wish to send Christmas presents to those in operational theatres and a pre-Christmas free-packet scheme has therefore been a standard element of the Operational Welfare Package since 2005.

Operational welfare is a high priority for the Department and we have looked at extending the free packet scheme to become a permanent feature to all operational theatres where UK service personnel are deployed, but personnel on the ground stated a preference for improvements to welfare telephone and internet provision above free mail. On 10 October 2006, we announced improvements to the telephone and internet services, increasing the number of free telephone minutes from 20 to 30 per week.

Members: Correspondence

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to answer the letter of 24 January from the hon. Member for Gosport on Selly Oak hospital in Birmingham. [126968]

Derek Twigg: I wrote to the hon. Member on 19 March 2007.

Red Arrows

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent progress he has made on basing options for the Red Arrows. [127630]

Mr. Ingram: Work continues to identify the optimum basing solution for the Red Arrows, taking into account the team's operational requirements and the costs involved. No decision has yet been taken.

Security Guards

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts were awarded by his Department to private military security companies for work in (a) Iraq, (b) Afghanistan and (c) other countries in each of the last five years; what was the (i) value and (ii) purpose of each such contract; and if he will make a statement. [127016]

Mr. Ingram: For information on contracts let in Iraq I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Old Bexley and Sidcup (Derek Conway) on 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1657W.

For the purposes of this response I have taken the question to refer to armed security contracts overseas. One contract was awarded by the MOD in Afghanistan in financial year 2006-07, with a value of approximately £35,000. The contract was for the provision of security for UK civilian advisors to the Afghan MOD.

No other contracts of this type have been awarded in the last five years.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who is in command of the military medical staff attached to the NHS Selly Oak hospital; and at what rank. [128480]

Derek Twigg: The commanding officer of the NHS Selly Oak hospital is Air Commodore Anthony Batchelor CBE Bsc. MBBS FRCP FFOM DAvMed FRAes RAF and was appointed in August 2004.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military medical staff are attached to the NHS Selly Oak hospital, broken down by rank; and what duties they are allocated. [128481]

Derek Twigg: The information is not held in the format requested.

The details of the 156 military staff attached to Selly Oak hospital is currently being collated. I will write to the hon. Member when this is complete.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Casino Advisory Panel

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what research the Casino Advisory Panel (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated to estimate the likely earnings for regional casinos. [127653]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 15 March 2007]: None. However, the panel asked shortlisted local authorities what estimates they had made as to the likely profits of a casino in their area, insofar as it was relevant to the viability, likelihood of implementation and the likely regeneration benefits.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she made of the experience at a strategic and senior level in the regeneration of disadvantaged areas of the members of the Casino Advisory Panel before recommending their appointment. [128463]

Mr. Caborn: The Casino Advisory Panel was appointed in accordance with Nolan principles following an open competition. The independent interview panel which was responsible for the appointments process was satisfied that five individuals they recommended for appointment would mean that the panel would have available to it the required senior, strategic level experience in the areas specified in the person specification, including in the regeneration of disadvantaged areas.

Biographical details of the five individuals selected to become the chair and members of the panel were included in the press release, issued on 30 September 2005, which announced the establishment of the Panel.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the contribution of the Casino Advisory Panel's interpretation of social impact to the overall object of the Gambling Act 2005 on reducing problem gambling. [128465]

Mr. Caborn: None. The Casino Advisory Panel was asked to identify a range of areas for the one regional, eight large and eight small casinos permitted by the Gambling Act 2005 which would provide the best possible test of social impact. The panel's interpretation of this criterion, and its assessment of how each of the proposals before it rated against this criterion, is set out in the panel's report. The Government are satisfied that the panel has taken its terms of reference seriously and applied them in a balanced and consistent way.

All existing casinos, and any new casino that opens, will be subject to the stringent new safeguards we are introducing to ensure that the risk of problem gambling is minimised, in line with the overall objectives of the Gambling Act 2005.

Casinos

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 5 February 2007, Official Report, column 707W, on casinos, what factors were taken into account when deciding to commission Lancaster University to advise on the methodology for the assessment of social and economic impact of the new casinos; and if she will make a statement. [127521]

Mr. Caborn: Lancaster university was commissioned to advise on the methodology for the assessment of the social and economic impact of the new casinos following an open tender process. I am arranging for a copy of the invitation to tender to be placed in the House Libraries.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what revisions her Department has made to the national policy statement on casinos published in December 2004 after the reduction of the regional casino licence number to one during the passage of the Gambling Act in March 2005. [128462]

Mr. Caborn: One change has been made since April 2005.

Paragraph 24 of the national policy statement suggests that existing casinos would retain their current gaming machine entitlement of 10 machines. This entitlement was doubled to 20 from 1 October 2005, following a commitment made in Parliament by Lord McIntosh during the passage of the Gambling Bill, on 6 April 2005, House of Lords, Official Report, column 837.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department held with the Gambling Commission on the implications of using a test of social impact for awarding a regional casino licence for the progress towards the objective of controlling problem gambling. [128466]

Mr. Caborn: None. The Government published the criteria they proposed to use for selecting the areas where the new categories casinos permitted by the Gambling Act 2005 would be located in their national statement of policy published on 16 December 2004. The Gambling Commission came into being on 1 October 2005.

Conservation Officers: Training

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what training her Department provides for local authority conservation officers. [127646]

Mr. Lammy: My Department does not provide training for local authority conservation officers. However, English Heritage offers a range of developmental opportunities for conservation officers and other historic environment professionals.

These include training organised through the Historic Environment Local Management (HELM) project, and through the Oxford University Department of Continuing Education Professional Training in the Historic Environment programme.

English Heritage also works closely with the Institute of Historic Building Conservation (IHBC). A recently completed English Heritage/IHBC survey of conservation officers in England will help to identify their training needs, and in turn inform future training provision.

Departments: Advertising

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her Department's total spending was on advertising and promotional campaigns in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each campaign was, broken down by costs relating to (a) television, (b) radio and (c) print media. [128089]

Mr. Lammy: The Department had a zero spend on advertising and promotional campaigns between 1997 and 2002. Expenditure in subsequent years is set out as follows:

	Campaign	Spend (£)
2003-04	BBC Charter (Press advertising)	20,987
2004-05	BBC Charter (Radio advertising)	37,085
2004-05	Digital Switchover (PR)	170,000
2005-06	Digital Switchover (PR)	320,000
2005-06	Licensing Communications broken down as:	139,578
	PR	70,000
	Direct mail	18,550
	Press advertising	51,028
2006-07	Tourism Consultation broken down as:	12,868
	Press advertising	4,903
	Direct mail	7,965
2006-07	Digital Switchover (PR)	90,880

Film: Archives

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects the national plan for regional film archives to be published. [127941]

Mr. Woodward: The UK Film Council is working with the British Film Institute (BFI) and key stakeholders to develop a national film archive strategy and business plan. It is expected that this strategy for the BFI national archive and the eight regional film archives will be published on May 31 2007.

Gambling: Misuse

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment her Department has made of the effects of problem gambling; what estimate she has made of the numbers of problem gamblers; and what reports her Department has produced on problem gambling. [128169]

Mr. Caborn: The current estimate is that 0.6 per cent. of the adult population of Great Britain are problem gamblers. This figure is drawn from 'Gambling Behaviour in Britain: Results from the British Gambling Prevalence Study' (National Centre for Social Research, June 2000).

The Gambling Commission is conducting a further prevalence study and will report in autumn 2007.

Licensed Premises: Tamworth

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many licensed premises there are in Tamworth constituency and how many of these are (a) public houses, (b) clubs, (c) supermarkets and (d) off-licences. [128333]

Mr. Woodward: This information is not held centrally.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will break down the funding allocated to (a) English Institute of Sport (EIS) services, (b) sports science and (c) sports medicine services for each Summer Olympic sport within their World Class Reference Pathway Funding through to 2009 as referred to in the answer of 29 June 2006, Official Report, columns 569-70W, on the Olympics. [127949]

Mr. Caborn: As part of the investment model, UK Sport is providing lottery funding of £10.5 million to the EIS for this and for each of the next two financial years. In addition, UK Sport has confirmed to Summer Olympic sports a guideline figure to be spent on sports science and sports medicine (SS/SM) services. The guideline figure provided to each sport is shown in the following table. It is up to the individual sport in conjunction with UK Sport to agree the exact amount invested into SS/SM services. It is important to recognise that sports can purchase additional SS/SM services at any time and therefore there is no cut-off point when a sport will stop purchasing extra support.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has for the use of the shooting ranges' site at Woolwich following the 2012 London Olympics; and if she will make a statement. [128140]

Mr. Caborn: The Olympic Delivery Authority, the body responsible for constructing Games facilities, and the London 2012 Organising Committee venues team, are looking carefully at the post Games use of all proposed facilities being developed for the shooting competitions at Woolwich.

The Government are working hard with our other London 2012 stakeholders to ensure a lasting legacy for all Olympic and Paralympic sports, including shooting, in terms of facilities, increased exposure and increased participation, for London and the UK as a whole.

Olympic Games: Investment

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1675W, on Olympic Games: investment, if she will break down the figures by Olympic and Paralympic sports; and what the reasons are for the difference from the figure of £215.4 million quoted in UK Sport's Guide to World Class Pathway, Summer Olympic and Paralympic Investment 2006-09. [127948]

Mr. Caborn: The breakdown of the Olympic and Paralympic investment is shown in the following table.

Since the original Pathway Investment figure was quoted, there has been an additional £1 million investment made into Paralympic sport which explains why the latest total is now £216.4 million.

The reason why there is a difference from the original quoted figure of £215.4 million and the figure of £250.2 million quoted in the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1675W, is due to the fact that the original figure only referred to funding linked directly to the sports. It does not include the total funding allocated to support the Performance Pathway. For example, UK Sport is investing additional resources into the following areas: research and innovation, increased athlete medical support, funding to support the British Paralympic Association and operational costs to support the English Institute of Sport (EIS).

VisitBritain: Standards

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether her Department has set targets for VisitBritain; and if she will make a statement. [127515]

Mr. Woodward: DCMS set targets for VisitBritain on return on grant in aid investment, regional and seasonal spread, and key areas of consumer engagement. These are set out in the Funding Agreement between the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and VisitBritain 2005-06 to 2007-08, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Visual Arts: Sales

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the merits of giving priority to private domestic buyers over foreign institutions open to the public in purchasing artworks proposed for export. [128174]

Mr. Lammy: In 1996, the then Secretary of State consulted on whether any specific conditions should be attached to offers to purchase export deferred items made by private buyers. As a result of that consultation, it was decided that an owner's refusal to accept such an offer from a private buyer should lead to an export licence being refused only if the private buyer is able to guarantee reasonable public access and satisfactory conservation conditions for the art work. This remains the position. If an individual refuses an offer where such assurances have been provided, the licence application will normally be refused.

Works of Art: Valuation

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she has taken to ensure that proposed sales and valuations of works of art subject to examination by the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art are genuine. [128259]

Mr. Lammy: When making a decision on whether a valuation is acceptable, I ensure that sufficient information has been provided to justify it. The Reviewing Committee is vigilant in requiring such information and will not recommend a fair matching price unless satisfied it has been properly justified. In a number of cases where the Committee has not been satisfied with the justification for the valuation, it has recommended that I obtain an independent valuation and I have done so.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan: Land

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the process of the registration of land of all administrative units and the registration of titles was completed for all major urban areas in Afghanistan by the end of 2010 in accordance with the target of the London Compact of 2006; whether he expects the process to have been completed for all other areas by the end of 2008; and what further progress he expects to be made towards these targets by the end of 2007. [127528]

Hilary Benn: The Government of Afghanistan has revised its benchmark on land registration and titling, which now reads as follows:

> "a process for registration of land in all administrative units and the registration of land titles will be started for all major urban areas by end-2006 and all other areas by end-2008. A fair system for settlement of land disputes will be in place by end-2007. Registration for rural land will be under way by end-2007".

The revised end-2006 benchmarks for registration of land and land titles in all urban areas have not been met. However, a number of steps have been taken as follows:

A white paper on formalisation of informal property rights was prepared and approved by the Ministry of Urban Development (MoUD). The recommendations made by the White Paper have been updated and incorporated in the draft land policy;

A property rights certification process has been piloted in two districts of Kabul, prior to the formalisation of land tenure;

The land register and survey that defines or re-establishes boundaries of public and/or private land for purposes of ownership and taxation is being modernised;

A Land Information System database has been established in Kabul, in collaboration with key stakeholders;

The Supreme Court has agreed to simplify the process for property transfer; and

The property archives in 15 out of 34 provinces have been reorganised and staff have been retrained in document management and security.

Looking forward, the Government of Afghanistan has committed to approving a comprehensive land policy by April 2007. This will provide guidance on dealing with crucial issues such as land grabbing, informal development, and the allocation and management of land. The Government has also committed to drafting the legislation needed to clarify and then improve the land tenure security of urban residents by April 2007. Finally, the Government has renewed its commitment to reform the system for settlement of land disputes, and improve registration of rural land by the end of 2007.

Departments: Contracts

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contracts were awarded by his Department to private military security companies for work in (a) Iraq, (b) Afghanistan and (c) other countries in each of the last five years; what the (i) value and (ii) purpose was of each such contract; and if he will make a statement. [127015]

Hilary Benn: DFID engages private security companies to provide security of our staff in high threat environments. ArmorGroup, Control Risks Group (CRG), and Kroll, have provided mobile security for DFID staff, consultants and static guarding for our compounds in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Since June 2004, DFID's security needs in Iraq have been met by contracts managed and administered by the FCO. The following costs have been incurred by DFID:

	Cost to DFID (£ million)
2003-04	[1]5
2004-05	14.2
2005-06	12.9
2006-07	6.1
Total	38.2

[1] DFID contract.

The Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP) Iraq Strategy also has significant programme spend on police/prison reform elements of police capacity building programme contracted to ArmorGroup who utilise both CRG and military (escorts) to provide security for their personnel.

In Afghanistan, DFID has awarded a number of contracts to ArmorGroup for armed protection of the main DFID office and residential compounds. These contracts also provide close protection (armed bodyguards) to staff when travelling to locations in Afghanistan deemed medium/high risk, and defensive driving training to our locally employed drivers. The value of this contract from June 2004 to December 2006 was £3,217,691. Since January 2007, DFID's security needs have been met through a contract issued by the FCO.

Many of our overseas offices have contracts with local private security companies to guard residential properties. Each office would need to be contacted to provide details of the companies used and the value of each security contract. To obtain this information would incur a disproportionate cost.

Developing Countries: Politics and Government

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to encourage the composition of parliaments in developing countries to reflect the population of those countries in terms of (a) gender, (b) ethnicity, (c) religious belief and (d) sexuality; and if he will make a statement. [127441]

Hilary Benn: As part of its commitment to promoting good governance, DFID works to strengthen the parliaments of developing countries. What we do is different in different countries, depending on our assessment of what the priorities are. In some places we will focus more on the legislative function of parliaments, for instance, while in others our efforts will be channelled more towards strengthening oversight of the executive.

Representation is of course a core function of parliaments everywhere, and DFID recognises that a representative parliament has a head start on this.

One of the initiatives DFID has supported recently to improve representativeness is the High Level Committee on Reservations which has developed recommendations for affirmative action for women and dalits in the political structures of Nepal. Another group we have supported is the Forum des Femmes Rwandaises Parliamentaires (FFRP). The FFRP comprises all the women members of the Rwandan Parliament—and at 48.8 per cent. Rwanda has the highest female representation in the world. Our most recent support to the FFRP funded a conference on 22 and 23 February that celebrated the progress made towards gender equality in Rwanda. It also produced the "Kigali Declaration", that will add vitality to the efforts of other African countries to get more women into Parliament—following Rwanda's example.

As we increase our focus on accountable, responsive governance, DFID will support more groups like Nepal's Reservations Committee and the FFRP—not only to get disadvantaged groups into parliaments, but to ensure they function effectively once there.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what information is collected by his Department on the extent to which national parliaments of developing countries are representative of their populations in terms of (a) gender, (b) ethnicity, (c) religious belief and (d) sexuality. [127442]

Hilary Benn: The proportion of seats held by women in national parliaments is an indicator used to monitor progress towards the Millennium Development Goal to promote gender equality and empower women. The number of women in parliaments is also one of the governance indicators included in the new Country Governance Analysis (CGA) that is now a mandatory component of DFID's Country Assistance Planning process. DFID tracks progress on the gender composition of parliaments using data compiled by the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union.

Information on the composition of national parliaments by ethnicity, religion and sexuality is not as easy to find. I am not aware of any international initiative to gather this information systematically. Where it is available—for one or more of these categories in particular parliaments—it is likely that our country offices hold this information, but it is not gathered and stored by DFID centrally.

Developing Countries: Poverty

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what response he has made to the National Audit Office report Tackling Rural Poverty in Developing Countries; and if he will make a statement. [128470]

Mr. Thomas: DFID welcomes the report and is pleased that the NAO has recognised DFID's achievements in providing help to rural communities. The Public Accounts Committee will hold a hearing on the report on 4 June. DFID is studying the detailed analysis and recommendations in the report and is preparing to respond to the PAC.

Overseas Aid: Corruption

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of corruption in British companies upon the effectiveness of good governance initiatives in the developing world; [126938]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of corruption in British companies upon the achievement of development objectives overseas. [126929]

Hilary Benn: At a global level the World Bank Institute estimates that US$1 trillion plus or minus 40 per cent. is paid in bribes every year, representing 3 per cent. of the world's gross domestic product. No firm estimates exist on how this issue affects UK business specifically. The obstacles to measuring corruption scientifically have led to the measurement of perceptions.

Transparency International's Bribe-payers Index (BPI) aims to evaluate the supply side of corruption by asking business experts in emerging economies for their impressions of the likelihood that companies from the listed countries pay or offer bribes in their business activities. The highest ranked country is the one whose companies are seen as least likely to pay bribes. The UK is ranked 6th out of 30 countries, the 2nd G7 country and 3rd EU country in the table. But the UK is not complacent because, as the UK White Paper on Eliminating World Poverty recognises, 'Corruption undermines the accountability of political leaders and officials to their citizens. When politicians are 'bought' by powerful people or businesses through bribery, or when leaders themselves use personal or public funds to buy support, they become representatives of the few and not the many. In short, corruption is both a cause and a symptom of bad governance.' Any such impact will undermine work to promote good governance and reduce poverty in developing countries.

Slavery

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to tackle modern slavery. [127999]

Mr. Thomas: DFID supports long-term development programmes to tackle the poverty and social exclusion that make people vulnerable to modern slavery.

The UK is also a major supporter of the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and its Special Action Programme on Forced Labour (SAP-FL). We will provide core funding of almost £2 million to SAP-FL over the next three years, in addition to support to individual country programmes.

Last month DFID published a booklet, "Breaking the Chains: Eliminating slavery, ending poverty". It highlights the link between the fight against slavery and poverty and some of the work the UK is supporting through the ILO and other organisations.

Sri Lanka: Overseas Aid

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what recent discussions the Government have had with President Rajapakse on aid to the Tamil people of north-east Sri Lanka; and if he will make a statement; [128030]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that humanitarian aid reaches the people of north-east Sri Lanka following the blocking of the main road route into the area; and if he will make a statement. [127987]

Mr. Thomas: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I met the Sri Lankan Foreign Minister on 7 March. My hon. Friend, the Minister for the Middle East met the Sri Lankan President on 15 February. At these meetings we discussed the impact of the conflict on civilians of all ethnic groups and how the UK could best assist progress towards a settlement of Sri Lanka's tragic conflict.

In September 2006 DFID gave US$1 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) and the UN for immediate humanitarian assistance. We are considering how to respond to the UN's latest request for funding to its 2007 Common Humanitarian Action Plan.

World Bank

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) how much his Department contributed to the World Bank's Public-Private Infrastructure Advisory Facility in each of the last five years; [126124]

(2) if he will make a statement on the World Bank's Public-Private Infrastructure Advisory Facility. [126125]

Hilary Benn: Although the Public Private Infrastructure Advisory Facility (PPIAF) is not a World Bank fund, it is housed in the World Bank offices in Washington. It is a good example of donors successfully working together in development. The World Bank is one of 14 PPIAF donors.

DFID has supported PPIAF over three phases since 1999. Our total commitment to PPIAF from 1999 to 2008 is £53 million. DFID provided the following funding to PPIAF over the last five financial years.

	Amount (£)
2005-06	2,804,781
2004-05	6,525,733
2003-04	7,179,905
2002-03	8,209,761
2001-02	3,598,848

Where developing country Governments do not have the capacity to provide good quality infrastructure and services for their people, PPIAF helps them to develop sound policies, regulations and institutions. PPIAF does this by providing developing country Governments with technical assistance which they can use to tap the full potential of public private partnerships in infrastructure. PPIAF also identifies, communicates and promotes best practice on matters relating to public private partnerships in infrastructure. It is also recognised as a leading resource for training and best practice in the role of public private partnerships in infrastructure service delivery.

There are may examples of PPIAF's success. For example Kenya PPIAF provided technical assistance and training to enable micro-credit banks to lend to small water providers to provide clean water to rural and semi-urban communities. This has led to 21 micro-credit investments and an output based grant which will result in 60,000 people gaining access to clean water.

Also in Ghana, PPIAF supported the Ghana Community Water and Sanitation Agency with regulatory and legal reform to improve small town water services. This has allowed local water operators to provide clean water to communities for the first time. Communities themselves were involved in the selection of the water providers. This has been successfully implemented in three towns and will be extended to 300 small towns across the country.

After the war in 2002, the Government of Afghanistan recognised that they needed to expand telecommunications access and improve service delivery. They encouraged private mobile phone operators into their market, and asked the PPIAF to help them develop the initial regulatory framework and build the Government's own capacity and understanding of technical, commercial and regulatory issues. Today, where once there were only two telephones for every 1,000 people, there are now more than 1 million mobile phone subscribers with national and global access, and prices have declined by 70 per cent. through competition. This allows a journalist in Kabul to host a phone-in radio programme providing counselling to women, and helps small scale businesses like carpet merchants, brick sellers and mechanics to manage their businesses effectively and successfully.

An independent strategic review of PPIAF in 2004 and internal DFID reviews have concluded that PPIAF is successful in what it does. Specifically, it has helped developing country Governments' capacity to improve their policies, laws, regulations and procedures that have resulted in better infrastructure and better services for their people. The PPIAF has also been recognised as a centre of excellence for advice to developing countries on public private partnerships, and there is high demand for PPIAF's services.

Further information about the PPIAF and its successes can be found in the document entitled 'Public Private Infrastructure Advisory Facility (PPIAF): Helping developing countries to eliminate poverty and achieve sustainable development through Public-Private Partnerships in Infrastructure', copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Refuges

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much funding was allocated by his Department in each of the last three years towards providing shelters and other emergency accommodation for those affected by domestic violence. [128182]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is shown in the following table.

The 'supporting people funding' provided by the Housing Executive for accommodation and support services for those affected by domestic violence

	2004-07[1]	2006-07	2005-06	2004-05

The total amount of housing benefit paid with respect to such accommodation over the last three financial years was £1,003,636.62. This is in addition to the figures detailed above.

In the current financial year £676.439 in housing association grant has been allocated for the provision of accommodation to go on site this year.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

David Kelly

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs at what time and at what location on 14 August 2003 the resumed inquest into the death of Dr. David Kelly took place. [126379]

Ms Harman: I am informed by the Oxfordshire coroner that the resumed inquest into the death of Dr. David Kelly took place at approximately 10 am in the Old Assize court at County Hall Oxford.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the resumed inquest on 14 August 2003 into the death of Dr. David Kelly was a public hearing; who was given prior notification of the intention to hold this hearing; and on what date that notification was given. [126380]

Ms Harman: I am informed by the Oxfordshire coroner that the resumed inquest into the death of Dr. David Kelly was held in public on 14 August 2003. Notification was given to the interested persons and the press by telephone shortly beforehand.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the statutory basis was on which the Lord Chancellor asked the Oxfordshire coroner, in a letter dated 12 August 2003, to (a) keep the proceedings relating to the inquest into the death of Dr. David Kelly as short as possible and (b) take the evidence in writing. [126381]

Ms Harman: In his private secretary's letter of 12 August 2003 the Lord Chancellor required the Oxfordshire coroner to adjourn the Kelly inquest in accordance with section 17A of the Coroners Act 1988. He also requested that the coroner keep the proceedings as short as possible and, as far as the Coroners Rules allowed, to take the evidence in writing. There was no statutory basis for these requests.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the compliance by the Oxfordshire coroner, in his consideration of the death of Dr. David Kelly, with the requirements of Rule 37 of the Coroners' Code, with particular reference to (a) the likelihood of documentary evidence being disputed and (b) the issuing of a public announcement relating to the admission of documentary evidence. [126382]

Ms Harman: The coroner is an independent judicial officer. I do not comment on such decisions which are made in the coroner's judicial capacity.

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many work permits were applied for by (a) her Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [126794]

Vera Baird: It is part of standard pre-employment checks at recruitment stage to ensure that staff applying to be employed within the Department for Constitutional Affairs and its agencies are eligible to work in the civil service and meet the civil service nationality rules. Individuals who require a work permit may be employed in the civil service, but only in exceptional circumstances. Under TUPE terms staff from the 42 former Magistrates Courts Committees, each of which has separate terms and conditions, are exempt from civil service nationality rules. Information on how many work permits have been applied for in each of the last five years is not held centrally. To calculate the precise number of work permits applied for would incur disproportionate cost to the Department and its agencies.

Entry Clearances: Pakistan

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the Immigration Appeal Tribunal has sent the decision papers on cases VA/08797/2006, VA/08788/2006 and VA/08793/2006 in which the Immigration Judge ruled on 6 October 2006 to (a) the Home Department and (b) HM High Commission, Islamabad. [127754]

Bridget Prentice: Information shows that the Immigration Judge determinations for appeal references VA/08797/2006, VA/08788/2006 and VA/08793/2006 were served upon the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) of the Home Office on 16 October 2006.

In Entry Clearance and Family Visitor appeals the determination is served upon IND, which will arrange for the forwarding of the determination to the entry clearance post that made the original refusal. Checks of the UK Visas database show that the determinations were received at HM High Commission in Islamabad on 9 November 2006.

Incapacity Benefit: Appeals

Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the average time was between submission of appeals against refusal of incapacity benefit and a decision being taken in each of the last three years. [127722]

Vera Baird: The information my hon. Friend has asked for is contained in the following table.

IB cleared appeals March 2003 to April 2006: Average clearance time from lodged to first hearing

Financial year	Weeks Average clearance time
2003-04	20.24
2004-05	19.48
2005-06	19.19

Notes:
1. All figures are subject to change as more up to date data become available.
2. Figures for the latest months may increase substantially as information feeds through to the Appeals Service.
3. Migration of customer records from the existing Generic appeals processing systems (GAPS) to the new G2 system commenced on the 5 June 2006. Consequently during the migration period information from GAPS will over time diminish while G2 will increase and statistical data after May 2006 will not available until the new data processing procedures are in place.
4. "Lodged" denotes when an appeal is submitted to the first tier agency. Lodged data only enter the GAPS database when the appeal reaches the Appeals Service

Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many appeals against refusal of incapacity benefit have been received in each of the last 12 months; and what the range of dates of submission was of the appeals that were considered in February 2002. [127723]

Vera Baird: The information my hon. Friend has asked for is not available in the format requested as data are not collated on the ranges of dates of appeal submissions that reach a tribunal hearing. At present, data can only be supplied up to the period March 2006 due to the change over of computer systems.

The following table, therefore, provides information on the number of appeals against the refusal of incapacity benefit received in each of the 12 months between April 2005 and March 2006.

All incapacity benefit appeals in 2005-06

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

Departments: Databases

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission what databases are controlled by the National Audit Office; and what percentage of data in each database is estimated to be inaccurate or out of date. [124044]

Alan Williams: The National Audit Office maintains databases principally for the purposes of collecting internal management information. Its management information is updated on a regular basis and the Office has quality assurance arrangements to ensure that it remains reliable and up to date.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many work permits were applied for by the Prime Minister's Office in each of the last five years. [127725]

Hilary Armstrong: The Prime Minister's Office forms part of the Cabinet Office. Information is provided for the Cabinet Office as a whole.

The Cabinet Office does not apply for work permits, but as part of our pre-appointment checks we require a candidate to have a work permit, where appropriate, in order to be employed by the Cabinet Office.

PRIME MINISTER

Africa: Foreign Relations

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Prime Minister if he will consider the merits of appointing a Minister for Africa in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office with (a) responsibility for improving relations with African countries and (b) analogous responsibilities to the Minister for Europe. [128552]

The Prime Minister: While my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has overall responsibility for Foreign Policy, day-to-day responsibility for the UK's relationship with Africa lies with my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham. There are no current plans to review these ministerial responsibilities.

Members: Telephone Tapping

Mr. Heald: To ask the Prime Minister (1) whether the Wilson Doctrine applies to hon. Members who have not taken the oath; [128884]

(2) what plans he has to amend or repeal the Wilson Doctrine; [128885]

(3) whether the Wilson Doctrine applies to the use of the ECHELON by the UKUSA Community. [128886]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my written ministerial statement of 30 March 2006, Official Report, column 95WS.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arab States

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when a Minister in his Department last visited (a) Bahrain, (b) Kuwait, (c) Oman, (d) Qatar, (e) Saudi Arabia, (f) the United Arab Emirates and (g) Yemen on (i) a trade promotion visit and (ii) a visit in connection with other departmental responsibilities. [124806]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 2 March 2007]: The most recent visits by Ministers are as follows:

	Visits
(a) Bahrain	January 2001
(b) Kuwait	June 2003
(c) Oman	No visits
(d) Qatar	April 2006
(e) Saudi Arabia	November 2003
(f) United Arab Emirates	June 2003
(g) Yemen	No visits

Visits cover both trade promotion and other Departmental responsibilities.

Broadband

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that all UK households have access to telecoms infrastructure capable of providing (a) broadband as defined by Ofcom, (b) at least 512 kbit/s and (c) over 1.5 Mbits/s; and if he will make a statement. [124446]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 12 March 2007]: At the present time there is no Universal Service Obligation (USO) in relation to broadband. Thus, there is no absolute obligation to supply broadband, of any speed, at all.

The latest Ofcom figures reveal that Broadband is, however, available to over 99 per cent. of UK households. 37 per cent. of households can choose between four wholesale broadband providers, 8 per cent. can choose between three wholesales providers, 12 per cent. between two wholesale providers and the remainder can access a BT wholesale offering.

At the retail level consumers have access to a very wide choice of retail broadband products provided by over 60 Internet Service Providers currently operating in the UK.

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of telephone lines in (a) England, (b) Cheltenham Borough Council area and (c) Springbank ward in Cheltenham that are able to support broadband; what definition he uses of broadband; and if he will make a statement. [124447]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 12 March 2007]: In the UK, over 99.9 per cent. of households are connected to a broadband enabled exchange.

However, not all of these households will necessarily be able to get broadband and there are two main reasons for this:

1. there could be fibre in the network between the exchange and the household

2. the telephone line could be too long to support broadband.

It is difficult to be precise about the number of UK households that are able to receive a broadband service over the telephone line, but the figure of 99 per cent. probably represents a lower bound.

It is not possible to provide data of this sort at a more local level.

The definition of broadband that Ofcom uses in its economic market assessments is that it must have the following three characteristics:

the service is always on, i.e. no dial up is required. This feature allows the user to maintain a permanent connection to the network so allowing real-time delivery of services such as email;

it is possible to use both voice and data services simultaneously, whether they are provided together, for example over the same access route, or separately, perhaps using more than one access route; and it has a faster downstream speed than a dial-up connection (essentially >128kbit/s).

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the proportion of UK households which have access to (a) one, (b) two, (c) three and (d) four or more broadband suppliers; and if he will make a statement. [124448]

Margaret Hodge: While BT has rolled out broadband to over 99 per cent. of UK households, cable and Local Loop Unbundling operators have so far only rolled out broadband in certain parts of the UK. Thus, different areas in the UK are supplied by a different 'mix' of wholesale providers. The latest figures available to Ofcom are as follows:

Percentage of UK households with only one (BT) wholesale broadband provider—42 per cent.

Percentage of UK households with only two wholesale broadband providers—12 per cent.

Percentage of UK households with only three wholesale broadband providers—7 per cent.

Percentage of UK households with four or more wholesale broadband providers—37 per cent.

It should be noted that broadband rollout, particularly based on LLU, is currently ongoing and therefore the coverage numbers presented here should be seen as a snap shot in time. This is a dynamic market and it is likely to look very different in a year from now.

Business Support

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent by his Department on (a) business support schemes and (b) services to small businesses in each year since 2000. [117362]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 January 2007]: In answer to (a), DTI has spent the following amounts on business support schemes since 2000:

Business support schemes

	£ million
2000-01	279
2001-02	461
2002-03	414
2003-04	317
2004-05	312
2005-06	381

Note:
DTI commenced the detailed tracking of the cost of specific business support schemes on a consistent basis from the 2003-04 financial year onwards. Therefore the information provided for earlier years is a best estimate.

In answer to (b) DTI has spent the following amounts on services to small businesses—via the business link network—since 2000:

Business link network

	£ million
2000-01	172
2001-02	141
2002-03	150
2003-04	138
2004-05	140
2005-06	144

Note:
The business link network provides advice and support to c. 700,000 small businesses every year, at start up and growth stages, with the quality and reach of that advice increasing all the time.

Business: Cumbria

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 16 October 2006, Official Report, column 945W, on business assistance in Cumbria, how many of the businesses assisted by Business Link in Cumbria received assistance (a) electronically, (b) by telephone, (c) in writing and (d) through face to face interviews. [127255]

Margaret Hodge: The following number of businesses were assisted in Cumbria by Business Link:

	Total businesses assisted	Electronically	By telephone	In writing	Face to face
2001-2002	5,933	450	5,933	304	780
2002-2003	5,552	720	5,552	333	722
2003-2004	4,961	750	3,546	253	1,140
2004-2005	5,058	4,325	2,400	307	1,043
2005-2006	8,453	8,453	4,378	411	971

On many occasions one business may have been assisted through more than one method of communication.

Businesses: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Consumer Credit Regulations 2004 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126654]

Mr. McCartney: The Regulatory Impact Assessments published alongside the regulations in 2004 estimated the costs to business as:

Regulation	£ million One-off cost	£ million Recurring cost
Consumer Credit Act 1974 (Electronic Agreements) Order 2004	0	0
Consumer Credit (Disclosure of Information) Regulations 2004 Consumer Credit (Agreements) (Amendment) Regulations 2004	163.4	[1]—
Consumer Credit (Early Settlement) Regulations 2004	180	[2]2

[1] Small unqualified increase in printing costs due to increased volume of information for consumers. [2] +60 transfer to consumers as a result of fairer early settlement terms.

These costs were offset by estimated benefits of £312 million a year (including the £60 million transfer to consumers through fairer early settlement terms).

Costs to the regulators were expected to be limited to the cost of training staff in the new requirements.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off cost and (b) ongoing costs of implementing the Employment Relations Act 2004 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators; [126660]

(2) what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) ongoing costs of implementing the Directive to Establish a General Framework for Informing and Consulting Employees in the UK to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126661]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The DTI is totally committed to better regulation. On 11 December it published an ambitious Simplification Plan to reduce administrative burdens by 25 per cent. per year by 2010. The plan is a key part of an ongoing commitment to reducing unnecessary red tape and to making essential regulation simpler and more streamlined.

Details in respect of these two questions are set out as follows:

126660

The Employment Relations Act 2004

The full Regulatory Impact Assessment of the Employment Relations Act 2004 can be found from page 132 in the DTI publication "Employment Relations Research series No. 41: 2004 Compendium of Regulatory Impact Assessments" URN 05/1018

126661

The Directive to Establish a General Framework for Informing and Consulting Employees in the UK

The full Regulatory Impact Assessment of the 2004 regulations to establish a general framework for informing and consulting employees in the UK can be found from page 91 in the DTI publication "Employment Relations Research Series No. 41: 2004 Compendium of Regulatory Impact Assessments", URN 05/1018.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126667]

Mr. McCartney: The Regulatory Impact Assessment published in 2002 contains estimates of the cost to businesses of implementing the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 at some 3 per cent.—10 per cent. of turnover, implying costs in the range of around £3 million to £10 million. The Department has no information on costs to the Office of Fair Trading.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health (Amendment) Regulations 2004 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126668]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply.

(i) The cost to business of implementing the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health (Amendment) Regulations

2004 was estimated to be £29 million over 10 years with an additional £16.2 million to £69 million one-off costs in the first year of compliance.

These figures should be considered against the benefits of reducing the risks from hazardous substances. While total benefits could not be quantified, the value of the expected reduction in allergic contact dermatitis because of chromium VI restrictions was estimated at £18 million to £53 million over 10 years.

(ii) Costs to the health and safety regulators were not quantified but were considered to be small, with the majority of costs being incurred in the development of guidance and being balanced out by savings in enforcement. The information in this reply was drawn from the final Regulatory Impact Assessment for the legislation that is available in the Library or on the HSE website at http://www.hse.gov.uk/ria/index.htm

The Government and the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) are committed to meeting the Better Regulations challenge. HSE is constantly reviewing what can be done better to ensure that the right balance is struck between protecting people at work and avoiding unnecessary burdens on business. Reviewing and improving the guidance to help employers comply with COSHH is one of the aims in HSE's simplification plan.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to phase out the remaining specialised uses of chlorofluorocarbons in the UK as required under the 1987 Montreal Protocol. [126719]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Minister of State, Department of Health, the hon. Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint), on 13 March 2007, Official Report, column 307W, on essential uses of chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) and replacement of CFC-based asthma inhalers.

Under the Montreal protocol and related EC legislation, essential use exemptions are also available for laboratory and analytical uses of CFCs. Two UK companies have been allocated small amounts of CFCs for these purposes in 2007.

The European Commission may also authorise temporary exemptions for CFCs in existing military applications until 31 December 2008, where it can be demonstrated that technically and economically feasible alternative substances or technologies are not available or cannot be used. There is some limited use of CFCs for these purposes in the UK.

The European Commission has begun a wide-ranging review of EC Regulation 2037/2000 on substances that deplete the ozone layer, in consultation with member states and stakeholders, including the continuing need for essential use exemptions.

Departments: BAE Systems

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employees of BAE Systems employees are registered on his Department's security pass system; if he will list those people; and on what date each was registered. [128395]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The details of two BAE employees previously holding DTI security passes are held on the Department's pass system, although these registrations are in fact expired and no current passes have been issued. The registrations were dated 4 November 2004 and 6 June 2005. I am unable to list the details without permission of the individuals in question.

Departments: Freedom of Information

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions special advisers have been consulted in replying to freedom of information requests to his Department; and what his Department's policy is on the role of special advisers in the answering of freedom of information requests. [119846]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The DTI does not keep such records. Special advisers carry out their duties in accordance with the requirements of the 'Code of Conduct for Special Advisers'.

Departments: Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what mechanisms are in place to ensure his Department's economical use of paper. [128003]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department's policy is to use recycled paper. Aligned to this policy, all paper procured through the Department's framework contract is recycled. The Department has an electronic filing system and paper filing is only used where necessary. In addition to this, the departmental printers are configured to print double sided to save paper.

Departments: Regeneration

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of his Department's spending was devoted to (a) urban and (b) rural regeneration and redevelopment in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05 and (iii) 2005-06. [125889]

Margaret Hodge: The Government are committed to building a strong economy in rural and urban areas. The Department's own products are available in both rural and urban areas. However, to provide a breakdown of the spend as requested could be achieved only at a disproportionate cost.

Employment: Foreign Investment in the UK

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of additional jobs created by foreign direct investment into the UK in each year since 2000. [124537]

Mr. McCartney: Cumulatively, over the period 2000-01 and 2005-06, inward Foreign Direct Investment projects in the UK reported the creation of 239,103 new jobs and 221,001 jobs safeguarded.

No data on net additional UK jobs are available, but as there is good evidence that inward Foreign Direct Investment makes a strong contribution to the productivity and competitiveness of the UK economy, the overall impact on UK employment is expected to be positive.

Employment: Regulation

Tony Baldry: (1) To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Employment Relations Act 1999 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators; [125593]

(2) what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Transnational Information and Consultation of Employees Regulations 1999 (European Works Councils) to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators; [125595]

(3) what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Working Time Regulations 1999 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators; [125598]

(4) what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Employment Act 2002 to (i) businesses and (ii) his Department; [125601]

(5) what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Part-Time Workers (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2000 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators; [125613]

(6) what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Maternity and Parental Leave (Amendment) Regulations 2001 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators; [125616]

(7) what estimate he has made of the (a) one-off and (b) recurring cost of implementing the Flexible Working (Procedural Requirements) Regulations 2002 to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [125589]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The DTI is totally committed to better regulation. On 11 December it published an ambitious Simplification Plan to reduce administrative burdens by 25 per cent. per year by 2010. The plan is a key part of an ongoing commitment to reducing unnecessary red tape and to making essential regulation simpler and more streamlined.

Energy Technologies Institute

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the timetable is for the establishment of the Energy Technologies Institute; and if he will make a statement. [127260]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry published the prospectus for the Energy Technologies Institute on 14 September last year. It envisaged that the institute would be legally established and fully operational in 2008, with 50:50 public/private sector funding. The initial four private sector partners (BP, EON UK, EDF and Shell) have so far been joined by Rolls Royce and Caterpillar, and Scottish and Southern Electricity, and discussions are continuing with other organisations. The institute will be legally incorporated and the director appointed over the next few months. The first technical programmes and the organisation to host the institute hub should be identified in the summer.

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what meetings (a) he has and (b) his officials have had with (i) private and (ii) public sector organisations on the Energy Technologies Institute. [127261]

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what expressions of interest in (a) hosting and (b) managing the Energy Technologies Institute he has received from (i) private and (ii) public sector organisations. [127866]

Malcolm Wicks: Research organisations across the UK were invited in January to provide information on energy related research capacity, capabilities and resources and to indicate any interest in hosting the Energy Technologies Institute (ETI) director and support staff. Over 20 of the submissions received offered to host the director and support staff. Most of these bids are either from academic institutions or from consortiums lead by them. The submissions are being considered by representatives of the funding partners who will prepare initial advice for the ETI Board (once legally established) and director (once appointed) to consider in detail and to follow-up as appropriate. Decisions will be a matter for the ETI itself.

Energy: West Midlands

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the merits of locating the energy technologies institute in the West Midlands. [126732]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 14 March 2007]: Research organisations across the UK were invited in January to provide information on research capacity and capabilities and to indicate any interest in hosting the Energy Technologies Institute (ETI) Director and support staff. Submissions are being considered by representatives of the funding partners who will prepare initial advice for the ETI Board (once legally established) and Director (once appointed) to consider in detail and to follow-up as appropriate. Decisions will be a matter for the ETI itself. The Institute will operate on a "distributed" basis. A number of submissions have been received that include organisations in the West Midlands.

Equity

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in what percentage of companies' private equity groups own over 50 per cent. of shares in (a) the UK, (b) the North East region and (c) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [124228]

Mr. McCartney: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Exports: Algeria

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the value of exports to Algeria was in 2006. [126980]

Mr. McCartney: UK exports of goods to Algeria were worth about £167 million in 2006 on an Overseas Trade Statistics basis. Figures for trade in services with Algeria are not available.

Exports: Namibia

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the value of UK exports was to Namibia in (a) 1991, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006. [126989]

Mr. McCartney: UK exports of goods to Namibia were worth about £4.0 million in 1991, £17.3 million in 2005 and £13.2 million in 2006, on an Overseas Trade Statistics basis. Figures for trade in services with Namibia are not available.

Exports: Poland

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the value of exports to Poland was in 2006. [126981]

Mr. McCartney: UK exports of goods to Poland were worth about £2751 million in 2006 on an Overseas Trade Statistics basis; this figure may have been affected by transactions associated with missing trader VAT fraud particularly in the first half of the year. Figures for trade in services with Poland are likely to be available in summer 2007.

Imports: Namibia

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the value of imports from Namibia to the UK was in (a) 2001 and (b) 2006; and what the top three products imported were by (i) volume and (ii) value. [126971]

Mr. McCartney: UK imports of goods to Namibia were worth about £316.5 million in 2001 and £346.6 million in 2006 on an Overseas Trade Statistics basis. Figures for trade in services with Namibia are not available.

The Standard International Trade Classification divisions with the largest UK imports from Namibia are shown in the following tables:

Nuclear Power

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he plans to take to ensure an effective consultation on nuclear power in the energy review. [124225]

Malcolm Wicks: As set out in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry's parliamentary statement of 22 February 2007, the Government will be holding a new consultation on nuclear energy which is likely to be published in early May, or before Easter if that is possible, together with the White Paper on energy policy.

Post Office: Reorganisation

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many submissions on the Post Office reorganisation consultation have been received from each region. [128193]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Government have received over 2,300 responses to their public consultation on the future of the Post Office network. The country/regional breakdown as of 9 March is as follows:

	Number of responses
East	103
East Midlands	86
London	79
North East	65
North West	124
Northern Ireland	5
Scotland	431
South East England	415
South West England	552
Wales	116
West Midlands	176
Yorkshire/Humber	85
Not given	68

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many responses have been received to the Post Office Network Consultation; and when he plans to announce its conclusions. [128399]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Government have received over 2,300 responses to its public consultation on the future of the Post Office network.

We are currently reviewing the response and will be publishing our conclusions in due course.

Post Offices: Scotland

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many responses to the Post Office consultation his Department has received from (a) Orkney and Shetland and (b) each Scottish constituency. [126904]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department has received over 2,300 responses to its public consultation on the future of the Post Office network, which ended on Thursday 8 March. In addition, the Department also received a number of local petitions and post card/stock letter campaigns.

We do not hold the information in the form requested, though a breakdown by region indicates that responses from Scotland accounted for around 19 per cent. of the total.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the merits of feed-in tariffs for the propagation of renewable energy; and whether he has investigated whether it would be possible to migrate from a system based upon renewable obligation certificates to one of feed-in tariffs. [128072]

Malcolm Wicks: The renewables obligation (RO) was introduced in 2002 to replace the previous support scheme, the Non Fossil Fuels Obligation (NFFO), which was a form of a feed in tariff. It was introduced as a means of encouraging greater deployment of renewables, providing investor confidence, and increasing value for money for the consumer. A review of the RO, carried out in 2005-06, confirmed that the RO was a more successful mechanism. Since its introduction eligible renewable electricity generated under the scheme has increased to 4.0 per cent of total electricity sales to UK consumers in 2005 up from 1.8 per cent. in 2002, compared with an increase under the NFFO from 0.2 per cent. of electricity sales in 1992 to 1.8 per cent. in 2002.

The Energy Review has confirmed the Government's commitment to the renewables obligation as the mechanism to support deployment of renewables. The Government has recently consulted on their proposals to reform the RO. A consultation document, "Reform of the Renewables Obligation and Statutory Consultation on the Renewables Obligation Order 2007", was published 9 October 2006 and 206 responses were received. This Government will be considering all issues that have been raised.

An announcement on the results of the consultation will be made in the Energy White Paper due to be published in March or May of this year.

Small Businesses

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what definition he uses of 'family business'. [126129]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 8 March 2007]: There is no standard definition used for 'family business'. A common definition, used by the DTI in its Annual Small Business Survey, is that a family business is one

"majority owned by members of the same family".

The 2005 survey found that 65 per cent. of all small and medium-sized enterprises were family businesses.

Trade Promotion

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when a minister in his Department last visited (a) Chile, (b) Brazil, (c) Argentina, (d) Mexico, (e) Uruguay, (f) Venezuela, (g) Bolivia and (h) Columbia on (i) a trade promotion visit and (ii) a visit in connection with other Departmental responsibilities. [124784]

Mr. Darling: The most recent visits by Ministers are as follows:

	Visits
(a) Chile	2002
(b) Brazil	September 2006
(c) Argentina	October 2000
(d) Mexico	October 2006
(e) Uruguay	No visits
(f) Venezuela	December 2000
(g) Bolivia	September 2002
(h) Colombia	No visits

Visits cover both trade promotion and other Departmental responsibilities.

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when a Minister in his Department last visited (a) the US, (b) Canada, (c) Japan, (d) Russia and (e) Australia on (i) a trade promotion visit and (ii) a visit in connection with other Departmental responsibilities. [124785]

Mr. Darling: The most recent visits by Ministers are as follows:

	Visits
(a) US	October 2006
(b) Canada	April 2004
(c) Japan	September 2006
(d) Russia	February 2007
(e) Australia	November 2006

Visits cover both trade promotion and other Departmental responsibilities.

Ukraine: World Trade Organisation

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what meetings he has held on the EU-Ukraine trade agreement; and what meetings he has held on the date of Ukrainian accession to the World Trade Organisation. [126701]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Secretary for Trade and Industry has not held any meetings regarding the EU-Ukraine trade agreement, or regarding the date of Ukrainian accession to the World Trade Organisation. I have not held any such meetings either.

The Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Office, discussed the proposed new enhanced EU-Ukraine Agreement, which will include a Free Trade Agreement, and prospects for Ukraine's accession to the WTO, with the President and Prime Minister of Ukraine during his visit to Kiev on 26 and 27 February.

Utilities: Billing

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will bring forward measures to require the average household charge on utility bills to reflect different sizes of dwellings and households. [127773]

Malcolm Wicks: There is no average household charge for gas and electricity supply, and it is for individual suppliers to set tariffs. Customers' energy costs will reflect, among other things, the size of the dwelling and the number of residents, as well as the measures the customer has taken to reduce energy use by energy efficiency measures. Water supply is the responsibility of the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

Wind Power: Subsidies

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the overall subsidies to the wind energy sector were for (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [126135]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government's main instrument for supporting renewables in England and Wales is the Renewables Obligation (RO), in Scotland it is the RO Scotland (ROS) and in Northern Ireland, the Northern Ireland RO (NIRO).

The RO (ROS and NIRO) is a market-based support mechanism that requires licensed electricity suppliers to provide a specified and growing proportion of their electricity from eligible renewable sources. Wind farms are one of the technologies supported under the RO. This provides an assured market for renewable electricity and ensures that it attracts a premium.

The full details for the past five years RO support to wind energy by UK country could be calculated but at a disproportionate cost. However details for the past two years have been calculated. The figures used for this calculation are based on the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets' (Ofgem) calculation of a Renewable Obligation Certificate's worth to a supplier (the buy-out price avoided plus the recycled buy-out fund amount).

	Onshore		Offshore
	2004-05	2005-06	2004-05	2005-06

Scotland	48.4	57.0	—	—
Northern Ireland	—	10.8	—	—
Total	84.1	11 0.4	12.5	20.7

Aside from the RO, to date, the Government have committed £107 million in grant support towards the capital installation of offshore wind farm development. These offshore wind farms are all based off the coast of England.

Additional support for onshore wind has in the recent past been given under the clear skies scheme in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. The total for these projects was:

	England	Wales	Northern Ireland
2003	305,870	12,500	69,986
2004	343,245	8,818	139,654
2005	610,035	83,959	308,474
2006	95,700	5,000	30,000

[1] Scheme launch

In Scotland, the Scottish Executive provide funding for the Scottish Community and Householder Renewables Initiative (SCHRI) which was launched in 2002. Under this scheme, grants are awarded to eligible householders or not-for-profit community groups for the installation of renewable technologies including micro-wind turbines. It is not possible to provide a breakdown of grant commitments by year. However, as of January 2007, SCHRI capital grants with a total value of £1.7 million have been allocated to 152 projects where wind is one of up to two technologies installed with the grant.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Businesses: Orders and Regulations

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his most recent estimate is of the (a) one-off cost and (b) recurring costs of implementing the Work at Height Regulations to (i) businesses and (ii) the regulators. [126649]

Mrs. McGuire: One-off costs to businesses were estimated to be £222 million to £292.3 million and recurring costs £86 million to £154.2 million. One-off costs for regulators were estimated to be £0.9 million and recurring costs £0.4 million.

Although we cannot attribute all of the reduction in falls injuries directly to the Work at Height Regulations they will have had a substantial influence and the lower number of reportable injuries to workers in 2005-06 compared with 2004-05 has saved nearly £51 million.

The information in this reply was drawn from the final regulatory impact assessment for the legislation that is available in the Library or on the HSE website at:

http://www.hse.gov.uk/ria/index.htm.

The Government and the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) are committed to meeting the Better Regulation challenge. HSE is constantly reviewing what can be done better to ensure that people are protected at work while avoiding unnecessary burdens on business.

Child Support Agency

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many staff he expects to transfer from the Child Support Agency to its replacement agency; and if he will make a statement; [107095]

(2) what plans he has to transfer staff from the Child Support Agency to the Child Maintenance Enforcement Commission proposed in the White Paper A new system of child maintenance. [113548]

Mr. Plaskitt: People working in the Child Support Agency at the point of transfer to the new Child Maintenance Enforcement Commission (C-MEC) will transfer with the full protection required by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations as specified by the Cabinet Office's statement of practice on staff transfers in the public sector. We will work closely with trade unions to develop plans for this transfer. Once the transfer is complete C-MEC will be responsible for making any future decisions on staffing levels.

Employment Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on employment zones in each year since 1998. [125900]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 7 March 2007]: The information is in the following table.

	Employment Zone spend (£ million)
1998-99	1
1999-2000	1
2000-01	72
2001-02	96
2002-03	94
2003-04	84
2004-05	75
2005-06	92

Notes:
1. Employment Zones started in April 2000 but prototype Employment Zones operated during 1998 and 1999 which accounts for the spend during those years.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest million.
3. Information is up to March 2006.

Low Incomes: Grants

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions with which organisations he has held discussions on the introduction of seasonal grants for families on low incomes. [123169]

Mr. Plaskitt: Ministers in this Department have attended meetings on this and other related issues with a variety of organisations including Save the Children, the NSPCC, Barnado's, One Parent Families, Child Poverty Action Group and End Child Poverty.

National Insurance

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many adults have a national insurance number in the UK. [119523]

Mr. Plaskitt: The total number of national insurance numbers in issue at 31 December 2006 was approximately 76 million. There are approximately 16.5 million national insurance numbers in issue where the person is deceased. These numbers are retained which means there are approximately 59.5 million in issue to adults, not all of whom will be resident in the United Kingdom.

New Deal

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on all new deal programmes in each year since 1996-97 in 2003-04 prices; how much he estimates will be spent in each of the next three years in 2003-04 prices; and if he will make a statement. [101291]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information is in the following table.

New deal expenditure at 2003-04 prices

		£ million
1997-98	Outturn	50
1998-99	Outturn	353
1999-2000	Outturn	591
2000-01	Outturn	648
2001-02	Outturn	713

2005-06	Outturn	532

Notes:
1. Factors used to calculate 2003-04 prices are taken from Treasury Gross Domestic Product deflators.
2. The earliest reported costs for new deal are for the financial year 1997-98 as the programme started in January 1998.
3. Figure for 2008-09 are not available.

Jobcentre Plus Financial Reporting and Control Team Notes:

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions why spending on new deal programmes for (a) 18 to 24-year-olds and (b) 25 year olds and over was reduced between 2004-05 and 2005-06; what budget has been set for 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [101307]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Between them, the mandatory new deal programmes have been successful in helping more than 965,000 people into work. New deal streamlining measures were announced in the Chancellor's 2003 budget statement. Spending on both new deal for young people and new deal 25-plus decreased partly because of these changes, which started in 2004-05 but were more fully implemented in 2005-06. The most substantial change was to reduce the minimum period of time participants would spend on the options stage of the programme from 26 to 13 weeks.

Evidence indicates that two thirds of all mandatory new deal job outcomes occur before the options stage, and most outcomes that do occur during options are achieved during the first 13 weeks. The programmes continue to ensure that participants who need additional help to get into work receive it, for example by spending more than 13 weeks on the options stage of the programme.

Budgeted expenditure for 2006-07 is £225 million for new deal for young people and £157 million for new deal 25-plus.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department spent on the new deal in each year since 2003-04; and what spending is planned in each year to 2009-10. [102219]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information is in the following table. Figures for 2008-09 and 2009-10 are not available.

	New deal spend since 2003-04 (£ million)
2003-04[1]	655
2004-05[1]	639
2005-06[1]	538
2006-07[1]	590

New Deal for Young People

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the figures for people who are classed as not in employment, education or training include those who are participating in New Deal for Young People. [122051]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Our measure of people who are not in employment, education or training includes those participating in the gateway stage of the new deal. However, once individuals move onto a new deal option they are counted as being in employment, education or training.

Occupational Pensions

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people took early retirement from their occupational pension scheme before April 2005; and how many are members of schemes in the Pension Protection Fund and in schemes negotiating to enter the fund; [127564]

(2) if he will estimate the cost of (a) removing the 90 per cent. cap and paying all pensions at the scheme level, (b) removing the 90 per cent. cap but keeping the overall cap on the level of pension provided and (c) removing the age discount for those who have not reached their normal retirement age for those people who took early retirement before April 2005 whose fund is in the Pension Protection Fund or negotiating to enter it. [127565]

James Purnell: There are currently three pension schemes which have completed an assessment period with the Pension Protection Fund (PPF) and whose members are receiving compensation from the fund; those members do not include any early retirees.

The remaining requested information is not available. Data on the number of early retirees are held by individual schemes and are not held centrally by the PPF until schemes have completed the assessment period. To gather the requested data would therefore entail contacting each scheme individually and incur disproportionate cost.

As it is not possible to determine the number of members who have taken early retirement it is therefore not possible to calculate the various requested estimated costs.

Pensioners: Leicester

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners live in the Leicester local authority area; how many are in receipt of council tax benefit; and what percentage this is of the total number of pensioners living in the local authority area. [125629]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the following table.

Council tax benefit (CTB) recipients, Leicester local authority, August 2006

	Number/Percentage
CTB recipients aged 60 and over	15,190
Population aged 60 and over	47,100
Percentage of population aged 60 and over claiming CTB	32.3

Notes:
1. The data refer to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.
2. Case loads have been rounded to the nearest 10 and percentages to 1 decimal place.
3. Council tax benefit figures exclude second adult rebate cases.
4. 'Aged 60 and over' is defined as benefit units where the claimant and/or partner are aged 60 and over. Therefore figures will contain some claimants aged under 60 where there is a partner aged over 60 years.
5. The data refer to benefit units which may be a single person or a couple.

Personal Income

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people earned over the (a) £5, (b) £10 and (c) £20 per week earning disregard and had their housing benefit reduced in each of the last three years; [127908]

(2) how many people earned over the (a) £5, (b) £10 and (c) £20 per week earning disregard and had their council tax benefit reduced in each of the last three years. [127909]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Personal Pensions

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether an investor in a personal account to be established under the provisions of the Pensions Bill will have the option to invest in (a) their local economy, (b) ethical funds, (c) green funds and (d) infrastructure projects for the local community. [127522]

James Purnell: It will be up to the Personal Accounts Delivery Authority to decide on the appropriate investment funds to be offered to members taking into account any legal requirements and objectives, for example to run personal accounts in the best interests of members. We expect this will include a choice of social, environmental and ethical funds and branded funds.

Social Fund

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether there is a target in place for the length of time taken to process an application to the Social Fund via the Social Fund hotline; [124872]

(2) whether there is a target in place for the length of time taken to process an application for a community care grant; [124873]

(3) whether applications made to the Social Fund can be fast tracked under exceptional circumstances; [124904]

(4) whether there is a target in place for the length of time taken to process an application to the Social Fund via the Social Fund hotline. [124909]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 19 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking whether there are targets in place for the length of time taken to process an application to the Social Fund via the Social Fund hotline, for the length of time taken to process an application for a community care grant, and whether applications made to the Social Fund can be fast tracked under exceptional circumstances. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus has a number of targets that are agreed with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, supported by a suite of Key Management Indicators (KMI) that set the expected standards of delivery.

The KMI relating to Social Fund applications requires Crisis Loans (whether taken by telephone or otherwise) to be dealt with within an actual average clearance time of two days. Where the application is for living expenses however this must, wherever possible, be dealt with on the day that the application is made. For Community Care Grants, the KMI specifies that applications be processed within an actual average clearance time of nine days.

All applications to the Social Fund are dealt with as quickly as possible. Whilst there is no specific fast track system, staff are expected to treat each individual application on its merits to give sympathetic consideration to any exceptional circumstances faced by the customer.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on promoting the Social Fund hotline during the last 12 months for which figures are available. [124901]

Mr. Plaskitt: Jobcentre plus does not have a social fund hotline and does not actively promote the social fund to the public. However, material is produced to signpost customers to the correct channels if they wish to make or pursue an enquiry or make an application.

During the last 12 months £289,746.84 has been spent on signposting for the social fund.

Social Security Benefits: Fraud

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether there is any reward mechanism for people whose calls to the benefit fraud hotline result in successful prosecution. [124734]

Mr. Plaskitt: No.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many user visits the benefit theft website received in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available. [124735]

Mr. Plaskitt: The DWP initiative targeting benefit fraud was re-launched as targeting benefit thieves in November 2006. On the site at www.dwp.gov.uk/benefit-thieves people can anonymously report someone they suspect of committing benefit theft.

The information is in the following table.

Number of visits to the targeting benefit fraud and targeting benefit thieves websites

Targeting benefit fraud	Visits	Unique visitors
February 2006	71,739	18,219
March 2006	80,495	21,495

December 2006	101,424	13,739
January 2007	153,663	22,982

Notes:
1. Visits - Number of times a visitor or visitors came to the site. Each visit is recorded separately for every visit more than thirty minutes apart.
2. Unique Visitors - Individuals who visited the site during the report period. If someone visits more than once, they are counted only the first time they visit.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether calls to the benefit fraud hotline are recorded. [124733]

Mr. Plaskitt: No.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on promoting the benefit fraud hotline in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available. [124736]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department runs the benefit fraud communications campaign primarily to positively reinforce honest behaviour, create a climate of intolerance to benefit fraud and to undermine its social acceptability.

The figure given as follows represents media expenditure for those elements of the campaign which include promotion of the national benefit fraud hotline.

Advertising expenditure is only available on an annual basis. Advertising expenditure for the last full 12 month period is given in the following table.

	Advertising spend (£000)
2005-06	5,055

Notes:
1. All figures are exclusive of VAT.
2. The figures in these tables refer to media spend only, excluding production and other costs.
3. All figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Social Security Benefits: Languages

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many claimants of (a) jobseeker's allowance and (b) other income-related benefits took up the offer of free English provision in each year since 1997; how many places for English provision were available in each year; and what the budget was for the provision of free English lessons in each year; [124086]

(2) if he will place in the Library the guidelines given to jobcentres for improving the take-up of English courses. [124087]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 19 March 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking about: the number of claimants of Jobseeker's Allowance and other income-related benefits who took up the offer of free English provision in each year from 1997; how many places for English provision were available in each year; and what budget was provided for the provision of free English lessons in each year; and whether a copy of Jobcentre Plus guidelines to advisers will be placed in the Library. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

I am unable to answer your specific questions as we do not routinely collect data about Jobcentre Plus funding provision at the level requested. Within Jobcentre Plus language support forms one component of the basic skills provision available to help people improve their literacy, numeracy and language skills through employment programmes such as the New Deal.

In addition to the provision available through the New Deal, many benefit customers access freely available provision provided and funded by other organisations such as the Learning and Skills Council (LSC), local authorities and community-based organisations.

The Jobcentre Plus guidelines for advisers are being updated in the light of the Minister of State's recent announcement about measures to help break down language barriers that are preventing unemployed people from finding work and a copy will be placed in the Library when they are completed.

Social Security Benefits: Offenders

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost was to the public purse of benefits paid to foreign nationals released from the prison estate who have leave to remain in the UK for human rights reasons in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [128210]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Vocational Training

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what mechanisms are in place (a) to verify and (b) to audit the (i) information on application forms for government-funded training courses, (ii) employment status of applicants and (iii) assessments of standards achieved undertaken by training agencies. [125666]

Phil Hope: I have been asked to reply.

It is the responsibility of the learning providers themselves to verify learners' eligibility or participation on publicly funded post-16 training courses. However, the Department works closely with the Learning and Skills Council (LSC), which is responsible for funding post-16 learning providers, to ensure that appropriate eligibility criteria are in place and that audit arrangements are robust and fit for purpose. The LSC also provides additional guidance to providers on the eligibility of learners and audit requirements as part of the evidence requirements for funding purposes.

It is the responsibility of awarding bodies to mark exam papers and to check the coursework marks given by those learning providers who deliver accredited qualifications. The awarding bodies are regulated by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority, who are required to monitor and report publicly on qualifications and the performance of awarding bodies.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households claimed winter fuel payments in each financial year since 2001-02; and how many have claimed in 2006-07. [128212]

James Purnell: The following table shows the number of household payments made from winter 2002-03. Information is not available for earlier years. Figures for winter 2006-07 are not yet available but we expect the number to be similar to that for winter 2005-06.

	Household payments made
2002-03	8,100,040
2003-04	8,166,350
2004-05	8,377,370
2005-06	8,506,750

Notes:
1. Figures rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Any residence found to have four or more occupants aged 60 and over is not included in the household figures as it is assumed to be a care home.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

National Land and Property Gazetteer

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the National Land and Property Gazetteer's Data Entry Conventions and Best Practice Guide. [127054]

Ruth Kelly: The National Land and Property Gazetteer is the responsibility of the Improvement and Development Agency. The requested guide is available at http://www.nlpg.org.uk/documents/LLPG_SNN_best_practice_v2.pdf and a copy has been placed in the Library.

Commission for Equality and Human Rights

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government where she plans the regional offices of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights to be based; and whether they will be located on the basis of Government office for the regions boundaries. [127050]

Ruth Kelly: The location of the regional offices of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights will be for the Commission itself to determine.

Council Housing: Greater London

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many tenants in (a) arms length management organisation, (b) council managed and (c) housing association managed properties there are in London in each borough. [126491]

Yvette Cooper: The Department does not collect the number of tenants in the properties my hon. Friend refers to. However, it has collected on a provisional basis the numbers of rented dwellings which those organisations manage on 1 April 2006, which the following table shows:

Authority	Number of dwellings managed directly by local authority[1]	Number of dwellings managed by arms length management organisations (ALMOs)[1]	Number of dwellings managed by housing associations or registered social landlords (RSLs)[2]

Total	235,408	216,200	318,940

[1] Figures in these two columns exclude shared ownership dwellings and dwellings managed under the private finance initiative (PFI). They are derived from the Housing Revenue Account Base Data Return 2007-08 submitted by local authorities to the Department in October 2006, and are subject to what is said in notes 3 and 4.

[2] Figures in this column were collected from local authorities by the 2006 Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix. They include dwellings owned or leased by landlords registered with the Housing Corporation, local authority dwellings leased exclusively by an RSL, and housing association dwellings that are not registered with the Housing Corporation. They exclude dwellings managed but not owned by RSLs and any dwellings sold under shared ownership or rents to mortgage schemes.

[3] Figures for Lambeth and Lewisham in these two columns are derived from the number of tenanted dwellings in their ALMOs at the time of their establishment in 2005 and 2007 respectively. In practice, Right to Buy sales (RTB) since then are likely to mean that the number of ALMO tenanted dwellings and dwellings managed directly the local authority are slightly different.

[4] Number of dwellings at the time of the establishment of the ALMO in 2005. In practice RTB sales are likely to mean that dwellings are slightly fewer.

Council Tax: Appeals

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many appeals against council tax bandings were (a) made and (b) successful in England in each year since the introduction of council tax. [127011]

Ruth Kelly: For information about council tax banding appeals between 2000-01 and 2004-05 I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 2239W, given to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles). The Valuation Tribunal Service has held information centrally on the number of successful appeals since the beginning of 2006-07. Information for that year up to 31 December 2006 and for the number of appeals in 2005-06 is as follows:

	Number of council tax banding appeals	Number of appeals requiring full tribunal hearing	Number successful
2005-06	23,199	n/a	n/a
2006-07 (to 31 December 2006)	17,464	1149	473

n/a = Not available.

Council Tax: Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate has been made of the number of properties in Bands D and above that would move up a council tax band following a council tax revaluation in England, assuming no change to the number of bands. [127041]

Ruth Kelly: The Government have made clear that there will be no revaluation during this Parliament.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will take steps to ensure that (a) energy efficiency measures, (b) local energy installations and (c) other home improvements are not considered when homes are valued for council tax purposes. [127051]

Ruth Kelly: Provisions in the Council Tax (Alterations of Lists and Appeals) Regulations 1993, which have been in force since council tax was introduced, mean that adding energy efficient measures such as double glazing or cavity wall insulation, installing equipment such as micro wind turbines and solar panels, or making any other improvements to a property will have no effect on its current council tax banding.

If a property is sold, improvements may have an effect, but only if they are such that they push the value of the property into the next band range. Only substantial improvements would be likely to move a property up a band when it is sold. Energy efficiency measures are, in isolation, unlikely to do so.

Councillors: Allowances

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average level is of allowances paid to councillors. [127047]

Ruth Kelly: The latest consolidated data is from the survey of Member Allowances, IDeA, 2004. On average, councillors in England received £5,187 in basic allowances per annum. In addition, 46.8 per cent. of councillors also received a special responsibility allowance (SRA). An overall estimate of average SRA payments is not available.

The level of councillor remuneration is at the discretion of individual authorities.

Departments: Labour Party

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on how many occasions since 2002 civil servants in her Department, including the former Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, and its agencies have been given permission to attend the Labour Party conference to carry out departmental business. [127205]

Ruth Kelly: This information is not held centrally. All permanent civil servants are covered by the civil service management code and Cabinet Office guidance on political activity.

Departments: Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library copies of the letters of appointment of each of her Department's special advisers. [127059]

Ruth Kelly: My special advisers are appointed under terms and conditions set out in the "Model Contract for Special Advisers", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Individual letters of appointment are confidential between the employer and the employee and therefore not for publication.

Domestic Violence

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2007, Official Report, column 1353W, to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles) on domestic violence, what additional funding is being provided to local authorities to install Sanctuary Schemes. [127110]

Ruth Kelly: My Department has allocated £47.2 million to local authorities to help them tackle and prevent homelessness in their area for 2007-08. They may choose to use a proportion of this money to fund Sanctuary Schemes. However work in the London borough of Barnet has shown that in one year the installation of 40 sanctuaries, which cost approximately £68,000, led to an estimated saving of approximately £600,000. We anticipate significant savings for local authorities on this basis, due to the reduction in costs associated with homelessness within communities.

The £47.2 million is part of Communities and Local Government's £74 million homelessness prevention grant for 2007-08 which supports schemes across local authorities and the voluntary sector.

Flood Control

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the regional spatial strategies will take account of the (a) effects on the costs of future flood defences of the effects of climate change and (b) the costs of flood defences on the long-term sustainability of development; and if she will make a statement. [125623]

Yvette Cooper: The Regional Spatial Strategy (RSS) provides the long term spatial planning framework for a region for a 15 to 20 year period, with the objective of contributing to the achievement of sustainable development. In considering climate change and the long term sustainability of development, the costs of flood defences are taken into account alongside other matters, including the availability of resources.

We have recently consulted on a draft Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 'Planning and Climate Change'. This sets out our proposals on how planning should contribute to stabilising climate change and take into account the unavoidable consequences. Regional Planning Bodies will be expected to prepare and deliver RSSs for their regions that secure new development and shape places resilient to the effects of climate change in ways consistent with social cohesion and inclusion. These RSSs should be informed by sustainability appraisals which integrate social, environmental and economic considerations from the start of the plan-making process.

Regions will be expected to consider their vulnerability to climate change; the desirability of avoiding new development in those areas with likely increased vulnerability to climate change, particularly where it is not viable to manage likely risks through suitable measures to provide resilience; and, bring forward adaptation options for existing development in likely vulnerable areas.

The draft PPS builds on our policies in PPS25 'Development and Flood Risk' which sets out the detailed considerations applicable to taking flood risk into account in determining strategic planning considerations in the RSS for a region.

Home Information Packs

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her latest estimate is of the (a) minimum, (b) average and (c) maximum cost of a (i) home information pack and (ii) energy performance certificate. [127061]

Ruth Kelly: The price of a home information pack and its component parts, including an energy performance certificate will be set by the market and not by Government.

Homelessness: Hostels

Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the regulatory regime is for homeless hostels. [126841]

Yvette Cooper: Hostels are already regulated. Most are owned by registered social landlords (RSLs) and so are regulated by the Housing Corporation. This ensures that hostels have appropriate procedures in place to ensure that the hostel has the right management systems for maintaining good quality temporary homes and, where suitable, the right level of support services.

Services in hostels which are funded by Supporting People (SP) are expected to work to minimum standards of service provision set out in an SP quality assessment framework. All services are also subject to review to ensure that they provide a good quality service to their users, are value for money and meet objectives sat out in local SP strategies and other local and national strategies.

In addition, we have published a best practice toolkit to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of hostels and are investing £90 million in a hostels capital improvement programme to help improve the physical standards and reshape services in hostels.

Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what progress has been made by the Hostels Capital Improvement Programme in improving the quality of life of homeless people; and if she will make a statement. [126851] Yvette Cooper: The Hostels Capital Improvement Programme has made significant progress. Over £90 million is going to be invested in around 150 projects in 47 local authority areas. The funding is underpinned by the need to change the very nature of hostels to provide better opportunities for people who have experienced homelessness and prevent them from becoming homeless again. Through the programme, hostels will cease to be places of last resort, but instead will be centres of excellence and choice which positively change lives.

Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the appropriateness of the current balance between first stage and second stage hostel accommodation. [126852]

Yvette Cooper: It is the responsibility of local authorities, in discussion with stakeholders, to consider the need for hostel provision in their areas to help inform their homelessness strategies and supporting people strategies. This will enable authorities to make an assessment of needs and resources, identifying gaps in the system and setting priorities.

My Department will shortly be publishing a 'Review of hostels for rough sleepers in London'. Part of this research looks at move-on accommodation.

Housing: Low Incomes

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will require local authorities to increase the amount of affordable housing they provide. [127662]

Yvette Cooper: Local planning authorities can control the number, size and type of affordable housing built in their areas through the planning system. In support of this, we have been encouraging them to develop their strategic housing role, including the assessment of future needs for affordable housing.

New supply of affordable housing is provided mainly by the Housing Corporation through the National Affordable Housing Programme and some is provided without grant by developers under S106. The Housing Corporation and individual Registered Social Landlords work closely with local authorities to deliver increased amounts of affordable housing. We have set ourselves the target of delivering 30,000 social rented units in 2007-08—a 50 per cent. increase on 2004-05 levels.

In addition, we are also examining the scope for high performing local authorities and their ALMOs to build more social housing for retained ownership. This might entail partnerships between authorities, ALMOs and developers, using local authority land. Such schemes could complement development led by Registered Social Landlords where it provides value for money.

Housing: Repairs and Maintenance

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether Supporting People agencies have powers to commission home improvement agencies through competitive tendering. [127546]

Mr. Woolas: Individual administering authorities are responsible for the local delivery of Supporting People services. The way in which they do this is a matter for them in accordance with the local needs and priorities set out in their Supporting People five-year strategy.

Administering authorities have the discretion to enter into contracts with providers through competitive tendering for the provision of home improvement agency services but they are not obliged to do so. In some cases, administering authorities provide these services on an in-house basis.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the budget was of each Supporting People Agency in each of the last three years. [127547]

Mr. Woolas: Communities and Local Government (CLG) allocate Supporting People funding to 150 administering authorities and not to an agency. Administering authorities have responsibility for developing, delivering and monitoring the Supporting People programme locally based on local needs and priorities set out in their Supporting People five-year strategy.

Funding allocations to individual authorities in 2004-05, 2005-06 and 2006-07 are published on the Supporting People website at www.spkweb.org.uk All administering authorities also receive an administration grant from CLG, which contributes towards the cost of running (for example, data collection and maintaining an effective IT system) the Supporting People programme.

Housing: Swindon

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the Government grant to Swindon borough council for housing was in each year since 1990. [127663]

Mr. Woolas: Central Government support to Swindon borough council for its housing capital investment programmes in the years for which we have comparable data was as follows.

1997-98	2,110
1998-99	1,333
1999-2000	1,508
2000-01	5,147
2001-02	2,115
2002-03	2,178
2003-04	1,953
2004-05	1,636
2005-06	3,708
2006-07	1,380
2007-08	1,408

Local Government

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what powers local authorities which already have all-out elections would have to establish single member wards under the provisions of the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill. [127094]

Ruth Kelly: We stated in the White Paper that we will enable any council that holds whole council elections to request that the Electoral Commission undertakes a review for the purpose of re-warding the area with single member wards. It is our intention, during the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill's remaining Parliamentary stages, to introduce by amendment the necessary provisions into that Bill.

Local Government Executive

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the expenditure implications of the creation of directly-elected executives in a local authority. [127206]

Ruth Kelly: An assessment of the costs of implementing all of the proposals in the White Paper "Strong and prosperous communities" including directly elected executives, was published in the regulatory impact assessment on 26 October 2006.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will take steps to introduce a cap per head of population on floor damping reduction. [128020]

Mr. Woolas: The minimum guaranteed formula grant increase from one year to the next, known as the floor, has to be paid for from within the total formula grant available. Our current method of paying for the floor, scaling back increases in grant above the floor, was the most widely supported when we last consulted on this in 2005. We are currently reviewing the distribution of formula grant for the next three year settlement, from 2008-09 to 2010-11.

Local Government: Pay

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and local Government what the average salary is of a local authority chief executive. [127042]

Ruth Kelly: My Department does not collect this information. Information on chief executives' pay can be obtained from the local government employers' website (http://www.lge.gov.uk).

Local Government: Reform

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the portfolio of a member of a directly elected executive could be changed by the leader of the council after the election of that executive under her proposals for reform of local government. [127064]

Ruth Kelly: The Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill provides that executive leaders may allocate, and at any time reallocate, portfolios as they think fit.

Lyons Inquiry

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions she has had with the Home Secretary on the Lyons report. [127915]

Mr. Woolas: Government Ministers have discussions with their colleagues on a broad range of issues.

Non-Domestic Rates: Broadband

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions she has had with other Government Departments on the potential impact on the Government's digital strategy of making local loop unbundling operators subject to non-domestic rates liability for unbundled local loops; and if she will make a statement. [128059]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 23 October 2006, Official Report, column 1687W, by my hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and the Regions to the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Peter Luff).

Planning Permission

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the timetable is for the National Planning Application Register to hold 100 per cent. of all planning applications and decisions. [127053]

Ruth Kelly: There is no timetable as the proposal for the National Planning Application Register is still at the feasibility testing stage and the Government have yet to take a decision on whether and how to take it forward.

Regional Government: Manpower

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many full-time equivalent staff were employed by each regional Government office in England in (a) 1997 and (b) 2006. [127048]

Ruth Kelly: The number of permanent, fixed term and casual staff working for each Government office for the regions, including those temporarily away from the office on secondment, loan, maternity leave, career break and special leave without pay, in March of each year, was as follows. Full-time equivalent (FTE) figures are not available for 1997:

	March 1997		March 2006
	Headcount	FTE	Headcount	FTE
GO East	182	—	278	267.4
GO East Midlands	234	—	280	270.0
GO London	274	—	313	307.6
GO North East	284	—	317	302.5
GO North West[1]	428	—	372	357.2
GO South East	224	—	319	299.3
GO South West	139	—	325	309.2

	March 1997		March 2006
	Headcount	FTE	Headcount	FTE
GO West Midlands	336	—	301	286.7
GO Yorkshire and Humber	288	—	294	280.7
Total GO network	2,389	—	2,799	2,680.6

[1] For 1997 figures include staff in Government office for Merseyside, which was merged with GO North West on 1 April 1998.

Since March 2006, the total number of staff has fallen to 2,450 (2,353 FTE) in February 2007 and is expected to fall to about 200 by December 2008.

In 1997 the Government office network represented the interests of four Whitehall Departments. Today the network delivers on behalf of 10 Departments.

Unitary Councils

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has for further waves of bids for unitary status. [127103]

Ruth Kelly: We have given councils in two-tier areas a short window of opportunity to make proposals for unitary status. We have no plans to launch a further round of reorganisation.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what criteria she has specified for assessing the business cases put forward for unitary authority status. [127510]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 19 December 2006, Official Report, column 1818W.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whom she has appointed as independent auditors to assess unitary authority bids. [127511]

Mr. Woolas: The assessment process, set out in the Invitation to Councils in England which we published alongside the White Paper, provides that financial cases underpinning the proposals that proceed to stakeholder consultation will be subject to limited assurance in relation to the submission of baseline figures to be carried out by the Audit Commission.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects (a) the bids for unitary status to undergo assessment and (b) reports on these assessments to be published. [127512]

Mr. Woolas: Proposals for future unitary structures are currently being assessed against the criteria set out in the Invitation to Councils in England which we published alongside the White Paper. We intend to announce our decisions on which proposals should proceed to stakeholder consultation before 27 March, the day for publication of the notice of election for the forthcoming local government elections.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Respect Task Force

9. Barbara Keeley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the work of the Respect Task Force; and if he will make a statement. [127798]

Mr. McNulty: The Respect Task Force works across Government and published the Respect Action Plan in January 2006 in which it set out an ambitious programme of work to build a modern culture of respect. One year on, good progress is being made, as documented by the progress report recently published.

Gun Crime

10. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the prevalence of gun crime in England and Wales. [127799]

Mr. McNulty: Gun crime (including air weapons) has increased since 1997; there has been a decrease in the total number of firearms offences over the last two years, from 24,094 in 2002-03 to 22,896 in 2004-05 and 21,521 in 2005-06. There were 50 homicides involving firearms (including air weapons) in 2005-06, a decrease of 36 per cent. from 78 the previous year and the lowest recorded since 1998-99.

Custodial Sentences

11. Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of custodial sentences. [127800]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The report 'Re-offending of adults: results from the 2003 cohort' shows that for this cohort the two-year re-offending rate for adults is 57.6 per cent.—2.3 per cent. below the predicted rate calculated from the 2000 baseline. For custodial sentences it is 65.8 per cent. which is higher than for non-custodial sentences at 53.4 per cent. though the disposal given depends upon the characteristics of the offender which will also affect the chances of re-offending.

Bail Act

12. Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Solicitor-General and the Minister for Constitutional Affairs on the operation of the Bail Act 1976. [127801]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The operation of the Bail Act is kept under continuous review by the criminal justice departments with the aims of ensuring that appropriate decisions are made as to whether to release a defendant on bail or remand in custody, and of improving the processes which underpin the management of bail when granted. The 'Rebalancing the Criminal Justice System' Review published last July included a range of commitments to ensure that defendants who breach bail are returned to court quickly and dealt with robustly.

Teenage Drug Use

13. Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that teenagers are aware of the possible dangers associated with drug use. [127802]

Mr. Coaker: Since 2003 FRANK, the Government funded drug awareness campaign, has reached out to young people, their parents and carers, with a range of innovative national and local communications providing credible drug advice and information. We have also launched 'Understanding Drugs' as a new resource to all secondary schools to support drugs education programmes. In addition we continue to work across Government to ensure that drug education in schools is effective at building awareness of the harm caused by drugs as well as engaging and supporting those groups of young people most vulnerable to developing drug problems.

Prisons: Drug Usage

14. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what steps he is taking to reduce the level of drug usage in prisons. [127803]

Mr. Sutcliffe: To tackle drug-use in custody, NOMS has in place a comprehensive drug strategy. The strategy's three key aims are to: reduce the amount of illicit drugs getting in—by using a co-ordinated range of supply reduction measures; reduce the demand for drugs—through delivery of effective drug treatment; and strengthen through-care links with the community, helping ensure timely continuity of care for drug-users on release. While NOMS remains committed to doing more, the drug strategy is already making significant progress, with drug-use—as measured by random mandatory drug testing—down from 24.4 per cent. in 1996-97 to 10.3 per cent. in 2004-05; a reduction of 58 per cent.

Cocaine

15. Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of cocaine users in (a) 1997 and (b) 2006. [127804]

Mr. Vernon Coaker: We do not have a figure for 1997, however we know that while the number of users of cocaine powder increased significantly, to about 769,000 in 2005-06, use of amphetamines decreased and overall use of stimulant drugs has remained stable over this period.

Young Offender Institutions

16. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of inmates of young offender institutions are remand prisoners. [127805]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The January prison statistics show that 2 per cent. of people in young offender institutes were unsentenced (either awaiting trial or convicted but awaiting sentencing) and held under prison-rules.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many 2052SH forms were opened in respect of each young offender institution in (a) 2003, (b) 2004, (c) 2005, (d) 2006 and (e) 2007 to date; and if he will make a statement. [127946]

Mr. Sutcliffe: This information is not collated centrally in the requested format and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Crime and Antisocial Behaviour

17. Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what role he plans for family intervention in helping reduce crime and antisocial behaviour; and if he will make a statement. [127808]

Mr. McNulty: As part of the respect programme the Government have committed to establish a network of family intervention projects across England. Evidence shows that these projects are effective in reducing antisocial behaviour of the small number of families who can be responsible for significant amounts of antisocial behaviour in their community.

Drug-related Crime

18. Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of measures to combat drug-related crime. [127809]

Mr. Coaker: The most recent published crime figures show that the strategy is working: recorded acquisitive crime, to which drug-related crime makes a substantial contribution, has fallen by 20 per cent. since the onset of the drug interventions programme (DIP) (the 12 months to March 2003).

The drug interventions programme (DIP) is now getting on average over 3,000 drug misusing offenders into drug treatment each month.

The Home Office is carrying out an ongoing research programme to look at the effectiveness of individual programme components.

Prisoner Literacy

19. Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking with the Secretary of State for Education and Skills to improve the literacy of prisoners. [127810]

Mr. Sutcliffe: As part of the cross-Government plan to reduce re-offending, the strategy for improving skills outcomes for offenders was set out in the Green Paper 'Reducing Re-Offending Through Skills and Employment'. This followed and builds on the work of the Learning and Skills Council in rolling out its new Offender Learning and Skills Service nationally from July 2006. The plans outlined in the Green Paper are being taken forward in 'Reducing Re-offending Through Skills and Employment: Next Steps', published in December 2006 which furthers the focus on developing offender skills resulting in more obtaining sustainable employment.

Immigration Removal Centres

20. Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the adequacy of the capacity of immigration centres. [127811]

Mr. Byrne: The adequacy of the capacity of Immigration Removal Centres is assessed on an ongoing basis. We will open a new purpose built centre at Gatwick next year and we are currently considering a range of other options to further develop the estate.

Cannabis Farms

21. John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he (a) is taking and (b) plans to take to tackle cannabis farms; and if he will make a statement. [127812]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office has supported the national police crackdown on cannabis factories. Operation Keymer, which ran from 25 September until 5 October 2006, was one part of ongoing work taking place across the country to identify and close down these factories, while improving police knowledge and understanding of the trade through activity-led intelligence gathering.

ACPO is co-ordinating the police response to the emerging issue of cannabis factories and police forces are continuing to close down cannabis factories where identified.

Anti-Semitic Crimes

22. Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many successful prosecutions there were for anti-Semitic crimes in England and Wales in 2006. [127813]

Mr. McNulty: We are committed to tackling all hate crimes including those motivated by anti-Semitism. This information is not currently available, but we have made improvements to the way we collect data and expect to have it from April 2008.

Monitoring the figures will enable us to understand the extent and nature of all hate crimes and to be able to respond more effectively, for example by changing beat times or places.

Asylum Seekers

23. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of measures to deport failed asylum applicants. [127814]

Mr. Byrne: The effectiveness of measures deployed to remove failed asylum seekers is assessed on an ongoing basis. These measures have ensured that the removal of failed asylum seekers has been steadily increasing over the past few years.

Community Service Volunteers

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2007, Official Report, columns 2043-44W, on community service volunteers, what public protection measures have been agreed. [127540]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All prisoners who undertake placements are subject to the conditions for release on temporary licence which pay full regard to issues of public protection. Prisons and placement organisations complete a full risk assessment including appropriate CRB checks. As an additional safeguard, the revised memorandum puts in place further public protection measures that ensure that the probation office in the placement area is notified and that the offender manager will highlight any risk issues that have been identified and will inform the police and/or the prison when appropriate.

Community Support Officers: Protective Clothing

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 94W, on community support officers protective clothing, what representations he has received from representatives of police community support officers on the issuing of protective equipment. [123889]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 27 February 2007]: We have received a number of representations about the issue of protective equipment to police community support officers(PCSOs), but none from representatives of PCSOs. The decision on the equipment of PCSOs in each force remains a matter for chief officers.

Counter-Terrorism and Intelligence Directorate

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how often he holds meetings with the Counter-Terrorism and Intelligence Directorate. [126027]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 8 March 2007]: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary(Dr. John Reid) holds regular meetings with officials from the Home Office's Counter-Terrorism and Intelligence Directorate.

Crime: Computers

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prosecutions were brought and (b) convictions obtained in the last five years for offences under the Computer Misuse Act 1990. [126727]

Mr. Coaker: The information requested, taken from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, is provided in the following table.

Number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates' courts and found guilty at all courts for offences under the Computer Misuse Act 1990, England and Wales 2001-2005[1,2]

[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.
3 Data for Essex police force area for this offence in 2001 show 7 convictions for which there are no prosecutions. These data have been omitted from the table.

Crime: Internet

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was allocated to each police force for combating e-crime in 2006-07; and what the proposed allocation for 2007-08 is. [126726]

Mr. McNulty: Total Government funding for the police in England and Wales for 2006-07 was £9.3 billion. In addition, specific pump priming funding of £26,200 was provided to each police force in England and Wales to help expand their computer crime teams.

The Government have announced total Government grant allocations to police forces in England and Wales for 2007-08 of £9.6 billion. Police spending on computer crime teams is expected to be funded from overall resources available and is a matter for each chief constable.

Departments: Written Questions

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the policy of his Department is on providing substantive answers to named day questions on the appropriate named day. [127912]

Mr. McNulty: The Department endeavours to answer all named day questions with a substantive reply on the named day. For certain questions this is not possible and hon. Members are provided with a holding reply until a substantive reply can be provided.

Drugs

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress his Department is making in tackling the availability of Class A drugs; and if he will make a statement. [127639]

Mr. Coaker: The Government's strategy is to bear down on all points in the drug supply chain to disrupt criminal gangs, stifle drug supply and reduce the harm caused to communities in the UK.

Latest figures available show that in 2005-06 over 2,200 kg of heroin and 15,300 kg of cocaine were taken out of the supply chain, 193 trafficking groups were disrupted or dismantled and £30 million of drug-related criminal assets were seized, depriving dealers of their financial lifeblood.

Drugs: Misuse

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of (a) crack cocaine and (b) opiate users with dependent children. [126607]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office-commissioned estimates of the number of problem opiate and crack users do not contain any information about individuals and their parental status. However, the Advisory Council of Misuse of Drugs in their report 'Hidden Harm' estimated that in the UK there were between 250,000 and 350,000 children of problem drug users in 2003. Since the publication of that report changes have been made to several monitoring systems to improve the information available, which will allow us to produce an updated estimate in the future. In particular the core dataset for the National Drug Treatment Monitoring System for England was updated from April 2006 and all treatment service providers are now required to record information on whether users in treatment have dependent children and whether the child(ren) are living with the person in treatment or with others.

Foreign National Prisoners

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 13 March 2007, Official Report, column 104W, on foreign national prisoners, what estimate he has made of the (a) cost to the public purse and (b) time which would be required to cross-reference the electronic records held by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate of the offences committed by the foreign nationals released from HMP Peterborough in the last 12 months to 31 March 2007 with the prisoner discharge records held manually at HMP Peterborough; and if he will make a statement. [128211]

Mr. Sutcliffe: As I previously outlined in my answers to the hon. Gentleman, the requested information on the offences committed by foreign nationals released from HMP Peterborough in the last 12 months to 31 March 2006 could be obtained only by exceeding the £600 cost limit for answering parliamentary questions.

Frontex

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what role the United Kingdom plays in the European Union's border management agency Frontex; and what the Government's policy is on the future development of Frontex. [127334]

Joan Ryan: The UK strongly supports the EU Border Agency (Frontex). The UK has provided funding, operational planning and training to Frontex, as well as joining a number of Frontex operations. We will continue to participate in Frontex operations where there is benefit for the UK and the rest of the EU. We are keen to strengthen Frontex and see it develop in future.

Internet: Crime

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under which legislation prosecutions may be made of those found guilty of uploading video content onto the internet containing (a) criminal damage, (b) physical assaults and (c) vandalism. [127399]

Mr. Coaker: Uploading videos of a criminal offence is not necessarily itself a criminal offence It will be a criminal offence if it amounts to inciting the offence involved, or if it involves the publication of obscene material. UK based Internet service providers take a responsible approach to the contents they host. Most have acceptable use policies which enable them to remove content from the site that is distasteful, even if it is not necessarily illegal.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Internet Watch Foundation on video clips on websites which show (a) violence and physical assaults and (b) criminal damage. [127410]

Mr. Coaker: The Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) is the only authorised organisation in the UK operating an internet 'hotline' for the public to report their exposure to potentially illegal content online. Its aim is to minimise the availability of potentially illegal internet content, specifically child abuse images hosted anywhere in the world; criminally obscene content hosted in the UK; and incitement to racial hatred content hosted in the UK. While we work closely with the IWF on these issues, we have not had any discussions with it about video clips on websites which show violence, physical assaults or criminal damage as these issues are outside of its remit.

In terms of industry regulation, the vast majority of the UK internet industry takes a responsible approach to what content it hosts, both of its own volition and in co-operation with law enforcement and Government agencies. Where the industry is advised that content it hosts contravenes UK legislation, it will remove it. In addition, internet service providers (ISPs) also have contracts with their customers concerning what may be hosted on their servers called acceptable use policies (AUPs), which allow them to remove offensive or objectionable material, even if it is not illegal. Anyone concerned about the contents of a website should approach the relevant ISP hosting the site and ask it to consider whether it breaches its AUP.

Metropolitan Police: Finance

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding per head of the population in London the Metropolitan police force received for (a) local, (b) regional and (c) national policing purposes in each of the last five years. [127303]

Mr. McNulty: The Police Grant Settlement 2007-08 is based on the police funding formula which provides an assessment of the relative need of each police force in England and Wales. This assessment is based on the social characteristics of each police authority, including its population, which are considered to affect the level of demand for police services in the community. The Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) also receives a range of specific grants to reflect its local and national responsibilities.

The MPS continues to receive an annual special payment as part of its police grant, in recognition of its unique capital city and national functions.

Details for the last five years are set out in the table.

Metropolitan Police Service funding 2003-04 to 2007-08

£ million

	General grant	Specific grants	Total
2003-04	1,764.1	288.3	2,052.4
2004-05	1,822.0	311.1	2,133.1
2005-06	1,763.6	490.9	2,254.5
2006-07	1,823.5	558.9	2,382.4
2007-08	1,883.7	578.4	2,462.1

Notes:
1. Prior to 2006-07 pensions and security arrangements were included within General Grant. General Grant figure for 2005-06 has been adjusted to allow direct comparison with 2006-07.
2. The MPS continues to receive an annual special payment as part of its police grant in recognition of its unique capital city and national functions. This was £192 million in 2007-08.

Police: Criminal Investigation

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of police officers were subject to criminal investigation in the last year for which figures are available. [121909]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office does not collect the information requested.

Police: Culture and Recruitment

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department provides guidance to police forces on the suitability of recruits who follow cultural practices which require them not to shake hands with certain members of the public or otherwise behave in a way which makes it difficult for them fully to engage with members of the public; and if he will make a statement. [111610]

Mr. McNulty: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has issued no guidance on this issue.

Police: Freedom of Information

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Freedom of Information requests to each police authority in England and Wales have not received a statutory response within 21 days. [127348]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 13 March 2007]: It is for each individual relevant public authority to comply with the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

Police: Gloucestershire

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fully qualified police officers are on duty in the South Gloucestershire district on a typical Friday evening. [127695]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 15 March 2007]: The deployment of police officers to the basic command units of Avon and Somerset constabulary is an operational matter for the chief constable.

Police: Interpreters

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the Metropolitan Police Service's budget was spent on interpretation services for suspects in the most recent year for which figures are available. [125224]

Mr. McNulty: The expenditure on interpretation services is a matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of interpreters' fees upon police resources; and if he will make a statement. [125628]

Mr. McNulty: The information for all police forces in England and Wales is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The expenditure on interpreters is a matter for the chief officer of each constabulary.

Police: Lancashire

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were employed by Lancashire police each year since 1997. [127460]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 14 March 2007]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle) on 9 March 2007, Official Report, column 2170.

Police: Modernisation

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the outcome was of his meeting on 5 March with police forces from England and Wales on the development of the Work Force Modernisation Project. [127916]

Mr. McNulty: A number of police forces and authorities expressing an interest in the workforce modernisation programme were present at the meeting. They were asked to provide confirmation of their commitment to become a demonstrator site by 16 March 2007. Once these are collated the programme team, under the authority of the Association of Chief Police Officers with the Association of Police Authorities and the Home Office, will consider each application and inform the successful forces.

Police: Pensions

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the potential annual cost of extending the survivor benefits of the new Police Pension Scheme to the spouses and civil partners of officers who died whilst on duty and who are in the old Police Pension Scheme; [127708]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of (a) spouses and (b) civil partners of police officers who have died while on duty who would lose their survivor benefits under the Police Pension Scheme were they to remarry or cohabit. [127726]

Mr. McNulty: Under the provisions for police injury benefits, which are not dependent on pension scheme membership, a special or augmented pension of up to half the officer's pensionable pay is payable to a surviving spouse or civil partner where the officer dies as a result of an injury received without their own default in the execution of their duty as a constable. Under the Police Pension Scheme 1987 (old scheme) an ordinary pension of up to one third the officer's pensionable pay is payable to a surviving spouse or civil partner where the officer dies in service, whether or not they were on duty at the time.

Police pensions and police injury benefits are administrated locally by the police authority for the force concerned and details of the number of surviving spouses and civil partners of officers who died while on duty and of the cost of their pensions are not held centrally. However, it is estimated that in the region of 400 surviving spouses are in receipt of a special or augmented pension in the UK. About half of this number are in respect of police officers who died in Northern Ireland. No separate estimate has been made of the number of surviving civil partners in receipt of such a pension but the estimate given for spouses can still be taken to include civil partners in view of the relatively short time since the start of civil partnerships.

The Government Actuary's Department has estimated that the capitalised extra cost of making these pensions life-long to be between £10 million and £20 million. This estimate is indicative only since it is subject to a considerable degree of uncertainty. The capital cost would manifest itself in additional cash expenditure over a period of decades peaking in 10 to 20 years' time. This cost only relates to survivor pensions currently in payment. There would also be additional costs relating to pensions to spouses and civil partners of police officers who die in the future as result of an injury received in the execution of their duty. The cost does not include the reinstatement of any pension that has already ceased on remarriage, formation of a civil partnership or cohabitation, or the backdating of any such restored pension.

The Government Actuary's Department has also estimated the capitalised extra cost of making all survivor pensions life-long where they are payable upon an officer's death in service (i.e. ordinary pensions as well as special and augmented pensions) to be between £50 million to £100 million.

Police: Recruitment

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the ability of police forces to recruit Criminal Investigation Department officers. [127349]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 13 March 2007]: Recruitment of police officers to Criminal Investigation Departments is a matter for the chief constables of individual police forces.

Prisoners: Females

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to ensure that communication is maintained between female prisoners and their families who live (a) in the UK and (b) overseas. [127917]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There is a statutory entitlement to social visits and correspondence. Social visitors who are United Kingdom residents may qualify for financial assistance. Contact may also be maintained by telephone. Foreign nationals or those with close family abroad who have not received a social visit within the preceding month may also receive a five minute telephone call at public expense. Family contact for all prisoners, in particular women with children, is supported by local arrangements.

Prisoners: Telephones

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors determine the price of international telephone calls charged to prisoners; and if he will make a statement. [127918]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Negotiations between the Home Office and the prisoner telephone contractors, which are commercially in confidence, determine the price of international telephone calls charged to prisoners.

Prisons: Islam

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what vetting procedures prison imams undergo prior to employment; and whether they have been revised since 2001. [127951]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Imams are subject to the same checks as those for all chaplains and include checks on: identity; proof of address; entitlement to work in the UK; criminal record check; references; qualifications, endorsement from the relevant faith adviser and national security vetting. Security vetting procedures are kept under review and a number of enhancements have been made since 2001.

Prisons: Religion

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what facilities are offered to non-Christian worshippers in HM prisons; and what the costs of these facilities were in each of the last five years. [127562]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service policy is to enable those prisoners who wish, to practise their religion. The Prison Service Performance Standard on Religion (No. 51) and the Prison Service Order on Religion (4550) sets out the more detailed policy and includes specific information on the provision necessary for the practice of the main world faiths, including Islam. Copies of Prison Service orders are kept in the House Library and both Prison Service orders and performance standards are also published on the Prison Service website (www.hmprisons.gov.uk). The requested information on costs is not available.

Road Traffic Control: Eastern Region

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) traffic enforcement officers, (b) traffic wardens and (c) council parking attendants were operating in (i) Suffolk, (ii) Bedfordshire, (iii) Cambridgeshire, (iv) Essex, (v) Hertfordshire, (vi) Norfolk, (vii) St. Edmundsbury borough council area and (viii) Mid Suffolk district council area in each year since 1997. [128016]

Mr. McNulty: Data for the numbers of traffic wardens and traffic enforcement officers are not centrally collected at the district or borough level, however data for the numbers of traffic wardens and for the numbers of officers whose primary function is traffic are collected at force level and are given in the tables. There has over the years been a transfer of responsibility for traffic wardens from the police to local authorities.

Data on the number of council parking attendants are not collected centrally.

Special Constables: Recruitment

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the target of recruiting 14,000 special constables by March 2007 has been met; and if he will make a statement. [127422]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 9 March 2007]: The Police Service Strength statistical bulletin published on 26 July 2006 shows that on 31 March 2006 there were 13,179 special constables in England and Wales. Figures for 31 March 2007 will be published in July this year.

Stop and Search

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) stop and account and (b) stop and search forms were completed by each police force in England and Wales in the last year for which figures are available. [122932]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 23 February 2007]: The last year for which figures are available for stop and searches are 2004-05 and are shown in the following table below. These figures reflect the number of stop and searches recorded by each police force area in relation to powers under section one of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, and other legislation; section 60 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994; section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000.

From 1 April 2005, police forces have been required to collect figures on the recording of encounters by police officers in accordance with paragraphs 4.11 - 4.20 of the PACE code of practice on exercise by police officers of statutory powers of stop and search (Code A). Issues relating to the quality and completeness of the 2005-06 figures mean they remain subject to further work before they can be published by the Home Office, however police forces are able to use their data for local accountability.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many instances of vandalism were reported in (a) England, (b) Suffolk, (c) Bedfordshire, (d) Cambridgeshire, (e) Essex, (f) Hertfordshire and (g) Norfolk in each year since 1997. [127868]

Young Offenders: Mental Health Services

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offenders were referred to (a) acute local child and adolescent mental health services and (b) non-acute local child and adolescent mental health services in each year since 2002; and if he will make a statement. A combined screening and assessment method for mental health, physical health and substance misuse of young people in the young peoples estate is currently in development and planning for the implementation stage is under way. This project is supported by a cross-departmental working group of National Treatment Agency, Youth Justice Board, Prison Health and Prison Service Women and Young People Group.

A new framework "Promoting Mental Health for Children held in Secure Settings: A Framework for Commissioning Services", developed in partnership by the Department of Health, Home Office, Youth Justice Board and Department for Education and Skills, will be launched this month and will set out best practice guidelines for commissioning services for children in secure settings.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Advertising

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much his Department spent on advertising with The Guardian newspaper, including online, in the last year for which figures are available. [114072]

Alan Johnson: Newspaper advertising for the Department is done via the Central Office of Information (COI) and the information provided covers all newspaper advertising. The COI does not hold information specifically on advertising space in The Guardian newspaper.

The total spent by the Department on all newspaper advertising, across a number of different campaigns, using different newspapers is:

Financial year

2005-06

Cost

£1.50 million

Apprentices

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people who passed the complete framework for (a) apprenticeships and (b) advanced apprenticeships also achieved a technical certificate as part of their apprenticeship course in each year between 1997 and 2006. [127429]

Phil Hope [holding answer 14 March 2007]: These data are not held in the form specified. The data collected measure those who complete all elements required of the particular framework undertaken. However, since 2001 separately assessed underpinning knowledge has been a compulsory part of apprenticeship frameworks. Up to 2005 this had to take the form of a technical certificate, even where there was duplication of content between qualifications. Therefore all apprentices completing in this period would have passed a technical certificate in order to complete the full framework. Since 2005 and following consultation, sector bodies have had the flexibility to deliver underpinning knowledge through an NVQ where it can be demonstrated to the Apprenticeship Approvals Group that this will remove duplication. So far the two major frameworks to integrate underpinning knowledge into the NVQ are in accountancy and hairdressing. Most of their learners will not yet have completed under the new arrangements.

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding his Department makes available for those over the age of 25 years for apprenticeships. [127586]

Phil Hope: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) has announced funding for 8,000 apprenticeship places for people over the age of 25 in 2007-08 at a cost of £16.7 million.

Art: Education

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the funding levels for fine art courses in (a) further education, (b) work-based learning, (c) adult and community learning and (d) sixth form colleges were in each year from 1997 to 2006; and what the budgeted levels of funding are in each of the next three years. [127444]

Bill Rammell: We have increased investment in further education by 48 per cent. in real terms between 1997 and 2005. Adult funding will increase by 7 per cent. between 2005-06 and 2007-08 with funding for young people increasing by 13 per cent. over the same period. This means that overall in 2007-08 through the LSC we will invest £11.2 billion, an increase of £716 million compared with 2006-07.

Information on course subjects that learners are undertaking is available only from the LSC at the broad sector level. This does not allow for discrete subjects such as fine art to be identified, and therefore it is not possible to provide details on the level of funding for these courses.

As the Department has not yet received it Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR) settlement, I am not in a position to announce the funding levels for specific programmes during the CSR period.

Compensation Payments

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much in compensation payments was paid by his Department in 2005-06; and what the reason was for each payment. [108199]

Mr. Dhanda: Compensation payments made by the Department in 2005-06 were as follows:

Reason for payment	Payment amount (£)
Damage to personal property—clothing damaged by contaminated water flooding from pipes in ceiling	77.20
Damage to personal property—motorcycle helmet damaged when car park barrier came down on staff member's head	269.99

Departmental Hospitality

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his Department's expenditure was on hospitality and entertainment in (a) 1996-97 and (b) 2005-06. [114068]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given in my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's answer of 9 February 1998, Official Report, column 17W, to the hon. Member for North-East Hertfordshire, which provides the global figure for Government expenditure on ministerial entertaining and hospitality for official purposes in 1996-97.

The Department for Education and Skills' expenditure on entertainment by civil servants for 1996-97 was £24,000.

The Department's expenditure covering civil servants' as well as ministerial costs on entertainment for 2005-06 was £20,000.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff were employed on a consultancy basis in (a) his Department and (b) each of its agencies in each of the last five years for which information is available; and what the (i) average and (ii) longest period was for which a consultant was employed in each year. [102979]

Mr. Dhanda: The number of consultants engaged by the Department is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) marketing officers, (b) communication officers, (c) press officers and (d) promotional officers are employed in his Department; and what estimate he has made of the total expenditure on communications for the Department on (i) Government Information and Communication Service staff and (ii) other (A) press officers, (B) special advisers and (C) staff in the last year for which figures are available. [104223]

Alan Johnson: The number of staff involved in communications as at 1 March 2007 is as follows:

	Number
Press Officers	21
Marketing Officers	37

It is not possible to break down expenditure by types of communications staff. There are no special advisers in the communications function.

The total amount spent on advertising in 2005-06 was £8.3 million. This includes radio, TV and press advertising and is exclusive of VAT.

Departmental Travel

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his Department's expenditure on foreign travel, including accommodation, was in (a) 1996-97 and (b) 2005-06. [114069]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given in my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's answer on 19 December 2006, Official Report, column 1808W, to a similar question from the hon. Member for North-East Hertfordshire, which refers to the published annual list of overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers which includes the overall cost of all Ministers' overseas travel.

The Department for Education and Skills' expenditure on civil servants' foreign travel, including accommodation is set out in the following table. The figures are taken from the Department's financial systems.

	Expenditure on foreign travel (£000)
1996-97	883
2005-06	251

Departments: Discrimination

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department has undertaken to ensure the implementation of age discrimination regulations across his Department. [127587]

Mr. Dhanda: Equality of opportunity for all is of paramount importance within the Department and my officials have been pro-active in ensuring the age discrimination regulations are adhered to. In light of this the Department has considered and reviewed all the HR policies and processes that were in place prior to the implementation of the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006. That review led to us introducing, from 1 October 2006, a policy where we have no maximum retirement age for people outside the senior civil service, and procedures where there is no mention of a date of birth on applications, for example, for recruitment or promotion.

Furthermore the Secretary of State and the Learning and Skills Council have both been involved in drawing the attention of the FE sector to the age legislation through correspondence with FE governing bodies and by issuing guidance to learning providers. Higher education institutions have been supported in this area by the Equality Challenge Unit, which is the sector body responsible for providing advice and guidance on equality issues to these bodies.

Departments: Electronic Government

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills for what reason an individual must be at least 19 years of age to register with his Department's e-consultation website. [126912]

Phil Hope: Access to the Department's e-consultation website is open to all, whether or not they are registered with the site, and young people under 19 are able to participate in our e-consultations. Registration only means that the site retains individuals' details, enabling them to receive e-mail alerts about future consultations and giving the flexibility to partially complete a consultation and then return to it at a later date.

Registration is limited to those aged 19 and over in order to ensure that personal data about children and young people is not held on the website, in compliance with the Data Protection Act. The system neither asks for, nor retains, any identification information from non registered users.

The Department actively encourages children and young people to participate in consultation and engage with the Department, often producing young people's versions of consultation questionnaires. A recent example of this was the Young People's Guide to the Care Matters Green Paper in 2006; over 1,000 young people and children gave an input to this consultation.

Education Maintenance Allowance

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of young people in (a) Penrith and The Border constituency, (b) Cumbria, (c) the North West and (d) England received education maintenance allowance in each year since the scheme's inception; and how many received (i) £30, (ii) £20 and (iii) £10 a week in each case in each year. [124005]

Phil Hope: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate education maintenance allowance (EMA) for the DfES and hold the information about take-up and payments made under the scheme. Mark Haysom, the council's chief executive, has written to the hon. Member with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 12 March 2007:

I am writing in response to your Parliamentary Question 124005 that asked: "What percentage of young people in (a) Penrith and The Border constituency, (b) Cumbria, (c) the North West and (d) England received education maintenance allowance in each year since the scheme's inception; and how many received (i) £30, (ii) £20 and (iii) £10 a week in each case in each year."

Information on the number of young people who have applied, enrolled and received Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) is available at Local Authority Level, but not at constituency level. EMA take-up is defined as young people who have received one or more EMA payments in the academic year.

The following tables show EMA take-up data split by payment band for Cumbria Local Authority area, the North West and England during each academic year since the scheme's inception.

In the first year of national roll-out, EMA was available to all 16-years-old across England and to 17 and 18-year-olds in former pilot areas. (Young people aged 19 were entitled to receive EMA in certain circumstances.) In 2005/06 EMA roll-out continued and EMA was available to all 16 and 17-year-olds nationally. In 2006/07 EMA is available to all 16, 17 and 18-year-olds nationally. In calculating the percentage of young people receiving EMA only take-up and population figures for age groups where EMA was available nationally have been used.

The following table shows the percentage of young people receiving EMA in Cumbria Local Authority area, the North West and England during each academic year since national roll-out.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what percentage of young people in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) the UK received education maintenance allowance in each year since the scheme's inception; [122059]

(2) how many people in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) the UK received (i) £30, (ii) £20 and (iii) £10 a week in education maintenance allowance in each year since the scheme's inception. [122060]

Phil Hope: The Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) is a devolved matter. In England, this is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate EMA for the DfES and hold the information about take-up of the scheme. Mark Haysom, the Council's chief executive, has written to my hon. Friend with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 12 March 2007:

EMA was piloted in 55 areas before launching the national scheme and South Tyneside local authority was a pilot area. The following data covers the start of the national roll out of EMA in the academic year 2004/05 and onwards.

Information on the number of young people who have applied, enrolled and received education maintenance allowance (EMA) is available at local authority level, but not at

Education: Guardian Newspapers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much was spent by his Department on the 14 to 19 reforms supplement it sponsored in The Guardian newspaper on 6 March; [127230]

(2) which civil servants within his Department contributed to the 14 to 19 reforms supplement in The Guardian newspaper on 6 March. [127231]

Jim Knight: The Department spent £42,000 on The Guardian Supplement covering the 14 to 19 reform programme. The 14 to 19 reforms will impact on a range of stakeholders and through the supplement we were able to inform head teachers, teachers and lecturers in schools and colleges, HE professionals, and the wider public about the reforms. We believe that this is good value for money as we were able to reach a large section of our target audience. As the 14 to 19 programme will require schools and colleges to collaborate in the future, and teaching of the diplomas will start from September 2008 we increasingly need to inform our target audiences about the reforms and the impact that they will have on them. We will therefore continue to promote the 14 to 19 reform programme across a range of news media over the next few months.

Although civil servants within the 14 to 19 reform group briefed The Guardian on the 14 to 19 reforms, the content of the supplement was written by Guardian journalists. As with most supplements of this nature officials from within the Department and across our partners were given the opportunity to correct factual errors within the final document. Final editorial control for the article was retained by The Guardian.

Employment Schemes: Greater London

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to open the Train to Gain project in London to contestability by the private sector; and if he will make a statement. [126581]

Phil Hope: Train to Gain is already contestable in London, as in all regions. This means that employers are given a choice of training providers, wherever possible, to help them meet their business needs on the basis of analysis carried out by brokers. Training providers may be sourced from the public or private sector.

Employment Schemes: Incentives

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to ensure brokers under the Train to Gain programme are incentivised to arrange placements, rather than visits to employers which do not result in placements; and if he will make a statement. [126580]

Phil Hope: Train to Gain brokers are incentivised on the basis of employer engagements, rather than on visits. An employer is considered to be engaged where the broker has undertaken an analysis of training needs and identified suitable providers. The Learning and Skills Council is actively performance managing the organisations contracted to deliver the service to ensure their effectiveness and efficiency.

English Language

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which individuals are entitled to free tuition on Entry 1 and Entry 2 level English for Speakers of Other Languages Courses. [126633]

Phil Hope: The Learning and Skills Council sets out the eligibility criteria for fee remission in the funding guidance for further education, updated each year.

Currently all English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) provision is fully funded, with free tuition for all learners. From August 2007/08 it is proposed that in order to receive fee remission an ESOL learner must fall into standard fee remission categories, for example, that they are in receipt of an income based benefit such as housing benefit.

The fee remission categories are set out in paragraph 127 of the Funding guidance for further education in 2006/07 and include:

unemployed people in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance;

those in receipt of income-based benefits, formerly known as means-tested benefits, the main income-based benefits are council tax benefit, housing benefit, income support and jobseeker's allowance (income-based);

those in receipt of working tax credit with a household income of less than £15,050;

those in receipt of pension credits-guarantee credit;

the unwaged dependants (as defined by Jobcentre Plus) of those listed above.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning has considered the impact of the proposed changes to ESOL funding following the race equality impact assessment (REIA) and he is minded to consider a range of new measures to reprioritise funding towards the most vulnerable. These are:

Reinstating eligibility for those asylum seekers who are in the UK legally and whose claims are not resolved within six months;

Reinstating eligibility for those asylum seekers who are unable to return or be returned to their country of origin for circumstances beyond their control and who are eligible for section 4 support;

Prioritising funding at local level through the Learning and Skills Council's Learner Hardship Support Fund towards support for spouses and individuals who may not have access to their household benefit documentation or their own funds; and

Agreeing with the Learning and Skills Council an approach to evidencing low pay for fee remission purposes which enables flexible use of a raft of evidence, including wider benefits and other evidence.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning has asked officials to work with the Learning and Skills Council and other partners to finalise the detail urgently.

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether English for Speakers of Other Languages provision at Entry 1 and Entry 2 levels is eligible for funding from the Learning and Skills Council; and if he will make a statement. [126634]

Bill Rammell: All Skills for Life English for Speakers of Other Languages provision at Entry 1 and Entry 2 levels is currently eligible for funding from the Learning and Skills Council and will continue to be so for 2007/08.

English Language: Adult Education

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what mechanisms are available to applicants for English for Speakers of other Languages classes to appeal against assessments that they should pay a proportion of course costs. [126131]

Phil Hope: There is no formal appeals procedure. Where applicants are not eligible for the fee remission for English for Speakers of Other Languages courses, the charging of fees is at the discretion of individual institutions.

From 2007/08 to receive fee remission for any course a learner must prove that they fall into a fee remission category, for example, that they are in receipt of jobseeker's allowance or an income-based benefit.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning has considered the impact of the proposed changes to ESOL funding following the Race Equality Impact Assessment (REIA) and he is minded to consider a range of new measures to reprioritise funding towards the most vulnerable. These are:

Re-instating eligibility for those asylum seekers who are in the UK legally and whose claims are not resolved within six months;

Re-instating eligibility for those asylum seekers who are unable to return or be returned to their country of origin for circumstances beyond their control and who are eligible for section 4 support;

Prioritising funding at local level through the Learning and Skills Council's Learner Hardship Support Fund towards support for spouses and individuals who may not have access to their household benefit documentation or their own funds; and

Agreeing with the Learning and Skills Council an approach to evidencing low pay for fee remission purposes which enables flexible use of a raft of evidence, including wider benefits and other evidence.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning has asked officials to work with the Learning and Skills Council and other partners to finalise the detail urgently.

English Language: Equal Opportunities

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will conduct a race equality impact assessment on the changes to English speakers of other languages provision which will be in place from September 2007. [126635]

Phil Hope: A race equality impact assessment regarding the changes to English for speakers of other languages is now complete and will be published shortly.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning has considered the impact of the proposed changes to ESOL funding following the race equality impact assessment (REIA) and he is minded to consider a range of new measures to reprioritise funding towards the most vulnerable. These are:

My hon. Friend the Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning has asked officials to work with the Learning and Skills Council and other partners to finalise the detail urgently.

Funding

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much funding per pupil was given to state-funded secondary schools in (a) the London Borough of Richmond-upon-Thames and (b) the London Borough of Kingston-upon-Thames in the last 12 months for which figures are available; [126175]

2. Total funding also includes all revenue grants in DfES departmental expenditure limits relevant to pupils aged 11 to 15 and exclude education maintenance allowances (EMAs) and grants not allocated at LEA level.
3. The pupil numbers used to convert £ million figures to £ per pupil are those underlying the EFS settlement calculations.
4. Some of the grant allocations have not been finalised. If these do change, the effect on the funding figures is expected to be minimal.
5. Figures are in cash and rounded to the nearest 10.

Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by British firms in each year since 2000. [105141]

Alan Johnson: The Department for Education and Skills uses the Office of Government framework contracts to purchase bulk office furniture. The main suppliers used are Pentos, Paragon, Orangebox and Herman Miller, all of whom supply British made furniture. A breakdown of the spend on this make of furniture since 2000 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Further Education

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of 16-year-olds went on to (a) A levels, (b) further education, (c) other vocational training and (d) higher education in each local authority in the last period for which figures are available. [126913]

Jim Knight: The Department publishes annual statistics on the participation in education and training by 16 and 17-year-olds in each local area in England. The latest publication can be viewed here: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000645/index.shtml. It refers to those of academic age 16 resident in the local authority at the end of 2004. This publication is the source of the figures used to answer this question.

(a) There is no information on the study aim of 16-year-olds at the local level. The column (a) in the attached table gives the proportion of 16-year-olds in each local authority who were in full-time education at school (maintained or independent). Not all of these will have been studying A levels, some will have been studying other vocational qualifications or qualifications below A level.

(b) Column (b) in the attached table gives the proportion of 16-year-olds in each local authority studying in full-time education in a further education college including sixth form colleges.

(c) Column (c) in the attached table gives the proportion of 16-year-olds in each local authority participating in government supported work-based learning. There is no information at a local level of those participating in other non-government funded vocational training.

(d) There are very few 16-year-olds in higher education (less than 1 per cent. of the population). They are not available on a consistent basis at a local level as information is only available on the location of the institute rather than where the young person resides. Information on 16-year-olds in higher education at a local level is therefore not available.

To complete the table there is a final column of other 16-year-olds participating in part-time education to give a total participating in education and work-based learning.

GCSE

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what proportion of 15-year-olds attending (a) independent schools and (b) maintained schools achieved five or more GCSEs at A*-C including English and mathematics in each year since 1997; [122062]

(2) when he will reply to Question 122062, on GCSEs, tabled on 16 February 2007 by the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton. [127365]

Jim Knight: The information requested is given in the table as follows.

Bill Rammell: The available information is taken from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) and is given in the table. The majority of students applying for full-time undergraduate courses apply to UCAS, but a small number apply directly to institutions.

Bill Rammell: The information is shown in the following tables. Data for academic years 1997/98 to 2002/03 and 2003/04 to 2005/06, the latest year available, are shown separately to take account of the Higher Education Statistics Agency's revision of its staff data collection methodology in 2003-04.

History: Curriculum

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what policy considerations affected the decision to include the study of the second world war and Nazi holocaust in the key stage 3 history curriculum. [127323]

Jim Knight: The two world wars and the Holocaust have been compulsory elements of the key stage 3 history curriculum since 1995. Pupils should study the causes and consequences of various conflicts including the two world wars and the Holocaust and develop an understanding of the changing nature of conflict over time and attempts to resolve conflict.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what policy considerations affected the decision to include the study of the slave trade in the key stage three history curriculum. [127325]

Jim Knight: Studying the nature and effects of the slave trade and its abolition will help pupils to understand the make up of the UK today and put immigration, the Commonwealth and the legacy of the empire into a clear historical context. The slave trade is already a suggested option for history teachers under the current curriculum.

Martial Arts: Schools

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which schools offer (a) boxing, (b) kick boxing, (c) karate and (d) other forms of martial arts (i) within their sports programme and (ii) as part of extended school activities. [127417]

Jim Knight: As part of the National School Sport Strategy, the annual school sport survey collects data on the provision and take up of PE and sport from schools in School Sport Partnerships. All maintained schools are now in such partnerships. Schools are asked which sports or activities they provided during the academic year, but not whether these were offered within or beyond the school day.

The 2005/06 survey (when 80 per cent. of schools were in such partnerships) found that:

1,579 schools (9 per cent. of those surveyed) offered martial arts, including kickboxing, but not judo and karate;

1,077 schools (6 per cent.) offered karate;

571 schools (3 per cent.) offered judo; and

431 schools (3 per cent.) offered boxing.

Nurseries: Teaching Methods

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the implications for funding for nurseries of the implementation of phonics under the Children Act 2006. [127634]

Beverley Hughes: The Government invest some £3 billion each year in delivery of the free early education entitlement to secure twelve and a half hours' free provision for 38 weeks a year for three and four-year-olds.

Nurseries receiving this funding deliver the Foundation Stage and therefore will already be implementing the preparatory work which paves the way for early reading. This work will continue when the Early Years Foundation Stage supersedes the Foundation Stage in September 2008. The Government are investing some £2 million through the Primary National Strategy to support the teaching of phonics in primary schools and early years settings.
